In order to decrease the time devoted to service by railroad engineers, and lessen the strain of their employment, in accordance with a recent demand, the M. & O. company has increased the number employed, reducing the hours and the burden on each. On the Norfolk

Sioux City line two engineers—used to render necessary service, whereas three are now employed. The compensation to engineers, with decreased time and decreased mileage, is correspondingly decreased, which is the only part of the arrangement not entirely satisfactory to the men.

PAYING THE PREACHER.

Fremont Herald: A newspaper in a neighboring state comments upon the "restlessness of preachers." It calls attention to the fact that few preachers remain for any length of time in the city in which they are employed, and that they go to another place. The paper refers to them as the "restless preachers." It was taken to task by one of the ministers and the comment he hurled just about fits other small towns—communities whose knowledge is a pretty good indication of your remember—that a preacher is a man with feeling such as other men have, and that he needs his wife and children, and that he is just as anxious to do well for them, to give them the comforts of life, to educate his children and to make some provision for them in case of his death, as other men are; it may get a line on their conduct in making changes. If you will examine into the question of salaries paid to preachers in your city, and the salaries which they get when they do go elsewhere, we suspect you will find that the question of salary has cut a large figure in determining the acceptance of the new call.

Which comment we now respectfully refer to those persons who are everlastingly criticizing the preachers.... There may be too many churches in some parts of the country—we will agree there are too many of them in this part. Too many "denominations" are trying to maintain organizations in small communities; too many preachers in small communities—and all of that. But a preacher should be paid a decent salary, or his services should be dispensed with—it would be better, of course, if half of the churches were consolidated, and the salaries doubled of the preachers who serve them, but no man has a right to criticize a minister who leaves one city to go to another if he can do better for himself and his family.

"HOBBIES"

Maybe you have a fondness for shirts, for scarves, or some other one interest in clothes that amounts to a hobby. If so, you'll find that we have specialized in that particular line.

Young men who think "style's the thing" in clothes, regard this as a specialty station for smart, snappy garments.

Men of serious years with conservative taste consider this essentially a store specializing in dignified styles.

We have a hobby ourselves—it's to carry the best and widest selection of good things to wear that can be found.

The fact that we sell HART SCHAFFNER & MARX clothes is a pretty good indication of our quality standard.

SUPREMA FACE CREAM

A beautiful complexion is the most precious element of feminine beauty, and the most delicate. For the bloom of health remains only so long as the tiny pores of the face are active, and to be active they must be absolutely clean.

When our skin becomes rough and yellow and pimples, blackheads and other blemishes appear they indicate that the action of the pores is impaired by the presence of mineral or organic residue or invisible dirt particles.

These must be removed. For this delicate cleansing nothing is more thorough and harmless than SUPREMA FACE CREAM which rubs in easily, completely removing all foreign obstructions without causing the slightest irritation or injury, leaving the skin healthy, radiant and of that youthful firmness which successfully checks the progress of premature lines and wrinkles.

SAVINGS SERMONETTE

Number Four

THE SECRET OF SUCCESS.

The secret of success is hard work and clear thinking. The industrious person gains more than his necessary expenses, and the thinking person saves this surplus and deposits it in a good, strong bank. It is never too soon to begin saving. Get the habit of saving. It is a good habit to get into, and the sooner it is acquired the greater will be the success.

Financial success is simply a matter of sticking to your saving habit-making your savings stronger than any temptation to spend. Nobody saves much at a time. Everybody can save a little at a time. Just try the saving habit and see how fast the small change will grow into dollars, and how the dollars will grow into tens and hundreds.

Of fine new dress materials below value will mean a saving of dollars to you, and the assortment is the best we have ever shown at this time of year.

An overstocked wholesale house, wishing to reduce their surplus, made unusually low prices on all their summer dress fabrics, and we took advantage of their low prices to restock our department.

This will give our customers the benefit of these offerings, and enable them to select the materials for summer dresses from a most complete stock, and at prices that are very attractive.

These are all new materials of this season's most popular weaves and patterns, such as lace cloths, organdies, voiles, rice voiles, spider silks or mulls, fancy flaxons, etc.

These are on sale now, and to have your new dress as good and as pretty as possible, you should come see them as soon as you can.

SOMETHING TO CONSIDER.

Farm Stock and Home: What does a $75 a month salary in the city mean? If looks attractive to many a country boy. What can it do for him?

It is "he" is frugal, and his wife the old-fashioned sort, he can pay his rent, live in a cheap quarter of town, wear clothes until they are threadbare, pinch out enough to pay sick benefit dues and a small life insurance premium, go once in a while to an moving picture show, or take the family on Sunday out into the woods. There must not be too many children—two or three at most, and as they grow up peddling papers or work in the factories is the big opportunity life holds before them.

Unless the salary can be increased there is little chance of laying aside anything for old age; and the opportunity for the rising generation is poorer than that for the parents.

An Estate.

A land grow fairer at one's touch. A neighborhood of better worth; Out of one's little that is much

To win and leave upon this earth. If boy and girl wishing to leave the farm for city life would realize that the main business of life is founding a home and rearing a family, and that it can't be done according to the standards they have been taught on the salaries which untrained workers can command there would be fewer mistakes made in that direction. City life demands special ability in some one line. The ranks of the unskilled workers are always full. The advice to stay to the farm is true. But unless a boy or girl has unusual ability, strength of character, determination, it is the best counsel that can be given.

The following officers were installed: Miss Nettie Craven, worthy matron; H. S. Ringland, worthy patron; Miss Sara J. Kellen, associate matron; Mrs. H. S. Ringland, conductress; Mrs. Maud Miller, associate conductress; Mrs. J. G. Mines, secretary; Mrs. D. C. Main, treasurer. Nearly sixty members were present. Delicious refreshments were served.

The Minerva club met Monday afternoon with Mrs. W. E. Beaman. The leader of the lesson was Mrs. C. U. Keckley. The last two chapters of Ross' Social Psychology was the text of the lesson. The chapter on "Public Opinion" was discussed by Mrs. Grothe, Mrs. Dean and Mrs. Rennick. The last chapter in which Mr. Ross gives reasons why the elements of a culture ever tend toward but rarely reach an equilibrium was read and commented upon in an interesting way by Mrs. Keckley. At the close of the program a delicious two-course luncheon was served by the hostess and club committee.

This was the last meeting of the year with the exception of the annual club picnic which will be given in the near future.

UNITED FOR PEACE

Lincoln Journal: Since the outbreak of war in Europe, party lines have disappeared in every nation involved. In the British parliament there has been but one contested measure since the war began. This was the question of reducing the efficiency of liquor on war. The life of the present parliament has about expired. Rather than hold an election in the midst of war, advantage will be taken of Great Britain's elastic "constitution" to legalize an extension of the present term.

In Germany, so great was the national unity in the face of war that even the socialist foes of war cast in their lot with clerical and conservative in voting funds for the war. It was the same in France, Russia where revolution was to be expected at the outbreak of war, even Austro-Hungary, a conglomerate nation, appears to have been more closely united by the war. Leaders of these countries has any statesman, politician or demagogue dared try to make political capital out of the necessities of the war.

The United States is now faced with a problem as important as that which united the nations of Europe. Their problem was to prosecute a war. Ours is the no less vital problem of maintaining peace. Our question is, can Americans sink all differences for the prosecution of peace in the European countries sank all differences for the prosecution of war.

There will be no breach of the peace of the United States if every body is patient while the responsible leaders of the government work out their problem. But the temptation of the self-seeking politician is great. It is easy to play upon the patriotism and the pride of a nation. People are easily stirred by martial music. It is easy to make them believe that they are being mistreated. It is a weak non-aggressive course on the part of their government. Remember how President McKinley was prodded and picked and pushed when men were trying to precipitate the war with Spain. The navy league has already raised the slogan, "500,000,000 for new warships." Add together the political and commercial interests to be served by war passion, and we have a dangerous power at work.

Against these elements it is the duty of sane Americans to stand strong. The politician who talks rings should be sat upon with crushing firmness. The war specialists, professional and commercial, should have frequent and forcible invitations to keep to the rear. To stand together for peace is a greater thing in a nation than to stand together for war.

AMONG CHAUTAUQUA ATTRACTIONS HERE

Following references to a number of the attractions secured for the chautauqua assembly in Wayne July 11-18 will be of general interest:

Charles Edward Russell.

The same modesty that pervades his literary work has hindered Russell from taking advantage of his magazine notoriety to force himself on the platform. The loss is not his. Chautauqua and Lyceum patrons who are missing Russell are the losers. He is so modest in the presentation of his message, so forgetful of self, that the people, too, forget the messenger in their breathless interest in the message. He paints picture after picture in words that burn, telling the story of the "Soldier of the Common Good." In some pictures of the homes of the lowly in the great cities, of the trials, the heart aches, the tragedies, yes and sometimes the comedies of the downtrodden, and at last the audience takes into its heart a portion of the vast pity for the hosts of plodders who without hope, without inspiration, without common comforts plod on day after day to obtain the few necessities that will keep soul and body together.

Nat M. Bringham.

The most pleasing travel lecturer now on the platform is Nat M. Bringham. Without doubt he has done more to make the ordinary citizen acquainted with the masterpieces of natural scenery in America than any other living man. He brings to your presence the famous wonders of the New World.

Marvels in Electricity.

Those who are seeking for the spectacular and the marvels will be abundantly satisfied with the program which will be given by Louis Williams at the chautauqua. These who believe that every program should be educational should be equally pleased. It is doubtful if there is an entertainment upon the platform that offers more to catch the eye, to mystify and to entertain. Mr. Williams carries with him an elaborate equipment of dynamo, generators, motors and electrical and chemical apparatus which have cost him thousands of dollars.

Conditions Continue Promising. Lincoln Trade Review: If conditions the first of April were most promising for a big crop year as they were, still more promising are conditions throughout Nebraska with the opening of May. Winter wheat is holding its perfect condition. It is expected that when the May report comes out, Nebraska will show very closely to a 100 per cent prospect for a full crop.

Good as the record was the first of April, it is believed it will be even better at this time. Wheat everywhere in Nebraska is in perfect condition. Spring grain shows a stand unexcelled when compared with other years. Excellent weather conditions have made it possible for farmers to put the ground in the best possible condition for corn planting. There has been sufficient rain to keep the surface moisture above normal and there has been no dry period as yet to reduce the stored moisture that came in the winter months.

able growth and the market will soon be fully supplied in this line. So well assured are farmers that this is to be a great crop year that they are moving the remainder of their surplus wheat to market, getting high prices for the same and there has been a large amount of corn that has gone to market in the last two weeks.

One of the questions uppermost in mind, what dimensions we shall measure the crop of 1915. Judging by every comparative feature with other years, the outlook was never equal to what it is at present for a great year of production. Farmers have received remarkably high prices for their crop of the past year. Indebtedness has been greatly reduced on account of this and a more liberal buying period than has been enjoyed for some time is now general through the state and so the question often recurring is, how great will be the wealth coming to the people of this state after the harvest of 1915. In response to the unusually fine prospects in the production line, there is business activity everywhere in the state. Retailers are making up for lost time. Jobbers are having an unexpectedly good business with increases in nearly every line of trade. This increased business is reaching and affecting manufacturing lines and the universal advance movement in business is being reflected in new building operations in every town and city in the state, practically without exception.

The financial showings of all the state's financial institutions are exceptionally high and an advance in property values seems almost certain to follow the general advance in business and production that seems to be with us. Nebraska had a crop in 1914 that in market values, exceeded anything produced in any single year heretofore in the state. With the record of last year duplicated, this year, no one can closely approximate the increase in business and wealth that is confronting Nebraska at the present time.

APPROPRIATION

It's good to have some fall disease, the rheumatism in your knees, or cough upon your neck; it's good to suffer now and then; to get swollen, boil or ween, and be a total wreck; for when you have your health gone, you're twice as busy as when you're well. You know you are in shape, to realize the luck you're in, when anguish dies, and you've a painless frame. The delegate, whose never-ill, who never needs the druggist's pill, or fears the doctor's ring, can't realize how he is blest; in perfect health he finds no zest, it's such a common-thing. Then rheumatism hits his bones, and miles away you hear his groans, as he anoints his legs, and rubs his groin, and tests his hair, and bites large pieces from his chair, and for the scowls begs. Then he begins to understand that health's a blessing great and grand that every man should prize; "If I get well instead of being sick, my money disperses—Lull's reform," he cries, "I will not howl unless I'm hurt, I will not rail and rend my shirt, or of afflictions bawl; for if a man is feeling well, he has no right to raise a yell, whatever woes befall."

EARLY MORNING.

When the eastern sky is shining with the first bright tints of day, sluggards, on their beds reclining, throw the best of his away. He is a forward waster who will sleep and dream and snore, when the birds of early morning sing and twitter at his door. I am odd and bent and busted, and by day I feel my years, and at night I'm so drowsy I could shed all my sins and tears; but when comes the wonderous breaking of a new and perfect dawn I forget my ills and achings all my weight of age seems gone. When whose heart was lately sorer than a grackle with a grooved bill, he is a heart of Arcturion as she rises from her couch, hail her with a song of gladness, for I feel my youth renewed, and I dump the load of sadness over which I'm wont to brood. Something in the splendid dancing heart of Arcturion, that he smiles and he feels like straightaway paving all his tile ducts and his gut, I behold that scene majestic and I turn around and say, to Jimmie, our domestic, "I'll forget my grouch today."

INDOORS.

"Oh, I hate to work," said the weary clerk, "in this stale and stuffy store, when the birds—sing—'Dumpty-ting-ling' in that rattle outside the door; when the skies are fair, and the balmy air is scented with lilac bloom, it is fierce, I say that a man must stay all day in a dusty room!"—Then he takes a duty from his work, in May, and rambles glad to feel the sun on his haunts the streams that he saw in dreams—for a time he is wearing bells. When his jaunt is o'er he returns once more to the place where he earns his mon, where he lately came by; and he is glad to feel that he could stand the sun; and his legs are sore where the chiggers tore their way through the jury, meat, and he ravens and rants of the blooming ants that thought he was good to eat; and he weeps and he squirms as he tells, wroth that he could not stand the sun; and he says, "I hate to work," "Let us to our comrades say, here comfort for eye aches, no."

TOUCHES FUTURE OF NEBRASKA POLITICS

Referring to the recent conference of Nebraska republicans at Omaha, the Lincoln Journal in its "More of Less Personal" column, makes these observations touching likely candidates for the United States senatorship in Nebraska next year:

"However that may be several serious and brightening clouds are gathered in the conferences that preceded and followed the meeting. The brightest looking one is that of Former Congressman John L. Kennedy. Mr. Kennedy has made no formal announcement of his intentions, but the politicians of Douglas have no doubt that he will enter the republican primary. They figure that with Hitchcock's strength in Douglas county it will be necessary to confer with him on a possible senatorial candidate from the same city. Kennedy has many elements of strength. Without trying to play politics, he has shown enough conservatism to make him acceptable to the old guard and enough radicalism to please many of the progressives. Mr. Kennedy once defeated Hitchcock in a congressional race, and although he has not been very active in politics since his retirement from congress, he is admittedly a lawyer in the district. Kennedy is a lawyer in charge of the legal business of the largest mercantile firm in Omaha, and is a very busy man. He found time last year, however, to help out the suffragists, and is an effective and pleasing speaker.

"Ross Hammond was also displaying a new brand of lightning rod. Mr. Hammond is reported to have been sounding sentiment in various parts of the state in a very businesslike way. In Douglas county political circles it is accepted as fairly certain that Mr. Hammond will be in the contest. Congressman Sloan is also reported as having in mind his own bid for office. Mr. Sloan is fairly certain of representing his present district as long as he likes, judging from past victories over popular opponents, and before he enters the senatorial race, it is believed he will weigh very carefully the chances of a successful campaign. It is believed that he will distinguish himself in the most mellow tones. Two other possibilities discussed are Former Governor Aldrich and Former Senator Burkett. The latter has been on a visit into the state any desire to seek an opportunity to match votes with Hitchcock, but Mr. Aldrich has informed a number of inquirers and some who did not inquire that if there is to be an effort on the part of the legislature to narrow the field to men who please them, he would enter the senatorial race to give the radicals a representative in the primary.

Omaha democrats do not believe that Senator Hitchcock will have any opponent at the primaries. They do not believe that anyone else will be able to figure out where he is—a chance to beat Hitchcock. The party of the Omaha democrats, principal electric light bill is believed to have made it impossible for him to appeal with success to the Bryan wing. When attention is called to his strong vote in the primary, it is answered that he is not in the contest, for he had insisted he would not run again as a Hitchcock candidate and that his biggest support came from the Hitchcock men. They limit the governor's future political ambitions to the First congressional district.

R. L. Metcalfe is another man who is regarded as certain to have had enough of the iniquity of democratic votes. Metcalfe ran against Hitchcock last year ago, and he is not looked upon as being as strong as he was then. Metcalfe is running a weekly paper in Omaha when he is home. He went away six weeks ago, ostensibly to represent the east syndicate that wanted to know the exact conditions in Mexico. He is now in Washington; but no one seems to know what his mission there is, although some think that another good place under a administration may be his. This does not comfort his opponents, with statements of Metcalfe to the effect that he expected to return to Nebraska very shortly and begin a separate campaign on behalf of prohibition.

People who had begun to suspect that Wayne county had been switched out of the rain belt, had this week had ample reason to change their minds.

With the entrance of Italy in the European war, there would seem less animosity among warring nations to encourage complications that might directly involve the United States.

The Grid Quiz was sold recently for $1800. Ord is not so large a town as Wayne, nor so favorably located. The country around Wayne is richer than that around Ord. We doubt if the Quiz is better equipped than the Wayne Herald or has larger volume of business. The foregoing is basis for the remark that the value of the Herald plant has been marked up.

Jupiter Pluvius has been busy the past week wetting down the grain fields and hay and pasture lands of this section of the state with a liberal hand. Not in years has the prospect for big crops been better than it is today in Wayne county. While the muddy roads hinder travel for the time, a few days' sun will restore them and clothe the fields with the living green peculiar to the corn belt. With a normal season from now on the 1915 crop will be a bumper one.

The baculae sermon by Dr. Fletcher L. Wharton to State Normal graduates Sunday evening contained wholesome suggestions for everybody, young or old. He sought to impress in the minds of his hearers the fact that people were brought into the world for service, not merely to gratify desire for material pleasure. The accumulation of dollars merely as foundation for ease and luxury was pointed out as destructive of life's purpose—efficient endeavor and worthy achievement. Material compensation was given a low rank in contrast with the value of service and production as influences for character development and spiritual growth. The tendency among many to receive without giving—to get much in return for little, to minimize service and magnify material acquisition—was given a severe and denigrating rebuke. His thoughts should be burned into the soul of every boy and girl, man and woman, for their greater strength, enlarged usefulness and heightened character.

CLOSING WEEK AT THE WAYNE STATE NORMAL

spised it and back of Europe's tragedy and sorrow is selfishness. You cannot make a man out of brains only.
The night has a thousand eyes
The day has but one;
But the light of the whole world
lies
When the day is done.

The mind has a thousand eyes
And the heart but one;
But the light of the whole world
lies
When love is gone.

When love is gone, the light of selfishness is extinguished. Love is that deep respect which every man owes to every other man. The life of the just is as a shining light that shineth more and more unto the perfect day. The life of the just is sweeter and yet sweeter to the man who would have it so. Youth has only heard the tuning of the instrument; the real music of the full orchestra is yet awaiting you. I am older, I have had my ups and downs, and I know much richer and better is the melody of a developed life.
Dr. Wharton held the rapt attention of the large congregation from the beginning to the close of the inspiring message he brought to the young men and the young women of the class of 1915: "The choice which comes to you is between the Lord, and the benediction was pronounced by Rev. F. B. Blessing. Open Session, Philo-Crescent Literary Society.

Following the custom begun several years ago, the two literary societies of the school held its open session in the auditorium Monday evening, which was intended to exemplify the word of the scientist during the year. The following program was rendered:

Piano Duets—Misses Hoogner and Donelson

Senior Class Play.

The largest audience that ever assembled to witness the production of a senior class play at the Normal gathered in the auditorium of the new administration building Tuesday evening, May 25, to enjoy a most excellent interpretation of Madeline Lucette Ryley's play entitled "Mice and Men."
The senior class was exceedingly fortunate in many things that tended to the success of the play. It was the first time that the Wayne public has had an opportunity to see the beautiful new auditorium and the audience, enthusiastic over the beauty of the interior decorations and stage scenery, were in just the right mood to enjoy every feature of the play.
The class was also fortunate in the selection of the play, "Mice and Men," which, while it has an exceedingly interesting plot, has enough wit and humor, enough seriousness and pathos.
The music cast was well chosen, each one fitting tastefully and naturally into its particular character, and so it would be a difficult task to choose the "star" of the play.
Elmer R. Rogers deserves special mention in the manner in which he portrayed the character of Mark Embury, a scholar, scientist and philosopher, who undertakes the education and training of Peggy, the foundling, with this selfish object in view, in order that she may have a wife for all he thinks his wife should be "educated, chaste, not prudish, simple, and fearless." His growing fondness for the child, his mad desire to win her love, and finally after he has discovered his mistake and her love for his nephew, his struggle and resolve to give her up, were all most excellently interpreted.
Ruth Sherbahn, as Peggy, the child, and Robert Berrie as Captain Lovell, the nephew and lover, do not need to be mentioned in the manner in which they interpreted the two leading parts of the play. So much depended upon just the right portrayal of Peggy, and the audience felt that in this character Miss Sherbahn, with her interpretations of the sweet, dutiful, impetuous, and unselfish girl.
Ray Hickman, as Roger Goodlake, a friend and adviser of Embury, who trusting devotedly in a wife who is a wife who is not to be trusted, who is not to be trusted, who is not to be trusted, added much to the success of the play. Ethel Garwood, as Mrs. Goodlake, his wife, frivolous, proud and haughty, and Ralph Moore, as Sir Harry Trimblestone, were both well received by the audience.
The scene that deserves more than ordinary praise was that of the ten foundlings with the matron, Eva Graves, and Beattie Gene Hickman. The foundlings were all that "foundlings should be," children irresponsible, pigsties, and the mother's trip to the Embury house in the nature of a lark.
Also others in the character of Mrs. Doborah, the housekeeper, and Ray Ash as Peter, Embury's servant, were well received. At least, it was that play that added much to the play; for leading parts do not make a play successful, if the minor ones are poorly acted.
The part of Kit Baringer, the fiddler, was exceptionally well done by Robert Fox, and at least, but not least, Ruth White was a charming and pretty maid in the character of Molly.
The music rendered by the Normal orchestra, Ensign Young and his band, was excellent and well played. Much credit is due to Professor C. U. Keeckley, under whose direction the play was given, and also to the entire senior class, who cooperated to the success of the production of "Mice and Men," credit to the State Normal school.

ENTERTAINS FACULTY.

On Thursday at six o'clock, following a pleasant custom, Miss Hancock of the domestic science department was hostess to the gentlemen of the faculty. In the large, beautifully decorated room, served by young lady pupils, the function was successfully carried out. Following was the menu: Baked ham, stuffed potatoes, Russian salad, Peach ice-cream, coffee.
The following young ladies under the direction of Miss Hancock, entertained the guests: Pearl Sutton, Olive Griffith, Marie Biermann, Marjorie Roberts.

PRESIDENT ENTERTAINS.

On Wednesday evening, May 19, the senior class and faculty were delightfully entertained at a four-course banquet given by President and Mrs. Conn. The event was enjoyed by seventy-five people. The guests gathered at President Conn's home at seven o'clock, and all went over to the college dining hall where the banquet was served. The tables were arranged in the form of a hollow square. Red roses and snowballs arranged in large cases upon the table formed the chief decoration. At frequent intervals candies placed in crystal candlesticks and covered with red shades, aided in carrying out the color scheme.
When the dinner was over, all went again to the home of President Conn, where several games were participated in. This was followed by a short musical program. Miss Grace Adams and Miss Ina Hughes favored the company with vocal solos and Miss Eva Graves and Mr. Rogers with a vocal duet.

ART DEPARTMENT EXHIBIT.

The art work of the students of the Normal made a very interesting exhibition in the art department room Friday, May 21. The display included water color, crayon, charcoal drawings, out-door sketchings, red and terra work in baskets and hand-drawn articles, such as posters. A number of books and booklets, made by the pupils of the training school under the direction of the student teachers, were works of art. The story of "The Nürnberg Story" as worked out by the sixth grade pupils, was perfectly bound, beautifully illustrated and designed, and a production that any adult would be proud to display.
Miss Killen is to be commended on the results of her efforts to put into the art department, as a part of her students and the expression of that attitude in real works of art.
During the afternoon the young ladies of the department served tea and waters to the visitors.

NORFOLK LAWYER IS UNDER INDICTMENT

Norfolk Daily News, May 26: Art J. Koenigstein, former county attorney of Madison county and city attorney of Norfolk, was indicted by the grand jury at Madison on about twenty-eight counts based on charges of receiving bribe money, from keepers of resorts in Norfolk during his term of office.
Sheriff Smith came to Norfolk Tuesday afternoon and notified Koenigstein of the charges. He was furnished a bond of $3,000 was furnished. The capias or warrant had been issued Tuesday. Judge Welch set Thursday as the date for arraignment when Koenigstein will plead to the charges. The charges were made, it is understood, by Fern McDonald and Nannie Meyers, resort keepers. Koenigstein returned to Norfolk from Madison Tuesday night.

PILGER MAN MISSING.

Pilger, Neb., May 26—John Bligh, a man who has been living in Pilger for the past year, is supposed to have committed suicide Saturday evening by drowning. His wife died last winter after an illness of several months and left him with a young child and no money. His poor health became discouraged and Saturday wrote a letter to his sister and also his brother who live here and told them he had decided to end his life by drowning and gave them instructions when to do with the children. He was seen near the river Saturday evening by some boys and that is the last seen of him. He told his brother in the letter that it would be useless to look for his body, as they would not find it. Search has been made along the river but no trace of him has been found and all are convinced he has taken his life. His brother and sister did not get the letters until Tuesday as they live in the country and it was not known until then that he had written the letters.

OUR BRIGHT BLUE SUN.

Is the Air or Moisture That Makes It Look White or Red.
There is a general belief that sunlight is white and therefore that the sun is white. But this is a long way from the real condition of things. The sun is a bright blue, as blue in color as seems the water of a deep mountain lake. It is the air that makes the sun appear white.
Everybody has noticed when the sun is very cloudy that the sun appears as a red ball, as red as a red-hot poker. Yet we know the sun hasn't changed at all. It is the mist in the air that makes the color seem different. And in the dawn and dusk, no matter how clear the air may be, the sun is much redder in color than when it is overhead in the middle of the day. The reason for this is that in the morning and evening we see the sun through a thicker belt of air. It is this thicker air which makes it look redder, just as it is the fog which has the same effect. If the air were taken away entirely, then we should expect the sun to be still less red.
Since in the middle of the day the air is white, how could it be less red? By being blue.
The atmosphere is really like a thick transparent colored spread between the sun and the bright blue sky. Like a veil it dims the light, and its color acts as a filter. Actually the air stops most of the blue rays, but lets nearly all the orange colored rays come through.
It has been said, definitely shown that if it were not for the orange color of the air we could not live. It is the actinic rays of sunlight give us the heat in summer, and it is in the blue and violet rays that the damage is done. The air softens the sunlight enough for us to bear it.
A few million years hence the sun will be yellow, and almost some of its earlier blue heat is gone. But for a million years ahead, we should worry—New York American.

From an Author's Journal.

I mortgaged my home to purchase an automobile; then the auto. in a humorous freak, ran down and disabled for life the man who told the mortgage. And to think I had so many shenanigans I had hoped to put out of business with the same machinery—Atlantic Constitution.

sometimes climb to the summit of the highest hill, but only to be disappointed when they would see only more hills and more valleys before them.

Many of the wives of the early settlers helped their husbands in the fields with the planting of the grain and caring for the crops but knew nothing whatever of outdoor work. Besides their little ones demanded their attention in the home.

As the time passed on, each settler became better acquainted with his neighbor and on Sunday they often visited one another, telling of their past life and experiences.

Then came the dry years when the crops burned up in the hot dry winds of summer. The people became desperate when year after year their crops failed and, "where the next sack of flour was to come from" became a serious question. Because of the theory that concussion would cause the vapor to condense thus producing the needed rain, some went up on the hill tops, fired guns into the sky and with dynamite blew heavy anvils into the passing clouds. Of course this was of no avail.

People Became Discouraged.

Discouraged, the people began leaving the country as fast as they could come into it. Many had borrowed money from loan companies to pay for their pre-emptions and upon leaving they lost all they had put into it. Some traded their land for a team and wagon with which to leave the country, while others sold it for as small a sum as fifty cents or a dollar an acre.

Although many left this country poorer than when they entered it, many remained; some perhaps because they had not the means with which to start into some other field of livelihood, others because they were far-sighted enough to see that conditions must change and that their land would some day become valuable. In summer they tilled the soil, reaping the scanty harvest in the fall, and as winter drew near they built rude sheds and barns for their few head of stock. During the long cold months those living along the creek trapped, in this way earning a little to help them through the long season of unproductiveness.

Cost of Living Small.

Little by little their property increased for the living did not cost them much after they became the owners of a few chickens, pigs and cows, for with their garden, the products from these animals, almost supplied the table and their clothing bill was small, for all that was required was that their clothes and their children's should be clean and whole and warm enough to protect them from the cold of the winters. It was necessary for them to make every penny count and if a calf died it was a great calamity. Many is the time during those years of hardship when the men would have to go out into the cold, sixty miles in early spring, to bring in a little calf that was apparently chilled beyond recovery and that it out before the kitchen fire. These things were unpleasant for the housekeeper, especially when the calf began to revive and would kick and bawl in agony of pain as the blood would again begin to circulate through its veins. She bore these hardships, though, without complaint for she knew they would be repaid in the end.

About the first year of every community it is that of bringing the material reach of the settlers. Shortly after the beginning of settlement the government provided for this necessity by hiring a mail carrier and establishing a few postoffices throughout the country. At first the settlers of this community had to go from six to ten miles to one of these postoffices, fording the river, but in a few years, daily mail was brought "crosser" to their homes.

School Districts Formed.

Schools became necessary for the growth and development of the children as they became too advanced to be taught at home, so school districts were formed and those later called, donated their services toward the building of schoolhouses. Let us look into one of these schoolhouses of twenty years ago. At a home-made desk of rough pine boards, upon which were lying a few worn old books, sat the teacher, knitting or crocheting. The twenty or more pupils in the room were busy whispering out their reading lessons. Their desks were home made also, made just too high for the little ones. In the center of the room stood and old stove that was a cast-off from some settler's home. On cold winter mornings it was sure to refuse to burn and teacher and pupils would have to sit huddled about it waiting for the room to warm. The floor was also of rough pine boards of unmatched lumber in which were numerous knot holes. Upon the uneven plastered walls were printed with colored chalk such mottoes as "Honor to whom honor is due." The deep set, dust covered window ledges were the dinner pails, while upon pegs at the back of the room hung the wraps. Although the books were of every kind, and many entirely out of date, since each child brought from home, such as he had, and although the teachers were often unqualified, still those children learned more than do many children of today.

The schoolhouse was also used as a place in which to hold church, literary meetings, box socials and dances. The church and Sunday school flourished as everyone was interested in them and attended the meetings regularly. The ministers were, as the rest, poor homesteaders, but they spoke words of comfort and cheer to the people. Collectors were not taken up for the people had no money to contribute, but these ministers went on preaching just as earnestly, working just as hard for the good of their flocks, as though they received large salaries. After the services the people lingered about the churchyard, visiting with each other. Often those living within a mile or so of the schoolhouse invited three or four families, who had come from longer distances to take dinner with them.

People were generous then even though they were poor. A stranger was never refused a meal or a bed and when the family went away the doors were left unlocked and if anyone went in and prepared himself a meal it was all right.

On children's day the families took their dinners to church with them and after the program they had a picnic dinner; not under the shady trees on blue grass lawns, it was true, but just as much real enjoyment was had as though they had such pleasant surroundings.

During the winter months when the work was not so pressing a literary society was organized. Young and old took part in the programs, each according to his talents. One certain Scotchman was always ready when called upon to recite his "I say, Sal, sez L'."

The Demand for Towns.

The country seemed to demand more towns and at different times they were started. For a while they flourished but not for long because the settlers preferred to make the long trips to towns where they could trade their butter and eggs for their provisions.

Since the land still lay unopened the travel took the paths of least resistance and roads were worn around the hills and sandy places instead of keeping to the section lines. For the first few years there were no bridges across the river and the settlers had to ford it every time they went to town. This was unsafe because of quicksand and more dangerous during the spring of the year when the ice was breaking up. The country spanned the river with wooden bridges, every four or five miles along its course. Some believed that there was water enough in the river to irrigate the fields. Accordingly a company was formed, the land was surveyed, a dam built, ditches dug, and a flume erected which was to carry the water from one hill to another. For a few years the ditch was used but it was never very successful for the river did not supply enough water. Because of this, the company broke up and thousands of dollars were lost.

Slowly but surely, conditions began to change. The people became accustomed to the country and knew better how to contend with it, the rainfall increased and they were now able to raise larger crops. They learned that they could not hope to make a living at farming alone but that they must practice the dual occupation of farming and herding. This diversified farming meant more work for a man was hired.

The hired man was treated as one of the family, sharing with them the same food and shelter and even entering into their social activities. The addition of another member to the family made the wife's work a little harder but she was willing to bear it in order that they might make a better living.

More Land Needed.

More land was now needed, for a quarter section of land there would not support more than fifteen or twenty head of cattle. Of course the government land was free for anyone to use, but many were dishonest about the use of it. They fenced in all of the territory they could and did their best to keep it covered so that people would not file on it.

About this time the Kinkaid bill, which permitted any citizen twenty-one years of age to take a homestead of six hundred forty acres of land, became a law. The government also insisted upon the fences being removed from the government land but this did not prevent dishonesty. Many squatters had already taken men to file on homesteads. The improvements, which consisted of a little claim shack, were furnished by the employer and when the time came for proving up the claim, the settler had already fulfilled the conditions of the law, when in reality he had probably never spent a night there. As soon as the deed was obtained it was transferred to the ranchman. In this way many obtained the land at very little cost.

If those settlers who became discouraged and left, were to return they would find it a progressive and prosperous community. They would no longer travel in a wagon drawn by a mule team as they did years ago but they would be whirled along in an automobile over well graded roads and steel bridges. They would pass thrifty looking farms and pastures, fields of waving grain, and pastures crowded by well kept fences in which are herds of fat, sleek cattle and horses grazing upon the nutritious grasses. They soon arrived at the home of one of their former neighbors.

They notice as they leave the automobile and approach the house the well kept lawn and trees. After the greetings are over the old pioneer shows them first his home, which is a comfortable, roomy dwelling heated with steam supplied with hot and cold water and lighted with gas. He then shows them the thrifty looking garden and young orchard, his modern barn and sheds and his livestock. Not all the former settlers are as well as pictured this one but even the poorest are rapidly improving.

"Except for the antelope and the beaver the same species of animals are still to be seen in their respective localities, they are not as numerous as they were, which fact is largely due to the hunter and trapper."

Change For Better.

With the improvement of home conditions has come the improvement of the schools. After the decrease of population some of the schools might support a few schools well. The sod schoolhouse has, as the sod house, almost entirely disappeared and the frame building taken its place. The tendency is now becoming as in the east, to consolidate the schools so that the pupils have advantage of the high school work in their own districts. Some also retire to town that they may give their children better advantages.

In some ways the social life is not so satisfactory as in former days, but the people had their pleasures in the community and because of this they were closely united. Now because of improved conditions of roads and the automobile they are able to go to the neighboring towns to entertainments. A result of this is the condition of the church.

The neighborhood ministers of former times have gone and the population is not great enough to induce good ministers to come out from the towns and the people would rather go to town to church than to listen to poor ones.

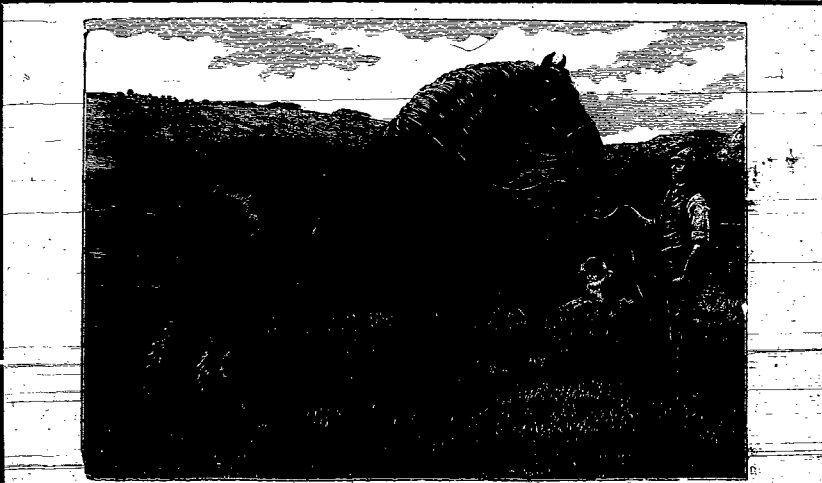

Literary societies are still encouraged and some very interesting programs are rendered. Dances are given in the large barns, in schoolhouses and in homes for the entertainment of the young people. Perhaps the people are not quite so free-hearted about entertaining strangers as in the old days but yet they are still sociable and entertain a great deal.

Although this is a progressive and prosperous community, it was not made so in a day nor without great labor. As it is in every community, if you are to succeed, you must work.

Miss Mary Ellen Evans was born in Wales, G. B., November 13, 1863, and died at her home on Monday,
May 17, 1915, aged 51 years, 6 months, 4 days. On February 18, 1886 she was married to Mr. Evan Jones. They lived for a number of years in Platte county, Neb., and then removed to their present home, west of Carroll. To this union were born eight children, five of whom are now living. They are two sons,
Gwyn and Owen and three daughters,
Olwen, Winnie and Mrs. Celyn
Morris. Mrs. Jones was one of a family of fifteen children, nine of whom survive her. Five sisters and three brothers were present at the funeral. On brother who lives in Wales was unable to come.
Deceased was a member of the Welsh Congregational church.
The funeral services were held at the Welsh Methodist
