It's the Soap Not the Name That Counts

Lots of people think of soap merely as a cleansing agent. They see that it removes dirt—further than this they do not think. Be careful of the soap you use. Never use soap with free alkali in it. Always be sure that the soap you buy will accomplish the purpose for which it was intended without harmful results.

When you want a medicinal soap, an antiseptic soap, a bath soap, or a shampoo soap, get it at our store, and you secure exactly what you want. Our soap knowledge is at your disposal.

A beggar was seeking funds recently in the business district on strength of a printed statement that he was suffering a serious case of tuberculosis. It looks as though a man afflicted as represented might menace the health of those whom he asked charity. To leave the disease in his wake would not be a very welcome way of acknowledging receipt of donations.

WAYNE CHAUTAUQUA BETTER THAN EVER

The Chautauqua is a great feature in education; there is nothing in America apart from the church and the public schools, of higher value for the cultivating and healthful stimulation of the masses; and therefore it has a claim on the support of all good citizens. An assembly whose activities do not make for education is not a Chautauqua.

While former programs have been arranged along these lines the management feels sure that this is an improvement on any that has gone before and that in it there is something for everyone.

As an independent management has gone to a big expense in adding an additional day, making eight full days. Speakers and companies are contracted for separately. The local management furnishes the tents, hires all help needed, does its own advertising, and runs the chautauqua the same as any business man runs his own place. The management assume everything and any surplus remains at home and must remain in the Chautauqua treasury for future work. No individual can receive any dividend or profit. All speakers and companies engaged are known to be first class. Everyone of them will make good.

The program this year is just as good as is offered by the other, and larger-chautauqua. The outlook was better for a successful Chautauqua than at the present time. You are urged to speak to your friends about the advisability of attending at this session. The ticket is low, the talent of the best. Get your tickets early, ask your neighbor to purchase tickets, do all the boasting you can as it is needed to make this year's session a success.

Charles Edward Russell, who makes his appearance at Wayne's Chautauqua July 15 is America's foremost author, journalist, lecturer.

After serving as managing editor of the Minneapolis Journal and the Detroit Tribune, he went to New York and reporter on the New York World and New York Herald. He has been Washington correspondent of the Herald, and city editor of the Herald, city editor of the World, managing editor of the New York Morning Journal and publicist in charge of the Chicago American. He has worked as reporter, covering a wide range, making him familiar with problems vital in the management of the entire country. The Herald sent him in 1902 to investigate conditions in the anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania. In 1904 he left daily journalism and the next year undertook for Every-body magazine an investigation of the trust. He was then sent around the world to investigate social and economic conditions and progress. He visited England, France, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, India, Burma, Ceylon, Australia, New Zealand, South Sea Islands, China and Japan. The results were published in Everybody's in a series called "Soldiers of the Common Good."

He wrote for the Cosmopolitan magazine called "The Foe of Democracy," describing caste systems in various countries and a series in this magazine called "At the Front of the Republic," dealing with electric power in various European cities. He has recently traveled over Europe, making an investigation of various European cities. He has just returned from a second visit to the was-front and is writing a series of articles about the war that are being published by the leading magazines of this country. The management does not know of a better man to enlighten people on the conditions now existing at the war front than Charles E. Russell. The subject of his lecture is entitled "The War of the Lesser Gods." He will give you facts. Do not miss hearing him.

Traveling Man's Experience. "In the summer of 1888 I had a very severe attack of cholera morbus. Two physicians visited me and told me to buy me a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, and take no substitute. I took a double dose according to the directions and went to sleep after the third morning I was called by my order and took a train for my next stopping point, a well man but feeling rather shaky from the severity of the attack," writes H. W. Ireland, Louisville, Ky. Obtainable everywhere.—Adv.

CHANGE FOR BETTER WITH NEW EQUIPMENT

Only those who saw can realize the change that has come over the normal school with the occupancy of the new administration. It is not alone the complete and steady and commodious structure but the sudden increase in attendance at the institution, the added confidence, the feeling that in the immediate future are yet larger things—it is all these things that have brought to the thrill into the entire group of workers, both students and faculty.

Last month, when the building was nearing completion there was doubt whether the attendance would call for so great a requirement. Then came the first day of the summer session and, to the lower floor of the large chapel is occupied by students. The recitation rooms are commodious, their capacity is more than great for the size of the classes. In fact, we find ourselves saying that another hundred would scarcely be a source of the institution. Four hundred fifty-two students in the department of the summer session. The Herald sent him in 1902 to investigate conditions in the anthracite coal regions of Pennsylvania. In 1904 he left daily journalism and the next year undertook for Everybody magazine an investigation of the trust. He was then sent around the world to investigate social and economic conditions and progress. He visited England, France, Germany, Austria, Switzerland, Italy, India, Burma, Ceylon, Australia, New Zealand, South Sea Islands, China and Japan. ELECTRICITY—CARRIER OF LIGHT AND POWER; DEVOURER OF TIME AND SPACE. BEARER OF HUMAN SPEECH OVER LAND AND SEA; GREATEST SERVANT OF MAN; ITSELF UNKNOWN.

The most marvelous of all programs upon the Chautauqua platform is that presented by

LOUIS WILLIAMS

UNDER THE TITLE "WONDERS OF ELECTRICITY"

Wayne Chautauqua Tuesday, July 13

Mr. Williams carries with him an elaborate equipment of dynamos, generators, motors, and electrical and chemical apparatus, which have cost him thousands of dollars. By this means he gives a series of beautiful and wonderful experiments, illustrating what electricity has accomplished and what it may do in the future.

A few of these demonstrations are as follows:

- X-Ray Ultraviolet Ray. Miniature Lightning. Spectacular discharges from terminals. Address of fire. "Horn" lightning arresters illustrated. Luminous rays illustrating the possibility of illuminating without heat. Luminous discs and the "phantom streaks." Lighting vacuum tubes without making metallic connection to show presence of waves through space. Lighting an incandescent lamp with the current passing through a glass plate. Taking a discharge of hundreds of thousands of volts through a high pressure tube. Lighting a 16 c. p. 110 volt lamp with current passing through the body.
- RADIUM. Many other demonstrations that are little short of the miraculous.

cool, though it is warmer today. "I am taking everything offered in journalism, and "Social Development and Education" under Dr. O'Shea. His lectures alone are worth the time, money and effort. It is so good, so far to kind in his "thinking or human life" and its elemental principles. If I had time to study human nature as he has studied it and at the same time do their life work, how much safer would the future of the race be.

You often hear the theory advanced that schools of education can do little to advance the interests of newspapers, magazines or writers, that experience is what makes success. I believe, however, from what I have been able to see and hear in the short time I have been here that they are filling a large place. Professor Bleyer, who is in charge, is a newspaper man and writer of wide experience, thoroughly conversant with the methods, policies and aims of the newspapers and magazines of the world. Furthermore, he is able to direct in a practical way the study, practice, and activities of students of journalism. Each student is given a report for the college, city and state papers. We have already been assigned four feature articles for magazine publications to be written during the six weeks. I am hoping my report will be assigned to the state legislature now in session. I visited it last night during an evening session.

The building is beautiful, one of the finest in the United States. The assembly hall is magnificent and would hold great seats in the balcony. It is a fine job the designers have done. As I looked down upon the desks I was painfully reminded of a school room ready for fumigation, though the apparent disorder on the desks may have been really the best of order.

The big question before the house was the tax-commission bill. One of its defenders said that it was in danger of being killed and he called for the arrest of absent members, that they might be brought in to the floor. Finally, the chairman, a skilled parliamentarian, called order and the contest began in earnest. I haven't time to tell you of it, but it was finally ended by a motion to adjourn. That was an evening to remember. "We are privileged to listen to many fine addresses aside from the regular work. Yesterday I heard the lecture, "The Newspaper of Today," I can only quote the statement, "The newspaper is the greatest instrument of the age." I wish I could give you the substance of it all, but time will not permit. Then I heard the lecture, "The Newspaper," which was very fine and culminated in the plea for the independence of the press. It is one of the best means of punishment, reform, and protection of society.

This morning the magazine writing class was privileged to listen to Chas. Dixon, once Sunday editor of the Kansas City Star, now editor of the "Lippa publications, in which he told of the kind of feature articles desired by the agricultural magazines, and in which he related some of his own experiences as a magazine writer. It was a treat. He will be here to study news, to mark this "to be continued."—Mrs. M. A. Phillips.

ALFALFA PRODUCTION.

Lincoln Trade Exhibit: Some very interesting statistics have recently been compiled on the production of alfalfa in this country and its value in hay and seed.

Here in the middle west we realize how important alfalfa has become and the value that it possesses, but the spread of the growth of alfalfa is scarcely realized. There is now not a state in the union that does not grow this product. Kansas has 1,193,641 acres and Rhode Island has the smallest acreage; the total acres of alfalfa in that state being 75. There are a score of states that have had acreage running into the hundreds of thousands of acres. The average of all the states; the acreage in Nebraska for 1914 being given as 1,022,485. Colorado is in third place in production of alfalfa with 900,000 acres and California is in fourth place with 490,000 acres. The total acreage in the United States devoted to alfalfa is 9,827,648.

In yield per acre, California, Oregon and Idaho make the best showing. In selling value, in sales per acre, the highest is in California. The highest price in a number of the southern states, "Taking Kansas and Nebraska, the value per ton accorded to alfalfa in Kansas is $9.60; to alfalfa in Nebraska, $9.00. It is difficult to compare the value of alfalfa in these two states, but the compilation of values makes this difference. The value of alfalfa production in Kansas in 1914 was $23,940,206; the value of alfalfa production in Nebraska was under this compilation, $20,420,244. Both government and state statistics for Nebraska alfalfa crop of 1914 gave a larger value per ton to it than is given in the compilation under discussion, so that the figures of $20,420,244 is too low an estimate, rather than too high.

In the United States, the total value of alfalfa hay produced in 1914 is given as $153,899,984. The estimate of the value of alfalfa seed produced is $7,000,000. This makes a grand total of alfalfa production in this country for 1914 of $160,899,984. If every other state increases its alfalfa production the present year as highly as Nebraska production will be increased, there will be a much larger figure for the 1915 production of this crop than those given for the crop of a year ago.

OPPORTUNITY.

For want of a very small sum a man often has to sit by and watch his opportunity become the property of some one else. Opportunities pass by those who do not save. The chance for good investment comes to every sooner or later. The ready man seizes a safe and profitable investment is obtained by saving. The man who has followed the plan of the wise virgins and is prepared can take advantage of the opportunity; the improvident man sees the other fellow get the profit. Frequently a man is not offered an opportunity to make money because it is known that he is not thrifty. We believe that every man has more than one chance. If you have seen your golden opportunity slip away because you could not meet the emergency financially, we believe that the thing for you to do is to begin to save now, and save presently and systematically. Opportunity will come your way again; watch for it and be ready to greet it.

MRS. M. A. PHILLIPS AT MADISON, WISCONSIN

Mrs. M. A. Phillips, principal of Wayne high school, who recently went to the university at Madison, Wis., to take the summer course in journalism, writes interestingly as follows:

Madison is a beautiful town built after the hub and wheel plan, the state capitol with its beautiful grounds forming the hub. Looking down its long, though narrow streets shaded by great trees, one sees a park in almost every block. The long, low, narrow streets are in one direction, L. Mendota in the other. I cannot tell you what direction. People here do not say east, west, north, or south; they say to the left, to the right or down that way. I nearly every one is in the ordinary phrase turned round here.

The university community is on the shore of L. Mendota. I wish I could make you see the magnificence of the buildings, the well kept lawns, the fine old trees and that beautiful, silvery-blue lake stretching away to meet the shadowy hills in the misty distance. It is hard to make myself think of ordinary everyday matters when with a turn of the head and lift of the eye, all that panorama of beauty lies spread before me. I love to walk down to the lakeshore, but two blocks from my rooming place, of an evening I watch the boats on the water. Of the bathing, there has been little as yet for the weather has been too
