From Ponca Journal, November 22, 1888:

The Pontreue who often had occasion to visit Sioux City can mingle some very fervent gratitude with his Thanksgiving dinner because of the completion of the Missouri river bridge. Job could never have made a record on patience had he been obliged to travel the road between this place and Sioux City during late autumn and early spring when ferries are uncertain and trains are not to be depended upon.

Bart Doyle, democrat, and J. Crane, republican, some weeks ago made an agreement that if the republican party was beaten in the election, Crane was to carry Doyle from the court house to the bridge. However, the democratic party was beaten, Mr. Doyle was to carry Mr. Crane. The result of the election being known, Messrs. Crane and Doyle will settle political difficulties. On Saturday next at two o'clock in the afternoon, Mr. Crane will saddle and straddle Mr. Doyle, and gallop him down to the bridge. The Ponca Military band will head the procession and a large concourse of people, with flags, cheers and enthusiasm will attend and participate in the exercise. Remember the time, and be on hand to see the fun.

A prominent railroad man whose word may be implicitly relied upon, was interviewed by a Sioux City Journal reporter concerning a proposed road through Dixon county. Said the railroad man:

"As soon as the frost is out of the ground in the spring, work will commence at this end of the road. Through Nebraska, the road will be known as the Nebraska and Eastern; through Wyoming as the Wyoming and Eastern, and through Utah as the Salt Lake Valley and Eastern. The mortgages of these proposed lines are now being filed in every county through which the line will pass, and it is my understanding the work will be let in sections this winter, and that next spring and summer the grading and tracklaying will be mostly completed.

"Are the surveys finished?"

"Mostly. There are surveying parties at this end of the route, but they will be in and through their 'labors in the next sixty days.'

"This road, it must be remembered, passes through Dixon county from east to west through the richest part of the county. Rumors concerning that bridge at Lime Run ravine and the time that the Milwaukee is to build to the southward are also frequently heard. Circumstances to confirm these rumors are not wanting and it begins to look as if Ponca was to become a prominent railroad town after all.

The question of good flour and good bread is solved at this store. Our two leading brands, "Pleazall" and "Seal of Minnesota," are guaranteed to make the best bread, and if they are not fully up to representations and entirely satisfactory, the refund will be made on the return of empty sacks. "Pleazall" is made by a high class flouring mill at York, and "Seal of Minnesota" is a Minnesota product—none better than either. The likelihood of increased prices for flour as the season advances may be an influence to buy larger quantities. In such cases, a reasonable reduction in price will be made.

freshments were served at the close of the business session, and a social hour was spent. Mrs. E. A. Johnson rendered a vocal selection. The money raised at the social reception held, amounting to $32, was directed sent to the Eastern Star orphans' home at Fremont. Mrs. Anthony, Worthy Matron of the Wausa chapter, was present as a guest.

The Juvenile Music club held the November meeting Saturday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. T. House. A program of piano and violin music was given by the members of the club. Jones, and Mrs. Horace Theobald also rendered pleasing vocal and instrumental selections. A pleasant time was had.

The Eastern Star lodge met Monday evening for a school of instruction. Mrs. Nye, the state instructor of Plainview, was in charge. Recombated another whose eyes were likewise covered. But he was deceived, and he charged around wildly after some one who pecked him on the face, but who had the advantage of the other. After preparation by torture, the candidates were escorted into a half-darkened chamber before an open casket in which lay a demolished and decaying man. Viewing the remains the candidates were reminded that each would in due time be just as dead and gruesome, and thus each was admonished to live that when so reduced he would feel better than he looked. Following this impressive lesson, each took a solemn obligation to always remember but never reveal any of the experiences of the ceremony, and forever cherish and protect brother and sister members. (Manifestly this has been kept inviolate.) The password "Crack Me" was significant to the member who had been recklessly promissed in demonstration of the work. The halting sign, three cracks and answered by turning the other check, exemplified the noble spirit of forgiveness. The singing of the closing ode brought to an end an animated and interesting session. Following the singing of the closing ode, refreshments were served, and all were loud in praise of a most enjoyable and somewhat different line of social entertainment.

EASTERN OPTIMISM.

Lincoln Trade Review: It is interesting these days to see how optimistic the east is getting over business conditions. Commercially, the papers are reflecting in an enthusiastic way, the general feeling that prevails in that section over business conditions this fall. It has not been so long since the east has given expression to hopefulness that their present attitude is almost revolutionary. It has been chronic in that section to look upon the dark side of things year after year, and to forget all the ordinary things for which to be thankful. To see the people there now, happy and optimistic, crowing over their business conditions, is worth waiting for.

With a narrowness that prevails in sections east of the Alleghanies, there has been a constant avoidance of the recognition of the prosperous times that have prevailed through the central west, not only this year but for several years previous. Because the eastern section was in a measure depressed, it was taken for granted that the entire country was going to the bad and there could not be said too much in discouragement and disparagement of the times as they existed.

Here in the central west, there is a much more universal spirit of hopefulness than seems to prevail as the general average—in the east. If things are not just what we would like to have them, we look forward to the next year with hopefulness and optimism. It has been just the contrary in the east. If things were not all that people there thought they had a right to expect, they shrouded themselves in gloom and predicted that the next year and the next would be still more depressing and disheartening. For that reason the country at large has looked toward the east as the seat of pessimistic feeling and that hopefulness could not be expected from that section.

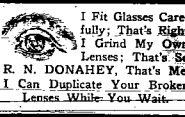

To see now the optimism that prevails there is as unexpected as it is gratifying, because in the great east where hopefulness is so abundant, the wish is universal that the rest of the country get into the same happy attitude. Read the commercial reports from west to east published in financial papers throughout the east and some idea can be gained of the revolution of feeling in regard to business present and future that is now apparent in that section.

THE FIELD OF BUSINESS.

Sioux City Journal, Nov. 8: Controller of the Currency Williams' summary of the September statements of the 7613 national banks runs a close second to the agricultural department's crop report as a prosperity campaign document. The controller's tabulation shows that the total resources of the national banks on September 2 were greater by $424,000,000 than the total shown in any previous call. The increase between the June and September statements was found to be $271,000,000. The increase in loans and discounts during the same period was $165,000,000. Total deposits of $9,229,000,000 were disclosed in the September statements, an increase of $108,000,000 over the June total and of $337,000,000 over the highest total previously registered.

A drop of 175 points in Bethlehem steel stock followed somewhat related realization that the boom in iron and steel was being overdone. Other of these specialties suffered in less degree. The loss of speculative interest in this line of securities seems to be due in part to persistent efforts by bankers to stop the inflation and in part to publication of financial statements showing how grossly the speculators had been overestimating the gains in profits attributable to war contracts recently filed with the government.

The longest period of fine weather for the year has intensified somewhat with trade in winter goods, for which the retailers are now liberally stocked. Otherwise, practically all departments of business are booming. Railways, especially in the east and the northwest, are finding their facilities inadequate, and appeals are going out to shippers to say possible haste in the release of cars. While the initial uplift was given in many industries by orders from abroad, the burden of responsibility for the present activity is found in orders for domestic trade, brought out by the general restoration of confidence in the future. The bumper crop output shared with our foreign trade the credit for restoration of confidence. Throughout the country as a whole labor is well employed, and in some districts a temporary scarcity is reported.

Bank clearings last week totaled $4,482,000,000.

THE TEETH AND EFFICIENCY

A great manufacturing corporation has installed a modern dental equipment, with a competent dentist in charge, to care for the teeth of their employees. Not that they love their employees so much, but because they recognize that one with poor teeth is not 100 per cent efficient, and cannot give the service of which he is capable, when able to manufacture food properly.

You cannot have teeth filled free of charge, but if taken in time the expense is not great, and within the means of most people.

The candidates were presented to this superior dignitary and interrogated as to their willingness to be entrusted in order that good qualities suitable for membership might be proved. Each candidate was given the name of a nut, and was then made the object of a somewhat strenuous degree of teasing or hot strength and capacity for full-fledged punishment. For instance, a lady candidate, blindfolded, was descending a platform when she screamed. It is said it did not take long to make her do that. The degree of torture for the men was especially demonstrated by use of one candidate: "Blindfolded, he was fixed out with boxing gloves and was supposed to meet in boxing

Have You Lost Your Ambition?

Stomach trouble robs men of more strength and ambition than any other ill.

Give your stomach a fair chance and it will get well. You can't expect your stomach to perform the duties if the bone marked (C) in illustration has been wrenched out of place. The natural position of that bone pinches the nerves that control the stomach. That bone must be straightened before you can enjoy health.

THE MAYFLOWER

I much admire that stately ship in which our fathers made the trip from England's sunny shores. Unless I've badly crossed my wires, there must have been ten thousand sires upon its decks, or more. It must have been a rubber raft, so it is to be regretted that the ship holds so many men, the pilgrim fathers were so thick the captain couldn't heave a brick-but he'd hit eight or ten. One hundred sailed, the record claims; and some were children, some were dames, one had died 'mid the trip; yet there are countless families whose hold ancestors crossed the seas; or that glacial ship, I've traveled east, I've traveled west; wherever I have been, a crest, the best would proudly say, "My grand sire's grand sire's grand sire's dad sailed in the Mayflower, when a lad, to Massachusetts Bay." I've stopped at times in swill hotels, where all the thoughtless guests and bellies looked on me as a wreck, because I am the only state whose fathers didn't pile their freight upon the Mayflower's deck. My father's and father's father's size a passage tried to look by wire, the telegrams were known, and thus he missed that famous ship, and didn't see the skipper skip, and I am left alone.

PAYING RENT

For seven years, in discontent, I leased a humble cot; it kept me busy paying rent-it also kept me hot. Each month for seven weary years, I coughed up twenty bones; I handed out the coin with tears, and deep, heartrending groans. The landlord lived in princely state, and when I went to him, and said, "Old scout, the garden gate is badly out of trim; the doggie's roof lets in the rain, and the floods our meats hit, each window has a broken pane, the doors will not stay shut," he answered me, "The times are bad, and growing worse, I trow; I simply can not spare a scad to fix that cabin now. As for the garden gate, I'm sorry, but, measured twenty-four feet, with rainpipes running up the back, a latchstring to each door. Now if the roof is sagging down, or holes are in the stairs, I chase no landlord through the town, because my ax, my shotgun and my spade, and plug the holes and fix the cracks, without a landlord's aid. And there's a pleasure simply great, a sacred sort of glee, in working round your own estate, however small it be."

BEATING DOWN PRICES

I called on Rumbelow & Raiz, who deal in fancy Thomas cats, shipped in from France and Spain. I noticed when I stepped within that both the partners ceased to grin, as though they had a pain. And every place I go to trade, I see the smiles from faces fade-I often wonder why, with all merchandising others greet with becks and bows and manners sweet, and meet me with a sigh? "My place is overrun with rats," I said, "I want twelve pounds of cats, so kindly quote your price." "Our cats and rats are hale and sound; the price is seven cents a pound, which is a sacrifice." "Great Scott!" I cried, "your price is fierce! John Jones sells tomatoms by the tierce, and only charges six; I've not come this far to be cheated, just send a crate of tomatoms round," the partners answered, "Nix!" I stood and argued for an hour, and on their mugs expressions sour still deep and deeper grew, until they led me on the floor and dragged me to the open door, and camouflaged me through. I wonder why the merchants-frown when I go shopping in the town, to buy all kinds of trash; they all seem happy when I quit; my winning ways don't make a bit, and no one wants my cash.

FOOLISH FASHIONS

In summertime the girl wore furs, which must have been distressing, and much disgusting when they were hot; or I am badly guessing. I well remember Susan Jane wrapped up in seal and ermine, when everything upon the plain in sizzling heat was squirming. And yet she uttered no complaint, most any like of creatures, although the heat dissolved her paint-till it ran down her features. Some brand new fad in winter wear she'll spring, we well trust her; when bizzards frolic she will bear a fat and sleek fuster. We'll see her in the howling storm, a simple flynet round her, and she will say she is quite warm, when snow and hailstones pound her. Girls would commit in Fashion's name, all crimes, clear up a treason; at her decree the modern dame abandons sense and reason. (And here the hausfrau says to me, "The open are just as silly; they'll go as far as to decree, as any blooming bill. The hat you wear gives me the lines, your shirt has gaudy trimmings, you're always wearing pointed shoes although they keep you lipping. Your linen collar saws your ears, your pin has placed glass in it; you'd better quit this manner if you're to women every minute."

MARRIED PEOPLE

Young Rollie and Alice got married last year, and then in a palace sought their careers in goldsmiths and cutlers they'd had a store; they'd footmen and butlers and servants galore. They'd dach-hunds and poodles, apparel the best, and-augurs, and-Boodie's the family child. They had every blessing that mortals pursue, but this is distressing-they'd nothing to do! Alas, for the bridal of people like these! For folks who are idle no fortune can please. So Alice and Rollie-a matter of course; such things do follow-indulged in divorce. Oh, Reader and Briget got married last May; their roll was a midget-he worked by the day. They rented a cottage at Timmington Square, their lodger was not a cent a day. He's earning his wages along with a gang; she's earning green gages in that cheap shebang. And neither will fidget for things out of reach; her husband loves Briget, she thinks he's a pretzel. And indulgence raises no cloud in their view; they're busy as blazes, with plenty to do.

THRIFTLESS

It's well to be sunny, and frisky and gay, if one has some money in brine put away; if we have the plunder where thieves cannot steal, it's surely no wonder if chipper we feel. But some folks, John D. Morrow, never see the weight of one shilling, not tomorrow, when shilves may be bare. And, not a thought giving to what may befall, "We'll live while we're living," they cheerily call, "eat drink, and be merry, tomorrow die, and death with his wherry will soon paddle by." And then when tomorrow comes traling along, all loaded with sorrow and things gone wrong, the paymasters grand and humble petition for help. "Oh, come, come a-dying-you've heard their old tunes-"our children are crying for codfish and prunes! Be good for us, neighbors, we need food for our souls-and you've our labors have piled up a roll!" With-hungry we sicken, we languish and die! Oh, bring us fried chicken and pretzels and pie!" Each winter the thriftless send up the old wail-the heedless, the shiftless, the fellows who fail.

Since the president will enter the presidential campaign with a divided party.
 Two dozen poets have registered their intention to participate in the contest for the prize of $100 offered by John D. Heston of Wakefield for the best state poem for the semi-centennial celebration next year.
 We doubt if Beatrice has as yet marshaled to the front its full force of poets. So then it does, there will be many more able and effective bards.

Last week a new library building, the gift of Philo Graves to the town of Wakefield, was opened to the public. While Wayne has benefited by substantial evidence of public spirit, it is still in need of more of it. Mr. Graves' contribution to the Wakefield public may stimulate capitalists in other towns, notably Wayne, to do more in the direction of public enterprise.

An approved aeroplane of the flying boat type, invented and made practical by American genius, is said to be employed by the British for the protection of its war and merchant ships. Most of the products of superior inventive skill used in the European war have come from Yankee brains. And in case of trouble with our European allies, such products of American genius would be turned to use against Americans.

The Sioux City Journal comes out with a guarantee of the truthfulness of its editorial columns and asks the public to assist in detecting any that may, through misrepresentation be otherwise. The Journal has always been a high class publication and would be expected to be among the first to assume the additional and manifestly somewhat burdensome responsibility of standing behind advertisements as well as news and editorial features.

An automobile driver in Sioux City has been charged with manslaughter on account of striking and killing a little boy who happened to be crossing the street when the machine came tearing along. The manifest carelessness of the driver aggravated the complaint against him. Many auto accidents would be avoided if only sober, level-headed people, always realizing the importance of caution, were trusted to run them. More rigid legislation is needed to reduce motor accidents among both motorists and pedestrians.

President Wilson has aroused sharp opposition within his own party to his "pernicious" program. For instance, Representative Kitchin, democratic leader of the house, is quoted as saying this: "All I can say is that I very much regret that I cannot support the president's national defense program. I believe that the people are entitled to know the truth about the president's policy and I believe that the people are entitled to know the truth about the president's policy and I believe that the people are entitled to know the truth about the president's policy."

soon as congress convenes, in a speech in which he said that he shall not attempt to oppose the program as the majority leader, but merely in my personal capacity."

Wausa is planning to organize a "Community club" and townpeople and farmers will have a big meeting next Monday evening to take the initial steps. Every town that expects to grow and develop its trade territory ought to have an organization in which townsmen and farmers are mutually interested and benefited—an organization helping town and country alike. Wayne needs such a club, and people here and in the vicinity are undoubtedly willing and ready to join one and wish nothing. All necessary leadership—an essential which the Commercial club committee ought to furnish. Nowhere is there a more wide-awake and progressive set of people. They should act together and find out what they ought to do.

In regard to automobile contests which have been criticized adversely of late by a number of newspapers, the Herald is convinced that the only objection, if any, lies in the cost to the publisher. Usually contestants receive more than the returns warrant the publisher in giving. But as a quick subscription building feature, advertising to artists by reason of extended circulation, we know of no inequalities or unfairness applies no more to a newspaper contest than to a subscription campaign for business or other lines. It depends on the management. If the publisher is careful to employ only square and honest management, and is determined that every act is kept above suspicion of unfairness, there can be no just ground for complaint. The Herald has had three automobile contests in the last five years, and the paper has complete records by which to prove perfect regularity and fairness in the conduct of each one. The Herald's contests did not bring immediate returns to justify the cost, but each one was a subscription builder and in the long run has proven beneficial. Bad contest managers are no more numerous than bad actors in other branches of business. The way for publishers to do is to carefully eschew the bad and deal only with the good.

worth while to figure how much it costs us to keep one horse, how much he really cost us of himself, whether he increase or decrease in value, and whether we would get more out of the tractor. But even here we must be careful; for there are tractors and tractors, and there are farms and farms. There are large farms and small farms. Level farms and hilly or rough farms. All these things are factors which must be taken into consideration before we determine whether we will break precedent or not.

We were taught in a one-room school our children are taught in the same kind of a school, by a teacher, whom we never pay what she is really worth. It is worth our while to inquire whether we can get better results by combining two or three schools or more, and supplying teachers with buildings and appliances that will enable them to do the best work for the pupils.

Don't despise precedent, but study it, and find out the reason for that precedent, and whether that reason exists any longer, or whether there is a better way.

It has long been a custom among farmers to use potent medicines for all the ills to which flesh is heir. It is time we should break this precedent and cease to be humbugged, even if it means the loss of some religious paper. It is time for us to inquire into the cause of disease, and how far it is our power to remove the cause. Then, when sickness comes, get the best physician in the community. Pay no attention to men who profess to cure every disease; for doctors don't cure disease. They simply assist nature, and give us some help in overcoming the misdeeds of the past. They should teach us how to keep well.

Don't despise precedent on the one hand; don't worship it on the other. For you are a farmer; and there is no business or profession that requires a higher rate of intelligence and more careful study of the causes and reason for things than does farming.

CHEAPNESS A CRIME.

Nebraska Farmers - To protect American industries against the "dumping" of foreign products when they are sold at a price lower than the domestic market, Secretary Redfield of the department of commerce proposes to take wholly unwarranted measures, if he is correctly reported by the Washington dispatches. He will recommend the enactment of a law "making selling by foreign firms at less than the cost of production here unfair competition" punishable under the anti-trust laws.

The act has no other meaning than that no matter how high the cost of the production of an article in this country, and no matter how low the cost of production abroad, we would deliberately shut ourselves away from the cheaper supply. If such a law is enacted, it will be equivalent to saying to foreign manufacturers, "Yes, your goods are cheaper than ours, but we will not buy them. Unless you do, we will buy them." We cannot believe that Secretary Redfield had proposed any such ridiculous thing until he had read it in four newspapers.

When Mr. Redfield first talked of doing something to protect the new industries that are springing up here as a result of the interference of the war with trade, he proposed to make it illegal for a foreign manufacturer to sell goods in this country for less than the cost of production where the goods were made. The application of that principle to some of the new industries, such as the manufacture of dye-stuffs, would have much to commend it. It would keep foreign manufacturers from throttling new industries in this country by selling at a loss.

But to make it illegal to sell below the cost of production in this country is to rob ourselves of any advantages that foreign manufacturers may have in the production of any article and to shut out foreign competition as a price regulator. Furthermore, the application of the proposed plan is not to be limited, it seems, to new industries. Secretary Redfield's scheme is worse than the protective tariff duties to which he objects so strenuously.

TRIP TO MONTANA

Senator Republican E. S. Satch and Henry Lang returned last Saturday morning from Roy, Mont., where they enjoyed a vacation of two weeks at the home of Mr. Sneath's son, John D. and relatives of the Lang family. Sneath's home with his two fine specimens of "spuds" raised in that state and says that all crops in Montana are fine. He reports George Hartwig, formerly a laborer of this place, having a honest adjoining tract of his son and that he is doing fine. Mr. Sneath took his shotgun with him and reports the following points as results of his steady eye, and good marksmanship: one deer, 11 cases, 100 muskrat skins, 100 Jack rabbits. I duck, the only one he saw in the state of Montana. I saw 1 prairie dog and 11 rattlesnakes. There was a 50-lb. load for a man advanced for five years at Mr. Sneath. They enjoyed their trip to the fullest extent. The weather was fine, only one little shower during their stay in the west, and that not of sufficient magnitude to mar their pleasures in the least.

ADVERTISING TIME-SAVER.

Omaha Examiner: Probably one great reason why advertising is so extremely influential is that it is such a time saver.

If a person has a certain article to buy he could of course go round to every store in the place and see what every merchant had to offer. This would require an interminable time, the loss of which would be far more than any result to be gained. Also one would be so tired by the experience that, as the old proverb goes, "he might walk all through the woods and pick up a crooked stick at last."

The common sense way is to look through newspapers for advertisements, which has the time desired. The advertiser has his name printed and is able to pick up good bargains has entered price enough to tell the public about them. Those who don't make any effort to inform the public are ignored. A quick glance through the newspapers saves an interminable time, and is a reliable indicator as to where the best results can be had.

PRECEDENTS.
Wallace's Farmer: Farmers are disposed to make a great deal of fuss about them, many of whom seem never to know what is right and just. They are looking through duty volumes to find out what somebody else said or decided, in a like case a hundred years ago, or two hundred, and possibly in some other country or under other conditions. And the lawyers deserve what they get for law as administered firmly welded to the past by precedent, and the only clearest heads and the most courageous and honest men have enough force of character to break precedent because conditions and circumstances are different and make decisions as nearly as possible according to justice and equity. But all farmers are not in a position to throw stones at the lawyers.

We, too, are victims of precedent. We are occasionally we find a man here and there who is willing to give up the old maxims: "As our fathers did, so we do." That is the way of plowing, for example, without stopping to consider the reason why we plow. We cling to old methods of plowing, because we have never seen it sent out by the experimenter. That's the way it has always been done.

We cling to old methods of plowing, because we have never seen it sent out by the experimenter. That's the way it has always been done. We look askance at the automobile, and threatened dire vengeance on chauffeurs who drove along the highway and frightened our horses. The horse does not depend on precedent, and soon learned that the automobile was harmless, something not to be feared even at night, its eyes gleaming like balls of fire.

We cling to precedent in our dairying. The heifer bore a calf, was her grandson, and we milked her milk. But her grandson introduced a new thing in his public, we don't like to break precedent by using it. We have always grown one variety of wheat, and rather look askance at a new variety. We hesitate to buy more than a bushel or two, for fear we may be the victim of a faker.

We are looking askance at the tractor, and fear that it is going to interfere with our business of growing horses for sale. But it is worth while to look into this matter carefully, and study it, and see whether it may not be profitable, and whether it does as good work as horses. It

A Little Talk About Dividends

SOME people think there's a lot of money in the telephone business. Those people have never operated a telephone company.

There are few business enterprises in which the margin of profit has been as small as in the telephone industry. No one who has investigated actual conditions has ever accused us of earning exorbitant profits. We've had hard enough time earning any at all.

Of late the price of telephone equipment has been increasing, and there has been a feeling in some localities that we should pay higher wages or allow shorter working hours.

These conditions have made it a serious problem for this company to get enough money at the present rates to pay expenses and earn sufficient interest on our present investment to invite the necessary capital for needed extensions and improvements.

A REPUBLICAN SWING.

Fremont Tribune: There was not sufficient opportunity at Tuesday's election for much proof of the political trend of times. National issues were involved only to small extent. But such opportunity was presented by Tuesday's state primary - republicanism. The outstanding feature was the disappearance of the progressive party, which means the amalgamation of those forces with the republicans once more. In Massachusetts the state election was waged on national issues very largely, and for the first time in six years the republicans won a governor, at the same time increasing their strength in the legislature. Two additional members of congress were gained by the New York and Pennsylvania, to fill vacancies. In New Jersey, the president's own state, gains were made in the legislature which has an overwhelming republican majority.

The magic of the president's name doesn't seem to have much effect at home.

There is nothing to be gained by anyone deceiving himself, but it appears quite clear that the people are not enamored with this administration, which precipitated a panic when it came in and which got us uselessly into a bad mess in Mexico.

TEA TIME AT COLLEGE THE FROCK OF SERGE

New York, Nov. 10.—Tea time at college, just at candle light, perhaps the most enjoyable time of the day. The lonely girl from the West meets the lonely girl from the East and friendship is made at once. Conversation, through their own varied as the topics of conversation, clothes, of course, come in for a large share of attention and attention a girl with a small clothes allowance is given a hint or two which helps her to improve her appearance with little added cost. The Girl with Delf Fingers. College and boarding school girls often enjoy an hour or two or even and friendship is made at once. Conversation, through their own varied as the topics of conversation, clothes, of course, come in for a suits to their own personality. After tea the other afternoon, she wears a simple serge frock, trimmed with short-fur-trimmed sleeves, lacy and bold, and an undercoat of dark blue crepe. The serge frock is made with a far finished at the top with a tiny trim of white and closed straight down the front with small dull gold buttons. Narrow black moiré ribbon formed the "griddle" closing on the left side in a small flat bow with long streaming ends. Six bands of the moiré ribbon had been set on to the skirt at graduated intervals, giving the effect of flounces, and adding wonderfully to the appearance of the simple frock. The ribbon which the sewer had herself applied made the commonplace dress most attractive and unusual. Variety in Collars and Cuffs. The simplest frocks or blouses may be made attractive and becoming by adding contrasting cuffs, or a simple white collar; these may be made removable and others substituted at will, thus achieving a pleasing change when the dress is becoming somewhat worn. It is an excellent matter in fashion and number of possibilities for varying the dress, of varied or ribbon (which is at the height of popularity for trimmings of all sorts just now), crepe, Georges, or chiffon. Nothing is softer or more becoming than a hem-stitched collar of crepe or chiffon; it will add a dressy look to the plainest of costumes. There is great choice in girdles, too, this winter. One of the popular notions is the narrow band of velvet, fawn, or peccot edged moiré ribbon, drawn around the waist and tied in long ended flat bows.

Possibilities of Guimpes. There are a great number of possibilities for varying the simple dress, when one has a limited supply of clothes, lie in the guimpe. These are so charmingly simple, depending for effect upon the color contrast, the soft shewiness of the material, and perhaps a button or two, or a welded buckle-by-way of trimming. The everyday dress of serge, flannel, or broadcloth, may be varied in many guimpes for all hours of the day—for morning wear there will be one of plain black satin or tulle; for afternoon and informal evening affairs, plain luncens, and, as a guimpe of crepe Georges or chiffon cloth, or not in a harmoniously contrasting shade will render the costume dressy enough and most becoming.

Three-Piece Suits. Another convenience is the three-piece semi-tailored suit consisting of coat and skirt, combined with blouse of satin, chiffon, crepe de Chine or other contrasting material, in the same color or a shade that harmonizes well with the color of the suit. A suit like this is easily fastened at home, as there is absolutely no sign of the old-time tailored stiffness, padding, and various other things which a few seasons ago made the idea of fashioning a coat at home so alarming. The touch of fur which is so much a part of these suits just now renders them smart and becoming, as well as warm. Among the novelties "noticed" on many of these fur-trimmed suits is the "cuff." These are wide and flaring, made of fur or a fur fabric, and arranged so that the hands may be slipped into them quite as one would use a muff. This idea is especially practical for the suit for shopping or general wear, also for the heavy coat, as there is no danger of losing a valuable muff.

Muff Chains Once More. While speaking of the muff it is interesting to note that the muff cord or chain is again in favor. One sees it often; knotted satin and moiré ribbon often form the cord; the regulation twisted silk cord is favored too, and the jeweled chain is smart and effective. Fur-trimmed petticoats and pantalettes are among the season's startling novelties; while the idea is somewhat ridiculous, a glimpse of the fur-edged petticoat showing beneath the heavy suit is nevertheless attractive and fetching.
