SOME THINGS ABOUT EUGENE O. MAYFIELD

Eugene O. Mayfield, ("Red M.") with the Sunday department of the Omaha World-Herald, who will meet with the editors in Wayne tomorrow and is on the program for a brief talk at the banquet tomorrow night is the author of "Fair Tales of the Western Range" and other juvenile fiction. He originated "Nipper, the Little Brown Bear," who lived along the banks of the Big Rapids. This was his first story that ran in newspapers for three years in serial form. He wrote "Jack Rabbit," series for big eastern newspapers, such as the Record, the Cincinnati Enquirer, the New York Herald, and others some years ago. This story was laid on the banks of the Niobrara, in Nebraska. His short story, "The Birth of the Red Rose," which was published in the "Red Rose" magazine, a New York syndicate, he considers the best thing he ever did for so few words - and for which he received the biggest pay he ever got for a single story. This story was told locally not far from Wayne, where a large tree grew underneath which a little Indian baby was buried and upon its grave came a rose that spread far and wide, growing from the heart of the big Rapids. This was his first story to location geographically, as possible. This fact brought about the adoption of his "Fair Tales of the Western Range" into public schools in several states as a supplementary reader.

While he has written hundreds of juvenile stories for magazines and newspapers, he does not lay claim to being a public speaker, though he says he will do his best in that line to help out the program in Wayne tomorrow night.

BIBLE STUDY CIRCLE

The Bible Study circle met Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. Tom Backstrom as the Sunday school lesson. At the close of the study period letters sent to the circle by out of town friends were read. Mrs. Jessie Jett of St. Louis, a charter member of the circle, has written: "Well do I remember our first anniversary thirteen years ago! I read a paper at that meeting telling of our first year's progress. If I were in Wayne I would still be a member. It is a locality not far from Wayne. Beneath a summer sky, And so we walk together my Lord and I, Oh how precious are the lessons, I learn at Jesus' side, Earthly cares can never vex me, Neither trials lay me low, For when satan comes to tempt me To the secret place I go."

"Daniel was with us two days and a discussion followed by Miss O'Connell. She got to her feet and gave a fine, hearty prayer. He did fine and I felt proud of him. He wants to go to Evanston to the theological school next year. He says he hopes to preach one sermon to the people in Wayne, where he goes to the foreign field. My God bless every one of you and crown your efforts with his choicest blessing." The circle will meet next Tuesday with Mrs. I. C. Trumbauer at the fourth ward of town. All are invited to attend.

ROOSEVELT WILL NOT ACCEPT, SAYS HILLES

Chicago, Jan. 25 - Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the republican national committee, before leaving New York today after attending the session of the sub-committee on articulation of the party's national convention discussion platform, expressed his belief that Roosevelt is not a candidate for the republican nomination. Chairman Hilles said, "He has declined to permit his name to go on the primary ballot in the only state where it has been suggested - Minnesota, Nebraska and Michigan."

"In the statement issued by the progressive national committee it was made plain that any reasonably satisfactory man would be acceptable as the republican nominee. They intended that they meant just what they said and we will take the statement at its face value. I think we will be able to nominate a man who will be satisfactory to the members of the party and that our candidate will be elected."

"In regard to Justice Hughes, no one knows just what his attitude is toward the presidency. In discussing the subject with a friend in 1912, Justice Hughes said when he went on the United States supreme court bench he took the veil and renounced the world."

"Justice Hughes is not a man big enough to retire the presidency in my opinion. If he were nominated without his consent, I have no idea what he would do."

HOWARD OR BRYAN FOR GOVERNORSHIP RACE

Omaha, Jan. 25 - Plans are now under way to induce a better man under way to induce a better man to run for governor. One who is better qualified and more worthy than I, says Edgar Howard in an editorial in the Columbus Telegram of last week.

"Who is this man before whom Edgar Howard bows his head?" a leading democratic politician of Omaha was asked.

"Charles W. Bryan," was the answer. "Charles W. Bryan," it will be remembered, is a brother of W. J. Bryan and is also mayor of Lincoln.

Both "Charley" Bryan and Edgar Howard are loath to sacrifice themselves to a man who has not a party for a leader who can lead, according to the tone of Mr. Howard's editorial. Referring to the superior candidate he has in mind the editor writes:

"I have promised to give a definite answer soon. If he shall finally refuse to become a candidate then I shall accept the responsibility myself. I trust this announcement may be satisfactory to my friends and fair to my enemies."

Gossip of local democrats is that Mr. Howard is really anxious to avoid the contest for the governorship and that Mr. Bryan, though not unwilling to be the prominent voice of the party, is a little too "stop, look and listen."

MRS. O. C. LEWIS DIES ON THE WAY TO HER HOME

RETURNING HEART FAILURE

Suffering From Tonsils and Nearing Home When Quickly Seized by Heart Trouble.

Mrs. O. C. Lewis suddenly died of heart failure while returning to her home in the north part of the city Tuesday evening about 8 o'clock. She had walked down to postoffice with Mr. Lewis to get the mail, and he accompanied her part way back home. Then he returned to town to attend lodge, and she continued on her way home alone. Within less than a block of her home she was found lying on the ground by C. L. Dean, who has been employed on the new house of William Kennick, Mr. Dean found her still conscious, but unable to speak and he immediately summoned a doctor. She had been complaining that she could not breathe and her face was immediately swelled and she was conveyed home, but she passed away before reaching there. Dr. G. J. Hess who was called, said Mrs. Lewis died of heart failure and he was shocked to learn that his companion with whom he had walked a brief time before, had passed from him into eternity.

Mrs. Marie C. Lewis, nee Jones, in Antwerp, Ohio, in October, 1855, and was aged at the time of her death about 60 years and 4 months. She moved to Iowa with her parents in 1875, and during that year was married to O. C. Lewis. She was the mother of four children, one of whom died in infancy. A daughter, Nellie, died about ten years ago. Two daughters survived her being Mrs. Edna Jones of Gettysburg, S. D., and Mrs. Minnie Leebick of McDonald, Kas. Mr. and Mrs. Lewis came to Wayne county in 1886, and resided on a farm near Carleton until about three years ago when they moved to Wayne county. Mrs. Lewis united with the Baptist church at the age of 14 years, and has been a steadfast and excellent Christian. She was an excellent housewife, and loved by many friends, whose hearty sympathy will be extended to the sorrowing husband and daughters.

Funeral arrangements will be made on the arrival today of the casket by Mrs. Jones and Mrs. Leebick.

JOHN G. NEIHARDT COMING

John G. Neihardt, well known poet, who lived much of his boyhood in Wayne, graduating from the old normal at Lincoln, will read from his own poetry in the normal chapel next Thursday night, February 3. It is confidently believed by the management of the normal that this will be the most attractive entertainment of the season, not merely because of the sentiment that attaches to the young man who lived here and has since become famous, but because of the fact that his poetry matters hold with confidence that Mr. Neihardt is among the great poets not alone of this country, but of the world and of all time. What the literary people think of him will be gathered from the following taken from leading periodicals:

"The Song of Hugh Glass."

"A narrative poem of far more convincing interest than any Massena I have written, with the possible exception of 'Dante' by a young man, real and powerful than any Noyes has yet exhibited. It is a big, sweeping thing, blazing a pathway across the frontiers of our normal class. The Song of Hugh Glass, and when he is done with it, he has told one of the most exciting stories of American history - and, besides, he has assured for himself a ranking among the foremost of our poets of the day." - Evening Sun.

"The biggest thing that I have seen in poetry since 'Evangeline'." - Doane Robinson in the New York Evening Post.

"In 'The Song of Hugh Glass' America has furnished a masterpiece with a really great and powerful epic poem." - Duluth Herald.

"It stands out among the best of modern verse as a redwood overtops spruce and jackpine." - Grand Rapids Press.

A rabbit's foot is lucky. Make yours the same by wearing our better shoes - Baughn's Bootery.

THE FIELD OF BUSINESS.

Sioux City Journal. The declaration of a $30 dividend on the Bethlehem Steel common last week kept the speculators guessing as to the justification for present high and recent higher prices for unit securities. Bethlehem was the most beautiful and popular of the "war brides." This stock was selling for 46 at the opening of last year. It went over 60 at the height of the craze for speculation in war specialties. It is now selling around 470 at a level which was not materially affected by the dividend, which by the way, was the first ever declared on this common stock. It has been estimated that the company's earnings last year would have permitted a dividend of $100 or over on the common stock after paying all fixed charges and preferred dividends. Conceding, however, that the present North adds a large surplus in the treasury, much of which will be used for improvements, and that the business will be equally profitable or more so this year, the stock must remain an attractive investment, though another bulge is hardly expected.

Another line on war profits will be available next week when the United States Steel corporation declares a quarterly dividend. The expectation is that conservatism will rule and that the common dividend will be at the rate of a per cent annually, allowing a large addition to be made to the surplus and improvement fund.

The prevailing level of war securities prices is materially lower than at the height of the excitement last year. The expectation that there would be a demand for these investments during the present movement failed of realization, and the bitter disappointment of speculators who had figured on unloading during the usual January demand for new investment. The failure of this figuring may be attributed in part to the large quantities of European owned American securities which our investors have had to take back at attractive prices. In part, investors' reluctance to invest in "war brides" may be traced to a well circulated warning that they had been inflated unduly, with a view to unloading on the public at the right time.

Current production and distribution continues on a prosperity basis. In a number of crowded industries difficulty is experienced in securing attention for new orders at increased prices unless a distant time clause is attached. Snow and frost have been added to the handicap previously imposed on the railways by lack of roll-

SAVINGS SERMONETTE

NUMBER FORTY

BY JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

The Standard Oil king was asked one day in confidence how to become rich. He said: "I should advise any young man to look after his pennies and attend strictly to business for several years, winning the golden opinions of his employers. He will then not only have money capital, but the 'backing' as it were, of his firm. After a while 'luck' will strike him.

No, I do not believe in great windfalls, experience to the contrary notwithstanding. Nor do I think that people get wealthy without economy in early life; when they begin to save seeds for fortunes later. Money so quickly begets money."

CHURCH CALENDAR

Methodist Church

(Rev. A. S. Burch, Pastor)

Why not make our home-like church your church home? It is with pleasure we note the real friends' greetings among our congregations which give to the church that homelike atmosphere. If our audiences become much larger we will have to open our league room in order to accommodate them; but we assure you that we would be delighted to do that. Why not join the church going through next Sabbath and find your place in one of the churches? In the Methodist church the pastor expects to continue the practical interpretation of the decalogue. At the hour of the morning worship he will speak on "The sacredness of life." The text will be the sixth and seventh commandments: "Thou shalt not kill, Thou shalt not commit adultery." Life must neither be destroyed nor abused. The evening message will be on the individual's relationship and right to property. Come and find out about your share. You will find these services intensely interesting. The plan is to get out of the message that which will apply to the present conditions of the West and be practical. We know that the church has a message for you and will help you if you are willing to come half way. Our splendid choir under the efficient leadership of Professor Coleman assures a high class and efficient musical program at each service. Miss Bessie Cockett is becoming quite proficient in playing the pipe organ.

The young people's social last Friday evening was a very decided success. The young people took train for the heart of the Rockies where they all enjoyed the privilege of fishing in lake McDonald. Two "mere maids" in the lake greatly assisted in this catch. Various kinds of fish were taken from the lake including shellfish, suckers, and salmon. The train next took the party to Swan lake where they went hunting; after many adventures and hardships they returned to West Chicago and were refreshed at the railroad lunch counter with sandwiches and coffee. The young people of the Epworth League give another social February 4.

Our Wednesday services for prayer are growing slowly. The 10 o'clock prayer groups at the homes were not large in numbers, but the aggregate of attendance in the nine groups would have made a good showing. We had some interesting times in those group meetings and we trust you will find your place in one of these meetings. The afternoon and evening meetings were held in the Methodist church this week and will be held in the Presbyterian church next week.

The regular revival meetings will begin in the Baptist church at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon, February 15. The business and social life is to be present at a many services as possible during the revival. We urgently ask the professors and students in the high school and in the normal school to cooperate in the revival. Let us wait upon God and see if He will not open to us the windows of heaven and pour upon us blessings that we will not be enabled to receive.

First Baptist Church. (Rev. W. L. Gaston, Pastor). Tell it everywhere, tell it to everybody, next Sunday at the Baptist church will be a better day than last Sunday. Last Sunday night was high water mark for the evening congregation, but next Sunday night must leave the "wash mark" higher still on the bank. At last service Peter was the subject of discussion, but next Sunday night "Jonah" will be at the bat.

If there is anybody in Wayne that has been accustomed to laughing at Jonah, or is somewhat skeptical about that so-called fish-story, come out to the evening service next Sunday and hear something about Jonah that you never heard before. Men of Wayne—business men, attending church should be made a business and business should be supported in a business-like way. With this in mind, the church on the corner will do its best to maintain a business man's service—plain, practical up-to-date, with life and business prominent in every feature.

German Lutheran. (Rev. R. Moehring, Pastor). There will be Sunday school at 10 and preaching at 11 o'clock. Services in Winside at 3 o'clock.

Presbyterian Church. (Rev. S. Xenophon Cross, Pastor). There was a fine attendance at the last Sunday evening service. The sermon subject for next Sunday morning will be: "The Depths of

PARTY LEADERS PLAN FOR BIG CONVENTION

Chicago, Jan. 24.—Preliminary plans for the republican national convention, to be held in Chicago at the coliseum June 7, were approved today by members of the sub-committee on arrangements of the national committee after a series of conferences with Fred Upham, chairman of the local committee. Under the seating plan prepared by Julius Fiore, an architect, seats for 11,595 will be provided in the convention hall. Seven hundred more seats than were available four years ago will be provided by the W. O. GARDNER Secretary Northeast Nebraska Editorial Association.

MELL A. SCHIMID, President Northeast Nebraska Editorial Association.

They were Ethel Root of New York, Senator Borah of Idaho, Governor McCall of Massachusetts and Charles E. Osborne, former governor of Michigan. It is believed that the selection of the temporary chairman may be deferred as a matter of political expediency until April or May, although the sub-committee adjourned to meet again in Chicago March 15, when the subject may be taken up. "Any Man But Roosevelt." Republican national leaders who attended the meeting expressed the opinion that the convention would be open minded and deliberative in the matter of naming a candidate for president. They indicated that they would favor any available compromise candidate, excepting Colonel Roosevelt, and said they believed the delegates would be able to select without discussing the question of a speaker who would be satisfactory to every element of the party. Charles D. Hilles, chairman of the republican national committee, expressed the sentiment of the party leaders when he said nobody knew who would be nominated, but that the candidate would "be born in the convention." At noon the committee was entertained by the Hamilton club at a luncheon, at which Chairman Hilles delivered an address in which he criticized the administration of President Wilson, outlined features and issues of the republican national campaign and predicted victory for the party next November.

Concessions to Moozers. There appeared to be a general disposition to forecast that all reasonable concessions would be made to assure harmony in the ranks of the party. Franklin Murphy of New Jersey said there was a great disposition to bring about harmony, "if the progressives are not noisy." "It is a republican year and any strong man they nominate will defeat Wilson," he said. "No person can fell now who the candidate will be."

Chairman Charles D. Hilles said: "The convention will be open minded. The candidate will be born in the convention." Former Senator Theodore Burton of Ohio was here today on his way to Michigan to fill a speaking date. He said there was no significance in his presence here coincident with the committee. He said his friends had decided to "back" a campaign for him in "favorite son states."

ENGINE'S COLLIDE AND CAUSE FIVE DEATHS. Oxford, Neb., Jan. 25.—Conductor Brooks of the freight, who is held responsible for the wreck at Atlanta, says his watch was eleven minutes slow. Both engines and firemen jumped but on account of the wreck cut were covered with wreckage and killed. "There has been quite a shake up in train crews of late and it has caused considerable confusion. The freight was in charge of Conductor Brooks, formerly on a passenger and both brakemen were former conductors set back. This was the first day for a daily local freight and it was managed by a new crew.

Holdrege, Neb., Jan. 25.—Burlington passenger train No. 7, called the "jitney," met in head-on collision with an eastbound extra local freight two miles west of Atlanta shortly after 1 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Four trainmen were killed outright and two seriously and one slightly injured, the engineer of the passenger dying at 7 o'clock last night. Four other persons were slightly injured.

The dead: Carl Neubauer, McCook, head brakeman on the freight. Henry Eckman, McCook, engineer on the freight. Walter P. Maul, McCook, fireman on the freight. Lee H. Fogg, Lincoln, fireman on the passenger. Fogg's body is still in the wreck and cannot be found. J. E. Duffy, Lincoln, engineer on passenger was seriously injured, dying later.

List of Injured. The injured: O. K. Porter, Lincoln, mail clerk, seriously injured. J. E. Lowry, Bagley, Ia., a passenger, slightly injured. W. M. Lawson, Lincoln, express messenger, slightly injured. J. R. Mossman, Hastings, a passenger, slightly injured. Mrs. H. S. Fuller, Oxford, passenger, shoulder dislocated. H. E. Bell, passenger conductor, slightly injured. Baggage Car Spilt. The escape of Messenger Lawson from the baggage car was miraculous. The car collapsed into ten feet of space and was reduced to kindling and scrap iron. J. R. Mossman of Hastings was injured only in the foot and went to his home last evening. Ran Without Orders. Blame for the wreck cannot be placed without investigation but the supposition is that the freight crew tried to run from Mascot to Atlanta beating No. 7 into Atlanta without orders.

A relief train with doctors and nurses was sent from Holdrege. The dead and injured were brought to this city. No. 7 carried only a few passengers as it was within fifteen miles of the end of the run. The freight contained only four cars. The wreck occurred at a curve where there was no chance for either engineer seeing the other before the two trains met. The trains did not scatter over the right of way, but collapsed.

ATCHISON GLOBE SIGHTS. A snip job will ruin the average man almost as quick as booze. A woman isn't necessarily helpless just because she wants to be helped. Generally speaking, the poor have great enough without giving them rabbits. An Atchison man has such good sense his friends say he was "marked" by a horse. You shouldn't judge a man by his clothes, but that is no excuse for being slothful. Patriotism, you may have observed, drives comparatively raw men into the regular army. Some are so persistent in their grouches that there is a suspicion they enjoy gloom. A man who doesn't smoke or drink can find several other channels for wasting money open. Possibly you think you have a strong memory in which case you should try to forget something. What has become of the old fashioned meek man whose fond expectatives was limited to "oh, be?" We talk a great deal about the necessity of putting our shoulder to the wheel and then go and sit down. Some day the man who feels himself too important or too busy to speak to reporters may find it necessary to rush up to the reporter and cry for mercy and ask that a legitimate news item be suppressed.

That plants die like animals we exact know but we do not know the exact moment when they die. For hours a dead plant seems alive. There is a twitch, no death spasm. A scientist has, however, succeeded not only in noting the precise moment when a plant gives up its life, but in recording its death spasm. The plant is heated very gradually so as to avoid all excitation. This is done by placing the plant in a water bath the temperature of which is continuously raised by the application of a gas or spirit flame. At 90 degrees the spasmodic reaction takes place. All attempts to obtain response after this fall, even though the plant is cooled down to its normal temperature. This death temperature of 90 degrees is constant for all plants.

Eyes of a Bird.
Fishes and birds have an advantage over human beings in their ability to see on both sides of them. Their eyes are not set far-looking straight ahead, but for looking out on each side. That is because they balance their bodies to right or to left, while we balance forward and backward. A bird can watch the firs of both wings at once. The pilot of an aeroplane has to turn his head from side to side to see his wing tips.

The White Lantern

How the Mystery Was Solved

By CLARISSA MACKIE

Lantheus is as unclean as any other Chinese cities, and John Latham left the squatter of the best land that the place afforded and made his leisurely way down the crooked streets, quite oblivious to the malarious atmosphere as well as the uncleanly glances that met him in his walk.

Latham was agent for a large firm of tea importers, and this was to be his last trip to China. Hereafter he would be stationed in the New York office of the company, and he was glad of the change.

This evening as he strolled the streets looking for one that led down to the river's edge, where there might be a wharf of fresh air to fill his lungs, he secretly noticed the crowds that gradually filled the streets. Then the sound of drums and the shriek of Chinese dummies announced that some festival was to progress.

Lighted paper lanterns appeared everywhere, and Latham was led to and fro in the crowd.

As he went he became aware of a curious fact.

In the narrow street there appeared among the gayly-lit lanterns one of pure white paper. It was swinging at the top of a slender bamboo pole, and the man who carried it was masked.

As soon as the white lantern appeared a babel of strange yells arose from the crowd, and they broke away to let the white lantern have free passage. This silence fell upon the street, and the masked man had the right of way, but he turned the corner and disappeared.

Latham asked himself the question: "What about the white lantern?" and the spirit of adventure which was ever with him answered, "Follow it!"

So he hastened to the corner as best he could, turned it and in the far distance saw the white lantern making a path for itself through this less crowded thoroughfare.

It was a hundred feet behind the pale bobbing transparency until it left the windings of the city streets and turned into a path that led into the country.

As he passed through the city gate Latham felt a hand on his arm. The gatekeeper—a fat, friendly-looking Chinese—pointed after the white lantern bobbing steadily away.

"The American lord must not follow the white lantern," he said in the dialect of the province.

Latham understood his words and paused.

"Why not?" he asked curiously.

"It is not well to follow the white lantern," persisted the other guardedly. "It leads to death."

"Why can't you tell me where it is going and get about it?" Latham just said a dollar in his hand.

The gatekeeper's eyes looked covetously at the money, but he shook his head.

"I cannot speak the name of it! It will come upon me and my family for three generations," he muttered. "But I have warned you."

"If I still follow it," said Latham obstinately. "And here's something for your warning, man of impeccable conscience," and he dropped the money into the eager palm.

The white lantern was disappearing down the further slope of a little hill and he had to run to keep it in sight.

The masked man was evidently in a hurry now, for he was hastening up and down the little hills, dodging around farm buildings, following the meandering path along the river's edge and finally vanishing in the gloom of a pine grove.

Latham was breathlessly among the phes until the moonlike face of the white lantern appeared close at hand. Now it stopped, as if its bearer was aware of pursuit and was waiting for the pursuer.

Latham gazed to a standstill before the masked figure.

The white lantern was lowered on it, it became a barrier between the two men.

"Stand back!" said the lantern bearer in English.

Latham, startled by the unexpected order, obeyed.

The glow of the white lantern shone on the implacable black mask with its holes through which spangled lightning eyes.

"Stand back!" repeated the lantern bearer.

"Why?" retorted Latham. "Because to follow me is to go to a horrible death."

"I would chance it," said Latham recklessly, for he had witnessed many strange happenings in China, and his curiosity was aroused by the incident of the lantern. "Let me follow you a stringer, and I will hold no man responsible for what happens."

The masked man laughed shortly. "Come, fool!" he cried and lifted his white lantern on high.

Latham followed, a strange despair seizing his spirits.

He was the bearer of the white lantern, some ill-timed jester of the evening was wont to make sport of the foreigner. Was he the agent of some dreadful secret society? What was he? Latham was soon to discover.

He followed the white lantern through the pine grove and out into a barren stretch of open country. Here was desolation indeed. A few trees were crowded beside of a rough stockade and shadings some miserable little huts, plainly visible in the light of the full moon.

The white lantern bobbed over the bushes until they reached a gate in the stockade.

The masked man turned to Latham, who was close at his heels.

"Would you enter and face death?" he asked in English.

"Yes," said Latham, his curiosity aroused to its highest pitch.

"Fool!" laughed the other and, slipping the gate, he barred it securely. "If you have no care for your life I will care for you." He blew on the white lantern, and the place was bathed only in the blood moonlight.

Speechless with surprise, John Latham leaned against the stockade and looked through at the river, the dark huts and the form of the masked man who was striding across the yard.

"The person on the threshold of the largest hut, waved a pale hand and vanished."

After silence reigned over the place. There was not the bark of a dog or the stricture of a fowl, and there are few places in China where chickens are not underfoot and disputing the right of way.

"I will wait until morning if necessary, but I'll pierce the mystery of the white lantern," muttered Latham as he withdrew to a nearby tree and sat down with his back against it.

The night was warm, and he soon dozed.

Morning dawned faintly in the east. A red ray of sunshine awoke John Latham to a bewildered sense of the events of the night. He rubbed his eyes sleepily.

Within the stockade there was a stirring of the gates, he heard it securely, and covered there. Others slipped woefully about in miserable silence, while others gathered in groups and ate voraciously, snarling like dogs while they ate.

Gradually Latham got upon his feet. A great crowd in the face. A negro, he drew, step by step, to the stockade, where a dreadful face peered at him through the palings.

"Face that was a mockery—a misery—an unhuman horror."

Latham gazed wildly, and the "face" vanished.

He saw the tall form of the lantern bearer striding across the yard. He was clothed in a long white linen coat such as superior wear, and on his hands were white gloves. He was still wearing the mask of the night before.

He came straight to the stockade and, gripping his hands upon the palings, he uttered a couple of words: "My God, man, can't you say away?"

"You are an American," said Latham's surprised reply.

"Yes," the other drew a deep breath. "And you—what are you doing here in this place of pestilence and death? Did you come across the world to tempt me to revenge myself upon you for stealing the woman I loved?" he asked fiercely.

Latham cried out sharply.

"Only one man in the world could know me that way," he breathed heavily.

"I am that man!" declared the other. "I am Clay Foster!"

"Clay Foster—you? You are here here in this leprous colony?" panted Latham. "You—you the brilliant young physician who had everything in life? Everything save the woman I loved, was the grave reply. "I can bring my skill and knowledge near among such wretched creatures as you can do good. What more can I ask?"

Latham's soul was wrung with remorse.

"And it was in your power to visit death upon me," he said slowly. "When I saw you with your white lantern of warning that a leper was coming through the streets—when I saw you little did I guess your identity or the significance of the white lantern."

"It was a mystery for an element of adventure, and I followed. I wanted to follow you in here—among these wretched creatures. And you, whom I had wronged, you prevented me! Clay Foster, you are a great man—a man indeed."

He bowed his head against the palings, and the man who had devoted his life to the comforts of a leper colony in the heart of China looked at him pityingly as he looks one who has outgrown the insalubrious change of life, who knows only of the magnitude of sin and suffering and offers up his life to atone it.

Dr. Foster spoke again. "You had better go now. Latham. Remember me to old friends back in the world. Say that I am well and happy, and hang it all. I'd like some newspapers that are not a year old!" He laughed mockingly.

John Latham lifted his head. "I will attend to that, Foster," he said gravely. "And there is another thing I will tell you. The gate and your work. God bless you and goodby!"

They exchanged a long look, and when Dr. Foster had turned away, his "bitterness" charges. John Latham walked away back to the city. And when he reached the city gate his eyes were so filled by tears that he could not recognize the fat gatekeeper who had led him out the night before.

The gatekeeper looked sympathetically.

"Ah, the American lord has looked upon death," he cried.

"No," said John Latham as he passed. "I will attend to the gate. I followed the white lantern, and I have looked upon death in life!"

OREGON STILL SUFFERS. Portland-Oregonian: The time worn theory that good crops mean good times has received a severe jolt the past two years. During this period crops have been larger and prices higher than ever before and yet we have unusually quiet times; factories closed and men out of work. This illustrates in a striking manner that what we really need to bring prosperity is payrolls, thousands of men at work receiving a pay check every Saturday night. These are the people who distribute the money among the hundred and one different businesses that have been languishing for want of trade. results of labor to build and develop with. To little flurry of good times in the east has all been caused by the opening of a few factories to supply war orders. The west has not profited to such an extent as all it had to sell was produce, the production of which did not give steady employment to a great number of people. Throw off the shackles of hampering legislation that has brought to a standstill the whole of our industry. Encourage, instead of discouraging, the investment of capital in railroads and water power development.

Still Making Great Reductions On all winter goods, including SHOES and OVERSHOES. S. R. THEOBALD & CO.

February 11 and 12 are the dates decided upon for the meetings. The program will be as usual, a big stand, and those who attend will derive much benefit. The Ladies' Aid society of Presbyterian church met Thursday afternoon with Mrs. J. O. Peterson. A pleasant time was had. Refreshments were served. The figs, raisins and nuts were sent by Mrs. G. H. Baston from Live Oak, Calif. The following shipped hogs and cattle from Wakefield the past week: J. S. Munson, hogs to Omaha; J. W. Shellington, cattle to Omaha; Carl Lutz, hogs to Omaha; P. J. Kinney, hogs to Omaha. The man Grader shipped two cars of cattle to Omaha and brought back a load of stock cattle.

opportunity. The men who are careless about voting should not complain because of their thug are careful about voting. A great many administrations are painfully at fault, but no loser has a right to criticize any administration. Married men, as a rule, do so much jumping around to make a living that every year seems like leap year to him.
