SIoux CITY EDITOR ON LATE PRESS MEET

A. P. Allen, in Sioux City Journal, Jan. 31: The subzero temperature which prevailed last Monday and Saturday, made attendance at the Northeastern Nebraska Editorial association meeting at Wayne a somewhat formidable undertaking, but the warmth of the hospitality dispensed by the respondents at the Wayne was an effective antidote for the frigidity of the weather. Nothing was overlooked which would be calculated to convince the visiting newspaper men that they were welcome guests. The program of the meeting included the business sessions for the discussion of topics related to the newspaper business, visits to the high school and the state normal, and on Friday evening a banquet in the dining room of the Baptist church, the dinner being served by the ladies of that church.

One of the addresses of the business sessions, which claimed particular attention was by Dr. J. T. House, of the state normal college on "Progressive Journalism." Dr. House is a student of social questions of this character. His address contained some thoughtful and not ill directed criticisms of present day newspaper methods and he also set forth what he, as a disinterested student of newspaper making, conceived to be the wise course for newspapers to follow, if they desire to keep abreast of the times in the development of the industry, being the result of constantly changing conditions of life.

During the visit to the high school Friday afternoon an impromptu address by Miss Mary Young, of the address being made by Mrs. C. Peterson, editor of the Omaha Boer, Eugene O. Kennedy, editor of the Omaha Sunday Herald, and John L. Kayne, of Omaha, who as an aspirant for the United States senatorship is overlooking no convenient opportunity to appear in public in Nebraska. Each of these addresses was appropriate and in good taste, and Mr. Kennedy especially revealed himself as a master of effective rhetoric. An enjoyable feature of the high school visit was a light luncheon served by the pupils of the domestic science department, to the accompaniment of music by the orchestra of the school.

The visit to the state normal school was the occasion for pleasant surprise on the part of all the visitors. Since the school property was acquired by the state two handsome substantial and well arranged buildings have been added to the plant, one of them supplanting an old building. These buildings, fireproof and equipped with everything needed for the education of the students, including a beautiful hall, with stage and gallery. The people of Wayne are pardonably proud of both their fine high school and the state normal school.

The banquet at the church was indeed a warm and flowing of soul." The dinner was ample and satisfying, the service unexcelled. It seemed to the editors, who occupied one side of the long tables as though all of Wayne was there to do them honor - at least, all the youth and beauty of the state, besides not a few of the elders. To put it mildly, the program was a "scream." Witty speeches, with now and then a serious note, occupied the hour or more, and no one thought the time ill spent. The audience was sympathetic and responsive, and generous with laughter and applause. The good toastmaster was Judge James Britton, and he inaugurated the speechmaking by a far from uninteresting and adulterated Americanism - in the troublous time that received emphatic approval. The speakers were Mr. Mayfield, Mr. Kennedy, Mrs. M. A. Phillips, of Wayne; N. A. Hurd of Norfolk; Mr. S. Berry of Wayne; Mr. W. W. Warren of Wayne; Mr. Rosewater and Rev. W. L. Gaston of Wayne. Besides which there were some acceptable musical selections.

No attempt can be made here to summarize what was said. All it was well said, including the stories which were told and the good natured banter which passed back and forth between the speakers. Mrs. Phillips, who is a member of the high school faculty, made the paper men take notice by her strictures on the present day newspaper. She was somewhat severe in her criticism, so much so, indeed, that Mr. Rosewater, when it came his turn to speak, took her to task (it seemed to the editors) convincingly. The exchange of opinion was enlightening to the audience. Mr. Kennedy again was happy in his remarks. He is not only an accomplished writer, but a most intelligent gentleman, and he should be making many friends (and votes) as he goes about the state. He started his campaign six months ago, already has spoken in a large number of places, has received the endorsement of the majority of the voters in his precinct in Nebraska when the canvass shall be completed.

One of the briefest and most thoroughly enjoyed addresses was that of one of the editors of the Pilger Herald, Mr. W. L. Gaston, pastor of the Baptist church. The state of mind of the average clergyman toward the press is that of condemnation, if not of hostility. But here was a minister who directed the attention of the ministry to which the newspaper man is called is as great, if not greater, than the ministry of enlightenment. Rev. Mr. Gaston paid an impressive tribute to the profession of journalism and its opportunities.

One of the revelations of the meeting was an editor who keeps in his desk a card index file of his enemies. He publishes a paper for the benefit of and nearly all the inhabitants must be on his list, if the size of the file (which he indicated) is any criterion.

F. C. Marshall, editor of the Niobrara Tribune, makes the general statement that the editor of newspaper making. He was on the program for a violin solo, and acquitted himself altogether creditably.

Much of the success of the meeting was due to the enthusiasm of the editor of the Wayne Democrat, and E. W. Huse, editor of the Wayne Herald, who not only arranged the program, but saw that every visitor was welcomed and made comfortable.

The attendance of newspaper men was light, owing to the severe cold their reception. "During the lunch, the high school orchestra furnished inspiring music. The trip to the State Normal followed. At that institution the guests were greeted and shown the two new buildings by President U. S. Com and members of the faculty. In the domestic science department the guests were regaled with coffee and doughnuts.

At the City Hall Again. Following inspection of the city's educational institutions another session was held in the city hall. The chief feature of the program was an address by H. H. Pease of the Beemer Times, on "Running a Blockade." He talked against the policy of "patent insiders," urging publishers to adopt all-home-print. He says before he finally abandoned "patent insiders" he left the question to the decision of a number of readers and found that out of over 137 ever read the "patent." He urged publishers to avoid jealousy, and work together.

S. E. Mills followed with a talk on county organization, and advised effort in that direction for mutual good.

The Banquet. The banquet in the evening in the Baptist church parlors was the stellar event of the series. Rev. W. L. Gaston, pastor, and the ladies of the church, decorated the banquet hall elaborately and appropriately. The color scheme was red and white. A large red and white canopy was the central attraction. Around the room were permanent representations of the different newspapers of the district, besides metropolitan dailies whose editors were present. Across the north end was a newspaper chain. The tables were arrayed in white and were white paper caps bearing the headlines of local newspapers.

An Excellent Menu. Prof. C. H. Bright was master of the banquet, and chief member of the receiving committee. He and his assistants welcomed people and directed them to the banquet hall. A four-piece orchestra rendered music which the crowd assembled and during the feast. Rev. A. S. Buell of the M. E. church pronounced the invocation. The menu, as published, was excellent in all respects, and was served in a manner which surpassed the high record already attained by the Baptist ladies. They were thoroughly organized for the occasion, and there was no hitch or delay in the service. The people thoroughly enjoyed the banquet and appreciated the promptness with which it was served.

Program of Toasts. Judge James Britton took charge as toastmaster, and after reading a number of messages from men unable to be present, but sending expressions of good wishes, he made a ringing reference to sound patriotic Americanism, and then introduced the Normal Male Quartet, which sang a take-off on the editor of the Herald. "The song might interest the public, and follows with the quartet's introductory explanations.

retatory remarks: Editor Huse of Wayne has a decidedly mercurial view of the newspaper business. Upon such topics as, Free Political Advertising, Neighborhood Quarrels, Plate Editorials, and Long Opinions, he has some decided opinions. In this touching little ballad entitled "Where Do I Come In?" we shall refer to as far as we deem it advisable, the thought of Mr. Huse on these topics, with some of his dictions. "Quartet. "Where Do I Come In?" " 'Tis a glorious prospect, truly For the editor to face. That is pictured by the candidates Who go from place to place. Advising is a blessing! Who say city with gesture grand. 'And you owe it to the country To inform it how we stand.' But when'er I think it over, Why, it sort of makes me grin, And I ask myself the question: 'Where do I come in?'

"Farmer Jones once had a racket With his neighbor Mr. Brown, And they rushed into the paper, 'Whin' it up and writin' down, And the way they have belabored everybody with abuse.

Market me think of no libel, And it leaves no space for Huse. I've been thinking it all over— Soon the swearing will begin. For if they should keep on fighting, Where would I come in?

"Now a syndicate with longing, And a great desire to bless Sends in lots of set-up copy 'Ere our 'preparations.' Which with long obituaries, Cards of thanks and local tale, Leaves 'for revenue-producing. But a little space for sale. After paying as expenses 'Ere our 'preparations.' Then the devil takes the hindmost— That's where I come in."

The quartet responded to an encore. "The first speaker was Eugene O. Metzfeldt, editor of the Sunday World-Herald. He praised the banquet and Wayne hospitality, and had a good word for Wayne newspapers. He talked interestingly of Nebraska journalism, and the part played in the development of the state.

John L. Kennedy of Omaha, came next with a brief address on "The Press in Politics." He touched on the potent force of the newspaper in the present-day world, and if courageously and righteously used, he impressed on his hearers the fact that he is an orator, and a man of ability and candor. He made a hit.

F. C. Marshall of the Niohara Tribune, gave a violin solo accompanied by Mrs. James Miller, on the piano. Mrs. M. A. Phillips, principal of the high school, filled on "Old Tugles." She pointed out the newspaper, world achievement and the reading public representing one triangle. "The newspaper, which by means of its marvelous world of production out of the ether, would kin, at least in thought, interest and progress, has aptly been termed the greatest miracle of the age," she said.

She emphasized the importance of the highest possible standards in journalism. She touched on the question of publishing the details of crime, and criticized the so-called "Sunday funny paper." She also pointed out incorrect or extravagant English used in some country newspapers. She concluded by saying: "On the whole, the newspapers of the world come an institution of which the world may justly feel proud. Which honestly strive to inform as an executive committee, to detect and expose error, and suggest remedy, to encourage progress, and to in every legitimate way, render service to mankind. Truly, they deserve to be called the greatest miracle of the age."

Peast of Good Hour. N. A. Huse of the Norfolk Daily News enlivened his talk on "Mission of the Country Daily," with side references, and his facetious vein was manifestly enjoyed. "The first of the order," said Davis, sang so pleasingly that he was called back for another selection. F. S. Berry had been given "Newspaper Rhetoric" to consider, but neglected to make a very searching analysis of the subject, and succeeded in delighting the audience.

M. M. Warner of the Lyons Mirror, was called to explain "Why All Editors Show up for daughter, Mrs. Oliver O'Connell. Mrs. E. E. Funston who spent a few days in Wayne the guest of her aunt, Mrs. W. O. Gamble, left Monday for her home at Miller, S. D. "World" (22) received from Mrs. Frank Weber, who went Saturday to St. Marys, Neb., announcing the death of her father, Frank Hinderer at that place Sunday, January 30. Mrs. Weber went to St. Marys Saturday.

The Baptist people of the community will be interested in the announcement that Rev. Fred Berry of Lincoln, who for six years has been superintendent of Baptist state convention, has resigned his position. His resignation will be acted upon by the executive committee of the state-board at a called meeting in Lincoln Thursday of this week.

CARD OF THANKS. "We wish to express heartfelt thanks to many friends for kindly sympathy and assistance following the sudden death of our beloved wife and mother. press was the Happy Hoologian of business. They did all the courteous things, extended all the accommodations, made all the noble rescues, housed the everybody and everybody, and all the things we saw in the street to the "Gloomy Guy" of some other business. But now you are better paid, and your service better appreciated. No longer compelled to walk you-side-in-Ford. "You have had your share in the development of the country of which you may well be proud. You have contributed to every business enterprise. You called the hamlet a town and made it a city and a metropolis. Ten by twenty store buildings you called Commercial Emporiums. You called every merchant a progressive, enterprising citizen and referred to his stock as money and cash, and the largest in that part of the state, and never a word about short weights and measly grams. What you said for the merchant you said for everybody else. You boosted school and church and home.

"That was fine service. It is a splendid thing to be able to say nice things about people. People like it and it lengthens out the subscription. I admit myself that I am a rather snooty little man, but I am alive and a little less 'snooty' after I am dead. In concluding, I congratulate you also upon the effect your newspaper has had upon the metropolitan press, the representative of which sit here at my left hand. They are going home to produce something. When I saw the Omaha Daily Bee had his glass of high school, filled on "Old Tugles." I knew that all conditions were completed, for in Nebraska when you have a deep-soiled "Mayfield" soaked by "Rosewater" something is going to be produced. I thank you.

All who attended the banquet were pleased. The editors were so well pleased that the next morning they passed a resolution of gratitude. Closing Session. Saturday morning in the city hall the association voted to hold the July meeting in Norfolk and elected the following officers: C. E. Nevill, Laurel Advocate, president; Mrs. M. O'Donnell, Wines, secretary; Mrs. J. C. Schell, of Winside, was Wayne vice-treasurer. N. A. Huse, Norfolk Daily News, and A. C. Mayfield, Stanton Pickett, will act with the officers as executive committee. M. W. Murray of the Pender Times, presented a paper on "Attitude of Editors on Free Political Advertising."

The appointment of a committee to study a system of job prices closed the session.

CONGRESSMAN SHOWS SIGNS OF INSURGENCE

Washington, Feb. 1.—Congressman Dan V. Stephens of the Third Nebraska district, shows some signs of insurgence in a letter he has just sent to Congressman Claude Kitchin, chairman of the ways-and-means committee of the house, Mr. Stephens says that he will support no measure for increasing the present stamp act and that he will oppose any increase in funds for preparedness that does not come from a higher tax on big incomes or inheritance or from the large profits that are being made out of munition manufacture. Mr. Stephens' letter follows:

"My dear Mr. Kitchin: "Knowing that the democratic majority upon which you will have to depend to enact a revenue measure to cover the cost of the present program is extremely small and that your committee will have to depend practically upon every democratic vote to support the measure you report in order to pass it I desire to avoid embarrassments by informing you in advance that I will not vote for any measure that does not provide: first, for the repeal of the present stamp tax measure; and second, for the raising of such needed revenue for the payment of such increase as may be ordered by Congress for carrying out the preparedness program for armament from incomes, inheritances and munitions of war—from any or all of these sources.

The people of the United States are now paying annually $250,000,000 for the national defense. I think this is sufficient but if it is not let the surplus wealth that is claiming its share of the burden of government be collected into private hands in abnormal proportions. There can be no excuse for taxing the people on their right to live when there is available surplus wealth for taxation purposes. Therefore I am very much opposed to the lowering of the present exemption on incomes until such time as the wealth above the present limit bears its share of the burden of government. The citizen has an inalienable right to feed and clothe himself before he commences to contribute to the national defense. A citizen who is not able to keep himself and his family in comfort cannot be a proper respect for our government which proposes to tax him to pay for this preparedness program. Especially is this true in view of the fact that the wealth of many individuals in this country has been enormously enhanced as a result of this horrible war in Europe and will be still further enhanced if this preparedness program is put through.

I repeat, let them and those who have swollen income pay for the preparedness program. I sincerely hope that the ways and means committee will be able to report a measure along these lines that we will all be able to support. —Yours very truly, Dan V. Stephens, U. S. C. Third District, Wayne.

whatever upon the consumer. Then they will be doing no more than the British millionaires are doing for their country. That method of taxation will act like soothing syrup to their fear of attack from abroad.

You will find that their fears will vanish in proportion as the surplus on incomes goes up. But if you do not apply this remedy they will be sure to go stark mad with fear as the prospect of gathering from the common people the half billion dollars a year which will be necessary to maintain our national defense practically on a war footing grows brighter. This method of taxation is certainly fair and just in view of the fact that the common people are now paying $250,000,000 toward the common defense and will have to do the fighting in case of war.

The precedent ought to be established now that from this year on every dollar of increase in cost in the national defense must be raised from incomes—from the surplus wealth of the nation that has already been collected into private hands in abnormal proportions. There can be no excuse for taxing the people on their right to live when there is available surplus wealth for taxation purposes. Therefore I am very much opposed to the lowering of the present exemption on incomes until such time as the wealth above the present limit bears its share of the burden of government. The citizen has an inalienable right to feed and clothe himself before he commences to contribute to the national defense. A citizen who is not able to keep himself and his family in comfort cannot be a proper respect for our government which proposes to tax him to pay for this preparedness program. Especially is this true in view of the fact that the wealth of many individuals in this country has been enormously enhanced as a result of this horrible war in Europe and will be still further enhanced if this preparedness program is put through.

I repeat, let them and those who have swollen income pay for the preparedness program. I sincerely hope that the ways and means committee will be able to report a measure along these lines that we will all be able to support. —Yours very truly, Dan V. Stephens, U. S. C. Third District, Wayne.

SAVINGS SERMONETTE

NUMBER FORTY-ONE

UP AGAINST IT

This is the cry often heard from the young man or woman whose golden opportunity has presented itself, and they are forced by lack of a small sum of money to sit by and watch this opportunity become the property of some one else. In most cases the amount needed could easily have been saved, and the "up against it" proposition is merely the cry of the careless.

The man or woman who has followed the plan of saving is prepared to take advantage of any opportunities that may present themselves; the improvident fellow has to sit back and watch his more careful brother gather the plum. The wise person will guard against the possibility of ever having to say "I am up against it." His golden opportunity remains because he can take advantage of it. Once a foothold is gained, and confidence is one's self, a man need never be up against it, he can conquer the world.

have charge of the music during the entire series. He is an affable and cultured gentleman and an expert in his line of chorus organization. It will be his plan to mass a great choir for every service and organize the local talent so that we may expect to hear Wayne's musical talent to best advantage.

In this series of meetings the church people generally appeal to the town and ask that they turn out and all Wayne take hold and help to make our own "Billy Sunday Campaign." We can do it; we have got the preachers, the singers and the people and the sawdust trails lead down the aisle of one of our own churches.

Do not fail to be on hand next Sunday morning at the Baptist church and have the benefit of our special morning service. Rev. W. L. Gaston will present an eloquent theme and discuss a subject none can afford to miss.

Methodist Church.

(Rev. A. S. Buell, Pastor). With the excessive cold we still had a splendid audience out to the service Sunday. The pastor concluded the special series of sermons on the decalogue and will speak next Sunday morning on "New Wine in New Bottles." This will be an interpretation of the twentieth century Christianity for the twentieth century needs. You will miss it if you miss it next Sunday morning. There will be a comfortable new and a welcome for you at the Methodist church and you are urged to bring a friend with you. We believe that the church has a live message for you, and that message is the very thing you need and probably what you desire.

The Epworth Leaguers are to hold a social in the church on Friday evening of this week. All are invited. The price of admission will be 10 cents.

There will be no services on Sunday evening on account of the union evangelistic meetings in the Baptist church. See announcements of the meetings on another page of this paper. While the preaching is to be done by the local pastors we believe that the people will be better pleased with that than with a traveling evangelist. The preachers expect to bring to you real wide awake helpful messages and we want you as a booster for a better Wayne.

10 Bulls, 10 Heifers, 30 Cows

This will be a very choice offering of Shorthorn cattle, including a large percentage of the best breeding cows in this herd. The HELD BULL, WHITE HAMPTON, by Hampton's Counselor, is the sire of all the young stuff; cows will be bred to him, and this bull will also be included. The nine bulls are all sons of WHITE HAMPTON. The females are sired by Red Archer 2d, Prince Gerald 144068, Hampton's Counselor 264533, Scotch Fashion 259593, Royal Sultan 2d 298688, The Dreamer 283208, Queen's Pride 288792, Lord Banff 20th 226520, People's Choice 292344, Presbyterian King 239355, Rub's Hero 247196 and Rosebud's Emblem 317098. The young heifers will be bred to DALE CHANCELLOR, by Double Dale, dam Good Lassie. This bull was recently put in the Buskirk herd at a good long price. Cattle will be tested, and in nice breeding condition.

BUSKIRK'S SHORTHORN SALE—The offering of cattle which Mr. Buskirk is going to sell on February 5 will appeal to the stockman, farmer and breeder looking for the good, profitable kind. Mr. Buskirk is one of the oldest stockmen in Nebraska and when he established his herd over ten years ago he selected a high class lot of breeding matrons and has always had the very best of bulls in his herd. At the present time his herd bull is White Hampton, a son of Hampton's Counselor, by Hampton's Best, he by Merry Hampton; dam, Scotch Duchess, sired by Victor Allan. This bull will also be included in the sale. Mr. Buskirk has recently put into his herd a bull he calls Dale Chancellor, by the great breeding bull, Double Dale, dam Good Lassie. A number of the cows will be bred to White Hampton, while the young females by him will be bred to Dale Chancellor. There will be cows in the sale by Red Archer 2d, a former herd bull; Prince Gerald 144068, Hampton's Counselor 264533, Scotch Fashion 185553, Royal Sultan 2d 298688, The Dreamer 283208, Queen's Pride, Lord Banff 20th, People's Choice, Presbyterian King, Rub's Hero and Rosebud's Emblem. We have had occasion to visit this herd the last few years and consider that Mr. Buskirk is one of the real constructive breeders in Nebraska and he has made a marked improvement since he started in the business. He is putting in some of the best individuals in the bull line that you will have occasion to bid on this winter. The herd bull, White Hampton, will be sold, and nine bull calves, all sired by him. These calves are under-yearlings, and are an exceptionally strong bunch of good individuals. A number of the cows in the sale will be well along in calf. —O. I. Purdy.

UNCLE WALT

The Poet Philosopher

WAR STORIES.

I'm tired of the stories of battle, that word painters send from the front, of peasants who perish like cattle, performing the patriotic stunts; I'm tired of the gun and the armor, of all things that slaughter and destroy, so tell me a yarn of the farmer who shucks eight bushels a day. In lists of the butchered, diurnal, there's nothing I see that enchants; I'm tired of the major and colonel, with blood on their bibs and their pants; I'm tired of the spy and the spoiler, of dead ones that litter the sward; O, tell me a tale of the toiler, who's whacking up wood by the corner. I'm tired of the boss in the trenches, with his shoes full of water and loam; far better the plumbers, whose wrenches are fixing the pipes in my home. I've read of the movements of legions, I've read of advance and retreat, of ashes and ruin in regions where once grew the corn and the wheat; and now I am weary of reading these stories of carnage and gore, of myriads wounded and bleeding, of heroes who will wake never more; so tell me a tale of the young who carries his mules in the morn, who digs up the eggs from the manger, and shucks eight bushels of corn.

A DIRGE.

My friend is dead, while yet so young; Pneumonia is his starboard lung defied the learned physicians' skill, and laughed to scorn the healing pill. And all his days he was on guard, against disease; kept watch and ward to see that no disgusting germ should through his mouth or nostrils squirm. And when convinced that some disease was throwing microbes on the breeze, he breathed through anti-septic gauze, took all the care that ever was. While others scratched for fame or wealth, he only thought about his health, and studied up the bughouse rules of all the foremost health-fad schools. He used a sanitary bed, and had no milk and oatmeal bread, and walked nine miles, in rain or blast, each day before he broke his fast. His life has closed before its noon, and I, who care no nicety for rites laid down by formal man, but eat and drink whatever I can, run here to mourn my friend's decease, and wish his spirit joy and peace.

THE HAND OUT.

The most of us are working hard to stock the cupboard shelves, to purchase coal and time and tar, to clothe and feed ourselves. We plug along the best we can, and always strive to keep a quarter for the fellow-man who has no place to sleep. The boys are always needing shoes, the girls for dresses, and so we strain our weary throats, to raise the wretchedly. Down to our tasks we're always bent, of me—such pressing need, and have a quarter for the gent who has no place to feed. We turn no bezel from the door, however hard we're pressed; we think "Ere many years are o'er like him we may be dressed; like him we may be unemployed, and look as tough as he, and have a dull and aching vish where fodder ought to be. Like him we may be glad to sleep in some abandoned well; the cost of living is so steep who can our fate forestall? And when we for a handout plead, for hungry kids and frau, may people help us in our need, as we help others now."

SANTA FRICK.

While Christmas shoppers, rank on rank, were thronging to the stores, the head push of a Pittsburgh bank quite calmly closed its doors. Some forty thousand children had their savings treasured there, and many a little girl and boy were spoiled as usually they had. "Per-haps," the urbane cashier cried, "in seven years or so, the grim receivers will divide the assets—I don't know." The heartless little children wept, their cheeks with tears were soaked, as usually they homeward toiled—their Christmas time was spoiled. Then Henry Frick feared up and said, "This will not do! I swear, the kids shan't weep; go to bed—they'll have their money now!" And then they had a wondrous laugh, in smoky old Pittsburg, and bade the children's woes decamp, and made their Christmas glad! The children, rescued from the hole by him, do not declare: "A man may have a large white soul, e'en though a millionaire!"

THE VEILED FUTURE.

We know not what a day shall bring, what brand of weal or woe; but let us manly, let us sing, and bring, that fantastic tone. We may feel sure tomorrow's sun will lead, the whole day long; and when all things are said and done, our guesses will be wrong. We may insist that dark green: grief tomorrow's brow will wear; and yet the dawn may bring relief from all the woes we bear. No man should look ahead and say "Tomorrow is a frost, so I shall walk around today, and weep, and blame the coast." And so, as I have often said, in dirges fierce but brief it's foolishness to look ahead for further stores of grief. It's vain to "rend our hearts and say," "Tomorrow's charged with fate; far better to enjoy today, before it pulls its freight. This day is ours, this cheerful morn; all yesterdays are dead; all other days are yet unborn, the stretch of days ahead. This day is ours, the dear, sweet thing, until it ambles by; so let us dance and let us sing, and throw our hats on high.

EPIDEMIC.

Life is a sad and painful trip for people who are aging. An epidemic of the grip o'er all the land is raging. The young men sneeze a while and laugh, and consider a cold and a sneezer; the old men break themselves in half when coughing, and grow sicker. The young recover when they take of medicine a spoonful, the old men die and still lie in bed, and the life is grim and painful. The young lay off a half a day, when grip has sprung its warning, and they are back, serene and gay, to work, tomorrow morning. The old must "grapple" with the grip, which is a funny—until the day, a downy cover, has taken all their money. The old must sit and soak their feet, and swallow pills and powders, and mustard plasters wear, and eat denatured soups and chowders. I care to hear a young man brag about the way he suffers; he has no right to chew the rag among us ancient sufferers!

WEATHER COULD NOT CHECK ENTHUSIASM.

N. A. Huse in Norfolk Daily Herald, Jan. 31.—The people of Wayne and the thousands of people attending the semi-annual meeting of the Northeast Nebraska Educational Association Friday and Saturday. Owing to the inclement weather conditions somewhat less than fifty visitors were able to attend. Wayne but there was no lack in enthusiasm on this account. Besides the association business meetings Wayne entertained the visitors in a most interesting manner. The editors were given a chance to visit the Wayne high school and to personally test the work of the domestic science department which served a delicious luncheon in the afternoon. The manual training department was also visited by the visitors. A trip to the state normal school was another very interesting feature of the day's program. Nebraska has magnificent modern buildings at this high school and the school is doing work of intense efficiency. This is an institution of which all north Nebraska can well be proud.

A banquet in the evening in the basement of the Baptist church was attended by over 200 persons most of whom were the leading citizens of Wayne and their wives. Unique programs had been prepared and the napkins were covered with pictures of the prominent visitors. A novel feature of the banquet was the announced arrival in the middle of the program of the ghost of Horace Greeley who came back to life long enough to tell the modern scribes what he thought about them both collectively and individually. Toasts were responded to by Eugene O. Mayfield of Omaha, Sunday editor of the World-Herald; Mrs. M. A. Phillips of Wayne, N. A. Huse of Norfolk, F. S. Berry of Wayne, M. E. Warner of Lyons and Dr. Victor Ripgewater of the Omaha Bee and Rev. W. L. Gaston of Wayne. E. C. Marshall of the Niobrara Tribune gave a violin solo. Mrs. James Miller and Miss Bessie Durrie of Wayne were on the program with a piano duet and Mrs. A. R. Davis of Wayne sang a solo. The banquet was an elaborate one and was beautifully served. Judge James Britton of Wayne was toastmaster.

E. A. Newton of Laurel was elected president; Mrs. Marie Weeks of Norfolk, vice president, and O. E. Gardner of Wayne, secretary and treasurer. On account of Norfolk's railroad facilities the association decided to hold its next meeting in July of this city.

A. F. Allen, managing editor of the Sioux City Journal, and John L. Kennedy of Omaha were among the visitors.

The visitors were entertained in the private homes of Wayne people.

DEAN HAHN TALKS TO FARMERS' INSTITUTE

Some City Journal, Jan. 20.—The physical understanding of the physical makeup of the child is responsible for the loss of about one-fourth of the country's children before they have attained the age of one year, asserted Dr. H. Hahn dean of the Wayne Normal school, who addressed the Dakota county farmers' institute at Dakota City this afternoon. His subject was "The Baby Crop."

Most adults expect their children to be as strong in body as they themselves are, but the child is different from the grownup person, Dean Hahn said.

"If we would employ the knowledge we already have about the physical makeup of children, we could save 150,000 children each year," he declared. "The baby crop is the most valuable crop."

Dean Hahn spoke also of the mental and moral welfare of children.

"Getting the children into school is very important. We need the help of the parents in getting the children to school and the help of the parents in keeping them there. Much of the school criticism is unfounded. If we had more faith in the schools and would be more sympathetic much more could be accomplished."

Speaking of the moral welfare of the child, Dean Hahn declared: "We don't understand the child. The home has one view of the child, the school has another and society another. The result is that the different institutions can't agree as to what the child really is. That is one reason why the parents and teachers can't understand each other."

Dean Hahn urged the cooperation of all educational forces in guarding the welfare of the child.

Physically the child is not so strong as the adult, he asserted. Its heart, its lungs, its stomach and other organs are weaker. That is why they break down more easily than grownup people, he said.

THE BEGINNING OF SUCCESS.

Fremont Tribune: The Cleveland Press summarized the advice to young men and old for that matter, in this manner: "Take an interest in your work and you will have an interest in your work."
Work depends very much upon one's attitude toward it. Unconsciously work is not so good, generally speaking, as it should be. It is suffering unjustly in its reputation. Some lover of ease has been able to tarnish its fair name, and it is somewhat of a misfortune that ever it is blessed. It is one of the greatest blessings we have. Whoever proves an intelligent, efficient and enthusiastic workman finds positions opening to him faster than he can grasp, for a man of the world is not so bigoted as to ever be afraid and there are perhaps, bigger jobs awaiting those who can perform them.

The young man who interests himself in his business will not find himself so much interested in the business of other people. And if he takes a real interest in his work no matter what that work is, he will find himself liking it. That's what interest means. Every workman ought to be able to visualize the

RURAL SCHOOLS.

Lincoln, Jan. 28.—The schools of Nebraska are in a class by themselves when it comes to efficiency along rural school lines and have far outreached anything practiced in other states, according to information brought out in a discussion of rural schools at the meeting of the county superintendents of the state being held in representative hall. There are 180 rural high schools in the state which are doing excellent work. In 104 country schools the grades have been raised from the usual eighth grade to as high as the eleventh, something not approached by another state in the union. Last evening the annual banquet was held at the Linden hotel and was addressed by Sup. Graff of Omaha and Dr. A. E. Winship of Boston.

Lincoln, Jan. 29.—Gov. Morehead will deliver an address to the National Chamber of Commerce which will hold its winter session at the meeting on February 20. However, many of the state colleges and institutions have now installed wireless outfits.

Why not invite the state press association to meet in Wayne in 1917?

Colonel Roosevelt should not be allowed to eat raw meat or drink fresh blood during this period of general aggression. He should be held down to a mild diet of vegetables and soup.

The criticism of the press along some lines by non-newspaper workers, at the instance of editors in Wayne is not welcome, because it is an injury to the press which, though standards pointed out are impracticable and impossible, may result in progress and improvement.

It looks as though Governor Morehead, declining to run again for the governorship, would be pitted against Senator Hitchcock for the democratic nomination for United States senator. And it needs no look as though the winner would be defeated this year by a republican.

Editor M. M. Warner of the Lyons Herald, who spoke at the editors' banquet Friday night, and who takes an ancient history as naturally as a cat takes to milk, does not look a day older than when we saw him forty years ago. By still being in the early days, he has succeeded in overcoming the law of nature and preserving perennial youth.

Within a few months the primaries will be held to make nominations and those desiring county offices are expected to come to the surface before long. One office to be filled is that of county attorney, and while there are thus far no avowed candidates, Fred S. Barry is being urged for the place and may decide to run. It is pointed out that Mr. Barry is a lawyer of large and successful practice, and could be depended on to look after the legal affairs of the county promptly and efficiently. His successful experience is urged in his favor.

Editor Weeks of the Norfolk Press suggested the morning after the press banquet that the association should largely blue pencil entertainment features and get down to doing more business. The fact is, the association is the time and appreciate social recreation when they attend a public meeting. According to the view of this department, the most business good derived from the association is in getting together to informally "talk shop." Every editor has problems peculiar to his locality, and is not likely to be greatly helped by set speeches at the present time. He can be assisted by talking to others of those that vitally and directly concern him. As to social functions, we always prefer to be sumptuously entertained.

President Wilson's speeches bring preparedness are scholarly and interesting, and no doubt reflect his honest conviction, though his judgment, considering contrary opinions of others equally well informed, may not be fully warranted. The extent of armament and military training is the joint over which opinions differ. If the president has information which leads him to believe the country is in danger of invasion, it would seem the fact should be carefully laid before Mr. Bryan and others who disagree with him in order that all leaders might be in accord to properly safeguard the rights and interests of American people. If the country is likely to be imperiled from the outside, the cost of increased means of defense would appear amply justified. If the president is supported by other than the most industrial grounds, his position should be adequately sustained. If he is overly and unnecessarily apprehensive, people will naturally move hesitantly in the direction of the greatly increased armaments. The American people, taught to abhor war and militarism, will not take a step in that direction unless convinced that no other course will result in a speedy and properly safe. If the president is properly convinced of ground for fear before determining definitely the extent to which preparedness involving military training and giant outlay of money, should be allowed to go.

PRESIDENT WILSON'S TOUR OF MIDDLEWEST

Chicago, Feb. 1.—The fourth day of President Wilson's tour of the middlewest on his speaking campaign for national preparedness today carried him west of the Mississippi through Iowa, where his program called for the chief address of the day at Des Moines at 8 p. m. in the Coliseum. Four brief talks from the rear platform of his car at Davenport, Iowa City, Grinnell and Newton, Io., were on the program before the president's special left for Chicago today. The members of the party expressed their pleasure at the hearty welcome accorded him here. They said the local response to his plea for support in preparing for an adequate national defense had fully met their expectations. The great crowds that welcomed him and the throng that made an effort to hear him most of them unsuccessfully because of the limited capacity of the auditorium, were interpreted by the president as evidence of the Chicagoans' approval of his policy.

Will Have Light Day

Yesterday's somewhat strenuous activities including an address before an audience of 9,000 at Milwaukee and the long speech here last night were to be succeeded by a relatively quiet day of travel. The first of four five-minute talks en route to Des Moines was not to be delivered until 2:30 p. m. This was at Davenport.

Urges Continental Army

The president's speech of last night was in large measure a reiteration of his previous appeals for speedy building of the army, navy and his endorsement of the continental army plan. His assertion that so far as the navy was concerned the country was prepared for immediate war caused a momentary flutter in the audience that was soothed by his declaration that the navy was inadequate in size, though not in quality.

His reference to American ideals and "the solemn pledge" of this country to maintain the national sovereignty at all times in the western hemisphere was received with applause and his declaration of Americans as "a body of idealists much more ready to lay down their lives for a thought than a dollar," elicited a probable burst of hand-clapping and cheering.

Will Go On To Topeka

A stop of four and one-half hours is on the president's program for Des Moines: Reaching there at 6:50 p. m., he expects to address the meeting at the coliseum at 8 o'clock and leave at 11:25 for Topeka and Kansas City, where he will deliver addresses tomorrow. En route to Topeka a five-minute talk from the train will be delivered at Lawrence, Kas.

President and Mrs. Wilson were up at 8 o'clock and breakfasted shortly thereafter. They planned to leave the hotel at half past 9 for a short automobile tour of the city before leaving for Iowa.

J. J. Ahern leaves for Chicago today to buy spring goods. His first purchases will be of the materials you will need in your spring sewing, and these new dress goods, gingham, wash goods, laces and embroideries will be shipped home within a few days and by the latter part of next week you can see these things going at the store. Next week he will attend the great fashion show to be given in the auditorium theater by the manufacturers of ladies' coats, suits, dresses, waists and skirts. Here he will see the choicest of the new styles of these garments that have been brought over from the coming spring and summer season and he will purchase for his customers those that are judged to be best. By March these garments will be here for your approval.

Can you wear size 25, 3 or 34 shoe? If you are a Cinderella foot, you can't express an honest opinion without knocking? Being "reliably informed" is not enough. It may do for a lecturer of a minister but it must be stronger than that for a newspaper and really should be for any man or woman who makes a declaration. Reliable information is often wrong. Facts are not impossible to secure. Your best friends are liable to give you wrong information, yet you would call it being "reliably informed." INVESTIGATION AT NORFOLK HOSPITAL. Norfolk, Neb., Feb. 2.—Nebraska State Board of Control today began public and official investigation of the conditions at the State Hospital for the insane at Norfolk. The hearing follows an investigation conducted by the Norfolk Daily News several weeks ago. At that time the state board removed Dr. W. D. Guttery, superintendent, from his post and asked for his resignation. He demanded a public hearing. Tale of a Nurse. Mrs. Nina Hickerson, who recently voluntarily left the employ of the Norfolk hospital as a nurse, testified that on one occasion Dr. Guttery put his arm around her on the stairway, and the struck him in the stomach with her elbow. She named one woman who she said bore an immoral reputation, and declared Dr. Guttery told her that he was warned about this woman by her own relatives before employing her. She told of a suggestive story which she said he told the class.

COMPOSES SONG. Following from Scottsdale, Pa., by the Greenburg, Pa., Daily Record mentions favorably the work of Englen Young, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Young of Wayne, and will read with interest by his many Wayne friends who will be pleased over his success: Ensign Edwin Young, pianist for the Stephens party, has composed a song entitled "Scottie" for melody and the tune can be heard in all parts of the city, the rhythm having a swing that keeps it in one's mouth. As a pianist Mr. Young has remarkable talent and with it he is a young man of the highest moral character and is consecrated to God's work as is every member of the Stephens party. The enthusiasm with which Mr. Young officiates at the services makes Wegner's work more easy in directing the song service in the meetings. The piano used in the meetings is a Sohmer Concert Grand, a $1,000 instrument, and furnished free during the campaign. The piano is the best of the type and has a great volume and a wide range, adapting it to solo work or to the accompaniment for the great three hundred voice chorus. WATCHION GLOBE-SIGHTS. Why not write the state press association to meet in Wayne in 1917?

Colonel Roosevelt should not be allowed to eat raw meat or drink fresh blood during this period of general influenza.

The criticism of the press along some lines by non-newspaper workers in the late season of editors in Wayne is not very welcome.

It looks as though Governor Morehead, declining to run again for the governorship, would be pitted against Senator Hitchcock for the democratic nomination for United States Senator.

Editor M. M. Warner of the Lyons Mirror, who spoke at the Effort banquet Friday night, and who takes to ancient history as naturally as a cat takes to milk, does not look a day older than when we saw him five years ago.

Within a few months the primaries will be held to make nominations and those desiring offices are expected to come to the surface before long.

Editor Weekes of the Norfolk Press, suggested the morning after the press banquet that the association should largely blue pencil entertainment features and get down to doing more business.

Reliable information is often wrong. Facts are not impossible to secure. Your best friends are liable to give you wrong information, yet you would not call it being "reliably informed."

When your prejudices enter into a subject then you should be even more careful and secure absolute, not reliable, information before you act or talk.

The legislative bill now pending, introduced by Mr. Palmer, legalizing the incorporation of this town and the acts of its officers, is a measure which, though it may not be positively necessary, will forever set at rest a much mooted subject. It will place the corporation on a much better footing anyway, and give more confidence to the trustees, so that when an ordinance or law is passed by them it will not be simply a dead letter, as many of them now are; but something that will be depended upon as a sanction. It is expected that as soon as the passage of the bill is announced, steps will immediately be taken to enforce all ordinances and make the work of the town board of some use and effect on no more.

Snow commenced falling on Saturday, the 5th, and continued with renewed energy all day Sunday, and was the heaviest fall of snow ever known in this section. The storm was accompanied by slight wind, and what there was came from the south, so that the temperature was mild and the snow lay as it fell, drifting but very little. The prairie was covered with eighteen inches to two feet of snow, and in the timber along the river it is reported to be on an average of three feet deep. Roads in all directions were next to impassable, and the main thoroughfares were only just beginning to be opened and travel resumed Monday morning no train attempted to leave this place, but during the day an engine with a snow plow came over the road and opened the way so that Tuesday we had regular trains as usual. After a few days' rest, the storm found guided on his armor again on last Friday, and for three days raged and howled and snowed with utmost fierceness, culminating in the most terrible storm of the past ten years. It started Monday, the railroad, though it started every day, and once ditched an engine, and not until Tuesday was the track cleared. This locality was not the only part visited by the storm, but the whole northwest as well received a lion's share of the beautiful. All trains were blocked and telegraph wires broken down, so that communication with the east has been cut off and it is impossible to tell how far in that direction the storm extended.

Congress that an emergency tax of 50 cents per horse power be placed on all internal combustion engines.

Mr. Brate, secretary of the National Gas Engine Association, indicated that this would mean 1c to the farmer. According to his estimates, the tax proposed would amount to over $12,000,000 per year to the farmers of the country.

As Mr. Brate very correctly points out, the gasoline engine is not a luxury on the farm. It is coming to be more and more of a necessity. This is true not only of the automobile, but of the small gas engine used for various sorts of farm power, such as running water-grinding feed, operating the binder, and running all sorts of farm machinery. In view of the constant clamor which is going up from the cities that the farmer increase his production and decrease the cost, it does not seem logical to impose special taxes upon the things which enable him to do both of these things.

WHAT COLLEGE-BRED BOYS SHOULD BECOME FARMERS.

Walter Farmer, Professor Carver of Harvard University, in an article appearing in the Harvard Crimson, the university paper, under the title of "Farming for All-Around Men," gives some suggestions that make rather interesting reading to the all-around man on the farm. After pointing out the difficulties which the farmer must meet, and the problems which he must solve, under conditions which he can never foresee, and in seasons the nature of which he can have no information, and pointing out that a satisfactory life can be lived on the farm by the right kind of a man, he tells these college boys: "Should not go into farming. We quote:

"No one should think of farming as a career unless he has counted all the costs, and made up his mind to face them. The amount of muscular work is so considerable as to make life on the farm intolerable to one who dislikes muscular work and fatigue. Again, one whose animal spirit is not strong enough to make it agreeable for him to rise early in the morning, especially in the winter time in a cold house, and go out into the cold to begin his work, would scarcely find the farmer's life full of durable satisfactions. Nor is the farm a place for the man who dislikes hard scientific study. Most of all, the farm is the last place in the world for the man who is not endowed with a great deal of the power of initiative. To do no more than to be told what to do, to decide what to do next and how to do it so frequently as on a farm. It is therefore no place for the man who always has to be told what to do next."

"This is sound advice in these backward-looking days," Professor Carver goes on to say that, with the addition of a few additional courses, such as marketing, soil chemistry, farm management, agricultural geography, plant and animal breeding, business management, and special courses in rural economics, banking and transportation, the student could get an excellent agricultural education in Harvard University. While we do not doubt his statement in its literal exactness, we doubt whether many of the boys thus trained in the university would find their way back to the farm.

THE FIELD OF BUSINESS.

Stout City Journal reports for the United States Steel corporation for the last quarter of last year disclosed the most prosperous business in the history of the world's greatest steel concern. The earnings for the quarter aggregated $3,000,000. These were the largest for a single quarter since the organization of the corporation and represented an increase of $15,000,000 over the record of the previous quarter. The net income for the last quarter was $40,000,000, as compared with $30,000,000 for the preceding quarter. The surpluses for the respective quarters were $23,000,000 and $18,000,000. Earnings for the year 1915 totaled $130,000,000 against $84,000,000 for 1914. The company had $105,000,000 cash in the bank after declaring the regular preferred dividend and restoring the annual dividend of 5 per cent on the common stock, which was suspended on account of non-business over a year ago. The company has orders enough booked at profitable prices to keep it busy at full capacity the greater part of the year if no new business came in. The present assurance is that this year's business will be immensely profitable.

Steel's fine showing did not result in a new boom in munitions securities. Although the indication is that profitable war business will continue throughout the year, interest in "war brides" continues below par. This is due to realization that the effect of much of the increased earning power is included in present prices. Also there is belated comprehension that a large part of the extraordinary profits will have to be spent for improvements necessitated by the new business. While the permanent effect on the value of the securities should be highly salutary if the profits are put into betterments, the tendency is to base prices on early dividend prospects.

Good reports come from virtually every line of current commercial activity. Money is plentiful and cheap, notwithstanding the increasing volume of business, and there is talk of taking advantage of the redundancy to retire the whole greenback circulation in a lump and rely on the federal reserve system for notes to replace it when new demand shall arise.

Industrially, a few clouds are observed on the labor horizon. Railway employees, who were not satisfied with wage concessions won recently under arbitration proceedings have begun to write for a more substantial increase in wages. The anthracite and bituminous coal industries also are in for another controversy over wage scales. The fact that this is presidential year does not make for the settlement of industrial disputes upon a basis regarded by employers as advantageous.

Storms have interfered with current distribution. Spring trade prospects are much brighter than the recent average.

LESLIE
 Miss Rose Wilson spent Sunday with the Charles Arp family.
 Ferdinand Fisher's sale was well attended and everything sold.
 George Buskirk, sr., drove his herd of sale cattle to Wayne Monday.
 Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Dolph, Mrs. Mary Dolph, Mr. and Mrs. George Buskirk, jr., spent Sunday at Ed Edgell's. It was Mrs. Mary Dolph's birthday.
 We join in extending our sympathy to Mr. and Mrs. Fred Erleben who lost their house by fire late Saturday evening. The origin seems unknown.

FARMERS' ORGANIZATIONS
 Wallace's Farmer: We have lived long enough to see various farmers' organizations, and to study them as they rose and declined. In the seventies the Grange movement spread over all the corn belt states, and in fact over the whole United States like a prairie fire. Farmers in the seventies seemed to us then to be possessed, or rather obsessed, with the idea of organization through the Grange. It took us a long time to understand them. But in the west the Grange declined after it had compelled various state legislatures to enact laws compelling the railroads to give the farmers the right to the state to control freight and passenger rates within its limits. This was a great movement, a landmark some advances in freight rates, and also securing substantial reductions. It is now ten years old, and is growing stronger.

 It is to be noticed that all of these movements were farm-born. The Grange and the Alliance were ridiculed and sneered at. The man who advocated measures of real reform was called a populist, a long-haired crank, and all that. But the people of the United States have adopted the fundamental ideas of these farm folks that went into these organizations.
 No organization can last long after it has fulfilled its mission; and its mission must be limited to things in which all members take an interest. We are having now in some parts of the country the organization of farmers' clubs—a movement that has much to commend it—essential to any great advance in cooperation. But these associations or clubs can not reach out and take up things upon which the people in the community are not agreed. They must be limited to a few fundamental things and stand by them, and by all means avoid letting the organization be used by any class who have by ends of their own to serve. Above all things, they must keep out of partisan politics. Note that we say "partisan politics," for every farmer ought to be a politician in the best sense of the word. That is, he should be interested in just government. But if he gets into politics and the very one party has an exclusive monopoly of its government, then he is making a fatal mistake.

They are provincial. They are as he was a year ago, guilty of "thinking the contents of their own minds to be the contents of the mind of the world." That is, they have assumed that other people love peace and have aggression as themselves. This gives us one clue to the need of preparedness. The people of the rest of the world are worse than we had supposed—worse than we are.
 This "provincialism" applies in another way to the more vital aspect of the president's case. The United States is in no danger of invasion. "Nobody seriously supposes," says the president, "that the United States needs to fear the vastness of its own territory. What America has to fear... are indirect, roundabout flank movements upon her position in the western hemisphere." The invasionist talk which we hear then is not forward not in fear of invasion, but for the purpose of frightening us into guarding against another thing which the talkers do not wish to wit, an invasion of the Monroe doctrine.

Now preparedness is provided in that they would have the United States stay at home and attend to its internal business instead of arming to enforce the Monroe doctrine—in other words, for an aggressive commercialism in South America.
 This, as we read it, is the gist of the president's declarations. They do much to clarify the situation. They make the armament question not one of national defense or of "preparedness" in the sense of defending our national integrity, but a question of embarking on an aggressive foreign policy. It is a question of backing with fighting force our negotiations for national conquest. Not a national conquest—this is not profitable. But conquest of the markets of the world with particular reference to South America.
 This has seemed to many of us from the first the real objective of the president's mission, inasmuch as it had any basis in national policy. It is hard to interest Americans in foreign policy and so the hubbub of invasion and the strong pull of the good words "defense" and "preparedness" must be resorted to in order to secure support for the movement. The president is to be commended for refusing to employ these means. He has frankly put the question on its own merits. On this question involves a very great issue. Let us hope the discussion will proceed.

We Pay a Premium for Good Dry Milling Wheat at the WAYNE ROLLER MILLS

in legislation. Conditions were such that farmers were obliged to do what they could.
 Unfortunately, in the corn belt states the Grange went into politics. Every prominent politician who even owned a farm, or could in any sense call himself a farmer, was anxious to get into the Grange, to get political power. Many of them used it, not for the benefit of the farmer, but to the advantage of their own party. Many of the Granges went into merchandising. They wanted to cut out the middle man. When the Grange stores were conducted with ability, they succeeded; but most of them failed for the simple reason that their managers did not understand the retail business. In the states east of Michigan and Ohio, the Grange continued, but it became a social organization. In such cases, it has been of great value, although sometimes its leaders are charged with having allowed themselves to be interested in politics, not for the benefit of farmers, nor of the Grange, but for their own political interests.
 The next great movement was in the eighties. This time it was the Farmers' Alliance. It, too, spread over the country like a prairie fire. It terrorized the politicians; but it passed away in the corn belt apparently quietly dissolving. Why? The Alliance accomplished one great, good work. It forged congress into an engine going at a different cost, and each manufacturer and nation abroad does the same how is mathematics to measure scientifically.

A TARIFF COMMISSION.
 Lincoln Journal: With the president's recent announcement that a tariff commission bill must be passed by congress we come at last to a showdown on this much discussed subject.
 Everybody has been for a tariff commission for many years. Why has it been so slow to materialize? Because this unanimity vanishes when the plan begins to take form. Tariff commission means different things to different people. To the Boston Transcript it means a commission instructed to set tariff schedules back about to where they were after the New England manufacturers wrote the Dingley law. To irrigation dreamers it means taking the tariff out of politics. To another school of tariff makers it means scientific tariffs, made according to the inexorable laws of mathematics. As a matter of fact, a tariff commission can properly be one of these things, and so nearly everybody is in favor of it. But when we come to the framing of one begins.
 A commission cannot vote tariffs for that is a legislative act vested in congress. The tariff cannot be kept out of politics, for commission or no commission, politics must decide what what principle tariffs are to be based on. Tariffs cannot be scientific or mathematical, since any rule of application and any set of facts must affect each case differently. When each factory at home produces goods at a different cost, and each manufacturer and nation abroad does the same how is mathematics to measure scientifically.

IMPERIALISM.
 Nebraska Farmer: Many an American citizen has felt shocked at the cold-blooded philosophy of force presented by Nietzsche, Bernhard Shaw and other writers who have in effect declared that might makes right and that if a powerful nation sees anything it wants it has a right to go and take it. Doubtless the knowledge that some men over in Europe held such ideas has had many persons in this country to become preparationists. But we seem to be in more danger of being conquered by imperialism from the inside than from the outside. Did you ever hear of anything more cold-blooded than the following from The Seven Seas—the organ of the Navy League?
 "The true militarist believes that pacifism is the masculine and humanitarianism the feminine manifestation of national degeneracy."
 "World empire is the only logical and natural aim of a nation."
 "Land has always been the correct ailment for nations, and never till the arrival of the pacifist did gods or men ever witness a nation trying on straight-waistcoats as if they were life-preservers."
 Such utterances as this leaves a strong impression that at least some of the preparationists have not in mind defense so much as aggression, trade aggression, if not actual grabbing of territory. Putting power, a large army and a large navy, into the hands of men who are imbued with the spirit of the above quotation is dangerous business.

Our Semi-Annual Clearance of Fine Shoes Saturday, February 5. Baughan's Bootery

For example, in the corn belt, mutual insurance organizations were started, but confined to our foreign population. Under the Alliance they increased many fold, not only insuring against fire in farm buildings, but also against wind and hail in their own and country. Whenever farmers met together for any purpose, they are likely to start something, and something that is of benefit.
 It is hard to tell just why the Alliance went to pieces; but so far as we have observed, it was a result partly because it had accomplished its work, and partly because farmers began to suspect that its leaders were holding their hands behind the backs, and profiting by the confidence of the members.
 Along in the nineties, an organization among the stockmen of the west secured the passage of a rate bill that put teeth into the Interstate Commerce law, the result of which we are now enjoying. Later the Corn Belt Meat Producers' association, in cooperation with other associations, has been the means of getting more satisfactory service from the railroads, and preventing the "difference between cost of production at home and abroad."

 That pretty nearly everybody in the United States looked with eagerness to yesterday's reports of the president's New York speeches. He was to talk preparedness. Would he tell just why he has changed his mind on this point? Would he make clear that new dangers threaten us, even though he may not feel free to specify? The country has felt the need of such a showing of fact and policy in making up its mind on the question of greatly increasing its military strength.
 To a great extent the president meets this need. He begins by the discharge of a new 42 centimeter epithet at his anti-increase opponents. They are provincial. They are as he was a year ago, guilty of "thinking the contents of their own minds to be the contents of the mind of the world." That is, they have assumed that other people love peace and have aggression as themselves. This gives us one clue to the need of preparedness. The people of the rest of the world are worse than we had supposed—worse than we are.

 This "provincialism" applies in another way to the more vital aspect of the president's case. The United States is in no danger of invasion.
