DEFEATED THE MARS IN SWIFT GAME FRIDAY The boys on the football eleven of the Wayne State Normal arrived in Wayne Saturday morning from LeMars, Ia., with their faces wreathed in smiles because they had won from Western Union college last night with a score of 7-0. During the first half of the game the wearers of the black and orange played only a very ordinary game. The LeMars team failed to run up a score of 7-0 with the beginning. However, at the beginning of the last half the Normalsites showed their prowess in several long end runs and heavy line smashing tactics they tied the score within a few minutes, but not content with that, they continued mugging astonishing gains and pulled down touchdown after touchdown until their score climbed to 27. So well did the boys hold the line that the Western Unionists were not even in dangerous distance of the goal posts during the latter part of the game. Coach G. E. Van Meter feels much gratified over this first victory of his team this fall, and he predicts that the Wayne team can add another feather to its cap after the clash with Buena Vista on Saturday, November 25. DEATH OF INFANT CHILD. (Continued.) Dora Marie Greer, infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Greer, died at the home of the latter, six miles southwest of Wayne, on last Friday of complications of the throat. The funeral was held on Sunday afternoon from the Presbyterian church and was conducted by the pastor, Rev. J. H. Reinken. Four members of Mrs. J. H. Wendt's Sunday school class served as pallbearers. Dora Marie was born on the 21st day of December, 1911. Her life was short, but the benediction of that little life is sweet and shall be everlasting. The illness that proved fatal came suddenly and was brief. A host of sympathizing friends weep with the bereaved parents in their sorrow and rejoice with them in the Christian faith that can overcome the grave. The baby wept: The mother took it from the nurse's And hushed its fears and soothed its vain alarm; And baby slept. Again it weeps: And God doth take it from the mortal's grasp and grief, and from the known harms, And baby sleeps. FATAL APPENDICITIS. The young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. J. Rewinkel died at the home at Columbus, Mo., following an operation for appendicitis, and the body was brought to Wayne Saturday by Mr. Revinkeli, S. D., in a visit at the D. W. Noakes home in Wayne, returned to Council Bluffs Friday afternoon. Mrs. Longeal left on the same train for Elgin to visit Mr. C. Y. Noakes. BOY HAS NARROW ESCAPE.

Pietze, Neb., Nov. 7.—Irvin Koltzman, young son of J. F. Koltzman, had a narrow escape from serious injury yesterday morning while riding on a pony near his father's farm, two miles north of this city. He had just gone over the Elkhorn river bridge and was turning off into a side road when his pony became frightened at some bridge building material piled at the edge of the bridge. An automobile driven by O. Henderson of Norfolk, who was accompanied by his wife and child bound for Creighton, came up at this moment and the pony jumped in front of the car. The animal was pinned under the auto, but the lad was thrown clear of the wreckage and received only minor injuries. The front wheel and steering apparatus of the auto was badly bent. The horse is still alive although it was under the car for some time.

All the circumstances look suspicious to the amateur detective.

DURO JERSEYS ARE IN THE LEAD AT SALE

Duroc Jerseys took the lead over Poland Chinas at Harry Tidrick's pure bred pig sale, on his farm, near Winslow, last Thursday. Poland Chinas usually keep fully abreast of the best-breeds, but in this sale more people present were interested in Durocs, and as a consequence they were in greater demand than the blacks. All of Mr. Tidrick's hogs were in fine condition—the best lot ever offered. Auctioneers D. H. Cunningham and Clyde Oman had charge of the sale, and Mr. Tidrick expresses himself as mightily well pleased with their services. The sale was snappy from start to finish. The thirty-two hogs sold at an average of $35. The top price was $59.

COST OF THANKSGIVING.

Norfolk Daily News: Thanksgiving day, November 30, is being discussed quite freely in Norfolk homes today. It is the cause of unusual worry for the housewife who is paying double the amount for some home necessities today than she paid a year ago.

But the poultry men have a cheerful message to give when they declare their belief that turkeys, ducks, geese and chickens will cost about the same this year as a year ago. The trimmings which go with the Thanksgiving dinner will cost a trifle more, but as a whole, it is figured by grocers and butchers that this year's Thanksgiving dinner can be purchased for about the normal price.

Manager Fishback of the Norfolk Poultry company, whose force is busy dressing fowl for eastern markets, has studied the present situation carefully. He believes that a later hatch of turkeys will be available in the fall than they will be more plentiful around Christmas and New Year's than they will be around Thanksgiving day. He predicts, however, that turkeys will cost around 25 cents dressed. Dressed chickens should not cost more than 18 cents. While no prices have been quoted on turkeys, Mr. Fishback's price prediction is confirmed by several other butchers who say 25 cents for turkeys, 17 and 18 cents for ducks and geese and about 16 to 18 cents for chickens will be about the price this year.

Cranberries sell two quarts for 25 cents; celery costs 5 to 10 cents a bunch; squash and pumpkin go at 10 and 15 cents; sweet potatoes at 5 cents a pound, about 1 cent more than a year ago. The remainder of the list however, has shot into the air and with Irish potatoes at $2 a bushel, the housewife will be kept busy figuring how to feed the hungry on Thanksgiving day at a reasonable expense.

DEATH OF SILAS R. BARTON.

Grand Island, Neb., Nov. 7.—Silas R. Barton, member of the Sixty-third congress, representing the Fifth Nebraska district, and the republican candidate for election to the same office at this election, in competition with Congressman Ashton C. Shellenberger, died suddenly at 11:30 this morning of acute pneumonia.

Mr. Barton closed his campaign in his home city last night with an open air meeting. Intimate friends had known that the severities of the campaign had previously affected his health, and during the past weeks he had upon several occasions been compelled to remain in his home for recuperation. The exposure of last night, he having stood with head bowed while addressing his home folks, is believed to have brought the fatal end.

He leaves a wife, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Metcalf of Omaha, and one son, Silas R. Barton.

Mr. Barton was born in Iowa, reared on a Hamilton county, Neb., farm, graduated from the Aurora high school and the Peru normal college, became a teacher, then a grand recorder of the Ancient Order of United Workmen, auditor of state for two terms and then congressman. He held the record in the congressional session of which he was a member of the most continuous attendance, and neglected his campaigning more or less without his organizing efforts.

Mr. Barton was in his 45th year.

SOUND ADVICE.

The Sioux City Journal offered this sane advice on election day: "The wise voter will let any bitter-spirited campaign be waged with partisanish noise out through his fingertips as he marks his ballot. Nothing is to be gained by nursing a grudge, politically or otherwise. The president who is elected today will have cut out for him one of the hardest tasks ever assigned to an American executive. He must deal with our foreign relations through a period of unprecedented international ferment. He may play an important part in bringing the world war to a close under the most favorable conditions for all concerned. Even with the best possible settlement the passions developed during the war will be slow in cooling. Both politically and commercially a tremendous game of international chess purposes will be played during the years to come. It is important that the American executive shall be able to play a strong hand in support of a carefully worked out policy for the conservation of our national interests. Whether his name is Wilson or Hughes, the president will have need of the cooperation of a patriotic people in the strenuous times that are coming. The president will hold office for four years. That he will strive earnestly to do what he believes best for the interests of the country as a whole will be admitted without question by most good citizens. Nobody is expected to give active adherence to a policy he believes to be wrong. On the other hand nothing is to be gained by academic opposition.

"While no particularly stressful experiences need be predicted for the next governor of Iowa, the sooner the rankings of the most pillifamous campaign within the memory of the oldest inhabitant are forgotten the better it will be for all concerned. Republicans and democrats, wets and dries, Harding men and Meredith men are going to live together and do business together during the next two years. Laws will have to be enforced. Roads will have to be improved. If a little more economy and efficiency can be introduced in the public business it will be to the advantage of every taxpayer. Boosting will be a more effective aid than knocking to the officer who is trying to do his duty to the public.

"Politics is as it is. When a fight is on one must fight with the weapons that are at hand. Anyway, one does. But it is foolish to keep up the fight after the issue has been settled.

"Let's all drop the hammers and try to get back to a neighborly basis."

SLIGHT EXPLOSION AT CAFE THURSDAY

The tank on the large coffee percolator at the Gem Cafe exploded last Thursday, causing damage to the extent of thirty or forty dollars. The fire caught on the wall and made some little progress before it could be extinguished. It is thought that water in the kerosene was the cause of the explosion.

UNCLE WALT The Poet Philosopher

SLUMP IN READING. We haven't time for magazines, nor patience with romances, for young ones and romances have altered circumstances. We used to sit before the fire, and read the story before the girls, and push sound-sounding books, and all that kind of thing. We read up Homer, Milton, Bill-oil Bill, the bard of Avon, and strolled our intricate minds through the pages of the books. The books got our extra change when we went forth a shopping; but now, when we go to the store, the books get our extra change when we are dropping. Ere I went out on gasoline, and tires and clutch and starter, I bought the works of some Greek and Bertha and Carter. I read all kinds of helpful ones, endorsed by church and college. I read the tales of Sherlock Holmes, and stored my mind with knowledge. But now my books have vanished clean, with all their luck. I had to go to the store for gasoline and inner tubes and castings. I gave John Milton for a tire, and Pope for a puncture; I go to see the priceless lyre, to buy gas, at this juncture.

LAST INVESTMENT. Before I buy my gasoline, I pay the grocer for his prunes, the druggist for his Paris green, the clothier for his pantaloons. I wouldn't touch any of my car, if merchants watched it, as it goes remarking. 'T would be better far, if he would pay us what he owes.' 'White something of the village street, behind the window steering wheel. I'd hate it much if I should meet a man I owe for buckskin seat. I'd better to drive in pump and state, across the market's paving stones, and run across some needy skate to whom I owe eleven cents. My car may not in consideration before I'll send it on its way, to meet the chap who sold me bread and had to whistle for his pay. I'll pay the butcher, the shoe, and the newsman for his magazine, the sexton for his hand made grave, before I buy my gasoline. I pay the butcher for his pig, the tinner for his soap tureen, the learned attorney for his legal before I buy my gasoline. I pay for soda, salts and a good supply of nicotine, for surgeons' saws and druggists' dope, before I buy my gasoline.

THE DEFEATED. Since all the campaign flags are furled, the hat spellbinder is belated, the latest thing in this world is one who was defeated. Until the last he hoped to win; now dearily he likes it, he wears a weird and warty grin, and would prefer to be like it. 'I did my best while in the game,' he says, his eyes a-brimming; 'there are no more spots of my name since in the south sea I was king.' Will he get back to honest toil, to wise and sane endeavor? No! One campaign slogan to spot a patriot taster. 'The last for office in his school he'll never quit his running, although he doesn't quit that whenever he goes running. To serve the dear old spanned flag, and serve the dear old spanned flag, for thirty years he'll keep the race on, for stumps and peeples. For weeks and months our many cars in traffic have been in the hands of the winners we have cheer, and grins for the defeated.

CONCEALED HINGES. Look at the hinges on any range, but the Copper-Clad. See how ugly. Now look at the knobs, the catches, lifts, rivets, bolts and nuts. You will find one of these things is a dirt catcher and a black, greasy coating and forms, greasy coating gradually forms. The Copper-Clad is so smooth you wipe it clean like a dish. You wouldn't stand for dishes full of corners, crevices, rivets and bolts, would you? When you buy a Copper-Clad you will be Range Happy. You will have the beauty and elegance of a brand name right in your kitchen.

AFTER THE FUSS. The campaign's done; those statesmen won for whom we have been rooting; the vanquished said the State Credit and raised their doubtful shouting. So let us turn to work and earn some good old honest guiders; work on with zest—let's force the best of which we are the builders. If we should wait till statesmen state our path to wealth and glory, we'll be obscure and sadly poor when we are bent, and hoary. If you depend, misguided friend, on government to aid you, you'll wear some mean old blouse for that sort of graft has made you. If you put faith in such a wraith as campaign vows and thunder, you'll see a fellow who'll go broke, while others nail the plunder. The easy skates hear candidates and think it's truth they're speaking, but all they see is just the play of trilled wands and mimicry. We have to strive to keep alive, and have our daily bread, and clothe the kids and buy them, and whatever state's our winner.

DULL CAMPAIGN. I wonder what's the matter! The statesmen rant and chatter, and yell and scream and yell; but no one seems to care. They are all so excited, and no one cares. We poor, downtrodden voters, are busy with our motors, for now the roads are grand, and the cars are barker to statesmen and their barken't perils in this land. The weather's most enchanting; so we go to the 'right' of 'rights'; 'oh, who would list to yawning, when autumn leaves are dropping, and sunshine out of doors; 'let's hear them, for here's our choo-choo boat. Who cares a prune or prism for this or 'other sin, since autumn zephyr blows. Our problems may be deeper—but since gasoline is cheaper than twas a month ago. The statesmen talk and twitter, but autumn zephyr is a critter who'll list to what they say? The roads are fine and sandy, the good in car is handy, and so we drive away.

PROMPT PAY. A man runs up a little bill, and when it's due he pays it, he coughs his money, he doesn't till, and no excuse delays it. Unlike the deadbeats and the bums, he makes a proper showing; he comes, he praises him, he's gone. This man, in season, needs reverse—as all men strike this purse, and that's it is his matter; the dealers say, 'buy all you wish, until your luck grows stable; we'll gladly trust a man, old-fashioned, who pays up when he's able.' Another man runs up a bill, he keeps it climbing steadily, when asked to pay, he says, 'if will, when I get good and ready.' Though he has roubles in his belt, and other roubles handy, he rather lose his feet, and rather than pay up like a dandy. And when misfortune does his feet, and wait has badly tramped him, and he has but a few cents in his pocket, the merchant will not aid him. If you are building in your town a bad pay reputation, some day that rep will knock you down, and hurt like all creation.

During the month of September 1887, 1,940,430 pounds were shipped from the Wayne stock and 430,000 pounds were received. During October of the same year, 145 cars of stock and grain left Wayne and 125 cars were received. Various other commodities were received here.

From Ponca Journal, November 10, 1916. On Friday night the severe storm swept over the county, doing considerable damage to stacks and groves. Mr. David Lampher, living five miles southeast from Ponca, burg, lost thirty tons of hay, and saved his house and stables with great difficulty. In the neighborhood of Longgrove the fire ran through a number of fine groves of timber, and killed a great many valuable trees. On the Daily the large grove of George Bolton was nearly destroyed, and numerous trees on the land of Mr. King were killed. Many stacks of grain and hay, and a few wheat stacks, were burned in the region traversed by the fire. Taken altogether, the damage done by the fire was considerable. The wind was blowing a gale, and Mr. Martin, who saw it, states that it traveled with the speed of a race horse.

A letter was a few days ago received by Mr. Hannant of Silverdale, in a region of the north, near Dayton, Washington territory, and who lately removed to that country from this. His letter bears date October 18th, and gives the following account of his trip, and of what he has seen since he arrived there: 'On the evening of the day we left Ponca we took the train at Omaha on the Union Pacific railroad for the west. Saw nothing of interest that night, except a severe thunder storm. For two days the country seemed to be one level plain. After we arrived at Sidney the country was more broken. We saw Pine Bluff and Cheyenne we had the first look at the grand old Rockies. After leaving Cheyenne, the next day we entered the Snake River, the greatest elevation on the whole route, being 8,242 feet above the level of the sea. Here we stopped while at night, and picked up a few specimens to remind me of the place.

The next place of note is Rawlins in Wyoming territory. From the time we left Sidney until we reached Ogden we saw nothing of any interest. In fact until we got to California we found it to be more of a desert than we ever expected to see. To make a long story short, eight days after leaving Omaha we arrived at San Francisco. The next day (Sunday) at 10 o'clock, a. m. we left for Portland on the steamship Oregon. We were sea sick for about twenty-four hours, after which we were all right. Arrived on Wednesday morning at Portland, where we stayed until the next day, and then left on the steamer, via the Columbia river, for Walla Walla, from there by steamer and train for Dayton.

As to this country, I have not yet been around enough to be able to say how I like it. But I will say this, it is a better country than Nebraska. Fruit, such as apples and all kinds of berries are abundant. Wheat is so far ahead of anything I ever saw. Fruit, such as apples and all kinds of berries are abundant. Wheat is so far ahead of anything I ever saw. Fruit, such as apples and all kinds of berries are abundant. Wheat is so far ahead of anything I ever saw.

I will tell you what I saw on Sunday up the mountain, 3,000 feet above where the town of Dayton stands. I saw wheat that went forty brush to the acre, and some that was sowed late for hay that would make twenty-five bushels for the acre. This sort of little corn raised in a good soil. Little as change here than in the states. Timber is cleared on the mountains, to fit them for use. Wood sold at $2.50 per cord. Washington stock, 1 cent per pound. I will be glad to hear from you, and you can apply and participate in any way you wish to know about this country.

Mr. G. A. Varnum has also held under $100 to appear and prosecute.

DO TO THE WAR. Omaha Trade Exhibit. Not a small part of the many advantages that have been made on all kinds of manufactured goods is due to the constantly increasing labor costs, and these costs are in a large measure due to the fact that the labor cost has been so far-reaching that all the advances on many lines and the cost of the aluminum of the country, especially of the eastern states, to be kept in the factories making goods for the country, have to be paid wages high enough to keep them on their jobs and to keep them away from the munitions factories where the work is of a different nature. In fact, just the other day one shoe company employing over 12,000 people had to raise the pay of their men in order to keep their organization intact.

Whoever is elected president will have the loyal and undivided support of American citizens.

Everybody will welcome close of the long, strenuous political campaign and gladly turn attention to other affairs.

When Wayne's business district has been paved, the distressing program of repairs and dust can no longer be carried out.

Christmas will soon be here, and preparations for the glad holiday season in our merchants' shops call attention to their Christmas stocks, and urge early shopping.

A book agent who intrudes and impudently insists upon an unbearable buttinski, and if he were caught on the tip of an iron boot and kicked into interplanetary space, would be a good deal better off than the book agent who is often out all right and serve the public well, but when they violently trespass on our patience, they become intolerable pests.

Wayne has a few well established and prosperous factories, but needs more of them. A new factory in prospect, and should be encouraged and secured if possible. It would add to the revenues of the county and surrounding country. It would afford employment to many hands during part of each year. Canneries pay elsewhere, and one would pay here.

It has been suggested that the election law ought to be revised to provide for the employment of two clerks for each precinct, so that the work could be facilitated and results obtained with less delay. One board could take charge of the vote, and the other could count them. When the polls closed, results would soon be known, and the expense would be increased.

We hope before another presidential election rolls around the crop of political orators available for Iowa and Wayne will have improved. The number of speakers of real merit representing either party this year, was small. In these days of constant advertising, it is not too much to expect a speaker to win attention and applause unless he is able to present facts and suggestions, concisely, clearly and logically to capture the interest, a man must have something to say and know how to say it. Ifly candidates who are paucity of ideas do not appeal to the thinking, discriminating masses.

Don't think you have most of the troubles in the world. There are plenty of troubles in your own town and no one should think he has a monopoly. No one can stn around with the idea that he has the biggest stock of troubles in the world together. And your troubles will not really amount to much. When you get a post of otherwise, it seems fresh to be the biggest one ever received, but on closer and more critical examination you will find that it is no so large and important after all. Imaginary trimmings filtered out of them, troubles usually become too small to be of any consequence, and temper imagination we should not calculate the idea that anybody is all bad or all good. We should not be suspicious of every one we meet perfection in anybody. No one is without some good, and the good should be appreciated, so it will grow and crowd out the bad.

Story of the Perfumes. Perla, saw the earliest development of the perfume industry. The priestess who, in the earliest times, used incense, knew the secret of aromatic substances and prepared them. She perfumes acquired great celebrity, especially those made in Alexandria. The Israelites during their sojourn in Egypt adopted the use of aromatic substances, and the perfumes were extracted from essences of trees and various plants. The Greeks loved elegance, were especially addicted to the use of perfumes, and they taught their secrets and usage to the Romans. The latter, in the days of decadence, went so far as to scent the folds of their robes with middle age the Arabs, Venetians, Genoese and Florentines became famous for the production of great smelling essences. France did not become acquainted with perfumes until after the crusades, and it was Maria de Medici who especially brought them into favor.

SAVE BY A WOMAN

An Episode of the Peninsular War

By ALAN HINSDALE

When the Duke of Wellington was fighting the French in Spain in 1809 to 1814, gaining one victory after another, naturally the Spanish people were in an unfeeling condition. In all countries when there is war there are persons who pretend to belong to one side and who are actually on the other, either doing secret service or partizan work or engaged in robbery.

Alfonso Fernandez, a youngster of the town of Madrid, the son of a Spanish grandee and highly educated. One day he was riding at the head of his men through a rural district when he saw a foreign spy about his neck. Fernandez, who commanded a small body of mounted men, would have arrested him at once. Sometimes he would attack a supply train of the British, then the very next day, when they were pursuing the French after one of their many victories, he would be found in the ranks of the English ranks enabling those Frenchmen who were unable to keep up with their retreating companions.

Dashing through the groves and up to the top of the Spanish grandee and highly educated. One day he was riding at the head of his men through a rural district when he saw a foreign spy about his neck. Fernandez, who commanded a small body of mounted men, would have arrested him at once. Sometimes he would attack a supply train of the British, then the very next day, when they were pursuing the French after one of their many victories, he would be found in the ranks of the English ranks enabling those Frenchmen who were unable to keep up with their retreating companions.

Colonel Villiers had sent his men to search the house, and when the man who had failed to search Donna Maria's room returned he reported that he had been prevented from doing so by natives of delacy for a woman who had been in the room. Fernandez got into the bed with his clothes on, and covered himself up. He had had blown out the candles in the room, and it was dark. She stood within the closet, the door open and the key from the outside of the closet door and put it on the inside, but she did not close the door.

"Give you your pistol?" she asked hurriedly. "Two of them." "Well, then I am an unmarried woman. It is not an insult for you to look for a man in a maiden's bed-room." "Certainly." "Well, then I am an unmarried woman. It is not an insult for you to look for a man in a maiden's bed-room." "Certainly." "Well, then I am an unmarried woman. It is not an insult for you to look for a man in a maiden's bed-room." "Certainly."

Colonel Villiers, eager to take the man who was annoying him, finally got a watch on the house Fernandez frequently expressed disapproval at the fact that he had not, after his men were away, pointing out how easy it would be for either the French or the English to take him while he was in the house. "If you are so anxious to leave her she was sure to ask him to take the risk just once more. Meanwhile Fernandez's band, under the leadership of his lieutenant, was harassing the French night and day. He knew that force was making all the trouble and it not being known that Fernandez himself was dwelling with his beloved, he incurred all the odious of these attacks. At this one of these attacks, when Fernandez visited a certain place made up his mind to take him there. He sent one of two expeditions there. The man who was with him was away with his troop. The Frenchman, not wishing to frighten the bird away, concealed the fact that they were after Maria, but they did not deceive Donna Maria.

and did not know in whose apartment he had been hidden. The closet door was locked, and he was in the dark. It was not long before the bedroom door was opened, and a woman came in there was a tread of boots on the floor. "What means this intrusion?" he heard spoken in a voice which he recognized as Maria's. "Hush, senorita," said the man's voice, "but there is some one in this house who is wanted—We must find him." "In a lady's chamber?" "Yes, senorita." "You mean that you regret to insult me?" "That is not intended." "You come into my room? When I am in bed and yet you do not intend to insult me?" "That is not intended." "You come into my room? When I am in bed and yet you do not intend to insult me?" "That is not intended." "You come into my room? "Certainly, senorita, provided the man is not some near relative." "There is no near relative of mine in this house. My father is at the capital. I have no brother. Would that I had to protect me from this lady." "Well, then I am an unmarried woman. It is not an insult for you to look for a man in a maiden's bed-room." "Certainly." MASTER AND MAN A Transformation Scene In Russia By F. A. MITCHEL

Count Merizak died about the time the nihilist movement started in Russia that movement which led up to the revolution and established the present. The count left an only son, Dmitri, who had but just come of age and inherited the title and a large fortune from his father...

Dmitri's views became known to his cousin Ivan Ivanovich, an unscrupulous man, who in case of Dmitri's removal would become heir to the Merizak title and estates. Dmitri was of a trustful nature and confided to Ivan that he was a member of a revolutionary circle, endeavoring to enlist his cousin in the cause of wresting from the czar his autocratic power...

Now, Dmitri's idea of the greatness of a count illustrates the adage "Put sugar on horseback and he will ride to the devil." Instead of utilizing his master's uniform kindness to him, he went to the other extreme. This was because he did not approve of a gentleman treating one of a lower station with any forbearance and feared that if he showed consideration for his master's "relatives" positions would be given away.

Iron, having possessed himself of proof of his cousin's complicity with the nihilists, sent an anonymous communication to the government that he would furnish evidence against a noble of treasonable talent on certain conditions. The matter stood between the writer and a fortune if he was convicted and deprived of life or citizenship the informer would expect the government to permit him to succeed in the enterprise.

When Ivan left the Merizak home Stephan showed him and saw him enter the office of an official who had charge of the secret police for that district. This was quite enough for the servant, and returning to his master, he told him what he had seen and to whom it was given.

with, who had expected to secure Dmitri's count. Dmitri, having all the money he wanted, lived in Berlin, Paris, London, Rome—nowhere but close. But one wants what one cannot have and the exile plied for his home and his true life. Stephan was the only person to rob him of his native land. Indeed, Stephan was a great enemy to him and Dmitri's gratitude to his rival was proportionate to the service he had rendered.

When the revolution came to a head, Dmitri was no longer content with his desire to return to Russia. But being probed, if he returned and was recognized he would not only be of no use to the cause but he would be in the risk of being sent to that dreaded Siberia by those who were doomed to work in the mines of Siam.

He decided to take expedient precautions till he had had an opportunity to look about him as a judge whether or not he could be recognized. He would take Stephan with him, of course. When he informed his servant of his intention, Stephan found that he could not dissuade him the valet proposed that after passing the Russian border, until they were satisfied just how dangerous Russia was for the count, Stephan should play master and Dmitri should play man.

Now, Stephan's idea of the greatness of a count illustrates the adage "Put sugar on horseback and he will ride to the devil." Instead of utilizing his master's uniform kindness to him, he went to the other extreme. This was because he did not approve of a gentleman treating one of a lower station with any forbearance and feared that if he showed consideration for his master's "relatives" positions would be given away.

When the ship began to pitch amid the spurious count bank upon a sofa in the cabin and began to abuse his supposed valet Miss Jaquelin's ideas of a proper consideration of servants by masters received a shock. All those who were present, however, were young and the young lady, pretending to mistake the count's valet for a ship's attendant, turned to the girl and said: "The valet, having noticed her favorably, was not slow to respond and devoted himself exclusively to the girl."

Dmitri said that he was bound by his master by bonds that he could not break. He was sure that this was some dark story connected with the service and begged to know what it was. Dmitri, in order to satisfy his curiosity, told him the whole truth to the count's elder brother, who had sympathized him so fearfully that he would not expect to be forgiven by his present employer without being turned over to justice.

The count and the valet were traveling. When the two men reached a point near where they were known they suddenly disappeared. The next morning he learned that the czar had granted the people a constitution, through a friend made overtures to the government for permission to resume his identity without fear of persecution.

One day Mrs. Henderson and her daughter visited the duma and saw the valet of their former traveling companion sitting among the members. Great as was their astonishment it was far greater when they saw Count Sergius Arkadyevich enter dressed as a lackey and respectfully hand his valet his mail.

References are made in some contemporary literature to the "horns of Venus," from which it is concluded by some that in the clear air of Mesopotamia a pair of horns were once seen. It was detected in early times without optical aid. Since Venus, when at a sufficient angular distance from the sun, is not to be lost to the glare of the sun, it is hardly more than half a minute of arc in diameter at the utmost.

"You raise their Money's Worth." "You can't standardize my business, old man," he says indignantly. "People like to have you go through a lot of motions when you are making a fancy drink."—Louisville Courier Journal.

"A. F. Allen, Managing Editor," "Either 'autoed' or 'motored' is brief and expressive, though, as the Journal editor explains, has not been accepted as correct usage. However, we can see no serious objection to use of expressive words in advance of their acceptance by so-called authorities."

LATEST REPORTS INDICATE DOUBT

(Continued from page 1.) lead, which was as high as 10,000 early in the day, steadily decreased as the vote from the rural districts came in. During the evening, Hughes took the lead with a small margin, and then the president shot ahead again, with less than a thousand votes.

Re-elected Sheriff Wayne County AS TO 'AUTOED' The Laurel Advocate last week called attention to use of "autoed" in the Wayne Herald, and accordingly Miss M. J. Porter, editor of this paper, wrote the editor of the Sioux City Journal, asking for information regarding use of both "autoed" and "motored" and the following response will be read with interest by many: "Sioux City, Ia., November 6, 1916."

"Answering your letter of the 3d inst, I am sorry that we are all out of Journal Style Books. However, I do not believe that the point you raise is covered in the book, except under the general rules laid down. Under these general rules, neither 'autoed' nor 'motored' is permissible, and neither term is used in the Journal by authority. If the terms should appear, it is because they have escaped the vigilance of desk men and proof readers."

"Both 'autoed' and 'motored' are yet vulgarisms. They have not yet arisen to the dignity of good usage. As yet they are but colloquialisms, or slang. It is quite possible that one course or the other will become good usage. Our language is in constant process of formation and reformation through usage. If the course is to be a good one, it will be long enough and it will force recognition and be admitted to the dictionary on an equal basis with the other part of the language. The people's will is supreme in this as in other things."

"You're hurt." "A. F. Allen, Managing Editor," "Either 'autoed' or 'motored' is brief and expressive, though, as the Journal editor explains, has not been accepted as correct usage. However, we can see no serious objection to use of expressive words in advance of their acceptance by so-called authorities."

AN OBSERVER WRITES OF ROAD IMPROVEMENT

A close observer who has traveled over the country, a great deal makes this contention: In the field concerning road improvement in this country.

During the past few weeks it has been my privilege to travel over our county roads both before and since the recent storm, and I have been given an opportunity to see conditions in a very commendable manner.

I want to make mention through my paper of road district No. 45 in Hunter precinct. Frank Larson is the road overseer, and in putting in culverts he has done the work in a very commendable manner.

Also south of Wakefield, I notice that the width of the grade and the placing of culverts have been done with a view to making them the people the best possible highway.

If the grade is properly kept up, if the culverts are good, and if the drainage is good, we understand C. John Johnson is the party who did the work, and it seems to me that his judgment is good.

FOR PERMANENT ROADS.

Lincoln Trade Review: Nebraska cannot longer delay in putting on a line with other states in the building of permanent paved highways.

According to the government census, the present population of this state is within one or two states from the bottom of the list. In every other way, Nebraska is at least on a par with the states in high percentage of production.

FARM BARGAINS

160 acres 7 miles northwest of Wayne, Neb. Call a dandy good quarter of land for a man who wants to raise a good bunch of stock; good lowland near water, good pasture, some alfalfa, all fenced, and cross-fenced; can give good farms. Price $50.

160 acres five miles from Winslow, good improvements, running water, good pasture, some alfalfa, all fenced, and cross-fenced; can give good farms. Price $50.

I have several other good bargains in 80, 160 and 320 acre farms, the kind that never go back on the owner. Don't hesitate to ask me about them.

Grant S. Mears

the have entered upon in good road building. Following the coming of the automobile, following more intensified farming, following the universal higher prices for agricultural products, the necessity for good roads over which to travel and over which to move the crops, has been steadily intensified.

The national government has outlined a comprehensive plan for the universal construction of good roads. They have supplemented these plans with a large appropriation and provided that these appropriations shall extend over a period of years.

Lancaster county can be at the front in this new movement. It can be among the very first counties to participate in the aid given to good roads and Lancaster county, as much as any county, needs good roads building.

There are always men who set their faces against public improvements of practically every kind. These are men who are content to sit idly by and rust from inactivity in public affairs rather than to be an aggressive element for larger things.

THE PRICE OF CORN.

Nebraska Farmer: To what ought to be the price of corn elms before another crop is in sight? The sale of a carload of old corn from Antelope county at $1.40 has caused much comment.

PROSPECT FOR OIL.

O'Neill, Neb., Nov. 6.—Three recent strangers caused some excitement here Saturday when they drove up Main street with a wagon load of oil prospecting paraphernalia. Later a party of duck hunters reported that they discovered a cylindrical hole in a sandy, dry lake bed somewhere in Carr's prairie, twelve miles southwest of O'Neill.

FACE BADLY BRUISED IN RUNAWAY MONDAY

Arthur O'Connell, son of Mr. and Mrs. M. O'Connell, who is employed at the Wayne Meat Market, was badly injured about the face Monday morning shortly after 10 o'clock when his horse becoming frightened at a piece of flying paper, in front of the Methodist church, plunged to one side, throwing the driver out of the car.

THIEVES VISIT AND ROB WRECKED AUTOS

Hoskins, Neb., Nov. 6.—An automobile coming from Norfolk to Hoskins Saturday night, driven by Fred Kraus, collided with the car of Charles Ohlund of Hoskins; who was driving to Norfolk.

THE CAR SHORTAGE.

Sioux City Journal: Interstate commerce is in rather a bad way just now, so far as the car shortage is concerned, because of the shortage of cars in which to convey products from their points of origin to the wholesalers or retailers to be passed on to the consumer.

Despite the efforts of the railroads and the commission, it is evident that cars cannot be put into use if they cannot be had, and the roads have been complaining for some time that they have not sufficient cars to meet demand and are unable to secure additional cars in time to relieve the situation.

INTEREST RATES.

Lincoln Journal: Professor Fisher, professor of economics in Yale university believes that after the war the prevailing rate of interest in Europe will be the rate of 7 per cent. Assuming that the leading nations will get through without bankruptcy, and no marked changes in immigration or trade relations will take place, he concludes the quickening of enterprise and invention following the war will create a willingness to borrow the money at much higher rates than prevail at present.

SLANDERING MOTHER EVE.

New York Times. Even a European war and a presidential campaign both at highly critical stages, do not command so nearly all of public attention that Vice President Marshall can or should expect the referendum he deserves for speaking of Eve as a soubrette. Of course there is nothing invidious or derogatory in this characterization of the common mother as she is, but to describe her as a soubrette and soubrette is to dishonor her and she often that everybody knows and almost everybody has said, anywhere from a hundred to a thousand times—Eve is not a soubrette. It is not only the accuracy of the name as applied to Eve that excites, instant and judgment protest, for ever there was a leading lady she was one and sufficient one ever played the role in a drama anything like as tragic as Eve's. And each criticism as Eve has received—there's no denying that there's no denying that there's been a lot of it much of it severe—has not surprised in the least, for on the canvas of art, the only canons, surely, that anybody who numbers her among historians has a right to apply are the standards of her life's status. As has so often happened on later stages, Eve was in every way a more attractive and more potent figure in the play than was the man who took the opposite part; Adam seems to have been a formal student of more than ordinary ability, knowing the name of any beast he saw and showing an intelligent interest in the acquisition and diffusion of general knowledge, but in comparison with Eve he was such a poor stick that only one reason for giving him a part so prominent in the dramatic life of Eden can be imagined—there was no one else to play it. That he is extremely ill has been a matter of common knowledge and agreement ever since. Even viewed as "support" he was quite beyond the pale of the play, and his intended inefficiency frequently gets unearned.

Eve had not one attribute of the sort which accounts she is beautiful, but never was she called "dainty," and there is no evidence that she ever pretended to be so. She produced colossal effects without the aid of elaborate scenery or costume, and she accepted and carried the heaviest of responsibilities.

"Soubrette," indeed! Mr. Marshall should learn the language of the stage before he uses it!

TO PRESERVE THE SPECIES.

Lincoln Journal. With the continued warfare engaged in scientific competition in the destruction of human life it is time that science were turning its attention to the preservation of the human species. Prof. Pinard of the French academy has led off in this direction. France has had a diminishing birth rate since the middle of the last century. Its population had become stationary at the outbreak of the war. Now with Germany engaged to the destruction of Frenchmen, even as French genius is absorbed in the killing of Germans, France's population will be depleted to the destruction of Frenchmen, even as French genius is absorbed in the killing of Germans, even as French genius is absorbed in the killing of Germans.

The professor's plan is to raise more or less children. He discovers that the most intelligent French families, in common with the same class in other countries, do not exceed their own. He believes the ones which most strictly limit their population output. This has led to the following reasons: Though all people do not want more children than they care for, efficiently and save a favorable start in life. Prof. Pinard will advise economic conditions so as to remove that obstacle as far as possible and then he will introduce agencies and the advantages of marriage.

This is one way to deal with a condition. As yet, however, we have seen no remedy which promised better results than the more fundamental treatment by prevention. If it were not for war and the threat of war, the professor would not be worrying about the birthrate of France. Beyond a certain limit it is not to a country's advantage, nor strength, except to have a large population. We accept the doctrine of Malthus that population tends to outrun subsistence and thus leaves a portion of the race in unescapable economic misery. And then we yell for higher birthrates and more misery. The excuse for this demand is that we need numbers for military defense.

It follows that poverty cannot be abolished until war is abolished, for under the war system nations must bear more children than they can find food for. Prof. Pinard would see on a more hopeful trail if he were devoting himself to preventing war rather than to contracting its results. Therein lies the real hope for the preservation of a human species worth preserving.

FOR WORLD PEACE.

St. Louis Journal. William Howard Taft, president of the League to Enforce Peace, has announced that the league will soon have the cooperation of a league program to bring about permanent world peace. President Wilson and Judge Hughes are both members of the league and a number of European states have endorsed its objects. It is by no means a partisan or even a national affair and the objects it aims to effect concern the whole world. Those objects may seem somewhat chimerical at this time, but in a large proportion of the world at war, but the fact that so many nations are at war and are experiencing the horrors and losses of war makes it more probable that when the great war finally ends, belligerents and neutrals alike will be glad to give a respectful hearing and a sympathetic consideration to the proposals of the league to prevent future calamities of the same kind.

THE FIELD OF BUSINESS.

St. Louis Post-Dispatch. An American who has undertaken to do a little business in the presidential campaign, taking only a preliminary interest in the election, finds no sign of the bull which usually precedes a popular decision as in political campaigns of the government. Neither does Wall street appear greatly excited over the possible effects of a pending decision, notwithstanding political arguments to the contrary. It is not surprising, however, that last week in the issuance of a number of New York bankers intended to disclose their opinion on the situation. The statement set forth that there is more money new in the country than is required for the legitimate needs of business. It was contended that the piling up of a huge gold surplus must serve to inflate prices and invite unwise extension of credits for speculative purposes. It was urged that foreign business should be done on a credit basis and that the gold which is hoarded here and can only serve as an embarrassment. The statement was made in a tone that is to be expected of the New York bankers' advice was in line with sound international economy. It can readily be seen that the United States would be only causing trouble for itself and for other countries by cornering the world's gold supply. Accumulating gold in the United States would be proportionately mischievous in the long run. Negotiations for a $50,000,000 loan to Russia, which have been hanging fire for three months, have finally been completed. Steadily mounting prices apparently will not serve as a tonic to current business, though they have caused more or less alarm among consumers whose incomes are not so large as to enable them to meet the increasing cost of living. The most serious disturbance in the commercial field has been caused by a shortage of new cars that has become more and more serious in consequences. The price of automobiles in all parts of the country is high, and the difficulty of their delivery. In New York the advance has been practically 100 per cent since September. The rate of increase is resorting to drastic wage demerage charges in the hope of speeding up the release of cars. In other cities, however, the rate of increase aggregated $5,366,352,324.
