EDITORIAL MEETING IS HELD AT NORFOLK Twenty-five editors and publishers, members of the Northeast Nebraska Editorial association, met in Norfolk Friday and Saturday of last week in the regular semi-annual session. C. E. Nevin, president of the association, called the meeting to order in the city Commercial club rooms shortly after 2:30 o'clock on Friday. After the minutes, read by Secretary E. O. Gardner, had been approved Editor F. D. Stone of the Hartington Herald read a paper on "Newspaper English" which will be given in full in this paper. Editors Carlton of Oakland and J. A. Stahl of West Point led in the interesting discussion that followed the paper. C. L. Caswell, state secretary of the Press association of Iowa, sent a paper outlining the advantages of a paid secretary, which was read by A. H. Backhaus. Several editors objected to this plan of a "farm demonstrator" for newspapers on the grounds that he could not help the publisher most in need of help and that those who were already pursuing progressive methods would therefore have to bear the brunt of the expense incurred. Vice-President Gass of Revena supplemented the Caswell's paper, by explaining the plans that had been made for helping the publishers of the Nebraska Press-association. He urged closer organization and the adoption of the paid secretary plan. An excellent paper, prepared by Mrs. Weekes of the Norfolk Press read by Miss M. V. Dugan. Among other things she pointed out that announcements of marriages should be made two weeks prior to the ceremonies. At 6:30 o'clock the editors were entertained by the Commercial club at a banquet served at the Oxford hotel. Harry Carpenter of Omaha was present to discuss the problem of the high cost of paper. He stated that it was indirectly due to the war in that it was almost impossible to get adequate supplies to sulfite, which comes chiefly from Norway and Sweden. Several editors entered into a discussion with Mr. Carpenter at the conclusion of his paper. At the morning session Saturday J. A. Stahl conducted a lively round table discussion, which continued from 9 o'clock until the noon hour. In this way the editors continued to improve methods being used by fellow workers in other towns. This helpful session closed with the election of officers as follows: President, A. H. Backhaus of Pierce; secretary, O. E. Gardner of this place. The other two members of the executive committee for the coming year are J. A. Stahl and C. A. Marshall of Nebraska. At this closing session it was also voted to hold the next meeting of the association in Lincoln in response to an invitation made the preceding afternoon by E. W. Huse, who together with E. O. Gardner of the Democrat and Miss Marguerite Forbes and Miss Elizabeth Burrie of the Herald staff was in attendance at the meeting. FARMERS' UNION MET LAST FRIDAY NIGHT A majority of the members of the Farmers' Union met on Friday night at the Pleasant Valley school house last Friday evening in business session. Comfort in a Good Smoke When the day's work is done, and you nestle back in your house slippers to read the evening paper, is there anything more gratifying or satisfying than a good smoke? Or, when company comes, doesn't it make you feel hospitable to be able to "pass the cigars"? Especially are you proud when the cigars are GOOD cigars—cigars that just suit the taste and have a pleasant, fragrant aroma. Just such cigars are the kind made by Wm. Dammeyer's Cigar Factory, just west of the Herald office. Popular Brands: Luxus, Lincoln and Keystone

Are You Taking Slow Poison? You are, if you are breathing air that passes over foul and decayed teeth, and swallowing pus and other poisonous secretions from such poison. Should of course, you laugh at the idea that such a little poison should affect your health. One branch of our medical profession believes that "the effect" of this is true, and hundreds of thousands of intelligent people believe it is the constant taking of the small doses of this poison from your teeth, is certainly dangerous. Again, poison taken in this way has a cumulative effect. The effect is hardly apparent at first. Slowly almost imperceptibly, the strongest constitution. The poisonous matter impairs the digestive organs and the stomach breaks down; the poisoned air constantly breathed into the lungs weakens them, and they become an easy prey for tuberculosis. This is not a fairy tale. It is a scientific fact. The only logical way to get rid of this slow poison is to have a person who stops to consider every glass of water, every morsel of food, every breath of air, and the beginning of which was caused by decayed or diseased teeth. If your teeth are not in perfect condition why run any risk? See a dentist at once. Dr. F. O. White

THE WAYNE HOSPITAL'S FINE RECORD

One Hundred and Twenty-Eight Operations Successfully Performed.

Record Covers a Wide Range of Complicated Cases. Advantages of a Home Institution Manned by Home People. The Home Surgeon Will Be Careful and Painstaking.

When a little more than nine months ago, the present Wayne hospital lodged on the north side of Main street, it drew the enthusiastic friends and sanguine supporters, little dreamed of the phenomenal success it was destined to make. Nine months are not very long. It was hardly expected that in that short time the institution could get fairly started. At the end of the first year it should be paying expenses it would be counted a marvelous success. Outstripping the expectation of its founder, it has been a success from the start and has proven that Wayne needs a hospital and that Wayne people appreciate a home institution.

HOSPITALS BELONG TO THE AGE

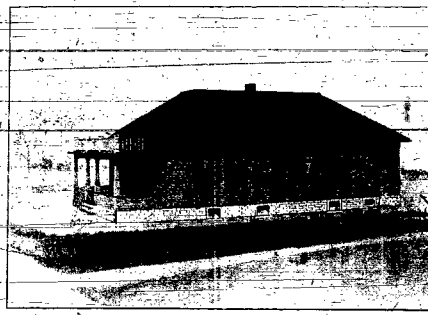

We are living in an age that has produced and perfected the public hospital. The mighty progress of medical science has mounted its course by the erection of hospitals in all large cities, and in almost all small towns. In former generations men and women were exposed to the ravages of an excessive mortality and thousands and thousands of lives have been forfeited because physicians knew not remedies and surgeons were unskilled in either internal or external operations. Half a hundred years ago men did not know that cutting out the appendix might add an appendix of several years to life. We know today that such is the case. We know today that literally thousands of men and women are alive because of some surgeon's skill.

THE DEMAND FOR A HOME HOSPITAL

When hospitals first came to be public institutions and likewise public necessities, the fad was to run to the hospital of the big city. The big hospital doctor built up a reputation on the volume of his business rather than on the large per cent of his cures. Time and volume of business would both combine to make him callous and indifferent, not careless, a stranger to his patients, never expecting to see them again, it is not to be presumed that he would be as interested in his case as the home-town surgeon. It is not to be expected that a patient can receive such personal and special care in a great hospital where hundreds are coming and going all the time, as in the little hospital at home where the surgeon is a neighbor and the nurses have time for the personal attention, begotten by friendship.

THE RECORD HANGS OUTSIDE

The record of a local hospital always hangs on the outside. They can cover up nothing if they should try. Everybody in town knows what is going on on the inside. They know who goes and who comes, and what was done, and whether the results were satisfactory. In the city hospital you never know that the

First Building Outgrown. The New Building that will take its place, the Last Word in Small Town Hospitals morgue wagon has backed up to the back door (it is always the back door) for you do not see it come or go and it is never paraded in the news columns of the dailies. At home it is different. No home-lamps are thrust under bushels. Nothing is covered up. Wayne hospital throws its doors open and invites inspection. The surgeon says come. The nurses say come and everybody in the wards say come, and so according to scriptural construction it is arranged that who so ever will may come and see for themselves the care, treatment and equipment.

HOME IS BETTER FOR PATIENTS

At home the patients are with friends and neighbors as well as with their own family and relatives. They are never lonely, some nor homesick. Countless little courtesies are extended at home that the big city knows nothing about. The family can hear every hour of the day or night without additional cost when the patient is resting. It is fine to be at home.

The writer hopes that if he is ever "opened up in the mid" that it will be done among friends and by those who will have a personal interest in putting all the bones and parts together according to the original pattern.

A NEW BUILDING COMING

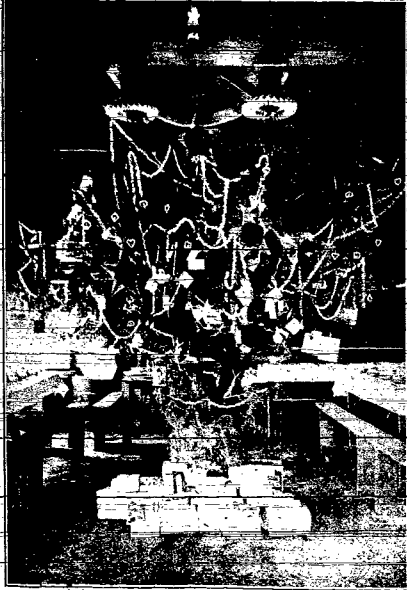

During the brief months the Wayne hospital has been operating it has outgrown the initial building and a new structure is being planned, as was announced in last week's Herald. This building will be the last word in small town hospitals. It will have larger rooms and more of them. The operating room will be a wonder of antiseptic equipment and modernized conveniences. Wayne needs just such an institution and will support it with the support it justly deserves. The new hospital will be a blessing to the sick and afflicted. We have a competent surgeon and a splendid corps of nurses are contributing their share of skill and attention, but we need larger quarters. As it now stands patients must await their turns and delays are often dangerous. The bigger building is coming.

NOTE THE RECORD ON THIS PAGE

On this page, and hereto attached is the nine-month record of our home hospital. Read it carefully. Note that it has had an exceedingly wide range of complicated cases and a uniform success. One thing that contributes to the wonderful success is the fact stated before that the home doctor or surgeon has vital concern in the successful operation as the patient. He cannot afford to fail, and so as not to fail he will be exceptionally careful and painstaking.

NOT THE ONLY ONE
There Are Other Wayne People Similarly Situated.

Can there be any stronger proof offered than the evidence of Wayne residents? After you have read the following, quietly answer the question.

Mrs. Ira Hoshaw, Wayne, says: "I was confined to bed for several weeks with a severe attack of grip. Upon recovering I found my kidneys had become weakened. I was in great suffering from sharp pains across the small of my back. My head throbbed for hours at a time and I couldn't rest well at night. Doan's Kidney Pills removed the backache and my kidneys were strengthened. In three weeks all symptoms of kidney trouble had disappeared." Almost six years later on July 15, 1916, she added: "Doan's Kidney Pills which I get at Foster's Pharmacy, keep me in good health by driving away any signs of kidney trouble I may have." 50c at all dealers. Children Will Be Grateful

In later life if you have taken pains with their teeth during their early years. It is comparatively easy to encourage the proper spacing between the teeth in babyhood and childhood, and thus build the foundation for an attractive set of teeth in adult life.

AS TO BABY TEETH

It costs only a trifle to have cavities of baby teeth filled, whereas if you pull each tooth the moment it starts to ache the gums shrink away before it is time for the second tooth to appear. In such a case the new set of teeth is likely to be irregular and unsightly.

CLEANING TEETH

Insist that your children thoroughly brush their teeth at least once a day. But that is not enough. Their teeth need a cleaning such as only a competent dentist can give at least once a year. The small sum this costs will save you money in the long run. Ask anyone who has followed this plan for several years.

HARTINGTON EDITORS' NEWSPAPER ENGLISH

For example I may say that so far in my newspaper career I have managed to keep fairly true up on my paper bills, that I have never yet been obliged to ask for credit, and except in that which comes through the legitimate channels of the county printing, and that, as was widely announced through the press at that time, a few months ago, I thought and at least partially paid for the amount of debt now I admit that any editor who has these things to his credit in these strenuous days of the high cost of living must be a good deal of a success as a business man.

"But business is not all. The commercial side of the newspaper profession is important, just as the mechanical side is, but there is another of even greater importance, and that is the literary side, and the mention of the literary side of newspaper work suggests the thought of Newspaper English.

"Now, a high literary standard in a newspaper calls for the use of good English writing, therefore, a subject before us today becomes intensely interesting and important.

Newspaper English, it seems to me, is a peculiar language—it is something that does not come from the other end from the street language of the schools, and on the other, from the language of the street. It embraces the worthy elements of both—it is very much like life—it portrays real men and women, it describes real things, it depicts real emotions—it is thrilling, pulsating, gripping, gripping. As was said of one of the world's great authors, if you cut the words of a good newspaper writer, they will bleed. It is not a language to be learned by a slavish copying of models, but a language which is spontaneous, and comes pouring forth from the mind and heart of the writer to describe scenes, depict emotions, and to tell the truth in the words of honest, grand news paper English can never be acquired in the schools, although the schools can help tremendously—but it must be acquired near the busy world of men and women, where the great tragedies of life are enacted, and where one comes into daily contact with the things that are real.

"As a language of the great understanding, characteristic of good Newspaper English?
"Well, in the first place, it seems to me that Newspaper English ought to be simple. Simple words make the mistake, in striving after a good English style, of using ornate and verbose expressions. This may be better than employing the language of the street to convey one's thoughts, as other writers do, but it is a mistake. The more simple the words are which one uses to convey his thought, the more effective they are. I do not believe any one can acquire a first class newspaper style without some knowledge of the so-called dead languages, but the real reason for this is that the Anglo Saxon tongue, Simple words, such as can be easily understood by a child, are the ones that should be used if one is to develop a vigorous and graceful style as a newspaper writer.

"Secondly, it seems to me that in striving to cultivate a good newspaper style, one should always aim to use words that are concise. Conciseness adds strength to the written word, and the epigram lingers long after the verbose and voluminous sentences have been forgotten.
"The more concise and terse our English is, the more effective and forceful it will be.

"Thirdly, newspaper English ought to be pure. There is nothing more beautiful in this world, nothing more charming, nothing more effective than a fact, a thought or an idea couched in pure English. The more one is able to express one's thoughts in our selection, and how earnestly we ought to strive to attain a newspaper style that will be beautiful and forceful because it is pure.

"And finally, newspaper English ought to be expressive. Some words are more expressive than others, just as some faces are more expressive than other faces, and in developing our style as newspaper writers, it is always our privilege to choose the most expressive words. There is no language written at random, and no writer is capable of expressing many delicate shades of meaning than the English language, and it seems to me that every writer ought to seek constantly to employ those words which are the most expressive and precisely express his ideas. Do not just words in some secondary or far-fetched significance, but use the words which, in their original and primary meaning, express exactly what you want to say, and having said it, stop. Let every word and every sentence be freighted with as much meaning and as many thoughts as it is possible for them to have.

"In conclusion, then, let us inquire how one may become proficient in the use of good newspaper English, and how he or she may gain that command of a terse, vigorous and attractive style which will make his or her influence felt in the community in which the newspaper circulates.

"In answer to this question, I would say, first, that I do not believe there is any short cut to the attainment of good newspaper style. Proficiency in the use of newspaper English, like any other accomplishment, comes only as the result of long, arduous and laborious effort and while the high advertising correspondence courses in English, and the schools of journalism may help some, the goal can only be reached by the hard work of every day.

"The matter is that the only way to acquire a good newspaper style of writing is to study the best models, and then to strive for perfection in every paragraph and in every sentence and every word. If the writer will familiarize himself or herself with the great classical authors until he or she becomes saturated with their style and with their language and then if he or she will glow into the market place and mingle with the men and women there, study their problems, share their perplexities, get close to the great, beating hearts of humanity until his or her own heart is bursting with its message, all that will be necessary then will be to open to paper, and to pour to the world something that will stir the world.

"Newspaper English is not a stilted, artificial accomplishment, a meaningless array of words to be recited together in prosaic form, but it is a vital, living, graphic vehicle of dynamic thought which is heavily freighted with a message for the day and age. Only when we realize this, and when our fundamental truth will be able to any degree to acquire that command of newspaper style which we aspire.

"Men and women of the editorial association, and all others who are gathered here today, may I bring this paper to a close by pleading for a higher ideal in newspaper work. Let us get away from the idea that journalism is a mere sordid trade, the significance of which is expressed in a cast system, and begin to reach out after that conception of it which places it on a level with the highest and noblest callings in

A Home Meeting.
Thursday evening, January 18, the P. C. B. club held a "Home" meeting at the home of Gladys and Owen Jones. After their members had responded to roll call with a "home" quotation an interesting program was given consisting of a paper, "Royal Families of Today," by Blatny Jones, and a paper, "Homes of the Future," by Mrs. Peterson. This debate followed: Resolved that the home has more influence on child life than the school. The affirmative side was supported by Harold Woods, Ian Reed, and Owen Jones; the negative side by Mima Morris, Darwin Jones and Olgen Jones. The affirmative side won. The interesting arguments on both sides were given. Dainty refreshments were served at the close of a pleasant evening.

Contract Is Let.
The meeting for the opening of bids for the Wakefield drainage ditch was held Tuesday morning at the Farmers' National bank office rooms according to schedule. Thirty representatives from large contracting firms were present to submit the bids of their companies. Engineer Roy Towl of Omaha compared the bids carefully and the contract was let at his recommendation to Polhard & Campbell—Omaha firm. Their price was $5.66 per cubic foot on the main ditch and $10 per cubic foot for each of the two laterals. Engineer Towl states that work will be commenced as soon as the frost is out of the ground. The ditch will be eleven miles long, running along the valley south east is.

The work was completed here April 18, 1918. Those bidding on this job included: Sternberg Bros., St. Louis; Russell; Condon; Omaha; R. S. Morrow; Omaha; I. H. Boyer; Omaha; The Moffett company; Des Moines; Horton & Mosely, Chicago; Pollard & Campbell, Omaha; Fred M. Crane Co., Omaha; H. J. Whitney, Sioux City; E. D. Barr, Pottersville; Michie; Ed. Peterson Co., Omaha; W. E. Callahan Co., Omaha; O. P. Herrick, Des Moines; and S. O. Briggs Co., Omaha.

School Items.
The exhibition of football in the double-header game between Carroll and Wakefield last Friday evening, was well worth seeing. The boys' game was especially well matched, and if the Carroll boys had played as consistent a game during the first half as they did during the last half, the score would have been a different one. As soon as the score seemed to lose their luster in the last part of the game, although Helen Collins, used spectacular tactics all during both halves, Clarence Swanson did the stellar work for the home boys. The scores were: Boys 26-23, and girls 22-8 in favor of Wakefield.

Fifteen of the high school students took teacher examination last Friday. Miss Amelia Lundahl and Miss Ina Luedberg, teachers in the rural schools, also wrote on the examinations and Miss Bessie Stormont did work for her life certificate. A big crowd of boosters is expected at the skating rink tomorrow night at the basketball game. The Wakefield teams have been winners so far. Help them get another victory.

Sales Lively.
The farm sales in the vicinity of Wakefield this winter are drawing big crowds of men who are not afraid of bid and bid fast. Tuesday afternoon J. M. Bradford, living four and one-half miles south of town, who is moving to Montana this spring, had a very satisfactory sale with Col. W. H. Neely on the block. An exceptional record was made at the Frank Hanson sale last week when forty pure bred Duroc Jersey hogs were sold in sixty-five minutes by Mr. Neely. Mr. Hanson has added a big new building to his convenient set of farm buildings.

The Habit of Taking Cold

With many people taking cold is a habit that starts in the ear and is easily broken. Take a cold sponge bath every morning when you first get out of bed—not ice cold, but a temperature of about 50 degrees. Also sleep with your window open. Do this and you will seldom take cold. When you do take cold take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and get rid of it as quickly as possible. Obtainable everywhere.—Adv.
