Mrs. Marie Weekes in Norfolk Press: Norfolk, Nebraska is truly a wonderful city. Norfolk, one of the towns visited the past week comes nearer being a Norfolk than any other town we have visited unless it be Wayne both here and there.

Hartington Herald: The ever-active and resourceful editor of the Wayne Herald is developing a new feature in his paper—advertising. The community is being kept advised of the farm write-ups and farm ads last year, written by a specialist, and he found the idea so popular that he is now expanding it by employing a "cheap" young man to write the copy for the entire time to this branch of the business. This young lad, who writes under the pen-name of Jean Coates, has studied at Columbia university, and shows great aptitude for her work. We predict that this new field of newspaper advertising in which Editor Huse is a pioneer is destined to become a most important one in the near future.

Hartington Herald: One thing the writer observed at the editorial meeting at Norfolk last week was that some of the people who had made the most conspicuous success in the newspaper business in the last ten years are generally the most modest. They know their strength and the knowledge gives them self-respect and poise, while the individual whose position is precarious and shaky, is loud noise in order to divert attention. For a time, this may produce the desired effect, but the facts soon become manifest, and then the noisy boastful individual becomes the object of ridicule. There is only one thing which really ever gains and holds the admiration of our fellow men, and that is the actual ability to deliver the goods. The person who can do that need not use a megaphone.

ANOTHER BLIZZARD HELD BOARDS SUNDAY

The weather turned up again Saturday night, and by Sunday morning had a full-blown blizzard. The snow was blowing in gusts, and the only way, and people ventured out only when necessary, but it was only a one-day storm—a Sunday special—and Monday morning the elements were calm and warm.

Norfolk Daily News, February 5: Train service on all lines in the Norfolk territory was resumed on normal schedules Monday morning following a terrific blizzard which raged from midnight Saturday until late Sunday evening. Trains on the Rosebud line of the Northwestern railroad were held up by the snow. The high wind was reported to have blown in a snow drift. A snow plow was expected to break through six-foot-deep drifts between Bonestell and Wymore before noon Monday morning, and that line was expected to be open before night. A snow plow was pushing through to Norfolk over the M. and O. line from Sioux City and this line, which has been closed since Saturday evening, was expected to be opened by early Monday afternoon. Trains on other lines were on schedule time late Monday morning.

Storm Comes Up Sudden

The storm came up suddenly just as the sun was shining brightly, and strong that some of the most substantial houses in Norfolk shook. A fine drifting snow and temperatures ranging from 12 below zero in Norfolk to 15 below in Rosebud, accompanied the wind. In an instant the Norfolk territory was in the grip of the worst storm of the year which was especially serious because the territory was just recovering from one severe blizzard which had been followed by a day of comparatively warm weather.

A QUEER SENSE OF VALUES.

What can be of more value to the individual than their own physical person? Why is it that all kinds of money on clothes, on furnishings, on decorations, on home, on the care of their most precious possession, their own person? Especially is this true when it comes to the dentist. Some things don't seem to realize that once their teeth are gone, they are gone for all time. And in most cases it is so easy to save them. Just a little watchfulness and a visit to the dentist at the proper time. And when the visit is made it should not be made to a "cheap" dentist. Some things dental work is one of them. How ridiculous for a man to pay fifty dollars for a set that will not last him a year, and then look for a dentist who will make him a "bargain rate" on fixing his teeth, which must last him the rest of his life. He is soon sorry of his bargain, and he has to undergo the pain and expense all over again.

The high wind quickly filled the railroad cuts with the fine snow and almost immediately after the storm reached Norfolk it was reported that train service was badly hampered. It was the first time this winter that the Northwestern road was compelled to use snow plows in the Norfolk district.

The clear weather prevailed over the Norfolk territory Monday morning, temperatures ranging around zero.

IS STATE HOUSE FALLING.

Lincoln Journal, February 4: A fresh alarm was spread at the state house Saturday morning when large window glass in the office of the state board of control cracked with a loud noise of some sort resembling the bursting of a bomb. The noise was heard by members of the board of control who were sitting near the window at the time the glass broke. The glass is supposed to have been cracked by a further settling of the east wing of the state house. This is the most recent evidence of the settling of the wing. In years past the settling made a big crack in the plastering in the board's office rooms, but for several seasons no change has been noted. The greater part of the settling shows on the south side of the wing. The board of control has office rooms on the north side of the wing in the east end.

When the crash came members of the House of representatives, directly above the board, were pledging their allegiance to the United States in the event of war with Germany. As the south and a portion of the east walls and floors in this chamber it is believed there is absolutely no danger of the floors of representative hall or other floors in the east wing dropping out of sight even if the south walls should fall outward. The south wall at the top of the wing is about seven inches out of plumb.

NEIHARDT VISITED IN OMAHA RECENTLY

Omaha, Feb. 3: Poets who fear the high cost of white paper might do well to follow the example of John C. Neihardt, Nebraskan and a writer of verses. His first poem was written on the back of a horse blade and singularly enough the poem was "The Song of the Hoe." Neihardt was in Omaha recently and he recounted the story of how he came to write his first poem. He is now living at Bancroft, Neb., where most of his verses which have been published quite extensively were written. In fact it was at a meeting of the local Fine Arts society which asked him to read from his own writings, that Neihardt came to Omaha.

He was in his garden one day, Neihardt says, cutting some weeds. The swish of the hoe through the grass and earth inspired him. Never before had he attempted a line of verse; but under the spell of the moment he took a stub pencil from his pocket, sat down on the ground and on the back of his horse blade composed the verses of "The Song of the Hoe." This was later published unchanged in form from the original, in an eastern magazine.

Other inspirations for poems came from digging potatoes, from skating on the creek on his farm, from falling through the ice, and other incidents of life on the farm. He has written quite extensively of both poetry and prose and has sold a number.

Farming, however, is his business, writing only when inspiration comes from some incident of his daily life.

The Biggest Factory

On the farms of the United States, there are over six million factories, one to each farm and sometimes more. If you were asked the name of the biggest factory and its product, you would name everything else but the kitchen—the Four Facies.

Mr. Farmer goes out and scratches the ground a few days in the year and Nature manufactures crops for him. This is the raw material.

Mrs. Farmer every day in the year, two or three times a day, actually manufactures or converts these raw materials into food, so Mrs. Farmer is the biggest manufacturer the world knows.

All on farms; all working every day.

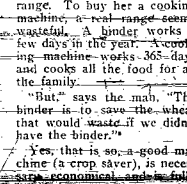

A New Machine

Mr. Farmer requires dozens of expensive machines to produce the raw material, but Mrs. Farmer is often expected to convert this raw material into the finest food on an old out-of-date rickety, rickety range. To buy her a cooking machine, a real range seems wasteful. A binder works a few days in the year. A working machine works 365 days and cooks all the food for all the family.

"But," says the man, "The binder is to save the wheat that would waste if we didn't have the binder."

Yes, that is so—a good machine (a crop saver), is necessary, economical and fully justified, but don't forget that

From People You Know

Ames, Ia., January 31, 1917.
The Wayne Herald,
Wayne, Neb.

Dear Friends:
No doubt I could have answered your request with a far more interesting letter had we still been residing in Winnipeg, Can. However, I do not believe enough people know of a wonderful opportunity is offered to young people here in Ames and perhaps I can do a little missionary work right here close to home rather than writing news of a far country.

First, I do want to tell you how glad we are to be back under the stars and stripes. I don't know how many dear friends here know that they have lived only another one, even though it be only sixty-five miles from their own border. We received news of this position here about the first of August and a month later were looking for a home in Ames.

The fact that people do not know what is really here has brought home to me recently. We had relatives from the southern part of the state visiting us about two or three months ago. It was their first visit to Ames and naturally we had to show them the college. They were home-satisfied. "We knew there was a fine college here but had no idea it was so pretentious," was their first remark. In other words they had been misled. They would build such an institution and just within a hundred miles from home.

Perhaps after all that pride I can tell myself that I am just a little bit better off than I was when I left home. The people of Wayne may save over a day or two with us when they are on their way to Chicago or some eastern place.

There is more than appropriately located two miles from Ames proper, and a pretty stretch of woods lies between. The grounds cover one hundred and eighty-five acres and the entire college is included in nearly fourteen hundred acres. The buildings are not crowded together, but are given plenty of room to show off their beauty.

The new buildings, the administration and agricultural halls, are built of light gray limestone at a distance of a thousand feet apart. In season the space between is a veritable sea of green. There May festivals, the commencements and such ceremonies are held. Huge trees, prettily shaded lanes and perfect drives are a part of the plan. It has been called the most beautiful college campus in the United States.

There are forty-five commodious buildings besides the twelve houses, the buildings for the student chit-chat and work. But these are not too many to teach the boys and girls from all over the United States, and yes they come from all corners of the globe. For the most scientific methods of agriculture, veterinary science, engineering and home economics.

The enrollment this year nearly reaches the three thousand mark and there are over eleven hundred freshmen alone. Students have to work too for we have a reputation for it and they don't slip there in any and every sort of way. The boy or girl who isn't here for work doesn't generally stay long.

The students are naturally the life of the place. About one thousand in our midst, we can not live here long without imbuing their spirit. Just now they are enjoying a short vacation between sessions and this week the annual corn show and farmer's convention is being held. About thirty-five hundred farmers, farmers wives and boys and girls have enrolled for a week of study and they are taking advantage of the splendid lectures given by many prominent men and women brought here especially to them. No doubt the majority of farmer fathers and mothers like to keep in step with their sons and daughters who are studying the scientific way of doing things and here this week they are given the opportunity.

Professor Churchill's work has this winter taken him away from home a great deal. At present he is out lecturing with one of the week short course crews. The extension department has three crews at work over the state taking the college to the farmers. Each crew consists of a lecturer in home economics and her assistant, one in animal husbandry, one for farm crops and soils, which is Mr. Churchill's time, and a young man who assists the two latter. As they generally take along a car of stock they have a man to look after that. The crews start out the last of November and are gone until March staying week in a town. A great deal of interest seems to be aroused in the communities visited for they are eager to learn something new and to solve their old problems if possible.

As you are probably beginning to believe, I think I am acquiring quite a knowledge of farming, but how could I help it when I have a farmer husband and live in a place like Ames? Sincerely, Edna Nerly Churchill.

SUPPORT IS PLEDGED BY NEBRASKA HOUSE

Lincoln, Neb., February 4. With every member standing on his feet and joining in the singing of "My Country 'Tis of Thee," the Nebraska legislature has today adopted a resolution emphasizing an earnest desire for peace, but pledging to the president the undivided and loyal support of every citizen of Nebraska. The resolution, which in whatever measures may be found necessary to maintain the rights of Americans, the dignity of the nation and the honor of the United States.

The singing was led by Minority Leader C. Petrus Peterson of Lancaster county, and was heartily joined in by every person present, including the men and women in the gallery and the lobby. Jerry Howard followed with a recitation of "The Star Spangled Banner."

On Friday Representatives Lenar and Lampert introduced a resolution, which read as follows:

"Recognizing the intensity of the war spirit and the delicate position in which our president is now placed, the legislature of Nebraska, in behalf of the citizens, petition the president and congress of the United States to maintain a peaceful attitude and tranquility of our nation. And that whereas it is deemed in the end only means untold suffering and will lead to the humiliation of the human race."

The Hoffmeister-Amends.

"As supporters of the action of the president in severing diplomatic relations with Germany reached the house, it halted in the consideration of bills in committee of the whole. The speaker resumed the chair and Representative Hoffmeister and Peterson moved that the Lenar-Lampert resolution be called up and that following amendment be made to it: "Be it further resolved that while we are earnest in our desire for continued peace we do as representatives of the state nevertheless pledge to the president of the United States in the crises at hand the loyal and undivided support of the entire citizenship of the state of Nebraska of whatever political party, of whatever hue or place of birth, in whatever measures may be found necessary to maintain the rights of Americans, the dignity of our nation and the honor of our flag."

This was the signal for a series of bursts of oratory in which the members pledged their individual loyalty and that of their constituents to the president in whatever course he deems necessary to defend the flag. The house suspended ordinary routine business for an hour while Germans, Swedes, Danes, Irishmen, Englishmen and Frenchmen pledged anew their allegiance to the land of their adoption. At 11 o'clock the house adjourned till 1:30.

tive German, took the floor to explain the purpose of his amendment. "It is with a sad heart that I introduce this resolution," he said. "Blood ties in the old country are dear to me. Fears flowed freely when I visited the old home scenes a number of years ago. But, gentlemen, this is my country. If I must, I shall give my boys three stalwart six-footers to defend my flag. We must all stand together in this crisis. We must rally to the support of that man of sorrows in the white house."

Representative Peterson said: "During his four years of office we republicans have felt entirely free to discuss and criticize the actions of our president. But now as Americans we have only one feeling—that of loyalty. And I know that I am voicing the sentiments of not only the republicans of this house, but of the entire state and nation when I say that not one of them now remembers any political affiliation. For the honor of our flag we stand behind the president to a man."

Representative Lampert, one of the authors of the original resolution, said: "I—as an American will stand by the president. We must all stand together."

Representative Fuller, a veteran of the civil war, said: "I know something about war—from my own experience, and I appreciate its awful significance. But I don't believe there is a man here who would embarrass the president in this solemn hour."

Representative Thomas said: "The president has done everything possible to keep us out of war; no man could have done more."

All Stand by Flag.

Representative Saxe said: "I also was born in Germany. But when I landed in New York at the age of fourteen years I was born again. And now, no matter what happens, I stand ready to protect the stars and stripes. Republicans, democrats, socialists, prohibitionists—men of all political faiths and creeds—will rally to and die for that flag."

Representative Taylor said: "As I sit here before me, Mr. Saxe thought came to me that men who, like myself, are unable to trace their ancestry to any European country can be commended for their patriotism at this hour, but the man who comes directly from the old country and makes such a pledge places the plane of patriotism above everything else possible."

Representative Anderson of Boyd said: "I have three boys of mature age. One of them has served in the United States marine corps, and I am proud of his record. All these boys I offer to ray country. I myself am not too old to go to the front." Not Too Old to Fight. Representative Lemar said: "My people came from France. I am just as ready as any one else to lay down my life for my country. I have passed the age of three score years, but am ready to go at any hour or any minute."

Representative McAllister told of his boyhood days in Ireland and of his willingness to go with the others to defend his adopted land. Brief speeches of similar import were made by Nelf, Dorsey, Norton, Reitenrath, Cronin, Richmond Greenwalt (whose father was a major in the German army), Radke, Olson and Belinger.

Wanted Warning Issued. Earlier in the morning, before the news of the diplomatic break had been received, Representative Olson offered a resolution asking the president and congress to warn Americans to keep out of the war zone and thus avoid the risk of complications. The resolution was laid over.

Resolved, By this legislative body, that we earnestly ask and memorialize our congress and president to ward American ships and American citizens not to enter into the war zones and that we will not be held responsible for those who willfully and deliberately do so.

Resolved: That a copy of this resolution be transmitted by the chief clerk to the president and the Nebraska members in congress.

People who don't like cold weather are cheered by the suggestion that it is healthful, being a cure for many diseases if it is carefully taken.

When Wayne has been paved, it will be desirable to do the first paving in rural districts in the direction of the grounds of the proposed county club.

We understand both town and country will be invited to cooperate in promoting a healthy country club with suitably equipped grounds east of Wayne. It is a worthy enterprise.

We understand that W. Shakespear is getting a little peaked over the way the Wayne Shakespeare club, which is now studying Spanish explorers of North America, is neglecting his masterpiece.

That part of the state house occupied by the board of control was thought to have been tumbling one day recently, but the board exercised its authority and was able to control it and it didn't fall.

February promises to be the hardest month in the history of Wayne county weddings. The county judge has plenty of marriage licenses left, and ministers will work over-time if necessary to meet all demands.

People who have been stranded on account of delayed trains, may be cheered by the reflection that it took the children of Israel forty years to get out of Egypt and into the promised land. It is only by contrast that one can fully appreciate his advantages.

If we were strictly orthodox, we would believe in view of the condition of the world at this writing that it was about ready to come to an end. And in view of the way troubles are multiplying we believe most people would be willing to have it come to an end and try their luck elsewhere.

While the literacy test as an additional restriction on immigration is contrary to the former policy of this government, it will encourage foreigners who desire to come here to make their homes, to secure preliminary training essential to citizenship here and enable them to better understand and meet new responsibilities.

Some members of the legislature are indulging in a little of the old game of mixing into the question of rebuilding the capitol, a proposition to remove it to a more central location. Of course, it will save in Lincoln, but agitation to hunt it out to some other point in the state is always received when improvements are considered and then Lincoln, though reasonably sure of holding the seat of government, always sits up and anxiously looks around.

The oldest inhabitant may justly throw back his head and exclaim with a feeling of pride in the contrasting present-day railway service with that of the early days. A three-day lizzard with astronomical drif, in pioneer times, caused severe delay just about whether did not tie up trains as it does now. The first settler has good reason to regard with discouraging comparison the feeble railroading that has been the vogue this winter.

A normal child, no matter how much parents love him, may have for his parents, would not allow an insane father who had become desperate, to destroy his family and himself, wreck his home, ruin his treasure, and put to naught his present blessings and future hopes. Exactly in line with that suggestion, American citizens of German birth who are now being slaughtered from the fatherland, even though taught at its knee and in love with its traditions. Thus, it is not surprising that Germans everywhere are quick to announce their undivided loyalty to the stars and stripes, and their readiness to fight if necessary for their adopted land which has protected their families and fortunes, and which guarantees to them and theirs the highest type of government. Germany doesn't want war with the United States, nor does the United States want war with Germany, but it comes as an inevitable outgrowth of international complications which cannot otherwise be settled, all will be found united to uphold the present position and to sustain the nation's honor and security. The United States represents an admixture of all nations. Here all have found equal protection, equal opportunities, equal privileges, equal blessings, and here all, without regard to nationality, will act as one in defense of the majesty of the law and the solidarity and integrity of the nation. In such union, spirit and in fact, rests future strength and future freedom.

LITERACY TEST NOW A LAW.

Omaha Bee: By substantial votes in each branch of congress the literacy test has been given the force of law by the German vote notwithstanding. This means that we have now adopted a wholly new policy with respect to admitting foreign-born immigrants to our country. Up to this time we have held out an invitation to every able-bodied, mentally-sound man and woman promising to become a useful, self-supporting addition to our population to come and help us develop our vast natural resources and share in the liberty and opportunity of our great republic. We have shut the doors against the physically unfit, the defectives, the criminals and the anarchists, the paupers and the assisted immigrants likely to become public charges, but now, for the first time, we will insist upon ability to read and write as a prerequisite to admission.

How many this literacy test will exclude no one can tell, but we do know that had such a test been applied in the past to any thousands of men who have made good, and the parents of many thousands more who have made good in a still more conspicuous degree, would have been excluded. The fact that congress has overridden the veto in no way makes less cogent the reasons the president gave, repeated from veto messages of previous presidents, against the enactment of the law.

Though the Bee believes the literacy test ill-advised and wrong in principle, we do not expect it to have serious effect, not even to satisfy the extreme restrictionists. Old world educational opportunities have improved wonderfully and are bound to continue to improve so that fewer and fewer of their youth, ambitious enough to learn to read and write, will be denied the chance. Again, the whole status of population movement and immigration legislation is likely to be rejudged as a consequence of the present war—we hope in the direction of greater facility and greater recognition of individual freedoms. In the play of these new forces, our immigration policy will have to be made to fit.

LEGISLATURE ACTS ON WAGE QUESTION

Lincoln, Feb. 6.—Legislation to fix a minimum wage for female workers completed the first half of its course with the passage of H. R. 34 by Howard, in the house this afternoon. The senate will act on it. Many members gave explanations of their votes for or against the bill.

It provides that regular adult workers shall receive at least $1.50 a day—apprentices and learners, $1.25 and girls under 18, not less than $1.

The Greenwalt bill to relieve new branch line railroads from operating passenger trains, passed by the vote of 42-40.

Another measure, which got through on third reading was the Reneker bill, H. R. 37, for standardized grape baskets after October 1, 1917.

Lincoln, Feb. 6.—Turning cow pastures into pleasure grounds for city folks did not appeal to some of the members of the legislature when the Thomas and Waite came up for discussion. It was sought to provide that the city man could condemn land for picnic grounds and turn it into a park. This provision was killed. The bill squeezed through. The bill aimed at itinerant physicians who guarantee cures and take the notes of their patients before the treatment is given, finally got through committee of the whole.

Postpone Salary Bill

County assessors who joined in an attempt to get their salaries raised now know how it feels to go up against the legislative buzzsaw. The committee on fees and salaries reported their bill, house roll No. 199, by Seudder, for indefinite postponement. This bill would have raised the Lancaster county assessor $1,800 to $2,100 and other counties $100 or $200 each.

The bill boosting the salaries of the registers of deeds in Lancaster and Douglas counties from $1,500 to $1,800 and their deputies from $1,500 to $1,800 was amended to cut out those increases, but the committee reported in favor of raising the copyists and other assistants in the office from $80 to $100 a month.

County judges were bumped by the committee in recommending for passage the Fuhs bill reducing their schedule of fees for handling estates. The bill as amended also cuts down the fee for adoption papers from $8 to $2.

An increase from $1,000 to $1,500 in the salaries of supreme court judges' stenographers was approved by the fee and salaries committee. The bill on that subject being recommended to pass.

Bethlehem's Bid on Shells for the United States Navy

To the American People: The Secretary of the Navy has awarded contracts amounting to over $3,000,000 to Bethlehem Steel Company for the manufacture of shells for the Navy because of very much lower prices offered by the Bethlehem Steel Company than by any other bidder.

Two years ago we took contracts to make 4,200 14-inch shells at a price of $1,215,000. Up to now we have made shells for the Navy at a price of $1,000,000. This has been accepted by the Government, although we have expended in wages, materials, etc. on these shells a single dollar on each shell.

In addition, a sharp interpretation of the law has been made in the purchase of shells. In the light of our experience, and having no other basis, we bid for shells approximately the same rate per pound as that which the Navy Department actually paid a heavy shell contract one year ago.

WOMEN SUFFRAGE UP IN NEBRASKA HOUSE

(Lincoln Journal, February 4.) Limited suffrage is in immediate prospect for the women of Nebraska. Saturday afternoon's action of the lower house may be taken as a criterion. With only four negative votes—the Norton bill, H. R. 222 providing for such suffrage, was advanced to third reading after a debate in which only one of the participants dared raise his voice in opposition.

The proposed law is virtually a copy of the Illinois statute which has been in operation for several years as well as of the recently amended North Dakota statute. It would allow women to vote on all except state constitutional offices. In other words, candidates for the presidency of the United States, municipal offices and all county offices except that of county judge will have to submit to the decree of all the people rather than half of them.

In moving the passage of his bill Representative Norton related that woman's suffrage by the different states was endorsed at the national conventions of both parties last summer, that it already has been adopted in a number of states and that limited suffrage has been adopted in a number of states and that the argument that women do not want to vote, he quoted figures to show that in Oregon, Kansas and Washington the total vote has been nearly doubled since the women have been allowed to participate in the elections.

Representative Reifenrath was not readily opposed to suffrage, but he thought women had something else to do besides flock to the polling places. Women has a divine mission to fill, he said. The hand that rocks the cradle rules the world.

Women Have Enough to Do. Woman was created to civilize and humanize mankind, said Mr. Reifenrath. She is the uncrowned queen of the home. She is responsible for the religion and the patriotism of the country. She gathers about her knee her little brood and teaches them their simple prayers. It is at the mother's knee that men learn the principles of justice and righteousness. It is there that they are inspired to become great statesmen. The influence of a good mother is deeply imprinted on every one of us. But she has enough to do in tending to her children without trying to exercise the right of the ballot. There is too much of the present-day tendency to try to legislate morality into a people. It can't be done whether the women are voting or not. The great and good men should be allowed to legislate, and if they are granted the privilege the political result will be practically the same.

In reply to this argument Cronin said the mothers would be better enabled to protect their children if allowed a voice in the selection of officers charged with the enforcement of laws pertaining to those children. He wished he could vote for a constitutional amendment extending to the women full rather than limited rights.

Olson said every man present believed in self-government and, that being true, they should extend self-government to women. Taxation without representation is wrong. The women are taxed, but are not allowed to say how their money shall be expended.

Jerry Howard favored the measure. At this occasion to hurl a few javelins in the general direction of the best trust.

Ollis said: "This morning an impressive scene was enacted in this house. A group of men stood and said they would shoulder muskets and go to war if necessary to protect the honor of their flag. They offered their sons and their families to the same purpose. The women of Nebraska have sons. We men give the president of the United States power to take away those sons and send them against a foreign enemy. The mothers should have as much to say as the fathers in picking the president who will call our sons in this way."

Have Proved Their Intelligence. Lemar said he would like to see the day when a dozen women were holding seats on the floor of the house. Tracewell said the women have proved their intelligence and should be given the vote. Regan said he couldn't be present when the bill went to third reading, and so he wished to place himself on record in favor of the bill this time.

Shaw of Douglas county said the constitution allows men who haven't been residents of America for more than six or seven months to come to Nebraska and vote as soon as they have declared their intentions of becoming citizens. He wanted to know if there was any justice in allowing such men to vote and at the same time barring the intelligent and cultured women of the state.

Greenwall, veteran bachelor member, took the floor upon calls for him from all parts of the house. He replied to Reifenrath. He told how proud Reifenrath recently was when he became a father, and now he asked if that proud father cared for that worthy mother to become cannon food fodder for the guns of war. The gentleman from Custer added: "If Europe had the mothers that America has, there wouldn't be any war over the globe today."

Reifenrath came back with the statement that if the welfare of the nation depended on the ballots there would be no food for guns.

Flansburg offered an amendment providing that those foreign-born persons who have allowed seven of their second papers to be declared ineligible to vote unless they begin all over again and take out their first papers declaring their intentions to become citizens. He said that there are 15,000 or 20,000 voters who are not patriotic enough to take out their final papers.

Norton was opposed to any such amendment. It was afraid it might bring about the defeat of the whole bill. Howard said that was the purpose of the amendment. Flansburg said the bill would merely double the number of voters. He said there was no occasion for interfering it. The amendment was voted down.

That paved the way for the original motion to advance the bill to third reading. Four or five men voiced a feeble protest—all the others shouted an affirmative. Throughout the proceedings a delegation of ten suffragists looked on from the rear. Included in their number were Mrs. Wm. H. Reifenrath, Lincoln, who is registered with the secretary of state as a lobbyist for the equal suffrage association. The house Friday morning passed a measure barring all women from the executive gallery during its actual proceedings. When it came time to bar a woman, however, no one had the heart to do it. Mrs. William Boyer Davis and Mrs. W. E. Hardy are also registered as suffrage lobbyists. Mrs. Hardy is in Hawaii and Mrs. Davis is in. Mrs. Barkley was content to leave the hall sitting without attempting to button-hole any of the legislators. Mrs. Will Jay, Mrs. Mamie M. Clafin and seven others who, like themselves, are not registered, had seats on the floor of the house.

The suffrage leaders were jubilant over the result. While they realized that such a decisive majority would surely be expected, when the roll was called on third reading some time this week, they felt that their worry was over and that, as far as the house side was concerned, the bill would be no longer about the result. What the other branch of the legislature would do with the measure was not so certain.

For a Shorter Ballot. Three other bills were passed during the afternoon. H. R. 193, by Taylor, Fries, Dorsey, Bates, Peterson, Fabis, Reinken, Cronin and Ollis, was taken up where the house left off in the morning when the news of the diplomatic break with Germany had brought the committee of the whole session to a sudden close. The bill provides that, instead of having the names of the presidential electors appear on the ballot, the eight electors for each party shall be designated by their names and shall then be appointed by the governor. In place of their names the ballot shall contain the names of the presidential and vice presidential nominees. The bill providing to take one step toward shortening the ballot. Upon motion of Dorsey the bill was amended to provide that the governor should designate the electors for the presidential electors vote to Washington, and thus do away with the all day effort to choose this messenger such as took place in Lincoln the first of the year.

McAllister did not like the idea. He said such a plan would be favored by Alexander Hamilton but would be frowned upon by Thomas Jefferson. He wanted a more direct method of selecting the electors left with the people rather than delegated to state conventions. Cronin said McAllister should acquaint himself with modern history. The 1916 electors were selected by the state central committees, he said, and those committees were not nearly as representative as the state conventions. Fries expressed the hope that the measure of the bill was to shorten the ballot, and Radke said electors were mere figure-heads and meant practically nothing any more. The vote in advance to third reading was unanimous.

CAN RAISE BIG ARMY IN NEBRASKA IN MONTH

(Lincoln Journal, February 4.) War clouds caused no excitement at the office of the state general adjutant, Nebraska national guard Washington advices indicated that in the event of war, the guardsmen and regulars will form the nucleus for a national fighting force.

General Phil Hill was reported to be in Fremont looking after stables for the thirty-two government horses which the Fremont signal corps is expected to bring back from the border this month. It was pointed out that because the threatened international crisis assumes serious proportions these horses may never reach Fremont and the Fifth Nebraska regiment, which was expected to start home Saturday from Llano Grande, Tex., may not be mustered out for a long time.

Major R. H. Hessel, former assistant adjutant, and now on duty mainly at the arsenal building, was reclining in the general's chair. He was not excited. He said: "If there is any war, I am going home to take care of my boy."

Lincoln generally was not ready to believe that dispatches from Washington indicate that the situation in Europe is so serious that business men were inclined to attend to business, reading the newspapers to grasp the latest developments concerning the break in diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany.

Groups around the stock quotation boards at commission houses, at the stock exchange and in quotations about 11.30 a. m. "If there is a call to actual service, Nebraska can furnish 75,000 good men in a month," said Assistant Adjutant Charles Steele. Every man of the Fourth regiment will enlist or nearly every one, at the first call. The reason there was so much trouble getting men to go to the front was a slow down. Business men were inclined to attend to business, reading the newspapers to grasp the latest developments concerning the break in diplomatic relations between the United States and Germany.

BREAK WITH GERMANY

Omaha Bee: The United States is the most cosmopolitan people on earth—the only nation in the world whose inhabitants are a mix of the people of all other lands. At the same time the United States is the most notable example of the cosmopolitan character of the population elements of old-world sons and daughters remade into true Americans and reinvigorated with a single inspiration of devotion to this new and free common country.

The most noteworthy, but in no way remarkable, feature of the present crisis is the spontaneous and unanimous response from every corner of the country, backing the president in the course of action he has taken to maintain the nation's honor and rights as a neutral.

The pledge of loyalty to America first may be uttered in many tongues, but the words all have the same meaning. When it comes to a stand against a foreign political aggression, differences are sunk and partisanship laid aside.

The American motto is not a mere high-sounding phrase, but a living fact. "E Pluribus Unum."

America's Answer.

Lincoln Journal: Germany did not think England would fight in 1914. Hence it consented to Austria's bringing on of the war. A government capable of that mistake may have thought that America would take no energetic action when Germany essays to cut it off from the seas.

The president has given the German government a chance to reconsider its mistake before the die is cast. He has dismissed the German ambassador and called home the American ambassador. This is a cutting of acquaintance, but it is not war. The rest is left to Germany.

The president's speech to congress traces past steps to show the necessity of this action in view of the facts before him. But it discloses the president still hanging, by his eyebrows, as it were, upon the possibility and hope that the Germans may come to their senses before it is too late. He refuses to believe "that it is the intention of the German authorities to do in fact what they have warned as they will feel at liberty to do."

Such is the cause America and the neutrals will be fighting for if, unhappily, they must fight. Never was a nation more reluctantly drawn into a conflict of force. The United States has had to endure, through two years of provocation as few nations have ever shown. It has been patient at the cost of much bitter criticism from a part of its own people. It has been the only present drastic action only on being forced to consider the probability that it is not rational men it is dealing with, but a hierarchy perverted by power and a philosophy madly maddened by the crumbling of their hopes into running amok on the public streets of the world.

Chicago Tribune: The severance of diplomatic relations with the imperial German government brings our country to the brink of war. It has been the earnest desire of the American people that our peace should continue and the whole nation shares in the wish and hope expressed by the president that the ties of friendly intercourse which have long honored us to the German people may not be broken. Nevertheless, in the grave and deliberate action taken, our chief executive may rest assured of the wholehearted support of the nation. All differences of opinion, all doubts and hesitations are resolved in this.

solemn hours, and all Americans stand today at the president's shoulder in patriotic union and unflinching devotion. The president and the nation have devoutly desired peace. But they will as resolutely enter upon war if that alternative is thrust upon them. They have now before them one clear duty. It is to prepare for that alternative. The time for reluctance and delay is past. The time for action is at hand.

The severance of diplomatic relations is not war. But history warns us that as between great nations it is the virtually certain prelude of war. We must realize that whether it shall be in this instance is now wholly without our control. It is for Germany to cast the die, and if we are not fully blind we must believe the conditions of the world conflict are such as to offer us little or no hope the die will be cast for peace.

We desire peace. We hope for peace. But we must prepare at once for war. To hesitate and postpone now would be criminal folly, folly because it would ignore the lessons of experience and the plain dictates of self-preservation; criminal because if war comes every hour of delay, every compromise, every vigorous preparation, will be paid for in the unnecessary and unprofitable expenditure of precious American blood.

Our conscience is clear as to the issue. It cannot be with all our might to meet the issue. Congress and the government must realize that this responsibility is now upon them, and man them alone. However the American public may have contributed in the past to the procrastination of its representatives, the responsibility for delay must now be borne by congress and this responsibility government assists for it and must be faithful to the trust. The time for action is here. The government must act.

We had a fleet of sixteen battleships and sent them round the world in 1907. Now our fleet numbers only thirteen. The authorized strength of our navy is 400. We are 2,000 short of that number. In case of war we shall need probably 150,000 men for the navy.

The naval militia should be mobilized immediately to meet our pressing deficiency and assigned to duty on ships. The ships and submarines now building should be pushed to completion at the highest rate of speed. All the resources of all shipyards, public and private, must be utilized, with three shifts working twenty-four hours to the day. Plans for expansion of these facilities should be formulated.

The naval board and the general staff of the army should present plans for the mobilization of naval and military forces at the earliest possible moment and legislation framed by experts should be passed without debate or amendment by the civilian congress to place these plans in immediate operation.

The problem of developing our maximum resources of equipment, munitions, and supply should be taken up at once. The great leaders of the various industries that will be called upon to provide our navy and army in war should be summoned to Washington, and organized in an industrial general staff to coordinate their efforts. The government should see that all necessities are supplied promptly and continuously.

Modern warfare is a gigantic synthesis in which confusion, maladjustment, and delay mean cruel waste of life and may mean defeat or utter ruin. If we are to enter the world war it is imperative that we should meet its standards of efficiency and concentrated power. The records are before us. The methods have been worked out by other governments which have preceded us in the conflict. We owe it to our country and to every man we call upon to fight for her to stimulate all our resources of brain and material and to place them at the disposal of our navy and army on the highest level of our efficiency.

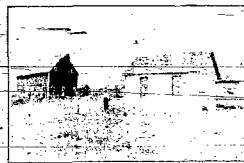

America United.

Norfolk Daily News, February 5: The people of the United States without regard to place of birth or sympathies in the present war will stand by the president. We do not see the step he has deemed necessary to take. This can be stated without equivocation. There may be differences of opinion as to the necessity of the present drastic action, but now that he has entered upon this, these differences must be put aside and the nation must stand behind the administration. This is not only the duty of the American citizen, but the course best calculated to prevent the present deplorable situation from becoming markedly worse. No American who has the best interests of his country at heart will fight for her to go over the submarine issue. The surest factor in preserving peace is national unity. A divided people is sure to become involved in a situation which it is helpless to escape. A true course. In the face of present peril there should be no doubt as to where the public stands. This, however, is not a justification for the present course. Calm deliberation should precede every step and no move toward actual hostilities should be taken until every possible means consistent with our honor and rights has been taken to avoid this extremity. There should be no attempt on the part of our leaders either in congress or out of it to force the president into precipitate action. Mr. Wilson has indicated that before going to the extreme limit he will again appear before congress and make a public statement of the case confronting him. This is what he should do before plunging the country into a war which could mean nothing less than widespread suffering and calamity.

President Wilson by temperament is a pacifist and his course in the past has indicated that he will go to all reasonable lengths to avoid war. But it should be borne in mind that it is no less the duty of the other elements of our population to avoid harrowing the feelings of these of German birth by injudicious and unstrained utterances. We are all one in a common loyalty to the flag. Let us therefore be considerate of one another's feelings.

SALESMANSHIP CLUB IN REGULAR SESSION HELPFUL REPORTS GIVEN

The Psychology of Attention Subject of Talk Given by Dean Hahn—Open Discussion

At the regular meeting of the salesmanship club at the library Tuesday evening a majority of the prominent business men of Wayne entered into a lively discussion of the application of suggestion to salesmanship.illard Tompsett gave a brief resume of an article entitled "Making Sales by Helping the Buyer." He showed how the thoughtful traveling salesman will try to get the mental picture of both time and money. In short he must not only think with his customer, but must also take the initiative to help him at every turn of the road.

William McEchen followed with a discussion of the subject "How to Handle a Dissatisfied Customer." He cited misrepresentation in advertising, poor salesmanship in order and the use of over-puffed guarantees as the bases for most complaints. In connection with this discussion the merchants cited specific cases of disgruntled customers.

One case a lady bought a set of salts and peppers and after four years brought them back to exchange for another instance the same party brought a dozen cups and saucers on various occasions and each time returned them, explaining that the pattern was not what she wanted. It later developed that each case the lady had been hostess at a party. The merchant suggested that he would gladly rent her dishes for any parties in the future. In summing up these specific cases Dean Hahn, who presided, emphasized the importance of leaving the right kind of an impression at the time the sale was made. Another big factor to success is to overcome the sentiment for the methods of the firm and to create personal prestige by making a multitude of friends.

The last half hour of the meeting was devoted to the subject "The Psychology of Attention as it Pertains to Salesmanship," which was discussed as follows by Dean Hahn:

"Psychology as it pertains to our knowledge comes originally from sensations. If so, then the act by which the mind sifts the offerings of the world is an important factor in the sales act and behavior. This act of selecting one's sense impressions is called attention. When we learn that attention is the preparation of nerve tract for action, we at once see its bearing on salesmanship. Attention is the first act in the buying process.

"By natural selection man has been made sensitive to certain qualities of sense materials that offer itself for selection. What are these attributes of the stimulus to which man is sensitive? If it suit his purpose, the salesman must think of 'goods' and 'skill of salesmanship' instead of 'stimulus.' He must keep in mind, also, that attention results in action that has for its purpose adjustment to the stimulus. The first of these qualities to which man was made sensitive is the intensity of the stimulus. For survival he needed to become sensitive to the sounds, bright colors, strong odors, severe cold, burning heat, severe storms, while less intense stimuli were less dangerous and failed to attract attention. The size of the stimulus is a secondary attribute that might mean danger and, therefore, needed attention. This principle is used in the display of goods and in advertisements. A third quality that attracts attention is the contrast of the stimulus with its surroundings. The new and unusual stimulus, also, needed attention for survival. This has many applications in salesmanship. The fifth and last attribute to which man is sensitive is a change in the environment. A change in the environment of early man usually meant trouble and hence had to receive attention. The salesman who understands these conditions knows how to secure the attention of the prospective buyer through the control of the 'goods' or through his skill of selling.

"But the salesman can, also, secure the attention of the customer by appealing to his hereditary disposition and natural interests. Human nature must be explained in terms of individualistic, parental, social, artistic, intellectual, and moral religious impulses. An appeal to any of these is bound to secure the attention of the individual. Not only these but the experiences and ideals and habits based upon these natural impulses are a large factor in the control of attention. It is thus necessary to know more or less of the history of the individual to get all the possible control over attention.

"Then one must learn to hold the attention after it is secured. If secured through the stimulus the salesman must keep the attention in order to continue. Attention stops when the adjustment is made to the stimulus.

experiences to the habitual inclinations. As the material interest will not only draw the attention but will also hold the attention. The larger the group of associations which the salesman can bring up, the greater the chance that the customer's attention will remain with him. Each of these associations is a starting point for possible action.

Applications of these principles to salesmanship will be worked over more definitely in the next discussion.

FEET AND LEGS FROZEN

Fremont, Neb., Feb. 6.—With his feet and legs frozen so badly that amputation will probably be necessary and his arms frozen below the elbows, Walter Gwin, a farmhand about 30 years old was brought to Fremont hospital at midnight yesterday. He is in a serious condition.

Gwin was found lying in a haystack on the Jern Denstow farm, northwest of Emporia, yesterday morning by section men on the Northwestern. At the hospital Gwin said he crawled into the haystack last Thursday night and became tangled in the coils so that he was unable to signal for help. He finally managed to crawl out of the haystack and attract the attention of the section men.

During all this time Gwin had no means of protection from the cold nights of the winter. The mercury went to 25 below zero and a sharp wind made it the worst period of the season.

Gwin said he had been looking for work and after applying at several farm houses he went to sleep in the haystack. He was almost frozen from exposure when picked up.

County Physician F. E. Collins, who attended Gwin, thinks it will be necessary to amputate both legs. The hands may be saved.

WILLIAM LESSMAN TO MOVE BACK TO WAYNE

William Lessman, an old resident of this county, who has for the past six years been located at a farm near Emporia, Kas., left for that place Tuesday afternoon after a short business trip to Wayne. Mr. Lessman expects to return to Wayne with his family in about three weeks to take possession of the William Flege farm, northwest of town.

Mr. Lessman informed a Herald representative that great excitement is being aroused around Emporia by the opening of rich fields of oil. In fact he made this trip to Ne- braska to arrange for the buying out of a tract of 5,000 acres in Lyon county, as well as Mr. Lessman owns a section in this tract. It is planned to have oil drillers at work on the field in about ninety days. In less than two weeks five wells have been sunk on one field three miles from Emporia at an expense of approximately $100,000.

Mr. Lessman states that residents of Lyon county think the prospects for a big output of oil very bright. In that event Wayne county friends will be pleased to see that Mr. Branner's share in this good fortune.

ALIEN RESIDENTS IN HURRY TO GET PAPERS

Omaha, Feb. 5.—Threatened by gathering war clouds with the certainty of dishonor from American citizenship, alien residents of Omaha—many of the groups of the central powers of Europe—rushed into district court today to secure their second papers in the process of naturalization or to declare their intention of becoming citizens.

Nineteen natives of Germany, Austria, Hungary and Bohemia, among them former soldiers in the army of the Kaiser, and the emperor swore allegiance to the stars and stripes. In taking their oath of citizenship all agreed to bear arms in defense of the United States against any enemy.

"War would automatically stop the filing of first papers," said Naturalization Examiner E. R. Gurnette today. "Because at that moment these men would become alien enemies." He added that it would likewise place the same category on all such residents as have not secured their second papers.

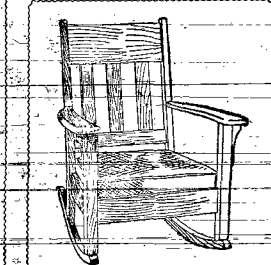

DAMAGES ALLEGED

Hartington, Neb., Feb. 6.—Ignatz Cressy filed suit in the district court here for $5,000 damages and $100 expenses for what he alleges was an unwarranted assault on him by C. W. Burkett. The two men are well known farmers west of town.

Several months ago Cressy sued Burkett for damages for a suit Burkett was a witness for Parsons and Cressy, while on the stand, disputed statements made by a Burkett. Burkett later met him by a suit for damages for Cressy taking him "back" according to the affidavit. Burkett later had Cressy arrested on charges of assault and battery.

acted into law the immigration bill with its long-ought literacy test provision. The senate voted late yesterday to pass the measure notwithstanding the veto and in spite of eleven-hour information that Japan again had protested against the language of the Asiatic exclusion. The house overturned the veto last week by a vote of 297 to 106 so the senate's action ends the contest of twenty years' standing, in which three presidents have repudiated similar bills passed by the congress.

Senator Norris of Nebraska voted to override the veto and Senator Hitchcock was absent.

If this assurance the Monitor would like to know where these officials get their ideas of justice. The fact is that it only takes a road block in the summer time or a road heavy frost in the winter to blockad this one-horse railroad from Wayne to Bloomfield and the result is that they are blockaded most of the year. As the Monitor's poet expresses the situation: "A little frost or a little dew "Stops the train a day or two?" "Then on top of all our railroad troubles, the postoffice is getting busy and begins practicing economy on a people who already have more than their share of trouble and inconvenience in trying to do business where facilities already are too rotten to be hardly bearable. Their action in this matter is the proverbial straw that has almost broken the patience of a long suffering public. While congressmen are busy with their "pork barrel" making appropriations for rivers and harbors and public buildings and the thousand and one other things to appease their constituencies, the department gets busy saving money—here and there by robbing a people of really needful service in order that congress may add more "pork" to their famous barbel. Consistency has been robbed of its level and the people of this branch are demanding a "square deal."

George Crossland, W. D. Redmond and Rev. A. S. Baell went to Bloomfield Saturday morning for the purpose of getting new ideas to use in decorating and remodeling the Methodist church basement. Twenty traveling men were regally entertained at Bloomfield Friday evening at a smoker, by the Commercial club of that place. On account of the trains being snowed out Saturday morning, they had to reach their homes and the Bloomfield hospitality was thoroughly appreciated. Seventy-five men, members of the commercial club and twenty traveling men, made up a jolly bunch and a pleasant evening was spent. A light lunch was served at the close of the evening. Bixby: Peter Lazbyones one day, said he got a mackerel, say, and he brought it home, but he was so frozen that he had to freeze the mackerel. So he dragged the mackerel out of the corner of the fence, where he left his brand new mackerel when he quit the year before. The mackerel was frozen, but Pete didn't give a darn, so he left it out of doors, saying "When I do my chores, I will house it right away." The next morning, he found another fish, and he had the whole duty slipped his mind. So that new mackerel had lain in the dew and sun and rain, in the dust and in the snow, and he was hard to make it go. Then he rode his spavined horse off to get repairs, of course; and the sickles must be ground, and a few lost fixtures found. Thus, the "hay" he bought the day that the stock could stow away, though it held a small per cent of its normal nutriment. Peter said it was a shame, but the weather was to blame; that the cruel hand of fate was not his to regulate.

BRANCH ENRAGED BY VERY POOR SERVICE

Bloomfield Monitor: The people of the branch line are certainly getting their good art proper this winter. As between the railroads and the postal department it would almost seem as though there was a conspiracy to vie with each other in seeing which can give the people of this branch line the poorest and most rotten service conceivable in their dream-wrecked imaginations. In the first place no freight makes any pretension of being anywhere near on time except those that leave this station and some times, these are held up to give the oil engines time to sneeze and cough and throw the congestion of their lungs. The postal department has taken off the mail clocks from the outgoing morning train and the incoming noon train. It is waiting a letter to sack up our newspapers for Wauksa or points down the line by 2 o'clock p. m. the mail does not reach its destination for more than twenty-four hours, even when the train might be on time; and as it is, with the night train from one and one-half to four hours late, the chances are that the postoffices are closed and the mail is finally delivered the next morning about eight or ten hours-later still. If this assurance the Monitor would like to know where these officials get their ideas of justice. The fact is that it only takes a road block in the summer time or a road heavy frost in the winter to blockad this one-horse railroad from Wayne to Bloomfield and the result is that they are blockaded most of the year. Other symptoms of kidney trouble left no doubt in my mind that my kidneys were in a badly disordered condition. CHURCH CALENDAR

The German Evangelical Lutheran Church.
(Rev. R. Moehring, Pastor).
Next Sunday, Sunday school at 10 o'clock and preaching at 11 o'clock. In the afternoon at 3 o'clock the pastor will preach at Windsor.

St. Paul's English Lutheran Church.
(Rev. J. H. Fetterolf, Pastor).
Weather conditions precluded all efforts to conduct any of the services in this church last Sunday. The program of preaching services will be carried out next Sunday as was announced for last Lord's day.

Luther League at 6:45 p. m. The subject is "The Word—Inherent and Divine."

The Ladies' Aid will meet with Mrs. N. Neilen, Thursday, February 15.

Will Honor Abraham Lincoln.
The Baptist church Sunday morning will be the scene of the regular services and the subject advertised for last Sunday morning will be presented. It will be made the occasion for a helpful worship and everybody belonging to the congregation is urged to be present.

In the evening Abraham Lincoln will be honored and the sermon will deal with the character of God Almighty raised up for a special work in the dark hour of the nation's need. Everybody invited to attend in the evening and assist in making it a great service. The G. A. R., D. A. R. and all loyal citizens are invited to be present. Aside from the sermon by the pastor several others will have part in the program.

Presbyterian Church.
The church desires to serve the present age. Truth is eternally the same, but its application differs in new occasions rise. Next Sunday morning we shall seek to interpret an age-long aspect of truth in the light of today. The name of the subject is: "The Greatest Thing in the World."

The church seeks to correctly evaluate life. Witness the ever increasing efficiency of some evangelistic effort in all religious denominations. A good friend of the pastor will preach an evangelistic sermon at the 7:30 service next Sunday evening. He wants all his other friends to bear this sermon.

The local church wants to be a factor for good in the community. A live Sunday school is desired in any community. The Sunday school in this church is working up to a high ideal. We invite inspection and criticism. The advantages of the school are for all who desire to avail themselves.

Comparatively few churches realize the vital importance of the work of the denominational young people societies. We are seeking to see four people to volunteer for service in Junior and intermediate young people's work. There is no greater service to which you can ever be able to give yourself.

The church invites any suggestion that will help it to be more efficient in community service. Do not be afraid of hurting our feelings, but feel free to offer any suggestion. They will be acted upon where possible.

Methodist Church.
(Rev. A. S. Buell, Pastor).
The theme for next Sunday morning will be "Religion and Present World Conditions." Has your religion anything to do with the practical everyday affairs of this world? If not, why not? The discussion will show that the philosophy of life often determines the destiny of whole nations of people.

This theme is timely in view of the break with our sister nation. Come out Sunday morning and let us think these things through. It behooves us to arm ourselves with the whole counsel of God and having done all to stand. "Stand therefore having girded your loins with truth, and having put on the breastplate of righteousness."

The evening message will be "The Presence of God." You will find this a very interesting message.

The pastor is just completing the constituency roll and you may expect to see him at your door within the next few weeks with some real work for you that you will enjoy doing.

We are glad for the tendency everywhere to cooperate rather than compete and certainly hope that the churches may not be lacking in this grace. Each church ought to work to the full measure of its ability and never to try to build up by tearing down some other organization.

All of the regular services next Sunday.

That was certainly a bad day last Sunday. The first time in years that the church has not been opened for services on Sunday.

We shall be glad to see you in your place next Sunday.

Dr. E. E. Hosman was here for the second quarterly conference Wednesday evening. The affairs of the church are in excellent condition and show a steady growth in all departments.

EDITORS COMMENT ON BREAK WITH GERMANY

War at Hand.
St. Louis City Journal: The American public recently learned the news of the breach of friendly relations with Germany. It was prepared for development, which obviously must follow. Berlin's refusal to abide by Washington's ultimatum as to submarine warfare. The next announcement the public should be prepared to receive clearly will be of the existence of a state of war between the United States and Germany.

In his address to congress yesterday President Wilson made it plain that the government will not be content with mere moral censure if American ships and American lives shall be sacrificed as a result of submarine operations, which it has declared it will not tolerate. If the blockade is carried out on the scale outlined by Berlin, it can be only a question of time—probably a very short time—until American interests are injured upon. That course will declare war if called upon to do so in support of the administration's international policy is beyond question.

It is a point to be kept in mind is that all other neutral governments will have the same reason for resenting Germany's submarine operations that will have driven the United States into the war. Other neutral governments should follow the American example the status of the war might be radically affected. The situation of Holland in the list of opposing belligerents is a serious one. The whole problem of German strategy. It must be assumed, of course, that Germany has considered the possible effects upon neutrals of her submarine warfare and has calculated that she has more to win than to lose by risking possible results. There is the possibility that Berlin is thinking more of the peace course than of gaining further military advantage—and can see advantage in having the United States and other neutrals participating as principals in the peace negotiations. All things considered the probability that the war will not outlast the year has been increased by recent developments. If this prospect should be realized it will be impossible for the United States to take a very active part in it.

A Crisis For Us.
Fremont Tribune: "The fiercest phase of submarine warfare brings the United States face to face with actual war. In the light of this new development we can better understand the reason for the recent change in the president's attitude. This unexpected appearance at the capital to address the house and senate on a matter of grave import. The discussion of a league to enforce peace was the subject of thinly veiling the real burden on the heart of the administration.

Germany has broken her pledges to us. She has set aside all international laws and usages. The question is, What are we going to do about it?

We must remember, first, that no nation is going to be scrupulously considerate of customs and laws and even the rights of another, when the very life of that nation is in the balance. We justify the individual for disregard of law when his life is at stake. Shall we not extend the application of this principle to the nation? Self-preservation is the first law of nature. It isn't as though Germany were tranquil, unprovoked and normal. In such event she could by no possible manner or means be excused for her palpable affront. At bay and very likely starving, she will strike with regard for none. Her worst fate is to perish and she has a right to choose her own manner of death. She may even prefer to have the United States give her the fatal blow.

In the circumstances we can well afford to regret the unit that would otherwise be intolerable. But if it is written in the book of fate that we are to be drawn into the vortex of the world's horror, it would better be now than at a later date. If the blood of the nation must be brought to the altar, this generation is as capable as any will ever be to meet its duty, that self-government and not the divine right of kings may prevail in the world. If we pay the price our sons and their sons will not have to do so.

"Let us have peace."

COLUMBIAN STOCK POWDER

Columbian Stock Powder and Dip has increased the past year, and it gives good satisfaction that has been proved by my patrons, that Stock Powder and Dip is steadily in use among stock raisers and farmers everywhere. I have a valuable testimonial from the owner of Columbian Hog and Cattle Powder, Edward G. Kansas City, Mo., is not a firm of which you have never heard; it has been established in the year 1888, and has a capital of $500,000.00. Now, since 1888 the Columbian Stock Powder and Dip was put on the market more than in any other year. I give you the reason for the success and widespread use of Columbian Stock Powder, Columbian Dip, Columbian Hog Oils, Columbian Hog Louse and Columbian Self-feeders, is this. Worms, lice and digestive troubles are the three great enemies against which all stock must fight for. Columbian Stock Powder and Dip are especially prepared to overcome these three enemies. They kill the worms and thereby it will also end digestive troubles and keep the animal in good condition the year round. One of the very best ways to feed this powder is to keep it where the hogs can have free access to it at all times. A self-feeder is very good. I give one of these self-feeders free with an order of 500 pounds or more, by patrons buying less than 500 pounds, who desire this feeder, can get it for wholesale price, $2.50. I also sell the great Columbian Hog Oiler and Hog Louse Oil. The oiler is the kind you wanted for some time. It is made of heavy iron throughout and especially designed to use any kind of oil, dip, oil greaser, that's the kind you want, or which you can use any kind of grease you have on hand. The height of the roller being only 7 inches. It fits a large cylinder nearly 20 inches long and 4 1/2 inches in diameter. It is made of the best material, and is very strong. There are no valves, springs, gears, or delicate parts to rust, clog up, with mud and stick, there is absolutely nothing about it that is liable to break or get out of order. You may see it at work in my "hog house" any time, and you'll surely say, "that's the kind I want."

From Ponca Journal, February 28, 1878:
A Dog Story.
The well-known discoverer of the Plesiosaurus, Mr. Brewer, has lately been engaged in the business of training some very remarkable dogs—a species of Spanish pointers, which must at an early day in the future, take precedence over all the dogs in the country.

He has now several of this superior breed, whose intelligence, docility, length of tooth and leg, swiftness on foot, melody of vocal powers and capacity to eat and digest food, has astonished his neighbors and the community at large, and will command the admiration of mankind.

Six, as we understand, he has of this rare and wonderful species of dogs, or more properly we should say, pups, being young and in the first bluish of doghood.

Such pups could not long remain unknown, nor could they fail to receive much praise and admiration from the multitudes that have flocked to see them. And though often solicited to do so, he has at least until the incidents of this narrative occurred, resisted all temptation to sell such dogs or either of them.

Last Saturday, however, two young gentlemen of this place took a walk up past Mr. Brewer's place and hearing a sound as of many faint voices, joined in a lusty chorus, suggested to Mr. B. the propriety of selling some, or at least one of the dogs, and stoutly intimated that they would be glad to purchase the same. Mr. B., well knowing that the pups were worth $25 to $30 apiece, hesitated a long time, but finally agreed to take $1 for one of them, and deliver the same to the purchaser, the name of Dr. Wyckoff's drug store.

The foregoing preliminary explanation will therefore account for the fact that early on Monday morning last, Mr. Brewer might have been seen diligently wending his way towards the drug store, conveying as he went, a wiggling dogskin of bones, the which as he jogged the word around his neck, awoke the echoes by many pathetic cries.

Thus it came about, that at 9 o'clock the store door opened; Mr. Brewer walked in, dragging after him the sad-looking canine who was thus to be immolated on a three-dollar altar. Within, and anxiously awaiting, were the young gentlemen aforesaid. But they changed their minds suddenly. Now they didn't want any dog. And when Mr. Brewer hitched the dog to the counter, and thereby formally delivered him over into their keeping, he was disappointed at not seeing them with the warmth and enthusiasm which his labors seemed justly to entitle him to. However, he tied up the dog and demanded his $1.00.

Time being taken to consider the matter, he went forth to the courts and invoke the intervention of the flaming sword of justice.

In the meanwhile, the innocent cause of this disturbance stood there till nearly sundown, tugging at the string which held him, scratching, fleecing, and ever and anon enjoining the atmosphere with long drawn-out, choly howls of anguish. Thus the day passed by; the whole town went in one after another to see the dog and to make inquiries as to this interesting concatenation of affairs. At night, the dog happened to be gone, for Mr. B. consented to compromise the matter by leading poor Tray home again. Hence, joy bloomed once more and all sides proclaimed it. Mr. Brewer could now find a valuable pup, the purchasers could keep their money, and the town was relieved from the uncertainty of pups and yells with which the matter was connected.

It is with pleasure that I present to you this invitation to attend my twelfth annual bred sow sale. At this time I will offer you ten girls as good as you can find any place, in breeding and individuality. They are very growthy bunch of girls, and good in every respect. They are sired by the Sensation, Grand Champion boar at Nebraska state fair 1916. Also by G. W. Model, which took first in class under 18 months at the same fair and sold for $375. And they are bred to King Sensation, by Sensation's Model, Junior Champion at Nebraska state fair 1915. Certainly there will be some winners from this cross. We will look for you sale day, and will try and treat ROBERT PRITCHARD, Owner.

Union Farm Poland Chinas
FIFTEEN HEAD

These sows are all of the big type, easy feeding kind, weighing from 300 to 400 pounds; while there is yet plenty of room for improvement, the fellows that have seen our herd, tell us that they compare favorably with the rest of the herds they have seen. Our ambition has been to breed larger and better hogs, and each year present a better offering than the year before.
HENRY RETHWISCH & SON.

Chester Whites

We are selling in this sale a useful lot of tried sows and gilts of the good, big boned, lengthy kind, that are good producers. There has been a steady growing demand for Chester Whites; they are becoming more popular year after year. Our sows have not been fitted for show, but have been cared for under average farm conditions. Most of the tried sows raised two litters last year. They are bred to our herd boar, Carroll Chief. He is a large boned, lengthy fellow, with a good arch back.
