"Economize," Says the President...

Economy, however, does not mean to cease buying. From the same great man who bids us to economize comes the admonition, "keep business going on as usual." This means keep money in circulation, keep buying, but buy the necessities of life and forego some of the luxuries.

There's Sensible Economy in Styleplus $17 Clothes

Clothes are a necessity, GOOD CLOTHES are a necessity but it's not necessary to pay a high price here to get good clothes. These suits we are showing at $17 represent excellent value fabrics and they're made in the nobbiest of styles too. In fact, they're suits which any man would be proud to put on. To the man of moderate means, the man who wants his money to go the farthest, the man who wants to economize we say by all means, see these suits.

BOYS' SUITS TOO MODERATELY PRICED

Youthful styles that boys like and that mothers like in a variety which makes choosing easy. Good clothes too, that will stand the hardest wear and priced so that "dad" will cheerfully "dig up" the price. All mothers of boys should see these suits at

DIPLOMAS AWARDED TO EIGHTH GRADERS

NINETY-SEVEN PROMOTED

Appropriate Exercises at Court House Saturday—President U. S. Conn Speaks.

The district court room was crowded to overflowing Saturday afternoon, the occasion being the annual eighth grade graduating exercises. Ninety-seven students whose names were published in last week's Herald, were awarded diplomas. Bernice Lindsay, daughter of Everett Lindsay of district No. 26, received the highest grade. In the first examination, conducted early in the spring, Charlotte Stevenson of Sholes, and Tripp Michael of Winside, were the only ones winning passing grades.

The Olympic quarter of the Carroll vicinity, gave four songs, and elicited generous applause and many words of praise.

President S. Conn of the Wayne State Normal, was the speaker of the afternoon. He heartily congratulated the large class. He spoke of the value of education, and the importance of continued and higher mental attainments. He emphasized the practical need of consolidation among rural schools in order to build courses that would insure high school credits preliminary to work in the State Normal. His espousal of the cause of education offered important suggestions and held close attention.

Following a brief song containing sound advice and appreciation, Miss Pearl Sewell, county superintendent, presented the diplomas and then dismissed the crowd.

READ THIS! You have probably been disappointed in the way a silk garment has come back from cleaners and dyers, or you at least have known someone else who has had a dress ruined because the color has streaked. "There's A Reason." Very many of the fabrics now used have artificial silk threads. These cotton threads take the dye much more slowly than silk—hence the streaks. Now the expert dyer tests the goods before he begins work and uses different processes for different fabrics—and you are pleased with the result. A hint is enough. Let us do your dyeing. TRACY KOHL JOINS UNITED STATES NAVY

Tracy Kohl, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip H. Kohl of Wayne, has joined the United States navy—leaving Boston for New York to enter active service. Out of a large number taking the examination in Washington City, twenty were picked from among the best fitted and were slated for immediate enlistment. Young Mr. Kohl was one of the twenty. He had been attending Dartmouth college at Hanover, N. H.; and has attained high rank in both scholarship and physical training. While in Boston Sunday night, he called his father by telephone and explained to him his acceptance and purpose.

young wife and baby alone while he headed through the storm and the night for Nebraska City. In four days he was back with the doctor, and the neighbor's distress was relieved.

Such were the neighborly sacrifices which pioneer life called for in Nebraska. The conditions under which the frontiersmen lived called constantly for such exhibitions of courage on the part of the women and of unrequited toil and risk on the part of the men. The lack of neighbors made for neighborliness, and the sense of isolation in the conflict with the conditions of frontier existence bred a cooperating sympathy among the strugglers.

In the days to come, what is to furnish Nebraska the "moral equivalent" of these pioneer experiences? Even when faced through the early days of Nebraska did not afterward recognize the moral value of the experience. Such inventiveness, self reliance, courage, grim endurance, persistence and sacrifice for one's neighbor as that life required and developed are characteristic of the pioneer life. In a state such as Nebraska is now with life running in easy grooves and most persons in no obvious need of the aid of others, how is that rugged, generous and unselfishness to be developed?

William James sought a "moral equivalent for war." What is to furnish us the moral equivalent for the hard knocks of pioneer life?

MRS. J. P. LATTA DEAD.

Tekamah, Neb., June 10.—Mrs. J. P. Latta, wife of the late congressman, J. P. Latta, died suddenly here last evening from an affection of the heart. Mrs. Latta had not been feeling well for some time, but it was not thought to be serious. She would have been 72 years old June 24. She leaves two sons—Ed, who is president of the First National bank here, and Bar, who manages the large land holdings. The latter son had gone to Sioux City to join a party of friends in a shooting party and was not expected to return until this morning. Arrangements have not been made for the funeral. Mrs. Latta was a great friend of unfortunate people and gave much to charity.

GARDEN CLUB HOLDS MEETING SATURDAY

A meeting for the children of the garden club will be held in room number five, at the high school building Saturday morning, June 16, from 10 to 11 o'clock. The meeting is being held in the high school building. Mr. Siems is anxious that all the boys and girls in the garden club be present, because some helpful information and suggestions will be made at this meeting. The market price of vegetables has been decided upon and he will explain to the children the method of keeping a record of vegetables which are used for home use. The market price of radishes is five cents for a bunch of six. Onions will sell for the same price and the same number in a bunch. Radishes and onions that are used in the home should be accurately accounted for so that at the end of the season the gardener will know his exact profit.

Mr. Siems has received a set of government bulletins on gardening, canning and home economics which he is anxious for every one to have. Friday afternoon in the music room at the high school building, these bulletins may be obtained. They are sent out by the government and are in accordance with the plan for the conservation of food.

IDEALS.

Christian Herald: Higher! It is a word of noble import. It is an impulse of tremendous lifting power. It hits the souls of men from low and groveling pursuits to the achievement of high and great purposes.

In youth life stretches before us like a pleasant and inviting way to the sun-kissed hilltop. With years must come more or less disillusion. The feathery palm trees we saw in the distance may prove but a mirage, and the road which we seemed to see far ahead turn out to be only dead heaps of stones that we must laboriously surmount.

But we must not cease to dream. For life is such a strange thing that the stars of our destiny are hidden in this difference between the great and the little souls of earth; the little soul, disappointed, dreams of dreams; the great soul dreams or makes his dream come true. Every great soul of man has had his vision and pondered it until the passion to make the dream come true has dominated his life.

It is only he who aspires highly who highly achieves. The world over, one's achievement depends upon aspiration. One's environment. If one's longing be zealous and soul deep it will express itself in action as naturally as a bird takes wing. It will cause to bring success as it causes the plant to shoot upward toward the light.

THE FIELD OF BUSINESS.

Sioux City Journal: There is nothing surprising about the announcement that the influx of gold into the United States has ceased, and that the normal level is now to be reached moderate output. When the United States entered the war it had accumulated gold to the amount of $2,210,000,000, the largest aggregate of gold ever accumulated by any country, comprising one-third of the world's supply. The American gold hoard had been swollen during the war by gold sent to the allies, which must be largely paid in cash, owing to war's interference with European production. Just as soon as the United States cast its fortune with the allies, and decided to extend virtually unlimited credit to their purchasers, the large inducing the inflow of gold into the power of the United States is now going to Japan, and there may be small shipments in other directions. It is announced that it will be the policy of the government, for the present at least, to keep the greater part of present gold holdings in this country. Conservative financial circles are relieved rather than alarmed by the change in the gold situation. Continuous piling up of gold meant constant temptation to inflation. As a matter of sound international finance, it is not salutary that one country should hold more than a reasonable share of the world's supply.

The government crop report Friday disclosed an improvement in the wheat outlook, but the situation remains dim in which right economies are indicated. The department reports a spring crop of 283,000,000 bushels, a big yield, but the winter crop will amount to only 27,000,000 bushels, making a total yield now indicated at 310,000,000 bushels, or 100,000,000 bushels more than last year's crop, but it covers little more than normal consumption. According to Mr. Hoover, the allies will need 1,000,000,000 bushels of wheat, most of which must come from the United States and Canada. There are bright prospects for heavy crops of oats, rye and barley. Allied and American demands being considered together, however, it is impossible to avoid the conclusion that a grain shortage is impending that can only be met by reduced consumption at home and abroad. Realization of the fact is accompanied by substantial increases in grain prices. July wheat which closed the previous week at $2.08, closed Saturday at $2.35. Early in the week the Chicago grain trade fixed a maximum price of $1.65 a bushel for corn, evidently in the hope that it would conduce to lower prices. Instead the price shot up above the $1.50 mark and stayed there during the week.

FLAG RAISING ON THE COURT HOUSE GROUND CROWDS HONOR OCCASION

Presentation of Flag by P. M. Corbit Followed by Other Patriotic Speeches.

A multitude of people from Wayne and vicinity gathered on the court house ground Sunday afternoon to witness the flag raising and patriotic program that had been prepared for the occasion. An improvised platform had been decorated in the national colors. A place of honor was given the veterans of 40-65 with their muskets and other reminders of their war days. The Carroll Military band furnished stirring patriotic music which enhanced the spirit of the program.

Following the address by Rev. J. H. Fetterolf of the English Lutheran church, County Commissioner P. M. Corbit made the presentation speech. He spoke of the intensified interest in the flag today. National colors are everywhere in evidence. Flags are flying from all government buildings and other public institutions, from business houses and private homes. The flag is a symbol of unity and brotherhood. He said all nationalities are represented in the United States and all are standing together under one flag and fighting for one cause. He said no sacrifice is too great for the preservation of the Union.

In behalf of the C. A. R. A. J. Ferguson responded and dedicated the flag by reading from the C. A. R. "Star Spangled Banner," the flag was hoisted, amidst enthusiastic cheering, to the top of the pole.

"The Singing of America" by the audience, led by Fred M. Dawes, was followed by an address by Fred S. Berry. He said the flag meant more to those who had actually served under it, to men and women who had sacrificed their lives in the service of their country. They could appreciate its full significance. He pointed out that the forces of democracy were now arrayed against the forces of autocracy and that the hour of the active cooperation of all, not only on the battlefield but in the production and conservation of supplies, for the preservation and furtherance of the American Republic. Economy in the use of food was mentioned as an essential in the great test of force and endurance. He spoke of the high satisfaction young men were getting in the part of taking to maintain and promote democracy.

Forrest Hughes led the choir in singing "Marching Through Georgia."

A. R. Davis spoke briefly of the necessity of people buying liberty bonds, and supporting the Red Cross movement. He also urged as worthy of support the Y. M. C. A. which "brightens the soldier's life," and the navy and army.

"One people, under one flag, we are all Americans," he said in closing.

H. E. Sman of Atlantic, made a speech, calling attention to the psychological influence of the star and stripes. Even little children take pride in wearing the national colors. He said the prayers of thousands of parents will go with the boys who are fighting under the folds of the American flag to extend democracy and freedom. All the speeches rang with patriotism, and the large audience responded with approving applause. The benediction was pronounced by Rev. J. H. Fetterolf.

Martin O'Connor, Amanuensis

Why He Loved St. Patrick's Day.

By F. A. MITCHEL

Patrick O'Connor came to America when he was a mere lad and by dint of hard work and perseverance made a name for himself as a business man who married Daniel O'Malley, and she was separated from her brother for many years. He was used to sending her money occasionally, and after his death she had grown older, she would sometimes forget her adopted daughter, Allen, who was coming to womanhood, to thank her brother for his benefactions. The truth is that the woman had not been very well educated, and Allen, having more advantages, was better fitted for those whom she was to marry. O'Connor and O'Malley became more and more prosperous it seemed to his sister that his first showed a better education than that of the latter. The fact is that he turned out a part of his education to his sister, Martin, and it occasionally became Martin's part to write these check bearing letters to his aunt, but he never thought of his education as his father's absence, and read a letter of thanks for a remittance. It was written in Mrs. O'Malley's name, but Martin was the amanuensis, and never written by her. It bore the name of a young girl, and a very intelligent girl at that. There was real gratitude in it, and it was overflowing with kindness as well. It seemed to Martin that an emanation from a lovely girl had been wafted across the ocean and entered his heart. O'Connor gave his son a check to send to Mrs. O'Malley. Martin wrote a letter which was meant for a reply to the one last received. O'Connor loved the relationship between the two correspondents, would have supposed that it had been written to a girl instead of his aunt. Mrs. O'Malley concluded that her brother was becoming very affectionate in his old age. It was couched in such kindly terms that she consulted Allen to express for her his appreciation of her brother's interest in her and assure him that his sister had not lost any of her affection for him during their long separation. Allen, reading the letter, was writing from a sister to a brother, did not scruple to express all the affection her mother desired she should express for Mr. O'Connor. When the correspondence it was wondered at this unusual demonstration of affection, but set it down to the fact that his sister was growing old and as persons age they affection for those they love grows more intense. Being a man of business and unemotional, he handed the letter to his aunt and told him to reply in kind. In this way a correspondence grew up between Mrs. O'Connor and Allen, the one writing supposedly to her uncle, the other presumably to his aunt, which grew warmer and sweeter as time passed. Between the brother and sister became almost loving. Whether Martin was really falling in love with his aunt or whether he was the old man who had prolonged an amnesia doesn't appear, but one thing is certain—the letters he received became in time so affectionate that whenever he saw the old man he would read the letters in the wall known had appropriated it to himself, and his father never saw it. It is quite likely that Allen did the same with those letters that were written in America. When her quickster had attained a considerable height, Martin began to think that he would like to investigate this aunt of his to whom he was making a correspondence. He was not very earthy part was as beautiful as her soul. He began to express to his father a desire for a trip abroad and finally to visit the green hills where his ancestors had lived and died. He became very pathetic over a plot of ground his father had often described to him where the O'Connors were buried. Mr. O'Connor had never been a bishop, and Martin expressed himself as desirous of visiting the grave of this eminent son of the church. Mr. O'Connor, much pleased that his son should take an interest in his ancestors, who, by the by, had from time immemorial been at St. Patrick's church, consented that Martin should go to the grave of his ancestors. Martin suggested that it would be well for him to time his visit for St. Patrick's day. "The very thing," said Mr. O'Connor. "You may attend services on that anniversary in the very church where Bishop O'Connor preached." Martin set off early in March, arranging to visit his aunt on the 17th, which every one with Irish blood in his veins knows is St. Patrick's day. Before saying good-by to him his father expressed his feelings. "Be sure to make it plain to your aunt that I'm very fond of her, and all that. You know how to say such things better than I do, and I rely on you to express my feelings." "Trust me for that, father," said Martin. "I'll do it warmly." A letter came from the young man some days later, and in it was stated he was about to leave for the home of the O'Connors the next day. Late a long letter was received describing his meeting with his aunt and how he spent St. Patrick's day. "In company," it said, "with that beloved woman who has written her brother such beautiful letters I sat in the window, sitting directly under the pulpit where our great Bishop O'Connor preached those soul stirring sermons. Later we visited the plot where the O'Connors are buried, and I sat beside my aunt on a stone beneath which Fergus O'Connor, my great-grandfather, rests. It seemed to me that the family affection had been transferred to me, and I marked was rising, a sort of ethereal aroma. Something struck a responsive chord in my heart and set it vibrating. I felt as if I were sitting beside my aunt to me, kissed her and whispered in her ear: 'Dear father, I love you all the love of the O'Connors from here to our first maternal ancestor.'"

This part of the letter met with an enthusiastic response from Patrick O'Connor and all his family. The good man realized that in his nephew he had one to make up for his own unemotional nature. "I wonder," he said, "that the boy could have felt so much affection for an old woman even though she be his father's sister."

"You forget," said Mrs. O'Connor, "that Martin was expressing your feelings for his aunt."

"Your right" was the reply. "I didn't think of it in that light. Martin is a very good boy and loves me as if I were his father."

Martin's letters after that all indicated that he was spending his days as he spent with his beloved aunt. Everything that happened seemed to turn upon that eventful anniversary. A letter came from Martin, and every book on the subject of St. Patrick. "The boy shows great enthusiasm for his church and his mother. Please God he may be a priest."

If the cathedral Martin visited in company with his aunt was any criterion he bade fair to be an archbishop. He seemed to be in his right mind about the grounds in which these holy edifices stood, and the death of his feelings seemed to come through his aunt, who was always exciting in him some vague desire.

Martin's time abroad was limited. His father, who was getting old, relied much upon him in the conduct of his affairs and wrote him out on any occasion. He never left his home, and in this letter Martin wrote that he had grown so fond of his aunt that it had become impossible to tear himself away from her. He would not overstay his leave, but he was so happy she had consented to go to America with him to visit her dear brother.

Patrick O'Connor was appalled at this. So honest was the nature of his nature through his son, but if she were with him this would devolve upon himself. As to embracing his sister, sitting beside her holding her hand or with his arm around her waist, he could not do so even with his wife. However, he could think of no way to head off his sister's visit and prepared to show as much affection as possible. It was the month of June when Martin sailed from Ireland. St. Patrick's day had gone by three months before, but Martin had upon it in his letters, and every the month of roses, though it seemed to appeal very strongly to the young man, was no more dear to him than the month of winds and dews to his bachelor quarters, that he could not possibly return till June, and there appeared to be some special reason for the delay.

There were a good many things about the return of Martin O'Connor that his parents could not understand. In the first place he announced that he had decided since he had been away from home to hire a thrasher under his own roof and to go there as soon as he had reached home. He would take his aunt with him for a housekeeper. The only comfort to be derived by his parents from this was by his father who had refused to know that he would not have to sit holding his sister's hand with an occasional kiss. Martin was the apple of his eye, and although his return was both to his parents and to his aunt, he was not for him that it might be ready against his return.

Martin arrived in the evening and found the return of his aunt, where the O'Connor family were waiting for him and his aunt. When the front door was opened and Patrick O'Connor saw his sister he exclaimed: "How my word! How dear! There's not a bit older than you were thirty years ago."

"I'm not Nora," she said on throwing her arms about Mr. O'Connor. "I'm Allen O'Connor, your sister's adopted daughter."

A bewildered look came over the man's face; then an idea seemed to be his mind, and he said: "Turning to his son, he said: "Mart."

"Well, dad, what is it?"

"What made you suddenly so fond of St. Patrick's day?"

"Well, to tell the truth, dad, in the morning Allen and I went to mass in the church where Bishop O'Connor preached, and in the evening I sat on his tomb, telling her that I loved her and must take her back to America with me as my wife."

"And what's all this about your aunt?"

"You remember that you asked me to answer my aunt's letters to you. Well, Aunt Nora deputized Allen to help me in my duties. The result was that I fell in love with my aunt and Allen fell in love with her uncle. And there you are!"

"Father's day," said the principal anniversary celebrated in Martin O'Connor's family.

FLAG ETIQUETTE.

Code for flag etiquette from army and navy usages.

1. The flag should not be hoisted before sunrise, nor allowed to remain up after sunset. In the day the colors are hoisted under ordinary circumstances at 8 a. m. It should not be displayed upon stormy days, nor left out over night.
2. The flag should never be allowed to touch the ground and should never be raised or lowered by any mechanical appliance.
3. When the national and state flags are flown together or are used in decorating together the national flag should be on the right side of the building or lawn.
4. If the flag is fixed out of doors, a line should be stretched on a rope across a street, the union or field, should fly to the north in streets running east and west and to the east in running north and south.
5. The flag should always be flown from a staff or a mast and should not be fastened to side of a building, platform or scaffolding. In ornamental cases, flags should be draped around pillars, columns, walls or balustrades. Flags were originally made for the purpose of being flown and to use them in any other manner is to misuse them. If simple decorations are desired, red, white and blue hunting properly draped will give a better effect than a draped flag.
6. The flag should never be used as a cover over a table or box or where anything is placed upon it. For indoor decorations the flag may be caught up in many artistic fashions and used with hunting, gardens, plants and flowers, but should never be placed behind a person sitting.
7. When flags are used in an unveiling of a statue or monument they should not be allowed to fall to the ground but should be held and held aloft to wave not forming a distinctive feature during the remainder of the ceremony.
8. When the flag is flown at half staff a sign of mourning it should be hoisted to full staff at the end of the funeral. To fly a flag at half staff it must first be raised to full staff and then lowered.
9. When the flag is ceremonially saluted all present during the ceremony should stand at attention with hand raised to the forehead ready for the salute.
10. The correct salute in the flag as required by the regulations of the United States army is: Standing at attention, raise the right hand to the forehead over the right eye, palm downward, fingers extended and close together, arm at an angle of forty-five degrees. Move hand outward about a foot, with a quick motion, then drop to the side.
11. When the colors are passing on parade, or in review, the spectators should, if a man or boy, and if walking halt, if sitting, rise and stand at attention, and uncover.
12. When used on a pier or esplanade at a funeral the stars should be placed at the head. In no case should the flag be allowed to touch the ground.
13. The flag must not be mended, nor waxed, nor decorated on the staff.
14. It is an unwritten law in the navy that the flag is never to be washed; it is always to be considered immaculate.
15. On Memorial day the flag should fly at half staff from sunrise to noon and full staff from noon to sunset.
16. When "The Star Spangled Banner" is played all present should rise and stand at attention until the ending. The playing of it as a melody or exit march should be prohibited.
17. The only legislation which regards the flag forbids the registration of any trade mark which consists of or comprises the flag or coat of arms or other insignia of the United States, or any simulation thereof, or of any states or municipalities of any foreign nation, etc.
18. The flag salute adopted by our military schools and other organizations and which should be taught in our public schools is: "I pledge allegiance to my flag and to the Republic for which it stands: one nation indivisible, with liberty and justice for all."
19. When buildings are decorated in hunting draped horizontally, the red should be at the top.
20. Our children should be taught to carefully handle and guard the flag. It is to be kept from rough and disrespectful usage, and not be permitted to carelessly toss them about in parades and processions, nor throw them away should a stick broken or should a child tire of holding it.

Cholera Morbus.

This is a very painful and dangerous disease. In almost every neighborhood someone has died recently before medicine could be obtained or a physician summoned. The right way is to have a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy in the house at all times, and prepared for it. Mrs. Charles E. Yearst, Huntington, Ind., writes: "During the summer of 1911 two of my children were taken sick with cholera morbus. I had Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy and it gave them immediate relief."

Your Ford Will Start Easier

With the wonderful advantage of a new STROMBERG carburetor. All the grief and difficulty is done away with. Spinning the motor is not necessary—hold out the special primer, then, with a few easy turns, away she goes.

37 4-10 Miles on 1 Gallon of Gasoline

Is the result of an official test by the American Automobile Association.

At last a carburetor that actually reduces gasoline expense to a minimum—the most effective carburetor ever made for Ford cars, and it has proven its worth.

ALONE DOES NOT MAKE A PERFECT CARBURETOR, and realizing this, the car was given most severe acceleration and speed tests.

SPEED 43 MILES AN HOUR

Without a single change in the adjustment of the carburetor, the car attained a speed of 25 miles an hour from a standing start in 11 4-10 seconds; then was speeded up to 43 miles an hour with perfect smoothness of operation.

The primary desire of every Ford owner is to reduce the cost of fuel. Now here is your one big opportunity to really save money on gasoline, and at the same time have a better car—have more power and speed, quicker acceleration, and more flexibility, knowing at the same time you have the most reliable instrument on the market.

In an official test observed by F. E. Edwards, of the American Automobile Association, this new Stromberg carburetor for Fords smashed all official Ford records—proved itself absolutely the most wonderful instrument ever invented.

FACTS OF THE OFFICIAL A. A. A. TEST

37 4-10 miles on one gallon of gasoline—1915 Ford with three passengers and weighing 2170 pounds, did it with the new Stromberg carburetor at Chicago; April 1st, 37 4-10 miles on one gallon, including four traffic stops, but without stopping the motor. Economy

CONSOLIDATED WITH THE WAYNE REPUBLICAN

WAYNE, NEBRASKA, THURSDAY, JUNE 14, 1917.

VOL. 30, NO. 2

FORMER WAYNE BOY WON HEIGHT OF FAME

The announcement that the University of Nebraska has conferred the honorary degree of Doctor of Letters upon William Brewster is of more than passing interest to the people of this community. Here he had from the time he was 17 years old struggled for place in the world, secured his education, dreamed his great dreams, and saw the beginning of their fulfillment in the publication of "This First Book".

Dr. Brewster's work has been in Bancroft. During the last ten years his fame has steadily increased as his art has become finer, his workmanship ever firmer and truer, judgment of poets everywhere that the English language is read are confidently saying: "Here is an authentic poet, a voice, not an echo."

Hence it is fitting that the university of its own right should honor Mr. Brewster and to honor herself. That institution has been properly chary of granting honors. It is with no lavish hand that she dispenses titles. The degree that only extraordinary achievement shall place a name upon her highest roll and in this case surely her degree but records a judgment already rendered.

Dr. Brewster is but 38 years old, and only fully entered upon his life work. Doubtless many friends in Wayne will recall with affection the boy who so short a time since walked the streets and wandered on these roads, and now has won the heights of fame.

The subject of the message will be "At a Venture," based on 1 Kings 22:34.

At 8 p. m. the sermon subject will be "Get Up Higher." Everybody is invited to all our services.

Mrs. Anton Lerner will entertain the Ladies' Aid society next Thursday. At the meeting of the society, the four circles conducting food sales presented their reports. The contest was quite evenly balanced, but the circle of which Mrs. Helges was leader secured the victory.

The receipts from the four groups were fifty dollars.

About forty children who had made enough points in the Sunday school offering, came to invite them to attend a social met at the church on Wednesday from 5 to 7. It had been planned to take a hike to the country and eat lunch in a wayne lane, the ground being too damp to admit of this, they spent a few pleasant hours in a social way in the lecture room of the church. Games were played and lunch served. They departed delighted with the good time they had together and inquiring when the next campaign should begin.

The Luther league meets at 7:45 on Sunday evening. The program for the evening will be interesting and instructive. We should like to have all our young people to attend.

It would not do any harm if the boys and girls would attend the discussion of the subject at this meeting.

FRAGMENT OF METEOR FOUND NEAR OSMOND

The Osmond Republican states that a citizen of that place has found a part of the meteor which was seen in three states recently. The Republican reports says:

"P. H. Carr, of Osmond, who had just driven over from Osmond last Thursday night has been found. Col. Welch found a portion of it Tuesday, southeast of Osmond, when he was running a red-hot stove. He noticed a rock-like substance lying by the side of the road. He thought it a meteoric stone, so brought it to town, where Superintendent Dimson examined it and pronounced it genuine meteoric stone. It is composed of gravel and stone, and the outside is glazed, just like a piece of glass that has gone through a red-hot stove. The part of the rock next to the ground was partially buried in the mud, showing that it struck the ground with considerable force. So far as we have heard, the meteor that hit the meteor that has been found, although considerable search has been made in different parts of the country."

A Mistaken Idea...

Some people have an idea that in order to have a bank account, they must have a large sum to deposit; that the bank does not care to be bothered by small accounts.

This, however, is not true of the State Bank. This bank welcomes new accounts, whether of $100.00 or the same courtesy and service is accorded the small depositor, as those in more fortunate circumstances.

It is our object and wish to serve the public in financial matters in a manner that shall be satisfactory to all—old or young, rich or poor.

Another "Arctcraft" Coming

If you saw Mary Pickford in "The Pride of the Clan," "The Poor Little Rich Girl," or "Less Than Dust," you know the charm of these first Arctcraft pictures. You remember how adorable Mary was as "Gwin" in "The Poor Little Rich Girl"; well she is all that, and more, when she plays the part of Jenny Lawrence, the little Boston girl who explores the wilds of the west in "A ROMANCE OF THE REDWOODS." This play, Mary's latest, was staged in the famous red-woods district of California. The setting is altogether wonderful.

Distinct advantages attach to the country hospital, especially during the summer months. Even with the windows and doors open, comparatively few disturbing noises jar the nerves of the sick, often super-sensitive because of the pain they have suffered.

And, again, it is so much easier for home folks to brighten the sick room with flowers and add certain little touches that fairly breathe the atmosphere of home. It is convenience itself for friends to drop in with some cheery remembrance to shorten the day.

These ideas are not fiction; they are facts. Surround the convalescent with that all-wonderful influence of "home" and the desire to work and live and love is increased a thousand-fold.

The Mouth Germ

In 85 per cent of their appendicitis cases, the famous Drs. Mayo, of Rochester, state, the Amoeba Bacillus, the mouth germ (always present where teeth are neglected) is found. And at least 80 per cent of all stomach troubles can be traced directly or indirectly to poor conditions of the teeth.

Can there be any better argument for care of the teeth?

THE CALL

for good lumber at low prices has been answered by us. Did you know that lumber is one of the very few things that has not soared away out of sight in price since the opening of the war?

Regardless of the purpose for which you need lumber, whether for an entire building, or just an odd little repair job, we can furnish you good, clean, knotless selected white pine at attractive figures.

Perhaps, it is a new hog house you're needing, or a garage, or a barn. Perhaps you want to build some troughs or some chicken coops. We have the lumber to fill your bill, no matter how big or how small, and we will be glad to figure it for you.

Big Line of Screens

How about those screens? Are they whole and do they fit right? Everybody knows the flies must be kept out. It is dangerous to be careless about the doors and windows. Let us measure up the openings and fit you out with screens that will wear and wear. We have the screen by the foot or yard, also, if your screens need repairing.

Wakefield's Joy Night

Every Wednesday evening... gram of band music follow... a short discussion by either... or outside speaker is a feature... joy night in Wakefield. Shows... stures are kept open... from the country and other... as well as from Wakefield... visit until a late hour.

The band, which would do... to a street parade... field, was organized a year ago... December under the leader-... J. H. Ebersole. At that time... of the boys and eve... experience, but after a few week... hard practice, they began to play... public. About the first of May, 1916, the idea of a mid-week open air concert was conceived. The merchants and business men were only too glad to boost the proposition, and accordingly they agreed to give a definite amount, each month to support the organization. These subscriptions are collected the first of each month...

From time to time new equipment such as instruments, suits and things has been bought. The following pieces:

Röbert Anderson, first clarinet; Mr. Fawcett, first clarinet; C. Hoagter, second clarinet; De... Hyde, second clarinet; Harold... alison, alto; saxophone; Clifford Carlson, tenor saxophone; Al... Olson, solo cornet; Harry Whigg... man, first cornet; Roy Lennert, first cornet; Harold Henry, alto; Melv... The boys practice each Monday and Friday evening at the fire hall. Although more than half of the band boys have enlisted for military service it is hoped that the concerts can be continued throughout the summer.

Rev. C. J. Holm has been secured to speak next Wednesday evening. He will talk on "Impressions of New England." Some of the stores are offering specials for concert night and an unusually large crowd is expected.

School Meeting Monday

At 10 o'clock Monday morning the school board held a meeting in the high school auditorium. The secretary's report was read and affirmed, after which the treasurer gave his report. This was an encouraging report from the fact that the district is out of debt and the finances are in good condition.

A plan was laid out for the question of installing domestic science in the school. A compromise was finally made in which it was agreed to have a place to have it. It was generally agreed that for sanitary reasons, the basement of the school was not a suitable place to hold it.

A plan was laid out amounting to $7,500 to be used for all school purposes.

Date of the opening of school and the periods for vacations, were left to the board.

In the election of trustees, L. C. Xuernberger succeeded himself, for a period of three years, and Dr. E. J. Fleetwood was the member elected for a period of three years. The following teachers have been elected for the coming year: Superintendent, W. E. Zerfel; of Tekamah; principal, D. E. Bruce, of DeCatur; assistant principal, Miss Alma Craven, of Wayne; seventh and eighth grades, Miss Eleanor C. Borg, of Wakefield; fifth and sixth grades, Miss Olive Huse, of Wayne; third and fourth grades, Miss Maude Kayton, of Lyons; primary, Miss Olive Hall, of Neigh, and music, Miss Amy Stocking, of Glencoe, Minn.

Nothing Succeeds Like Success

Did you know that advertising has increased in volume more rapidly than any other business or industry during recent years?

Did you know that the gain in advertising in 1915 was 33 per cent over 1914?

Did you know that the country newspapers reach 60 per cent of the total population of the United States?

What Experts Say

The Hudson Automobile Co., in a trade paper sent out to each of its dealers and salesman: "We would rather see the Hudson advertising today in the leading newspapers of every city than in any group of national magazines. Make frequent use of your leading paper to push the Hudson, for there you can place the most telling message today."

S. H. Holstad, wholesale coffee firm, in a letter to dealers: "You have in the local newspaper an advertising medium far better than any mail order concern has. The retailer who is not using his local newspaper for advertising is overlooking a big trade possibility."

An implement dealer says: "Newspaper advertising pays us. Our weekly message costs us about one-third of a cent per farmer reached. During the last two years we have had at least one order from everyone of those farmers. Many have become regular customers as a result of a call to see some advertised machine."

The REO—Built for Service—The DORT

THE NEW SIX

Is the neatest seven-passenger car to come out in many a year. But more than that, this Reo Six is not only a "good car for the money" but is a thoroughly good car. It is "the Gold Standard" of values in sixes. Come in and study the lines. Notice that the backs and seats are soft, yet firm. You probably already know the superior points of the Reo motor. If not, ask us to demonstrate them. For sturdiness, buy a Reo.

ACCESSORIES AND SUPPLIES

WHY A DORT?

Because it includes so many of the features of the cars that are much higher in price. For instance the Dort has the combined clutch and brake which does away with the awkward emergency lever; the double-exhaust system, increasing the road-power of the engine 12 per cent; and unusually large bearing in the crankshaft. The Dort is light in weight and rational in length, and above all, it is very moderate in its cost to buy, use and maintain.

Dempster-Cope "Winner" Hay Tools

"THE LINE WITHOUT A PEER"

Modern, Practical Stacker

Which pitches the hay on the stack. It does not simply lift the hay up in the air and then dump it. Instead it has a regular pitching motion and turns the hay over so that it falls flat on the stack.

ONLY REALLY ADJUSTABLE STACKER

The Dempster-Cope "Winner" is the only stacker that is really adjustable. No. 1 begins the stack on as low a lift as 12 feet. As the stack grows the driver simply sets two adjustment pins in the next holes. When it comes to topping of the stack the loads of hay can be held on the fork and then placed by hand just where it is wanted. Because of this adjustment system, shorter pieces are used than would be practicable if the stacker elevated to full height all the time. These pieces are made lighter, but stronger. The Dempster-Cope has only one casting and one cable, which is always tight.

Anybody knows how much easier it is to top and a 12-foot ladder than an 18-foot. Any farmer will know the difference in lifting hay 12 feet as against 18 or 20 feet on a windy day. Now that is just the difference in moving and operating a Dempster stacker.

Three-Headed Sweep Rakes

Are exceptionally strong and durable. See how well yessed and braced the head is, and you will understand why it is that the Dempster-Cope "Winner" No. 8 sweep rake never sags.

GOOD FEATURES AT EVERY POINT

Notice too the extremely high back which keeps the hay from sliding over the axle and causing grief at unloading time. The tongues are flexible and so attached to the outer ends of head as to take the weight off the horses' necks. Flexible tongues also let the teeth follow the unevenness of the ground. Examine the sliding seat. With this you can raise the teeth from the ground when the rake is not loaded and you can lessen the pressure of the teeth on the ground when the rake is full of hay.

The teeth are pointed with pressed steel points. The axle is tubular steel. The wheels are large in diameter. They are fitted with removable dust proof bearings. These rakes are 12 feet wide and the teeth are 8 feet and 8 inches long.

The thrifty farmer when he thinks of Harvest Tools, thinks of McCormick—that's our line. Don't lose out on ordering twine early. It will pay you.

VALUABLE FACTS ON PRUNING THE TOMATO

Some valuable information on growing tomato plants has been received by Herman S. Siems, garden supervisor from the agricultural department of the University of Nebraska and is published here for the benefit of inexperienced gardeners. The tomato is made to produce better and earlier fruit by pruning for growing fancy or early fruit. The pruning of the tomato plant is profitable. The pruning of the tomato is the removal of a part of the plant. The tomato always produces branches in the axils of the leaves. These branches soon appear after the plant is set into the garden. The common belief is, that where so many of these branches are allowed to grow the plant produces too many fruits for the roots to develop properly.

The removal of these side branches is called pruning. The side branches should be cut off with a knife or better pruned off with the thumb and finger. These branches should be removed as soon as they start to grow, and when done at the proper time they are easily broken off. If the plant is to be pruned to one stem all the side shoots are removed. This allows the main stem of the plant to grow and to produce a one stemmed plant. If a two stemmed plant is desired, the first side shoot which appears is removed and is allowed to grow and to produce a large branch. All of the side shoots on the second stem are removed the same as on the first stem. A three or four stemmed plant may be produced by allowing three or four branches to develop. Tomato plants which are to be pruned to one or two stems can be planted closer together than unpruned plants. A good distance to set the tomato plants when pruning is to be practiced, is two feet apart each way. If a little more room is available three feet between the rows makes it easier to pick and to cultivate the plants. Two feet apart in the rows is ample space, between each plant. When pruning the tomato plant it should be handled carefully. Rough cutting of the plant at the time is injurious to the growth of the plant. It is usually better to remove the side branches with the finger than with a knife. Have a sharp knife, which will slip and often cuts the plant which either destroys or badly injures it. Do not neglect the pruning until the branches become large. If the branches are allowed to grow big, they take away the energy and the food supply from the main stem and a loss of vigor is the result. It is necessary to go over the plants three or four times in order to remove all of the side shoots. Once every ten days is usually often enough, but occasionally the grower must go over his plants more often. Pruned plants should be tied to some kind of a support which should be done at the time of pruning.

compared with 158,142,000 bushels last year, 351,854,000 bushels in 1915 and 233,571,000 bushels, the average for the previous five years. First announcement of areas planted follows: Spring wheat 19,039,000 acres. Oats 485,168,000 acres. Barley 3,379,000 acres. Condition of the various crops on June 1 was: Winter wheat 79.9 per cent of a normal crop; spring wheat 71.6; all wheat 78.5; oats 88.8; barley 89.3; rye 84.3; hay 85.1; pastures 85.8; apples 73.9; peaches 69.5. Condition of winter wheat by important states follows: Ohio 66; Indiana 62; Illinois 64; Missouri 64; Nebraska 69; Kansas 69; Oklahoma 69. Condition of spring wheat by important states follows: North Dakota 86; South Dakota 85. The forecast of production of the country's principal crops, as estimated today by the crop reporting board of the department of agriculture from reports on conditions on June 1, follows: (Figures in million bushels):

Crop	1916	1917-15
Winter wheat	373	482
Spring wheat	158	264
Oats	259	640
Barley	1,881	1,252
Rye	214	181
Hay (tross)	57.9	47.4
Apples	208	141
Peaches	45.4	36.9

MADE EASY TO BUY BONDS

Arrangements have been made whereby employees of the Nebraska Telephone company may subscribe for government bonds of the "Liberty Loan" and pay for them on monthly installments, according to amounts received by Manager J. R. Almond.

In addition to the $5,000,000 of the bonds which the Bell Telephone system has taken it is expected that the employees of the various companies of the system will subscribe for an equally large amount under the plan of paying for the bonds in monthly installments. The installment plan provides for the payment of $4 each month for ten months and $5 per month for two months on each $50 bond for which the employee subscribes. This will enable telephone employees to pay for their bonds in one year and collect six months interest in June, 1918. This will give them a return of approximately 34 per cent interest on each installment payment. In case an employee desires at any time during the year to make all remaining payments at once and take up his bond, he will be permitted to do so.

WHEAT ESTIMATES SURPASS LAST YEAR

Washington, June 8.—The prospective wheat crop of the United States this year was forecast today by the department of agriculture at 650,000,000 bushels, comprising a revised estimate of the badly damaged winter wheat crop and the first estimate of the new spring wheat crop based on June 1 conditions. That compares with 643,000,000 bushels harvested last year and 506,000,000 bushels, the average crop for 1911-15.

Outlook is improving. Improved weather conditions during May and increased prospects for winter wheat indicated a crop of 373,000,000 bushels. The crop began this spring under adverse conditions, 1,243,000 acres having to be abandoned because of the severe winter and other causes. April 1 conditions indicated a production of 403,000,000 bushels but during the month growing conditions were so poor that the May 1 forecast was reduced to 365,106,000 bushels. The increased spring wheat area, placed at 19,039,000 acres and the better growing conditions, the best growing conditions in the best production of 283,000,000 bushels

HELPING THE FARMER

Nebraska Farmer. A farmer said to me the other day, "We would appreciate it if the city man would give us less jawbone and more elbow grease." He then proceeded to explain that in the city and small towns of the state there are a lot of able-bodied retired farmers and a host of men who have had farm experience. If these could be called into the harness to help the farmer over the hill when he is pulling the peak load of the busiest three or four weeks during the summer, it would go a long way toward solving the farm labor question for this year, at least.

I think that farmer had the situation sized up about right and I am glad to see small town commercial clubs and community clubs organizing their forces so that they may give the farmer just that kind of help. In one town of which I heard recently I said there are no doubt dozens of men who are doing the same every business house has promised to release one man for farm work for two weeks during the busiest season.

The "peak load" is the thing that is worrying the farmer just now. He is getting his crop into the ground in pretty good shape and he will be able to handle it until making hay, cutting grain and plowing. All come together. Then the S. O. S. signals will go up all over the farming country. Unless that call for help is answered there will be thousands of acres of corn in Nebraska that will not receive a third cultivation. I believe farmers generally will welcome the move on the part of the fellow in town to lend a helping hand in the field. If the situation can be handled in that manner it will remove the necessity for farmers to take a class of indigent transient laborers into their homes and it will relieve the necessity for clearing the community of that class of laborers after the rush is over. Furthermore, the retired farmer of the city is a much more reliable and efficient helper on the farm.

A REAL SALVATION ARMY.

(Sixty.) We are coming, Woodrow Wilson, from the furnace and the farm. We have heard the call to battle, and the sound of war's alarm. We have hoped and prayed and waited for the bloody strife to cease. For the day when warring nations would resolve on "rest and peace." But the answer is a floodtide of more desolating scenes— Of a ruthless wreck and ruin wrought by German submarines. As an answer to the Kaiser from Columbia's royal sons, We are coming, Woodrow Wilson, with a million men and guns. In the work of fell destruction, Prussian lords have shown no heart; They have murdered helpless people, they have spared no works of art. They have slaughtered little children in the face of defenseless towns. While lords, castles and cathedrals have alike been battered down, Such a hell of human fury as displayed in this dark war, Such a disregard of honor never cursed the world before. By the side of it Attila was the gentlest of all Hunns. We are coming, Woodrow Wilson, with a million men and guns. We are coming, Woodrow Wilson with a purpose none can stay— We propose to end the swaggers of that Prussian beast of prey. Not for conquest, not for profit, is the starry flag unfurled, But to light the torch of freedom in every heart—without the sword. There is labor for our people, ward the east, where breaks the morn; There is sacrifice and sorrow, but the burden must be borne. For the work to be accomplished you can trust your loyal sons— We are coming, Woodrow Wilson, with a million men and guns. Has a Good Opinion of Chamberlain's Tablets. Chamberlain's Tablets are wonderful. Leeson said anything that beat them," writes F. B. Pressey, Richmond, Ky. When troubled with indigestion or constipation give them a trial.—Adv.

John Wanamaker says:

"It seems to me that retail advertising is a very simple matter in these times, when the newspaper goes into every home in the land. I believe that the retail merchant who fails to advertise, fails in his duty to his customers. The public has a right to know what a merchant is doing; it has a right to know what sort of goods he has in his establishment, and what kind of service he renders and what the conditions of his service are. It has a right to know when he receives new goods, and has a right to know what the new goods are like. No merchant nowadays ought to expect the public to give him its patronage unless he comes out frankly and tells the public what reasons he has to expect its patronage. And he ought to do this in the daily newspapers or the weekly newspapers if there is no daily in his town. That's the way for him to stand fair and square with the people whom he expects to come in and buy his goods. Let his advertisement be the truthful news of what he is doing, and let him print it in the newspaper, where news belongs, and then he will be playing fair with the public and deserving of its confidence."
