Chiropractic For After Effects of the "Flu"

Chiropractic achieved wonderful results in the recent flu epidemic. It will achieve just as wonderful results in dealing with the "after effects" of the flu. In every case where you have been a victim of the flu, lose no time, but at once see your Chiropractor and let him give you a thorough examination and make sure that you are completely normal. In any event it is always wise to take a course of Chiropractic Spinal Adjustments to anticipate the development of any after effect. It is easy to eradicate such after effects if they are still in their incipient stage. Some common after effects of the Flu are Chronic Bronchitis, Chronic Rhinitis, Headache, Trouble, Angina Pectoris, Chronic Gastritis, Chronic Nephritis and Cystitis. Any of these will yield readily to Chiropractic Adjustments. Consultation and Spinal Analysis Free.

Wagon Journal, May 17, 1919.

The following full account of the accident last week on the railroad between Wayne and Norfolk is from the Sioux City Journal of Saturday, May 17, 1919. The accident occurred more than five miles from Norfolk, about 6 a. m. May 9. The regular train from Sioux City to Norfolk was delayed on account of the storm and did not go on to Norfolk the night preceding the accident.

In the following morning (Wednesday) the conductor received orders to run the train in early so as to leave Norfolk for Sioux City on time. About five miles from Norfolk the purpose of allowing the drainage water to pass to Spring Branch, which was a culvert by the name of running at a speed of not more than twelve miles per hour, the engine fell through the tender being buried under the cow.

Next to the tender was a freight car which passed completely over the engine and landed on the other side of the culvert.

This car was filled with household goods belonging to a mover, and also contained a cow. On opening the car by cutting away one of the household goods were found scattered all over, the cow underneath it. Remains of it may seem when these goods, badly broken as they were, were removed the cow walked out uninjured. Following this the car was filled with freight cars loaded with lumber and through freight to Salt Lake. Five of these were crushed in hopeless confusion on top of the engine which was literally heaped and broken into atoms. The other cars, including the passenger and mail coach remained standing on the track. The cause of the accident was chiefly traceable to the carelessness and negligent manner in which the culvert was built. The culvert was built on piles driven into quicksand not to exceed four feet. The culvert was only about forty feet in length. The heavy rains washed away the sand causing the piles to fall and float away. Owing to the looseness of the culvert the sand iron did not sag, and to all appearances the culvert was intact, not unsafe. Just before reaching the culvert the fireman walked out upon the engine to clean the same, while on the other hand the head brakeman entered the engine and seated himself there after the driver or brakeman this seat cost him his life; the fireman escaped by jumping from the other hand and the engineer was caught between the cab and freight car and was there held by the light leg. Immediately after the accident the engine was carried to the town and the Union Pacific engine just ready to go to Columbus was ordered to the scene. The engine was in a state of confusion. The engineer, alive and unconscious, was found, his head just above the water, and finally held by his right foot. Over four hours were spent in chopping, sawing and otherwise demolishing the intervening material which finally gave way and the engine was carried by his right leg mashed to a jelly. Only his pluck and courage saved him from death. Late in the afternoon the body of the brakeman was extracted, horribly mangled. It was found close to the boiler of the engine, and was not even covered with mud debris. At 6 o'clock this (Saturday) morning the wreck had not been totally removed, although a force of workmen and teamsters were immediately sent from Sioux City, and work was kept up throughout the day. The name of the engineer was Samuel J. Dyer, and that of the brakeman Edward Egan. The latter threw a large family. It is hoped that the engineer, whose leg was promptly

A Good Corn Planter is One of Your Best Friends

There is a big difference between the yield of crops planted with an inaccurate planter and one that is accurate. You use the same amount of seed—but the difference is in the crop—often amounts to as much as five, six or seven—yes and more bushels per acre.

Here is a point we want you to think over: If a planter mixes only five kernels in every 100 hills there is a loss of five bushels per acre in the yield.

The accurate planter avoids that loss—it proves to be one of your best friends—it does itself work and saves your money.

Wanting to know you the John Deere No. 999 Corn Planter—a planter that has built a first-class reputation because of its accuracy. It is just as accurate as the human hand.

You can plant 2, 3 or 4 kernels without changing seed plates or stopping the team. You can change from hilling to drilling instantly. You get nice different drilling distances without changing the plates.

We will be glad to have you call and see why this planter has been termed the accurate planter. Putting it into your field this year may save you a lot of money when you gather your crop. Let us show it to you at any rate. We'll be glad to see you, even though you aren't ready to buy now.

QUALITY Goes Clear Through

The Dorr is a tried and test-proved, automobile-planned and built to meet the special needs of buyers who expect exceptional value.

Designed by the eminent French engineer, M. Etienne Planche, who brought to his task the best of both foreign and American experience, the Dorr chassis has continued practically unchanged. Because of simplicity, strength, power, and efficiency without waste were built into it as the beginning.

Examination, tests, comparison, inquiry from owners—all strengthen the favorable reputation enjoyed by the Dorr through doing well and more than is expected of a car at its price.

In the well-considered purchase of an automobile, two requirements dominate—the construction of the car and the responsibility of its makers. You see more square, fairly sized, your ideal in every mechanical feature, yet it is a poor "buy" if not produced by a strong and permanent organization.

If it is a Dorr it will not be "orphaned." Back of the investment stands financial stability, integrity and permanence. The same sound principle of "nothing too good for the customer," which for years governed the marketing of Dorr motor-horse-drawn carriages, persists in the marketing of Dorr motor-driven carriages.

UNCLE WALT

THE POET- PHILOSOPHER

KEEP OFF

When gentle Annie beams and smiles, I'd like to roam the forest sides, far from the madd'ning crowd, but when I'd try that scenic of mine, I find the omnipresent sign. "No Trespassing." Above it I mean ten dollars or ten days to wander in the woodland maze and hear woodpeckers sing: "They've fared in every glade and grove, and there's no place for weary men to breathe free air, by jing. Sometimes with other easy marks, I journey to the public parks, to make the slow hour pass; to rest upon the sward I yearn, but there's a sign at every turn, which says, "Keep Off the Grass." I used to fish when I was young through meadow, cove and dell I pined, and to one called me down; the woods and all the streams were mine, all day, I fished with hook and line, and then they took to town. "But now if I go forth with bait, I meet some frowny forbidding clerk who cries, "No fishing here, and if I laugh his rede to scorn, I'm soaked ten dollars in the morn, which makes my fishing dear. Jehovah gave us verdant hills and hewing woods and bubbling rills, and ponds as clear as glass; but man has fenced things in, we see, and nailed to every post and tree his sign, "Keep Off the Grass."

THE WIND

I'm often weary of the wind; sometimes think it should be tinned (the British word for "canned"); it's ten, and sleep till five; and feel so joyous when we rise we laugh and sing and swat the flies; realize that we're alive. Oh, in another month or two the nights will be restful; and all the hours of darkness through we'll kick and toss and sweat and sleep each on his steam iron cot. But now the nights have pleasant chill and snoring is a treat; and we can slumber with a will of Morpheus we set our fill, and dream of Mike and Pete. Every such moment ere it goes and treasure, except hours, for soon the heat will need your nose and shrivel everything that grows, and make existence sour."

HOHENZOLLERN.

For many years old Kaiser Bill accomplished fine things for his state, we must admit, already still, that Kaiser Bill was great. He helped the state in every way by every fair and unfair means; and now his chuckle is a great success.

I was Kaiser Bill who spilled the beans. Now who remembers how he wrought to uproot them in industry, and how he gave his misbegotten thought to fighting wars for German cheer? Forgotten are his cool far views; men think but of his cunning and audacious heart with their eyes, but the guy who spilled the beans? If Bill had wanted to have dropped throne and crown, he had done these things enough to earn a war and the things that men will be bought with his word, and humbly he is next of greens, while peasants say, "He is no good! He is the jaw" he spilled the beans. How Kaiser Bill did the exact thing to know that he was better to talk about his one foot but? How his wife and the son, when on his windowsill he leans, and hears the passerby exclaim, "There is the skate who spilled the beans?"

YESTERDAYS

The bright and golden yesterdays are pleasant to remember. When we life-weary mortal joys have reached the bleak December, I like to think of goodly acts and struggles to recall them. I grieve and linger over the facts and misdeeds and overlook them. "Alas, my goodly deeds are few, and, dying, in my scanty I blush to bring them into view, their numbers are so scanty. I envy much the ancient gent who beguiled his old girl, who spent his green back with such content, and well spent days behind him. Age has no terrors for that; court this memory, a treasure, no fading sight, or lack, or gout gall that's spent his pleasure. To one who's spent his younger years in vain and weariness, old age is a time of sighs and tears, remorse and melancholy. It's sad to see a hoary guy in sorrow wade and ponder, because of sins in days gone by, when he was quite a rascal. When one is old such things come back, and haunt his recollection, and so he mopes around his shack, the symbol of dejection. There's nothing like a well spent life to make its sunset cheer when one has toiled through his wife, and evening finds him weary.

LET THEM GO.

If a man is discontented with this country of the free, with a government invented for such folks as you and me, let him take his suits and knives, pack his bonnie and braids, and crosses in the second-hand vesicles, and go sailing o'er the sea. If a man comes here to jabber while the other fellows work, if he's prone to be a Statifier, with his anarchic dink, let us tell him, through our faces, well, be happy if he chooses to go and foreigners lurk. If a skate front Europe's alleys comes to this "Spangled Shore, hoping by his guile and gallees to make honest work for sore, let us curb his crazy notion, let us curb his weird emotion, let us lead him to the ocean and the ship that sails at four. War has held our people nervous, and we should reduce to junk any freedom comes to serve us with a lot of Russian bunk; let us treat him as a traitor, as a sinful agitator; let us load him on a freighter, where the billows go berkump.

High War Prices Are With Us Yet

With fighting ended, the troubles war brought us did not stop.

During the war the telephone companies, like most other industries, were hit hard by prices for equipment and by the loss of trained employees.

Now our former employees are gradually being released from military service and returning their old positions.

Although the price of telephone equipment is still very high, we are able to obtain it more promptly than a few months ago.

Our plant facilities, which during the war were extended only for urgent needs, are gradually being restored to normal condition.

And telephone service, too, is steadily improving and getting back to our pre-war standard.

But the cost of furnishing telephone service is much more than it was when the war began.

And high prices for equipment and generally high operating expenses are problems we shall no doubt have to meet for several years.

The treaty is now up to the Germans, and while they will offer many objections, they will probably finally accept their situation. When considering the terms, they should reflect on the enormity of their offense to humanity during the war and their effort to establish free governments and dominate the world. They should reflect on the kind of terms they had won exacted if they had won.

At this time, when assessors are around interviewing people to find out their worldly possessions, we are reminded that the levy could be made if all properties were listed at values in accordance with the facts. The man who gives in as little as possible does so at the expense of his neighbor. The list is nearly complete and correct report. If taxation were uniformly just the levy could be reduced without reducing the amount of money raised.

Wayne has reached a crisis in its history. If it does not do the things that are being done by progressive modern cities elsewhere, it will slip backward. If it refuses to vote bonds for public improvements, it will lose property values. It is the most important thing that is being done here. If it sanctions public improvements, it will gain money. It is the most important thing that is being done here. If it refuses to vote bonds for public improvements, it will lose property values. It is the most important thing that is being done here.

Wayne is no exception to the rule in having to contend with those who are against bonds for public improvements. Every forward step everywhere is fraught with opposition. People will remember that the program for Wayne was to build for electric lights, waterworks, and sewerage were opposed. Now no one would do without the improvements mentioned. Similar unanimous approval will follow drainage and paving. Everyone will be glad and wonder that any pulled the wrong way.

In a speech in Paris Saturday, President Wilson declared that the United States is materialist and dollar-worshippers. The fact that the United States entered the war to advance the freedom of the world and give the men and money without stint for the purpose, ought to be accepted as proof enough that we put principles and ideals above dollars. As a matter of truth we do not believe there is another nation on earth that will sacrifice as much to uphold the principle of right as the United States. As proven by the war, the president said: "This is the spirit of the people of the United States, that they have kept their legions to send 2,000,000 men over here to tell you so. It has been the great privilege not merely to tell you so in words, but to tell you so in men and material—the pouring out of their wealth and the offering of their blood."

What is claimed to be the biggest community enterprise in the United States is proposed at Drexler, southern Nebraska. It is proposed to raise $2,000,000 in the next six months to make public improvements. The county is not so rich as Wayne county, and Drexler is not so large nor so rich as Wayne. If Drexler can raise $2,000,000 for improvements, Wayne can easily pay interest on enough money to properly drain and pave the city. The project will not cost so gradually that it will not be felt. Wayne can be a growing, flourishing city or it can wobble along in pitiful mediocrity. A bonded step in a new era of development and expansion. Let us have Drexler in mind when asked to sanction public enterprise, and not hesitate to do the comparatively little asked.

I. W. W.-ism in Peril. New York World: They were having no more than the usual amount of trouble at Chicago until an unaccustomed delegate arose and solemnly proposed that an expert be selected to give the bonds of their organization. Then the delegate opened. If there is anybody that the I. W. W. naturally dislike more than any other organization, it is the lawyer of the law it is an auditor. Every auditor is a servant of capital. And so that, if possible, every man should be an expert with figures and not an abstract, abstract, abstract, multiply, and if anything happens to the missing he has an uncomfortable way of making his business known. The fact is that the I. W. W. is a flat denial of every proposition in government, industry, and commerce that other people commonly accept as fundamental. The man who vulgarly tried to subject the brethren to anything so odious, as a mathematician was promptly frowned down after which his offensive motion was tabled. Probably we shall hear of this matter again. When warlike aggressors sufficiently to impel one of its rotaries to reveal an interest in its cash account it is already in the coils of the serpent of thrift and responsibility.

Organize Community Club. Norfolk News—May 14: The Lindsay Commercial club went out of existence Tuesday night and was replaced by the Lindsay Community Club with quite an increase of membership. The old officers were elected for the coming year as follows: P. A. Carlson, president; H. B. Miller, secretary; and W. P. Swoboda, treasurer. The club also adapted a special automobile plan for the use of members on their cars; then the meeting adjourned. A commemorative luncheon at which plans were perfected for the month celebration to be given by the returning soldiers, the date awaiting the delivery of the bronze plate which was ordered a month or two ago to be placed on the monument erected by Lindsay, and completed on Jan. 20, 1919. Lindsay by claim to the first monument erected in honor of the soldier boys, in the state and no doubt could take in a much larger territory. This was accomplished through the untiring efforts of Father Calamban who has shown more than a patriotic zeal in the soldier boys. As each soldier returns he is given an individual public reception. A reception was given to George Bessie and Albin Krall who returned from France and had been there together, both going over the top six or seven times. Father Calamban was also put in charge of the committee for the big dinners which will make it an assured success and a model of such receptions, and towns congratulating such receptions would do well to watch the date and come to Lindsay for that day and see what a real celebration, looks like.

Buddies. Stars and Stripes, France. We hate to talk about ourselves. We do, for a fact, despite the traditional willingness of the American to make known to the world the deeds of America. When it comes to handing laurels to our esteemed countrymen we do it gladly, but where the A. E. F. is concerned we maintain a modest reticence. Perhaps that is why the deeds of the army nurses have not been so chronicled in these columns. We have paid our compliments—every one of them well deserved—to the Red Cross to the cancer workers, to all those noble women who have sacrificed the comforts of home for a precarious existence in foreign lands in wartime, and to whom we render all honors. But of the army nurse we have said little. Like the doughboy she enlisted or her "bit." She came into the service without desire for reward. She has rolled up her sleeves and toiled along with us. In short, she is one of us. When everything is over and the inevitable fireside stories are born, there will come a time when the returned soldier will be recounting his experiences, and the girl who has been sitting there quietly will say: "Why, I was there, too. I was an army nurse."

And then the man who went through it all will stretch forth his hand and say, "Shine, Beldy." That is worth while.

Humility Would Become Her. Philadelphia Public Ledger: It behooves Germany to remember who won and who lost.

He Can Be Spared. Omaha World Herald: The thought of losing Borah may not put the republican party into such a panic as he thinks.

OPPORTUNITY FOR GRATITUDE. The Peace of Peace should be gladly paid. We were right when we went to war—and we won. It is worth everything to be right, and to win. While war was on our side—but not our ally. We hated war. Now that peace is here we should, and will, pay for it cheerfully. For we love peace. The Victory Liberty Loan is the price of peace. We can pay this price by lending. We are not asked to give. Our heroes have won peace for us—and through peace, have won prosperity.

Our fathers insured our National and individual wealth. This wealth we should gratefully lend to repay the insurance premium.

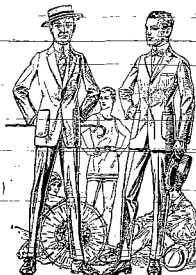

EXCUSING IS ACCUSING. In France, battle ground for world freedom, there is a man that might be learned by every American. Each it should be memorized in French or in English. Each American citizen should repeat it before meals and at bedtime until the close of the Victory Liberty Loan.

To French this maxim is: "Qui s'excuse accuse." In English: "Who excuses himself accuses himself." Perhaps the maxim is no better expressed in French than in English, but the French people, who have furnished the world the greatest example in patriotism, give us weight to this sentiment that do we Americans.

AMERICAN PHYSIQUE IMPROVED. nothing that is so now. A long term of enlistment is provided as the remedy. Then why does France call so loudly for a defense alliance with England and the United States? Because she knows that no matter how effectually Germany may be disrupted this year, and no matter what provisions may be made against future armament, it is impossible to keep disarmed a nation of 72,000,000 people that wants to play the war game. It has been difficult for the allies to preserve a unified front for the period since the armistice. What will happen in the next ten years nobody knows. It is quite possible to conceive a split in the allied camp. For example, Germany has opportunity to defy certain provisions in the treaty. Russia agreed under the Cerman treaty not to maintain a fleet on the Black Sea. When German arms were laid at the gates of Paris she notified the French and the allies of her intention to maintain a longer-beamed by the treaty. They acquiesced because they could not afford to fight. For example, Germany will have millions of trispart men. With plenty of machine tools and engines she will be in a position to build up a fleet of airplanes that could be transformed into bombing machines. She will be able to produce in poison gas, and in her mechanical appliances which mean so much in modern war. It is in the case of a nation like Germany is a disposition of the heart, it does not lie in external arrangements. No matter what terms are offered Germany will accept them unless she is in a position to defend herself. The only security for the safety of the United States is to disarm Germany in the event it would be the height of folly to trust the protection of this nation to the provisions of a treaty of no supposed force. Germany is the only nation disarmed, that the United States would be secure without its fleet and without military preparedness. Vans to Coast Atlantic. (Norfolk News, May 14). The transfer of arms to Germany is becoming one of the most important in the country, according to trade journals which point out the great activity of transfer men who are being taxed to capacity now with the transfer of furniture, six-to-six letters for transfer and storage houses in all parts of the United States and some from England, have reached one local transfer house since it joined a transfer men's organization. All of the letters come from cities of the metropolitan class. One letter from England offers to buy a large quantity of furniture in Norfolk and sent overseas, later to be placed on trucks and hauled to some home in England without moving the furniture from the time it is loaded into the van in Norfolk up to the time it is unloaded in England. This post-war arrangement is made to take the best care of furniture which has jumped in price. It is also predicted that this new activity will result in bringing to the United States the best class of old house furnishings without damage, and also to take to Europe American made furniture by those who will move across the Atlantic. The same letters indicate a great method through the new methods adopted by the transfer men can be more easily shipped from place to place. Norfolk storage houses are filled with household goods of residents who are busy making up their minds which to take. The storage houses indicate that the old idea that it is cheaper to buy new furniture than ship old, has been discarded. Enjoy Sneak Day. Norfolk News, Wednesday, May 14. Many members of the Norfolk High School senior class invaded Norfolk in two automobile trucks Tuesday afternoon and enjoyed a picnic party along the banks of the Elkhorn river. The class members, numbering ten girls and ten boys, left the Norfolk High School without permission of the faculty, filled two automobile trucks with a quantity of food and started on their way singing and selling. When they reached Norfolk they called at the home of Paul Buol, formerly of Randolph and became a frequent member of the Norfolk High School. The Norfolk High School was formerly a student of the Randolph schools. The "sneak day" affair was considered a success by the students.

The Best Investment in the World is Land

There is no excuse for not owning a farm in the best part of Colorado.

The land is rich and fertile, no hot winds to burn your crops, plenty of rainfall in the growing season and prices and terms are within the reach of all.

Thousands of dollars will be made this year in buying Kit Carson county land and this may be your last opportunity to own a farm in a level land, good soil, where rain is plentiful and crops are abundant.

We invite you to investigate and compare our land with any in the west at our expense.

"They sure are my pet peeves—bum batteries. That's why I always say for a car owner who wants to side-step trouble, the one best bet is a real 'B' battery—built for us auto folks who don't know anything about the secrets of a battery's insides."

"A PREST-O-LITE? Sure! I've got one myself, in my own little car, 'cause I know it's one battery that'll stick to its job of spinning the engine and feeding the headlights."

Pink Killarney roses were the favors. Between courses the following toasts were given: "Welcome," by Irene Iversen, president of the Junior; "Response," by Ulrich Press, president of the Senior class; "The future," by Miss Grace Harman, high school superintendent; Irene Iversen and Alice Baunmeister rendered a pleasing piano solo to the entire audience. The evening after the banquet was spent in games.

Class Play a Success

The class play, "Safety First," was given in the high school auditorium Wednesday evening to a large and appreciative audience. The play was a three-act comedy and Winside never before realized the amount of money that could be contained. Faye Wylie, with the assistance of an enormous red and white maid costume, made an ideal heroine in the main part of the play. Mary Clayton and Mildred Bright were exceptional in their portrayals of extreme wealth and their costumes might have convinced any real stage person. Bernice Kiefer was just the right size and as a piano soloist took her audience by storm. Ruby Olson acted well her part as mother of the wealthy sisters. Ulrich Press and George Smith acted so well that the club men falling to come home when they should, and all the trouble resulting from it, behaved in a very humorous way. The course of true love surely did not run smoothly for poor

Meredith Hatpin, and he had the sympathy of the entire audience. That is, all that could be spared from Charles Luger who had the usual grief that goes in winning a quick-tempered Irish maid such as Faye Wylie. A play without a villain would be slow indeed, but the several appearances of Homer Smith with vengeance in his eye and knife in his hand made the whole thing a bowling success. Mrs. William Bushnell visiting here from California, declared Winside needed no imported talent, that the local plays were better than many elsewhere. Miss Hatpin, she said, while the townspeople seem to think this play eclipsed all previous efforts of a home talent play. The following is the cast of the play: Jack Montgomery, a young husband; Fred Smith, a successful fish-George Nielson Mr. McNutt, a detective; Elmer Flanagan, awfully swinking; Meredith, Hatpin; Ben Mochla, the terrible; Homer Smith, Mable Montgomery, Jack's wife; Mildred Bright, Virginia Bridger, her younger sister; Mrs. Layton; Mrs. Harrington Jucker, their mamma; Ruby-Oman Zolicka, a tender; Bernice Kiefer; Mary Ann O'Finney, the Irish; Cook; Faye Wylie.

WORD FROM DAN T. BURRESS

In the Y. M. C. A. Service in France, He Writes 'Friends Here'.

La Guerche, France. April 16, 1919. Dear Wayne county friends: Since writing last I have made two moves. After working at Pressenville for two months I joined the 13th infantry of the same division. The town is situated in an engagement in the county of Haute-Saone, on March 11. I think that village was much as it was pleasantly situated and rugged foothills of the Vosges mountains which are covered with beautiful evergreen trees. A rooming station furnished power for light and water. There were four windows, glass and grimestones. There were four tile factories near the town.

By the largest ox team I ever saw, I saw an ox worked single that weighed nearly a ton. The ox is supposed to be the best for pulling is done by the head, a steel pin holding the great yoke to the wagon on tongue. At least one-half of the oxen, horses were hitched from two to four head tandem, and I think the rear horse did most of the pulling. They pull by chains attached to the thills of the wagon, and are driven by a man on foot with a single jerk-line. The man hitched two horses attached to most pay higher taxes, so I am told. Most of the wagons are two-wheeled, the wheels being extremely heavy and standing higher than the axle. I saw men plowing with four horses tandem, all walking in the furrow. This requires two men, and a plowman. Many women drivers and do all kinds men's work. Passivity had fewer manure piles than France, and was therefore much cleaner. Many of our soldiers helped haul out the manure in order to better conditions. But everywhere the animals and towns were devoted to the people. Hens made nice excursions into any vacant from the adjoining room. However, I was allowed to molest the eggs, which sell from five to eight francs ($1 to $1.00) per dozen. One day, I was gazing at a lace-curtained window, when suddenly a Frenchman came in two feet of the window and walked a giant ox. If an American isn't careful, he will make a calf on the Frenchman's cow instead of the French. I will say that these stables are kept extremely clean, and then only by accident that a cow stable adjoining by cantener: was dignified when the army left. Passivity, as I had sent to Paris for a camera to get views of the ox-teams, quail buildings and many beautiful landscape effects. One day I was out walking with a little donkey to a cart. The man worked between the thills pulling or holding the donkey, according to the order ahead of him.

This village was within thirty miles of Chamouat. General Persh had a headquarters here, and was only thirty miles from Verdun. I longed to visit Verdun, but it is not allowed at present. Ammunition dumps are being flooded and men and horses buried. I have applied for my first leave of ten days, and will spend it here. The Spanish soldiers are here with their families at Passivity. Some were enabled to learn English, and were able to teach themselves some English. The verb, as usual, is the least part to master and also the one most needed. The doughboys don't speak French, but make love to the girls, as Cupid speaks in the same tongue everywhere. As a result several thousand marriages have been effected in France. One party in my unit is only waiting the captain's consent, which the captain is withholding.

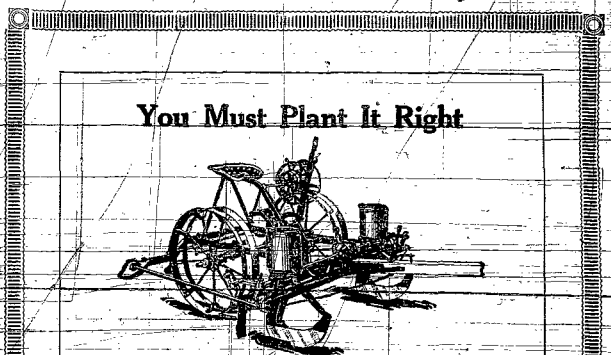

Last Friday our division began moving from the Chamouat to the Le Mans area, which means home, "oot-sweet," as the French say. Our battalion, about twelve hundred strong, left Passivity Friday 11 a. m. and arrived in Beaumont Sunday. The last made an hours' hitched "40 hommes or 8 cheval" (40 men or 8 horses). There were thirty-five cars, pulled by a U. S. engine, and over track built entirely by Americans since April, 1917. The officers had married the plowmen, coaches, and had many long waits on side tracks. The rations were "crumbly" and hard to eat. The French had a better idea of the immensity of Uncle Sam's war preparation than we. I saw a great many batteries at Jassy-Tell, also a big aviation camp with monstrous hangars, and acres and acres of salvage piles. The last made an hours' hitched "40 hommes or 8 cheval" (40 men or 8 horses). There were thousands of trucks, vehicles and cannon. I saw one pile of empty tin cans, and another of the Wayne Normal buildings, reminding one of the vastness of the commissary and alone Uncle Sam's railroad system here is equal in mileage to the Pennsylvania railroad system. Unless this vast property is sold, or given away, some poor dough boys will remain here several years getting it moved. We passed through one of the great vineyard sections, and saw many vines where the champagne is made. These vines, and many houses, were dug into the soil under cliffs, presenting only windows and doors to the left of the high stone walls. Some step hills are terraced and garden. I saw the "man-made" hill and which is so steep that Caesar failed to capture it. This village was very ancient, indicated by the use of stone tiles instead of the common "red" pottery tile. France is eight inches thick. This is at least one-half stone, consequently is everything built of stone, and which is very liberal with it. Passivity was the former home of the ruler of Lorraine and the great French king, and stands on the ruins of the stone of many battles. The tower is eighty feet high, forty feet in diameter, with walls twelve feet thick at the base. It has stood for many centuries, and will stand for many more. The hill directly contained many secret tunnels. (Just now a long train-load of doughboys are passing my billet, cheering at the top of their voices, doubtless because they already scent "Home, sweet home.") We are now in a more level country, only thirty kilometers from the city of Le Mans, which contains 100,000 inhabitants. Yesterday I walked over kilometers of a road, and then went to Le Mans after a cocoa outfit. It is "some" city, and the streets are so crooked that I could have been there several days, and only a mile show me the way out. The French do not have any such things as a straight road; so one depends on sign posts and men and horses expect to visit Le Mans again, just to see the noted cathedral, which is an immense one. Our division will be here until the end of the month.

On the 13th of April, I stayed with my unit, and reached the camp and with the rest of the unit. I am hoping it will go to the Army of Occupation, as I want to see Germany. Spring is well advanced here, plums are in full bloom, and winter wheat grain is nearly two feet high. It already contains heads. The flowers are in full bloom, and it is cold much of the time. This is a farming and dairy country, instead of hills and vineyards that I am accustomed to seeing, which is very noticeable, and also very home-like to me is the great number of fine, still-blood horses here. The French make a great deal of fine and much inferior to these. Food is much cheaper here, meals being made of only one-half the price we are accustomed to. As a result, on April first I have been operating a wet canteen, selling only cocoa and cookies. I had just spent one hundred francs on a bicycle, and on Passivity, and left three days later. Such is army life here today and gone tomorrow. Only half a cent here, and it is a good one with flour, sugar and piano. I have a part of the K. C. Sam's room to store my supplies, and a very nice one. The French have excellent beds, but deep feather affairs, from which it is difficult to part every morning. I am going to mention the great hop fields through which we passed. The hop poles, about every four feet, are made of stacked wagon shafts, serving for the new crop. I have seen several fine beds of strawberries, and the bushes are all in full blossom. This vicinity has large apple orchards. The community wash house is a common sight, where women lay the clothing on flat stones and beat them with a wooden mallet. The doughboys have taught them to use a brush instead of a paddle, and few people have seen them and feed the kids by bottle and nipple. The click of wooden shoes on stone pavements is a common sound to me now. I have seen several in ten or twelve years, wear a sort of dress over their other clothing. Trains on double tracks pass to the left door, but in some cases they are on and door tracks each in number, instead of on top. The K. C. Sam says to tell you that candles are very much in vogue here, and I have gotten so used to dim light that I will have to wear "blinders" when I get home. I used to think butter was necessary for my kitchen it is a luxury. However, we always have white bread, but I like the French bread best. It is baked in loaves, either two or three loaves, or in a circular shape, and carried on the arm. The baker never wraps it, because paper is very scarce. I have seen a few passenger cars running here. They are heavier than French cars, which have a heavy iron body, and are much toys compared with U. S. ones. I have just learned that we are slated to leave here for the support of S. W. Normandy, on the night of April 22, and sail at once. The boys are jubilant, but I can scarcely believe it. They were slated to sail from 20, but have been approved because they were nearer ready than other divisions.

I've never received a home paper yet, and consequently few people have written me. I have not yet answered all who have written, but expect to do so. As I appreciated the letters, I have thought of writing my letters as personal ones to you, as it is utterly impossible to write to all. I now think one must be very homesick to write to those who are his friends, because I have heard from several from whom I never expect a letter and have not heard from the boys whom I supposed would write me. You may next hear from me in Germany. I do not care to return to the States, but I would like to time to enter school October 1. I would like to go to Rome for my first trip, but am barred from there at present.

"When you read of the late criticism of the Y. M. C. A. in France, consisting that men never kick dead things." The people in France is so immense that if a stone is thrown it will surely hit it. It was we prove that we are alive by making some mistake, or for it never make mistakes. We are too busy "delivering the goods" to be making any mistakes. You know that you are no other than I, so why not write to me?" DANIEL T. BURRESS, 12 Rue d'Agout, Paris, France.

BEFORE you can raise a bumper crop of corn, you must plant the seed right. This can be done only with a planter that fits your particular kind of seed.

C B & Q Corn Planters are equipped with every convenience to make corn planting a pleasant task. There is a plate for every size of seed. Besides this, the planter is simple, durable, and accurate. It plants corn as you want it done. Every hill checked evenly, planted at just the right depth, and covered carefully. The automatic marker, the simple platch, the accurate valves, are features we want to talk to you about before you buy. They are features that are worth money to any corn grower. Come in and see us now.

Why C B & Q Planters Drop Kernels Accurately

To secure the best planting results all seed corn should be graded and seed plates selected that will fit the size and shape of the kernels to be planted. The planter then has an even chance to perform its work.

On the C B & Q planter the plates are operated directly from the seed chest. The drive shaft is always kept tight by an automatic chain tightener, which prevents any loss of motion in transmitting power.

This construction all has to do with the efficient working of the plates and the valves. The plates operate exactly on time so that the desired number of kernels are delivered to the upper valves and are there waiting to drop when the valves are tripped. The valves have a forced-feed action—in other words, a plunger which forces the kernels out together and into the bottom of the furrow.

The action of both the plates and the valves is positive. The power is dependable, the gears are carefully cut and therefore mesh properly, insuring a high percentage of accurate dropping for the planter. Adverse field conditions are met successfully by the C B & Q planter.

One of the strongest features of the C B & Q planter is its combined variable drop and clutch. The clutch is built into the dropping mechanism in a way that is simple and effective. By means of the variable drop, 2, 3, or 4 kernels can be applied in each hill, and the change can be made from the seat without stopping the team. The clutch is positive and accurate.

This is one of the strongest features on the C B & Q corn planter. Automatic market requires no attention at the end of the row. You can use edge drop, flat drop and full-hill drop plates in the same hopper without any change in the mechanism.

What do You Look for

FENCE POST?

When you consider putting up a fence you are naturally anxious to make the material and labor you put in last as many years as possible. Consider then the many advantages offered you in the "Century Steel Post."

Strength.—The construction of the post, with the double angle, gives a stiffness and rigidity to the completed fence, impossible by the lighter easy-bending posts. It is heavy enough to stand the most severe strains put upon it.

Easy to Set.—There are no holes to dig. Nothing to do but drive the post with a heavy mallet or sledge straight down in the spot you select. Effective as it is simple.

Stays Put.—When the post has been driven, the bar just beneath the ground level keeps it straight in line and rigid in the earth. Sets firmly in any kind of soil. Cannot frostheave.

Cannot Burn.—Prairie or forest fires or any other fire can do no harm to Century Posts. They will not warp nor bend.

Lightning Proof.—Your stock will not be killed by lightning because of the fence or posts you use, when a Century is used, for our posts immediately "ground" the bolt before it can do harm.

Saves Labor.—No holes to dig, no delay because of bad weather. Two men can do the work formerly done by six. Saves time in setting posts and fastening wire; 250 to 300 Century Posts can be set in one day.

Long Life.—The fence you put up with Century Steel Posts is put there to stay for years. Rust-proof steel posts mean permanency—this you can now have.

Reasonable Cost.—The cost of Century steel posts is very much less than their comparative value to you. They are low enough in cost to be well within your reach — they are the cheapest permanent investment you can buy.

The concluding toast, "Final Triumph of the League," was given by Miss Agnes Richardson, after which the guests returned to the church assembly room where the juniors presented the play, "Block Commencement," which was enjoyed by all. At a late hour, the guests departed feeling that the juniors had proven themselves jovial entertainers.

W. C. T. U. News.

May day, which proved to be a day of bombs in the United States, discussed the program of a quarter tier bomb in Nebraska for the forces of the evil one that could have been destroyed by the W. C. T. U. or boys' clubs. Beginning next week early that morning, W. C. T. U. workers began their personal campany of all present in Nebraska for new members. Present returns indicate that the membership has doubled and many districts are yet to be heard from. Satan knew he was defeated by 600 women, but would he has thrown up his hands in despair as he faces a host of 10,000. One feature of the May day drive was the luncheon held in many towns for the workers and new members. The luncheon social plan is new in W. C. T. U. activity. Here today the workers feel comfortable for the time or money to anything that savored purity of society. Now the policy of the organization has changed. It is no longer a social affair at present is to interest numbers in the work of the white-slave fighters. The fine working mechanism of this society and its firm establishment in all sections of the globe combined with numbers will place it foremost among international forces.—Committee.

FORMER MAYOR OF BIRMINGHAM, ALA., ENDORSER OF TANLAC

"You Will Hardly Know Me When We Meet Again, for I Am Getting Well," He Writes Friend.

One of the latest additions to the list of leaders of thought and action who have come forward with their qualified endorsement of Tanlac is the name of Hon. Frank V. Evans, former mayor of Birmingham, Ala., ex-state examiner of public accounts of Alabama, and at one time editor of one of the south's greatest newspapers, the Birmingham Age-Herald.

Writing to a newspaper friend in Atlanta, Mr. Evans says: "By the way, you will hardly know me when we meet again, because I'm getting so well and strong again. As I told you while in Atlanta, last month, I have been suffering for a long time with gastritis, as the doctors call it, really a disordered stomach with consequent constipation in the shoulders, headache, blebbing, heartburn, loss of appetite, loss of sleep, and fainting spells. For weeks I could not sleep on my back.

One week ago, upon recommendation of friends who had tried the medicine I purchased one bottle of Tanlac and began taking it. Since my second dose I have suffered none of these troubles to which I refer, and really believe I am going to get perfectly well and strong again. Won't that be wonderful at my age? Well, certain it is that Tanlac is a wonderful medicine, and you know I am not given to 'guffing' my experiments and am rather orthodox as to materia medica.

"I shall continue the treatment with perfect confidence in the final results."

"Signed, Frank V. Evans. Commenting on this splendid endorsement of Tanlac, C. P. Willis, international distributor of Tanlac, said:

Although the list of endorsers is a long one, I recall a few leading names that lend both dignity and credit to the entire array. Some of them are: Hon. C. W. Nagam, Atlanta, Ga., for three terms sheriff of Fulton county; Hon. Moses R. Glenn, superintendent of printing for the state of Georgia; Mr. C. C. C. Shepley, president of the Georgia Cotton Oil company; Mr. H. W. Hill, bank president of South Pittsburg, Tenn.; Mr. J. F. Corroll, cotton mill superintendent of Chattanooga, Ga.; Hon. A. E. Anderson of Houston, Tex., for seven terms sheriff of Harris county; Hon. S. M. Shepherd, ex-city councillor of Atlanta, and many others whose names have heretofore been given to the public. Tanlac is sold in Wayne.

New Century

Moline Cultivators

The factor of greatest importance in producing a good crop of corn on fertile soil, with a well prepared seed bed, is the killing of the weeds. Weeds deprive the plant of moisture, light and food, all of which are absolutely necessary for the production of crops

Points to Remember

Points to Remember

Simplicity

The John Deere Va. Levelless cultivator is the simplest form of riding cultivator yet devised. It works just like a walk-behind, that you can sit in a comfortable seat instead of walking across the field all day.

The width of tread may be easily and quickly changed. A variation of 4 inches is provided, adapting the cultivator to wide or narrow rows.

Even Penetration

Easy and even penetration is insured by the rigid couplings and the suction of the shovels. The rigs have only one point of connection with the frame, consequently are not influenced by the swerving of the team or the wheels passing over uneven ground.

Combined Riding and Walking

Don't overlook this point. You know how tired you get if you ride all day, as you have to do with most cultivators of this type. With the VA you can walk when you get tired of riding or ride when you get tired of walking.

Adjustable Balance

The balance is adjustable to the weight of a heavy man or a small boy. Simply lengthen or shorten the connection between axle and front arch. No tools needed—a tail nut does the adjusting.

Steele and Malleable Construction

Steel frame bars and malleable iron castings give the necessary strength without useless weight.
