Reminder of 1915.
Ainsworth, Neb., May 14. The continued rains in northwestern Nebraska recall the rainy season of the spring of 1915, when 6.19 inches fell in May, 5.66 in June, 9.16 in July, 3.56 in August, 5.13 inches in September and 2.15 in October. In 1915 the precipitation on April 15 was just about normal and the crops were in before the rainy season started. In January, February and March of 1915, 81.65 inches of snow fell and the precipitation for the year was nearly 50 inches, just about double that of normal years. On August 1, 1915, occurred one of the most destructive hail storms in the history of Brown county. The present rains are causing much delay to crop planting and farmers are feeling very much discouraged. "No corn has been planted in this county. Over three inches of rain fell here in a short time Tuesday afternoon.

Bollen of Wayne, nominated for attorney general, gave out the following statement accepting the nomination. He had previously announced that he would not be a candidate. "I have decided to accept the nomination tendered me by the Nonpartisan league and associated delegates at Grand Island. "The nomination came to me as a complete surprise and I was hesitant for business reason to accept. "I am the son of Judge A. G. Wray of York for governor has however, convinced me of the high principles of that convention. "I have decided to the office of attorney general I promise that I will not prostitute the office of attorney general for any political ends and will see that a single dollar is given every one. I promise I will leave no stone unturned in trying to stop profiteering in necessities of life."

Return of Mr. Beveridge.
Jay E. House in the Philadelphia Public Ledger: "Among those who, apparently, have beaten back we note the name of Albert J. Beveridge. After an absence of many years, Senator Beveridge returns to the front page, riding serenely beneath a blue head. We have always had a certain curiosity as to what happened to him. Twenty years ago Senator Beveridge was, perhaps the best example of the young statesman. In him was personified the highest expression of the type. His was the high forehead, his the cultured voice, his the impressive figure of middle-western politics. Ten years or so ago he sank in sixty-fathoms of water. In 1912 those who had marked the spot noted that bubbles were arising to the surface; but, after that, the waves washed over him again and he was seen no more. Now, Beveridge is back. May we not express the hope that he has come to stay."

A Severe Indictment.
Hartington Herald: Kustin opens his famous lecture on Sesame with the statement that the dominating motive of human endeavor is, "hires for applause rather than a sense of duty. This seems like a rather severe indictment, but a careful inspection convinces one that it is not far from the truth."

He and his family had lived there about two months. He was accustomed to let his debts grow and to let his subscribers wait for their salaries. To the Men Who buy inner tubes by guess

Your inner tubes are almost as important as your tires. But it takes a special skill—a rare skill—to build good tubes. Miller stands supreme in this field. For 24 years Miller has built super-grade rubber goods.

Miller today remains the largest maker of such things as surgeons' gloves. That sort of skill is needed in a tube. Men may differ on the best tire maker, but they cannot differ on the best tube maker. That place is conceded to Miller.

Miller Tubes are built of thin sheets of pure rubber—surgeon grade. They are built layer on layer, sheet on sheet, up to the proper ply. Then each tube is tested for hours under air pressure to make sure it is air-tight. Yet these ideal tubes cost no extra price.

If you will buy one Miller Tube and watch it, you will always cling to Miller.

The way the world looks depends on the man who sees it.

According to the Literary Digest, General Wood is in the lead as the republican presidential choice and Senator Johnson second and Governor Lowden third. Each one, however, falls considerably short of a major vote and the selection of a dark horse would not be surprising.

Governor S. R. McKelvie will deliver the commencement day address at the Wayne State Normal this year, and the governor is young and apt to appreciate the impulses and aspirations of the students, and old enough to exercise sound judgment and give wise counsel. Friends of the town should join the State Normal in welcoming the governor.

Chorus girls in a big New York theatre are no longer permitted to paint their faces, but must appear with natural complexion, according to an edict issued by the manager. "If a girl isn't beautiful enough naturally, I don't want her in my chorus," says the boss. If chorus girls can get along without rouge and whitewash, others cannot.

According to Vice President Marshall's recently published statement, he fears that people should carry out the will of their representatives rather than that representatives should carry out the will of the people. Manifestly, he thinks people don't know what they want or need, and that they should be prescribed for the same as a doctor prescribes for a sick patient.

It is announced from Chicago that the wholesale price of meat has declined sixteen per cent during the past year—the only thing that has gone down. And meat has not gone down far enough to correspond with the decline in the price of livestock. For instance, a hog so heavy in identity by the time it gets to be shipped out as pork that it has forgotten how it sold on the hoof.

During a ten-minute burst of warm sunshine last week, Editor J. W. Ruse, in a momentary fit of good expression to this: "What a privilege to get out into the open again after the long, dark, tedious days of winter! That a privilege to hear again the song of the birds, to see again the budding trees, to observe again on every hand the signs of a new and better life. During the weary, monotonous months of winter, the human spirit sometimes repines, but when the glad springtime arrives with bursting buds and fresh cheer and courage fill the heart."

Rains have been light and ineffectual during the past week, though the days and nights have been cooler than the season would ordinarily suggest. Farmers have turned to good advantage the cessation of storms and have made rapid headway in getting the corn planted. It is generally agreed that everything put into the ground has shown surprising growth. All kinds of vegetation are coming up with wonderful vigor to the late hints of spring. Though it has taken long, weary weeks to discharge the charges of winter, people are not discouraged. On the contrary, they have good reason to regard the future with feelings of optimism.

Salesmanship is a rare quality and therefore it is valuable. An individual blew into the Herald's sanctum the other day with volumes containing useful information. He conveyed the impression that he was a sort of government missionary and that the way to get into Wayne to talk to us about the books and give us a review of the contents. One would think he had been charged with so much authority that it would be a crime to refuse to listen. It took so long to find out that his mission was only to sell the volumes that he became immensely incensed. We think the salesmanship lies in going right to the point. People are too busy to listen to a lot of preliminary and ambiguous circumlocution. We are pleasant and even joyful, but hit the nail on the head.

Increased effort, with increased production in every line, is important to stabilize society and restore normal conditions. No trade or industry or business is exempt from the responsibility of tranquilizing a troubled world, knitting together the broken and social fabric and establishing pre-war peace and prosperity. "Let the other fellow do it" cannot be justly or safely assumed. The one who is able or willing to shirk now is likely to be in greatest need when conditions change. And because one class shirks is no good reason why another should shirk. It is a matter of honor, and it is to those who rise to the call of work and are not persuaded to lie down merely because others have halted and quit. If all classes should become indifferent to productive tasks, society would plunge into dangerous chaos. The interests of self and thus indirectly the interests of society should inspire highest and best endeavor.

What paper manufacturers are trying to do to country weeklies is a problem we can't solve. It looks as though they were indifferent to the business of furnishing them with supplies. It has been pointed out that one metropolitan publication uses more print paper alone than is needed to supply all the rural weeklies in America. Thus, it is pointed out that the metropolitan newspaper is the one almost exclusively in the thoughts of paper manufacturers. The metropolitan daily uses rolls; as a rule the country weekly does not. Manufacturers are heading their energies to make rolls; and pay little attention to the flat stock demand by the primary weekly. Whether this attitude toward the rural press has much, little or nothing to do with ascending prices, we don't know. We do know that many weeklies that find little demand for advertising space will have hard sledding if prices for stock keep going up. We would suspect that metropolitan dailies would finally be the only survivors if they could adequately cover the field now occupied by the weeklies, but they can't do that. But the rural publication must specialize in local news that cannot be handled by metropolitan publications in order to attract readers and command support. The time when a newspaper, carelessly edited and giving indifferent attention to local features, can win a readership through a home institution, is fast passing. Home pride refuses to longer take the piece of service and merit. Whether paper manufacturers aim to thin the ranks of country weeklies or merely regard the rural press with contemptuous indifference and neglect, we don't know.

We regret to learn that the Herald's criticism of the fist fight between a senior and junior of the Wayne State Normal last Thursday when the seniors were off for a day's vacation and the juniors were trying to interfere, had forth some disapproval. A few accept a slugging match as a mere incident in school life, and rather necessary to instill discipline and good citizenship. This of course would not be supported by any grade rule of discipline. If resort to brute force is sometimes a makeshift or unavoidable, it was not in this case. We call attention to the incident to shock students into a greater sense of the dignity and respectability. The two boys who were the heads for the time and expressed themselves in an ugly fight, are usually well behaved and useful members of the school. The ones who suffered most as a consequence, were the other members of the two classes who were not in sympathy but who were helpless and powerless for physical exercise, recreation, spirit and courage are great enough in the school without fostering the discipline of the school and any one who upholds such infractions of order as unobjectionable, accepting them as a matter of course, injures the discipline of the school and adds to the already heavy burdens of the president. Outside of the Wayne Herald, no institution here excites our interest so much as the Wayne State Normal. We are so jealous of its growth and good name that we are willing to go the limit of endeavor to see that it be given a square deal and that it is properly safeguarded against injustice. We are proud of the groups of bright and ambitious students who are taking the courses and graduating from the school. Thus, we were astonished at a physical violence in the circles we admire, and we would be quick again, as we were last week, to offer sharp resentment.

Moderately Priced, $5 to $35

The most complete stock we have ever had for your selection. Hundreds to choose from. You will be able to supply your needs in all sizes as cheaply and with a great deal more satisfaction here at home than in the city stores, who are even now accusing each other, in the papers, of marking their goods up before they took off the discount. These sales will soon be over, and the prices as before because there is a real shortage of most staple lines of merchandising and no price relief can be hoped for until production catches up.

There is an entirely pretty style here for every woman in summer, low shoes.

the footwear that fits, that retains its shapely qualities, that pleases the "one woman in a hundred" who thinks she can't be pleased except in custom made shoes.

Bunk

Just now a few big stores are attracting general public attention by the nature of the news of advertising they are using to boost their spring clearing sales.

They claim they are cutting prices 25 to 50 per cent to 37.5 per cent because they have the interests of their dear, downtrodden customers at heart and want to save them from the financial ruin they face on account of the present high prices. Their hearts have been touched by the plight into which their customers have been plunged since they are coming to their rescue, with merchandise at 20 per cent off. Of course this does not include trade marks, the standard merchandise of which the customer might know the real value. Indeed, their honor would permit them to do that—instead these philanthropic reductions apply mostly to ready-to-wear, with which the stores are overloaded, just as we all are, on account of a backward spring.

The excuse for their sales which they are trying to justify upon the people name by name is that the high cost of living, is cleverly figured out by them as a popular one to catch the public attention and has succeeded in gaining a good deal of newspaper notice because a more calculated to bring down prices would naturally interest everyone.

But as a matter of fact, these stores are holding their merchandise for a long time and for not any other interest in the customer. Most of these stores have their goods ready-to-wear—let on their hands on account of the backward spring and they have hit on this specific sale idea as a means of cleaning up.

When they have reduced the ready-to-wear, stocks prices will be just as high as before, except on a few things which have been lowered on account of exceptional circumstances. The money price in Japan which lowered the price of silk.

There is no sign of a break in the price of the necessities of life. These are all most interested in. When the break does come you will find your home prices as well posted and as quick to give you the benefit as any store anywhere.

In a matter of fact the smaller town merchant will be in the best shape to give you the lowered prices because he has not loaded up with high priced merchandise today. He does not speculate in merchandise—buys his actual needs from week to week, so he is ready and in shape to buy the lower priced merchandise as soon as prices come down.

If these big stores were successful in selling a great lot of merchandise at their sales they would only raise prices later on because they would all have to buy new merchandise in a market which is already very low in supplies and that would immediately cause a further shortage and another rise in price.

They are being warned of this by the best stores in the country who are advertising the "actual" condition in the same papers that carry their bank sale advertising, but they should worry—they must sell their present overstock some how and let the future take care of itself.

You will find it a safe plan to go right along and buy only the things you need, as you need them, and help production catch up with demand, which is the only way prices will ever be brought down.

If you need a coat or suit, you can really buy it very cheaply because there is a big overstock everywhere, but no one will sell it to you any cheaper than your own local business stores. Add three weeks ago to cut prices to reduce their stocks. And buying at home gives you the same papers that carry their bank sale advertising, but they should worry—they must sell their present overstock some how and let the future take care of itself.

UNCLE WALT THE POET PHILOSOPHER

TIRED OF IT

I've grown so tired of striking that work looks good to me; though I've had little liking of late, for industry. The war got me unsettled, unfit for honest toil, and like a paltry mercenary I ceased and ceased to sail. I called on men and brothers to come and strike with me, and set their dads and mothers from tyrants' shackles free. And all the boys responded, and quit their usual tasks, grew whistlers untrammelled, and yawned from kegs and tanks. Like me, they eschewed on workers to throw their handkerchiefs down and join the ranks of strikers who thronged the idle town.

And so our grank kept spreading, and ran us all in debt, and very few were treading the paths where toilers tread. I sat with other bumpkins around the Blue Front store, and we were slow-walkers, where but one grew before. And no one plowed a furrow, or made an oval ring, or came out from his burrow, to laugh and dance and sing. But all were talking sorrow, and pessimism black, and swearing that tomorrow would see our bulwarks crack. And now I'm tired of striking, I need some iron pen, and gladly I'd go hiking to make things hum again.

THE GAME

I am going to the park, where the baseball artists play, and I'm blithe as any link that uplifts its song today. For a while I can forget, as I watch them sweat the sphere, all the weary things that fret, and the sigh and sob and tear. There'll be time to walk the floor with a verger in my hand, when this bully game is o'er and the visitors are crowned. Oh, our pitcher is in form, and a mighty arm is his; when that wags gets good and warm he'll show wizards how to wiz. When I see him winding up I forget that I must drink sorrow from a bitter cup, that will put me on the blink. I forget that rents are high, that the larder's bare of hash, that the child's wear for pie, clothing, shoes and succotash. I forget the professor who have soaked us left and right, that the bankrupt court appears as a veritable light. For a while I cast aside all my brooding and despair, when I see our heroes stride the bases on their hair. When I see the jovial mob at the games, as of a yore, "Well, I'm growing through a sob," we are numbering sane once more."

CHANGE OF BASE

Kansas winds are always blowing, and my path of life seems thorny; so I'm packing up and going to the Kansas-Cadillac. There, beside the sobbing ocean I shall sit and do my singing, filled with prunes and sweet emotion, while the golden hours are with me. Kansas heat is always hotter than the kind that starts you sweating. Kansas rain is too heavy, and each day I get a wetting; so I go to San Diego where the honey bees are buzzin'; there I'll fill myself with sago, and sing anthems by the dozen. There the scenes are most inspiring, and the natives love them dearly, and a man who lives by lying ought to earn ten dollars yearly. By the broad and blue Pacific I'll compose my dippy stanzas, filled with yearnings most terrific for the sun-baked shores of Kansas. Basting on my downy pillows, after hours of fierce endeavor, I will watch the mighty billows rolling as they're rooted forever; oh, I'll watch them in their glory, and remark, "I'd give a penny to get back to old Emory where of brine there isn't any."

YOU KNOW HER

The stately domestic is frequently seen; she's grand and majestic; she dishes the loaves and the fishes; we know to her wishes and hail her as queen. This damsel resplendent in raiment so dainty and elegant she quits at a nod;—then nothing will stay her, dissuade or delay her, and when I would pay my respects—she said, "She's boss of the hotel wherein I reside; before her I grovel, and drop all my pretty phrases in a racket, and reach for a cheap shocker, and she is a modeler, when grub should be fried.—To movie she practices; whenever she likes; to blowkiss and drapee she gaudily hikes; no dinner is steering, no corset is braving, nor rags, she is cracking with Zeigra and Mike; she ties into rags, throws fit in the hall and says that her wages are heedlessly small; she soon must be earning more money for burning or she will be turning my margin to the wall. I do not desire her, I find her a curse; but if I should see her the next time—she would—said, she goes spooling the grub in the boiling, while I'm sadly totting, her wage to disburse.

DER TAG

When a panic comes and swooshes, bringing forty kinds of woe, and the sheriff comes and trots us to the court where bankrupts go, then we'll wonder, oh, we'll wonder, when in booming, boing times, when the trees were growing plumper, we refused to save some dimes. When the panic that's predicted by the wise men everywhere, comes along, we've suffered with a palpable house-bill of lard, then we'll do some idle raving, and we'll kick ourselves a veret, for we didn't do our saving when the loon was at its worst. Now that everything seems sunny, and our chances are the best, we're time to put some money, with some month-bill, a check put in down with cedar shavings, so the insects won't annoy; for the man who has his savings in the wisest kind of boy. Soon this crazy boom may trundle to the tomb; in shoozy-robe; then the man who has a burdle is the man who'll ride the globe.

THE DISMAL DAY

The day is dreary and chilly, and nasty showers descend; the winds are sad and silly, their wailing has no end.—The men have quit their houses, and the women drop their sewing, and gaze out doors and sigh. On such a day a fellow is willing to believe that all the world is in a daisy, and he is designed to peeve. The cheerful words of Browning that all the world is well, can't stop his heavy frowning, or soothe him for a spee. He feels that all the sages and hardy, who sing of hope can never earn their wages by springing sunshine dope. The world is not a cheerful cow, as a hearty day, no cheerful cows are crowing no blithesome roosters are strutting. But all the out-door critics are wet and cold and blue; no wren or robin twitter and makes a how-dydo. But hold, the ducks are joyous, and the geese and their wives! The rainstorms, their and their joy to their young lives! So let's resume our grinnings and caper and strut; the ducks must have their innings as well as hens and men.

A Modern Highway

O'Neill, Neb., May 14.—Scott township, Iola county, will have five miles of the most modern highway ever constructed in a single township in the state, to be completed this summer. Contracts for the road were awarded Monday. The road will extend five miles north from Opportunity, an inland town northeast of O'Neill to Scottville, one of the early settlements of the county now in the heart of a rich farming community. The road will conform to federal specifications and will be forty-eight feet wide, with a twenty-four foot roadway. All bridges and culverts on the highway will be full width of the grade. When completed the road will connect the northeast end of the county direct with O'Neill by a highway passable for the heaviest truck traffic all the seasons of the year.—The road is part of a road system being built by townships to connect O'Neill in this county with Lynch in Boyd county.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: At that he wrote was wholesome, sane, and sweettempered. Against decadence he set his face. His influence was everywhere. He had a homely virtues—plain, old-fashioned morality, the normal life of normal people. Far-traveler though he was his beloved in his heart was at hand here at home and observing it so carefully and so closely as to discover in it an epic significance. He could find the human comedy or tragedy in a Cambridge lane or a country village or the roaring street of the metropolis.—His mind was a threat of the hour and its eye window opened to new light. He kept young by sympathy with the young. Perpetually enthusiastic and perpetual in the human world whom the tears are close to laughter, he feared of human life its deeper secrets.

It is a gallus sight to see a fine drove of horses grazing along with their heads and tails up. Last week a large drove was seen cavorting in the graveyard. The many they can and pranced showed that they had a good deal of vim in them. The burying ground makes an admirable field for horses to exercise in.

Why We Sell

Gripwell Tires

We are not recommending the Gripwell Tires just because we sell them.

We sell them because we recommend them. There's a difference.

Back of the gripwell product is a conscientious desire, not merely to "make tires" but to make tires right! And it is that determination, more than anything else, which puts the extra miles under your car.

We can fill your wants in either cord or fabric tires, and tubes.

Remember that prices are advancing on account of the scarcity of fabric; and that it is highly important to supply the summer's tire needs now.

Also remember that we handle paints and can give you some real bargains.

do not often knock down the grave-stones, and the ground, especially on the graves of self-made men, but their feet. It might be well, however, if the owner of the drove would fill up the largest of the many holes, which in numerous instances are open down to the coffins, as a horse might be liable to break a leg on one of them.

In the walking match on Friday, Ed. Harrow distinguished himself as a rapid and scenic walker.

He appeared on the scene in full uniform. His legs were garbed in red leggings and he presented a grand and entrancing scene, while the fierce and furious onward motion of his pedal extremities as he went patting over the sidewalk, was astonishing in its speed and endurance.

As he walked, he was making a moving picture of the things of the future.

As a test case, he contemplated walking to Sioux City, the trip to be made in five hours. He will be accompanied, a part of the way, at least, by the Ponca band, who will with stirring music cheer him on his road and awake the echoes in the neighboring hills.

LIFE YOUNG SPEAKS HERE
Took place of Wm. J. Bryan in State Normal Lecture Course.

AN EXPERIENCE ON FARM
Valley County Farmer Remembers His Sons and Daughters.

Lafayette Young, traveler, editor and former United States senator, was selected by the State Normal committee...

Drivers Journal-Stockman: The last thing I did before I retired from my active farming was to give each of my sons and daughters a quarter section of land in Valley county...

Mr. Young dealt at length with this subject and then took his hearers on a very interesting tour of the town in Europe where he spent six months on the western front as a reporter...

Just should a child happen to be a girl, I cannot see why she should be cut off from any part of her father's estate. I don't bother myself with what the children do with the land after I give it to them...

Mr. Young said that it is very important for Great Britain and the United States to remain on the peace of these two countries depends the peace of the world.

Because I am old, my boys don't want me to work on my farm. I don't but it is not because I am unable to, continued his grand old veteran. He admits to be past 70, but feels and feels many years younger and is full and hearty.

Miss Marguerite Chase Talks on Service at Ft. Sheridan.

When I was 40 years ago when I first landed in this country from Germany, I bought 200 acres of land in Seward county, Nebraska.

MEETING OF WOMEN'S CLUB
Miss Marguerite Chase Talks on Service at Ft. Sheridan.

There is only one year in my whole lifetime that I did not make money farming. During the year of 1914 I not only lost my farm, but my entire life became sad and dreary through losing my wife at that time.

At the regular meeting of the Wayne Women's club Saturday afternoon following a business session, Miss Marguerite Chase gave an instructive and interesting talk on the service to injured soldiers at Ft. Sheridan.

Raising live stock always entered heavily upon the farming program of my father, who has been shipping to the Omaha market for over a quarter of a century.

Miss Maude Shapton, director of music in the city schools, sang.

At the business session, Mrs. J. C. Shapton, the president, presented the gratifying headway made in paying for the opera house.

WIND KNOCKS DOWN BEECHER
Rips Off Big Chunk of Veneer on Store of Hurstard & Son.

Hereafter all the work on the horse-aided farm will be done with horses, as the older Mr. Autsch, although a progressive farmer, would never consent to the purchasing of a tractor.

A gust of wind struck the store of Hurstard & Son in such a way that it flew in on an angle of more or less brick veneer. The crash was heard to a considerable distance.

Locally merchants are announcing reductions in prices. This is not a local policy, however, it is being adopted in every trade center. It is said that in many instances not only possible profits are being sacrificed, but substantial reductions below the cost of production are being made.

One Minute Electric

There are too many electric washers offered for sale, that the purchaser is often very confused and sometimes misled in making a purchase that is not really the best purchase when measured by the service the machine will render when in use.

White enamel and a lot of "gingerbread" never did a washing on Monday morning nor shortened the time consumed in doing that washing. Yet that "gingerbread" and white enamel cost a nice bunch of money to the consumer.

THE ONE MINUTE has no "gingerbread". It is built for business, and for business only. It washes clean and does it quickly at a minimum of electricity consumed. It is built to last. It is guaranteed to give you the service you have a right to expect.

Some Nutmeg Reasoning.
St. Paul Pioneer Press: On the same old ground and upon no new argument that has been given out, the governor of Connecticut refuses to call a special session of the legislature to act upon the suffrage amendment. He says the amendment changes the constitution of Connecticut and the legislature has no right to make such a change without the consent of the people. It does not occur to this peculiarly constituted executive, apparently, that if thirty-six states agree to the suffrage amendment, the provision of the Connecticut constitution is automatically annulled, whatever Connecticut may do or not do. It is the sort of face-to-the-corner attitude that as long as Connecticut itself had no part in it, this ruthless tearing of the word "make" out of its organic law cannot be any of its the nutmeg conscience. It is considered the legislature, if given the opportunity, would ratify amendment and that such will be its course when it meets in regular session. There seems no doubt of the popular desire in the state for the ratification. But the governor has his ideas and they have right of way.

The Doctrine of Least Work.
"Samuel Crowther in the World's Work: Until a few decades ago the average human spent his time in investigating formulas that would prevent him from going to hell. It had not occurred to him that he might get on without work. All of the newer movements—that is the movements of the past half century that have gained force or popularity—have to do with getting rid of work. Hell is less important than work. The disposition is to arrange things for today and possibly to let the hereafter care for itself.

(the personal supervision of a federal employee. Various states also have regulations requiring the cleaning, disinfecting and disinfected before being transported. In the transportation of certain classes of live stock, the bureau of animal industry cooperates with such states by having its employees at central markets supervise the cleaning and disinfection of cars in compliance with the requirements of the state to which any stock may be destined. An appreciation of the magnitude of this work may be gathered from the fact that during the fiscal year ended June 30, 1919, bureau employees personally supervised the disinfection of 41,843 cars. In addition, a large number of motor trucks were handled in the same manner.

Sugar Beet Seed Ample for '20

The supply of sugar-beet seed in the United States is ample for two years' normal requirements, according to the observations in the bureau of markets, United States department of agriculture, and with a normal domestic production of seed during 1920 and 1921 the United States should be independent of foreign imports to meet the requirements in 1922. The sugar-beet seed industry in this country is firmly established and is gradually increasing. In 1918, 5,900,000 pounds of sugar-beet seed were produced, and in 1919, 6,700,000 pounds; and the prospective production for 1920 is about 6,000,000 pounds. However, because of probable increased acreage of commercial sugar beets, would increase the annual consumption of seed and, because of possible deterioration of some lot of seed, which would reduce the surplus, it may be a number of years before a normal domestic production equals the total requirements.

The United States has always been dependent upon other countries for the seed of the sugar-beet seed required for planting. In a nine-year period ending June 30, 1918, an annual importation of 12,500,000 pounds of seed was made. This quantity supplemented by a domestic production during the past four years, equal to about 40 per cent of the total requirements, meant a very increasing surplus of seed which could be held over to insure the next year's planting. In 1919 this surplus of seed had dropped to a dangerously low figure because of inability to obtain seed from Europe, and the beet sugar producing industry in the United States faced a bare sufficiency of seed for planting in 1920. Fortunately, the importation of sugar-beet seed carried on with the first shipment to come from Germany after the close of the war. In September, 1919, 1,755,509 pounds of beet seed came into this country, and by April 1, 1920, 15,067,078 pounds in all had been imported or about 2,500,000 pounds more than the normal annual requirements of this planting the commercial sugar-beet acreage in 1920, there should be a surplus of 19,300,000 pounds plus the 1920 seed production, to apply against conditions which may prevail in 1921 and 1922. In these figures no allowance has been made for possible deterioration of imported seed damaged en route to the United States or in storage.

slightly apprehensive for the effect that the low prices for live wool prevailing now will have upon the production of hennepin during the next few years. Low prices, according to reports to the department, are leading the growers in Yucatan to reduce their plantings, with the result that a year shortage of the fibre five or six years hence is a very likely possibility.

Clean Cars Prevent Disease Spread. The cleaning and disinfection of railroad stock cars is an important means of preventing the spread of infectious diseases of live stock. In connection with federal control over the interstate transportation of live stock, administered by the bureau of animal industry, it is required that all such cars or other vehicles which have contained animals affected with a communicable disease, such as tick fever, scabies of sheep and cattle, hog cholera, etc., be cleaned and disinfected under bureau supervision before being again used in interstate commerce. All live stock received at public stockyards or at official slaughtering establishments are inspected at the time they are received by employees of the bureau of animal industry. If any animals are found diseased, the carrier which brought them to their destination is at once notified to have the car or other vehicle set aside and thoroughly cleaned. After that has been accomplished, it is disinfected under

AGRICULTURAL NOTES.

BINDER TWINE PLANTING. The wheat grower need have no apprehensions as to the supply of binder twine this season. Reports coming to the bureau of plant industry, of the United States department of agriculture, indicate that there will be a plentiful supply of this commodity available for the American farmer. Not only will it be plentiful, but it is likely to be cheaper this year than for some years past.

Yucatan—the chief and cheapest source of hennepin, from which live twine is made—produced a large crop this year; which, coupled with the termination of control of prices by the commission, resulted largely responsible for a drop in the price of fibre from 15 to 10 cents a pound in March. The price is now reported to be 8 cents a pound. This reduction should be reflected in the price of twine this season. This for the recent revolution in Mexico has not affected the hennepin industry of Yucatan and Campeche, the two important hennepin growing states of that country. It is to be hoped for any disruption of this industry to affect seriously the supplies of twine for this year's harvest as practically all the hennepin raised in that country has already been imported to the United States.

Although there is no danger for this year's twine supply, officials of the department of agriculture are

Influence of the Church.

Call it Magic. Look where you will in the institutions of which we are most proud and you will discover the church's beneficent work. Our system of representative government was founded by a man who had first developed representative government in the church. Many our colleges were founded by Christian ministers and have received the bulk of their support ever after from Christian people. Ever-ready to shoulder the burden of the college students are receiving their education in denominational colleges. The place of women in the modern world, the new reverence for children, our business ideals, the force of ultimate social organization founded upon the Golden Rule—all these have roots in the teachings of the church.

The Value of an Automobile Depends on Something More Than Materials—How to Judge Quality Before Purchasing

It is not only materials that make a dependable automobile, it's brains and a sincerity of purpose.

Vision is required to see the needs of those who motor, and to anticipate those needs.

It is well to judge a car by the organization making it, for after all, an automobile is but a reflection of the ideals of those responsible for its manufacture.

Manufacturing common sense is essentially applied by the mechanical details that will fit those needs.

It's a question of purpose, of policy, of determination to please the buying public. With the Chevrolet it is a question of providing suitable mechanical transportation at suitable prices to meet the needs of hundreds of thousands of purchasers each year.

Then again, consider the vast problems of organization necessary to produce so important a commodity as the motor car on a large scale. Not only is the question of manufacture a matter for great minds but also the questions of distribution and of sale.

In making such a product it takes experts to determine that the materials are right. Such, for instance, is a study in itself. Only specialists can develop steel to just the proper qualities.

This is the result of practical vision practically applied by the men who are responsible to the public for Chevrolet service—those who direct the design, the manufacture and the sale of Chevrolet Cars.

So it is with every part that makes up the completed automobile. Specialized minds are necessary to insure that each part is right for the function it performs—that all combine to make a thoroughly trustworthy car.

They know which the majority requires. They are keenly alive to their responsibility in supplying it. They have developed a great organization thoroughly capable of serving the public with refinement, economical transportation—its greatest need. Truly, Chevrolet is the product of experience and ability.

The designers who are constantly adapting the automobile to the use of the majority, are men who have learned their business through practical study and experience.

The Cathedral Phonograph is

Cathedral Made

View of Factory at Marion, Ohio, Owned and Operated by Cathedral Phonograph Company for the Exclusive Manufacture of Cathedral Phonographs.

The First Cathedral Phonographs

—Omaha's Own Musical Instruments Are Here—

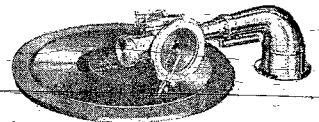

...large study and the ceaseless effort of experts have made the Cathedral Phonograph one that excels all modern instruments in musical reproduction and design. There are hundreds of vital features that go to make the perfect Cathedral Phonograph, and each must be finished with exactness and precision so that the standard of this new phonograph might never be exceeded.

Being unwilling to intrust the manufacture of these vital parts to disinterested manufacturers, the Cathedral Phonograph Co. has equipped and is operating its own factories and shops for building complete Cathedral Phonographs.

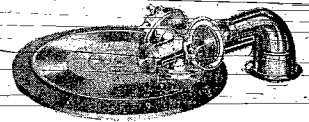

To insure rapid and economical production, these factories were placed where the raw materials were accessible, labor conditions unobstructed and transportation facilities good.

When the builders of Cathedral Phonographs received their first completed product, they saw that their greatest hopes for musical perfection and cabinet beauty were realized.

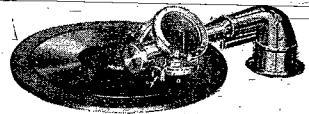

This Cathedral standard of quality means a musical instrument of such finished rarity that its place of leadership is already certain.

Cathedral Phonograph

The first chapter in the preliminary story of the progress of the Cathedral Phonograph has been written.

The first completed models, besides being fine examples of modern cabinet designing, are such marvels of exquisite tone reproduction that they inspire exclamations of surprise.

The demand for a phonograph designed to properly reproduce all makes of records led to the development of the Cathedral.

Without employing make-shift attachments, the Cathedral gives the maximum number of playings from each type of record, producing a tone of unequalled resonance and purity.

No mechanical skill is required to operate the Cathedral—it automatically adjusts itself to every type of record.

Cathedral Triple Diaphragm Reproducer

The Cathedral Reproducer is the first reproducer designed to play all types of records according to each record's exact requirements—complying with long established principles employed by experts of tone recording.

A simple turn of the hand automatically presents the proper point at the correct weight with perfect synchronism for each type of record.

This wonderful reproducer is being manufactured in an exclusive shop under the direct supervision of the Cathedral Phonograph Co's Mechanical Supt. This plant is completing Cathedral Reproducers in tremendous quantities.

The Greatest Problem Has Been Solved

Extensive dealer distribution for this new Omaha industry has been secured. The demand for this new musical instrument grew so rapidly that the question of sufficient production to satisfy this demand was one of no little concern.

The answer has been reached with the equipment of the Cathedral factory at Marion, Ohio. The capacity of this plant insures a production fully twice as great as the output first planned by the organizers of the Cathedral Phonograph Company.

The Cathedral Phonograph Company makes this announcement with justifiable pride that goes with achievement and with the knowledge that this new industry is taking its place in the story of business which the middle west is building today.

The Cathedral Phonograph is certain to prove an important factor in the musical industry
