MYSTERY IS EXPLAINED
Man Seen North of Wayne is Said to Have Fought in Pender.

The blood-covered individual seen early last week reviving north of Pender, was a man who had his hand and holding a revolver with the other is said to be the man referred to by Pender papers as having taken a fight in that town in 1892, an engineer. The Herald is unable to reconcile the report that the man was caught near Pender with the report that he was seen north of here. The Pender Republic says: "Monday night W. H. Campbell was slain with a knife in the hands of Jack Erickson, one of the left-handed twigs, one on his left hand between the knee and hip and the other in his back. The stabbing took place about 9 o'clock in the evening on the first National bank corner, and no one was present when the cutting was done. The row was the outgrowth of wage trouble. Campbell was taken to Dr. Lullman's office where he was dressed after which he was taken home."

The man made his way that night, but the next day was captured by Sheriff Rutledge and Deputy Young out in the vicinity of Wm. Kelly. After a strenuous chase by the officers and was confined in jail awaiting hearing."

Referring to the Herald.
Tosama Journal. In looking over the Wayne Herald of last week, containing its usual issue of sixteen pages, we found many ads for out-of-town firms represented in its advertising columns. There were ads from firms at Pilger, Sioux City, Winfield, Wakefield, Carroll, York and other nearby towns. In a previous issue Davidson Bros. of Sioux City had practically a full page taken by double spread of two pages, was written by Wakefield merchants. We hardly believe any one would dare accuse the Wayne Herald of being a booster for any of these firms. This paper is the best booster Wayne ever had, yet they fill nearly one entire section of their paper with out-of-town ads. People generally use a paper for the value they get from its advertising columns; and if the paper gets results for merchants, other than those at home, it should be a good medium for the home merchant. Once in a while one finds a business man who is unimpaired enough to pick the home paper taking out of town ads. The Wayne Herald is one of the state's best weekly papers and the men who patronize it, whether Wayne citizens or not, do so because they know they get value received for the money spent. The merchant who only handles genuine goods learns to think in small grooves, and usually is one who would hold his home newspaper down to only the patronage of a few home business firms.

Making the Asbestos Sweat

THE 4-PLY COPPER-CLAD RANGE WALL
Heating the asbestos with a blow torch, as illustrated or with a spirit lamp or with a fire in the range, the moisture in the asbestos is driven out and to the cold side where it condenses on the sheet of copper. But for the sheet of copper it would condense on the range body which would rust out in a few years. This sheet of copper never rusts and keeps the moisture from the range body. Internal rust was never heard of in a Copper-Clad range because of this sheet of copper and the dry air space.

Note the 4 walls and the dry air space. This air space not only assures a dry range body, but it holds the heat like a thermos bottle. It saves a shovel of fuel every meal; over a thousand shovels a year.

A 3-PLY IMITATION
The sweaty nature of the asbestos is condensed in the above construction, so the inner lining next to the fire is plated with copper. Some use aluminum plating. If this was solid copper or solid aluminum it could do no good because on the wrong side of the asbestos.

Notice that this copper plated inner wall simply clamps the asbestos tight against the outer casing or range body. The moisture in the asbestos always goes to the cold side against the range body where it sticks rust from the inside. You don't even suspect it until you see the rust coming through; then it is too late.

To put so-called rust proofing on the inside next to the fire is like climbing on top of the roof to get out of the rain.

THE WAYNE HERALD

The Oldest Established Paper in Wayne County. Published Every Thursday. Entered at the Postoffice at Wayne, Neb., as Second Class Matter in 1856 under the act of March 3, 1879. Known office of publication, Wayne, Neb.

E. W. HULSE, Editor and Proprietor. Subscription $2.00 Per Year in Advance. Telephone 146.

Hope of political discontents that the third party movement would amount to something vanished when the actors turned loose a prodigious amount of praise for Russian bolshevism.

If the award of increased salaries to many men will quiet the labor strike and will spirit up railroad circles in rendering service, there will be some compensation to the public which will have to pay the bill.

Enough paint is wasted on human confessions to decorate a lot of buildings that need it. Hardly indeed, is a face in such bad shape that it really needs a charitable covering of paint. However, when paint is not often, we would recommend paint and lots of it.

Governor Cox has been to Washington and received the K of the president. This means that the democratic presidential nominee is likely to receive the president's foreign policy so far as possible. It also means that people who do not endorse the president's foreign policy will not support the democratic nominee.

California will have a rich harvest of oranges this year according to the reports of the growers. California's advantages of climate present a powerful argument to those who have plenty of cash to spend in California. It offers a most cordial welcome to any who wish to spend their purses and let the world know they have previously earned dollars.

It has been suggested to us that the public houses and other large industries should be handled by government supervision similar to that of great banks. It is true that such industries are regularly examined with official reports to the public. It is believed this regulation and restriction will not only guarantee a square deal to farmers whose products are used and who make up a considerable proportion of the buying public.

Wayne has the foundation and the seed of a great future. It is rich in the fertility of its farms and rich in the quality of its farmers. It is rich in the quality of its industrial advantages of a superior order. Its pressing needs in the way of a new hotel and new business buildings are likely to be met by the paving enterprise now going forward. We believe paving will inaugurate a new era of growth and development and stability for Wayne.

Crepe hangers are made with something unfavorable to the crepe. He tries to figure out how a thing can't be done rather than how it can be done. It is in the nature of a man who has a condition or sign is calculated to throw a scare into people and make them open their mouths in fearful astonishment. It is like a man who stacks, enlarge on evils and breathe black despair. He makes things worse than they are. No good condition is so bad as it is made to sound. No good ground for hope and courage.

The shutting down of wooden mills, thus forcing maintenance of high prices for finished products, is just as reprehensible and undesirable as the labor union's strike which causes similar oppression. The demand and prices for clothing justly increased rather than curtailed production. Whatever cause the necessary industry, whether prompted by capital employed or labor employed, it should be remedied by a law that is not a mere technical device to prove effective. The masses should not be allowed to suffer by the selfish aims of industrial lords or industrial workers.

In last week's Norfolk Press, W. H. O'Donnell, Nebraska independent candidate for congress, renounced allegiance to the democratic party and expressed the hope that the third party, then in session in Chicago, would come to the rescue of his political orphanage by adopting an acceptable platform and nominating acceptable candidates. Mr. O'Donnell says during his editorial career dating back to 1879, he had never seen a democratic candidate that he knew were not deserving of support, but that now he had quit. He says that he thought of trying for the third party. He would do it. In view of the proceedings of the third party convention, which he will likely not support, what will he do?

The claim of the Nipponian league that it can cure public ills by prescribing socialistic nostrums is disproved by the unhappy experience in North Dakota. The trying process of readjustment and reconstruction, necessarily following the facts cannot be helped by arousing class prejudice or by attempting "practical theories." Most people would only a square deal, and they will get it in due time by exercising patience and maintaining balanced and sound judgment. The fact that conditions are not normal and that some have advantage over others does not justify the means of destroying what we possess by following a rainbow at the end of which is sure to be disappointment and woe. The country will work out of its unsettled state gradually and progressively if not set back by drastic measures in the present a favorable time to embrace socialism by which merit goes on the rocks and equality of opportunity is swallowed up in the mad dream of prejudice and hate. Let us be careful. Let us stick to our helpful farmers' organizations, but let us not be led by the fancy and fanciful notions of the Nipponian league which has fastened its eye on North Dakota to the injury and sorrow of that state.

New Phrase.—Indianapolis News: In his reply to Governor Wilson, the governor said: "May I in turn felicitate you on your restoration to health?" So now we have a "may I" candidate in place of a "may I not."

Shortages.—Philadelphia Public Ledger: Because of the shortage of coal, ice and electricity, the city is suffering a shortage of summer furs, some women will have to suffer from the heat.

If the Turks Are Wise.—Kansas City Star: If the Turks read the latest allied communications with any wisdom they will sign that treaty right away before the allies have time to think it over further.

Fame.—St. Paul Pioneer Press: Some men are born great, others take it on white not a few get their names in the papers by pitching baseballs like Babe Ruth, slammed over the fence.

How to Become President.—Seattle Post-Intelligencer: Recent experience goes to show that if a citizen wants to be a president of the United States he should communicate by a dark horse.

How Many?—Springfield, Ark. Republican: How many voters who cannot tell the names of the "third party" ticket know how many some names have? Ruth has made this season?

No Searchlights Then.—Toledo Blade: Dignitaries didn't find the latest man, but it is only fair to say that he had a poor lantern.

Defining Friends.—Detroit Free Press: Friends are the people that some fellows expect always to get them out of trouble.

DR. SUBHINDRA BOSE OF CALCUTTA, INDIA

Before House Committee on Immigration.

A short time ago Doctor Subhendra Bose of Calcutta, India, was sent to Washington as the chairman of a Hindu delegation to speak before the House committee on immigration and naturalization. Although at first given only thirty minutes, he succeeded by the force of his argument, the breadth and accuracy of his information, arousing such a lively interest, that he subject that the committee allowed him to continue his address for two hours. He is a man who never fails to interest and attract an American audience and has the distinction of being the only oriental teaching political science in an American state university. His address as a Chhatuquana guest was so successful that the committee invited him for one of our lectures. It is a pleasure to have such an understanding of the United States and the new Orient, especially India, the land of the Buddha. Wayne-Chattanooga Attraction.

FUTURE-AUTO-MOTIVE POWER

Interesting Speculation as to What Will Take the Place of Fast-Diminishing Gasoline.

Gasoline will continue to go up in price. A few years from now we shall have to use something else as fuel for our automobiles. The question is, what?

The government bureau of mines thinks that we shall get the requisite substitute from coal. In every city there will be "by-product coke ovens," which will extract from the coal a gas suitable for the purpose. The coke can then be used in our furnaces and for other ordinary fuel purposes.

Germany during part of the war was practically shut off from every supply of mineral oil. She depended for her motor fuel entirely on coal, putting the latter through its product coking plant. Before the war she was obliged to do the same thing in the United States.

Part of the light oil in coal is lost, which in time of war is needed for the manufacture of TNT. Modern warfare requires enormous quantities of the substance for making high-explosive shells. During the first part of the war the allies could not defeat for lack of it.

Another by-product from the coking of one ton of soft coal is 5,000 cubic feet of gas, available for cooking and other household uses. The coke soft masses of coal which must be used for furnaces, if people could only be persuaded to use it.

SEES INFLUENCE AS HANDICAP

Charles M. Schwab Insists That Character Is the Biggest Asset in Modern Business.

Influence, the worst thing that can happen to a man is to start life with influence. Charles M. Schwab in a lecture upon how to succeed in business, remarks Leslie's Young fellows who become their father's business, are having the industrial world to give them a boost get cold comfort from Mr. Schwab, who has come up from the mines, and who says so far as to advise any young man who has an influence not to use it to get a start.

Mr. Schwab said down the street, fundamental of a successful life. "The indispensable integrity." Character is the biggest asset in business. A whole array of brilliant qualities will not take the place of this core of character and success. The whole tenor of Mr. Schwab's heart-to-heart talk was to urge men to have the qualities of loyalty, industry and persistence. The young man who possesses these traits is bound to succeed, for opportunity is everywhere. It is today. No industry is more highly organized than the steel industry, for out of the progress made in the last 20 years the industry has increased its output. So great is the magnitude of modern industry in all branches that opportunity is everywhere. Instead of decreasing as some imagine, have actually increased in proportion as industry itself has grown.

Big Trade in Old Papers.—A curious item of commercial news is that the east coast district of the island of Sumatra has imported $2,500,000 pounds of second-hand newspapers from the United States. Imports of the same kind of merchandise from Japan to Sumatra in the last year, were 572,585 pounds. The papers were wanted to cover young saplings of rubber trees and sugar cane. The clipping of news from it was held in great esteem and the quantity run through the middle of it, and to prevent the papers from being spread over the island, sheets of paper are spread over them. Old newspapers serve the purpose of news and are being sold down with stones at the corners. In Hawaii the same method of protection is adopted, but in that archipelago sheets of fast paper, imported from Japan, are used.

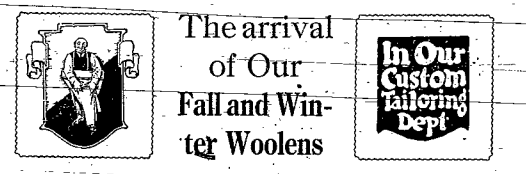

Evolution of Man Foreseen.

In one of his recent lectures Sir Oliver Lodge, eminent English scientist, announced that the earth would probably continue to exist for 20,000,000 years more. This is not a round number. Some scientists estimate that the earth will live for ten times this age. There have been animals of one kind and another for ten times as long as this. The dinosaurs are believed to have lived through some such period. Things of man, which is probably only a few thousand years, seems the merest trifle by comparison. When we consider the human race, which has a history of only a few thousand years, we may hope that he will evolve to an infinitely finer type in the future.—Borg's Life.

Rhubarb.

A certain East side man was cutting the rock road in his back yard with a scythe, and his eighty-year-old son was watching, seemingly engrossed in thought. Presently he asked: "Papa, why does God make dickweed?" receiving no satisfactory reply he set to thinking again. In a few minutes he looked up again with a smile all over his face. "This was the first dickweed that God got mixed up when he was making things and thought this was rhubarb."—Indianapolis News.

Wages and Profits.—Norfolk News: The effort of the fair price boards in various districts to standardize profit percentages, if carried on all over the country, will harm and good judgment, is likely to have even more far-reaching good effects than is generally supposed.

In the confused condition of markets for necessities, there has been a general feeling that enormous profits were being made, especially in retail trades. No one could tell whether a merchant was "profiteering" or not. The tendency in an over-bidding market was to believe that he was. Naturally the instinct of the employes of great merchants, believing that they were making extraordinary profits, was to demand extraordinary wages. This, if they were granted, raised prices still more, and inspired buyers to still more demands upon them. Nobody really knew where anybody stood.

Not Made for Looks.—B. L. T. in the Chicago Tribune: We have not yet seen a picture of Mr. Cox's porch, but it cannot possibly be less ornamental than Mr. Harding's. Reprehensible.—St. Paul Pioneer Press: In the opinion of the campaign manager, the most undesirable citizen is the one who insists on checking up the statements of his candidate. Noncommittal.—Chicago Daily News: Asked how she intends to vote, lovely woman asks that first she be assured of a chance to vote. Then she smiles an inscrutable smile. Keeping Step.—Detroit News: John D. Rockefeller, 68, and the price of gasoline is getting there. It's a Long, Long Trail.—Chicago Daily News: There has been a tremendous slump in the price of raw wool, but it is a long, devious, much beset road from raw wool to the consumer's back.—Travel de Luxe.—Minneapolis Journal: The railroad's complaint that everybody wishes to travel in the Pullmans. The day coaches and the brake-buses are almost deserted. From One Thing to Another.—Washington Post: The American soldiers on the Rhine who marry to get home are exchanging short term enlistments for life-long service.

UNCLE WALT THE POET PHILOSOPHER

THE DEEP

The ocean beats the headland steep before my humble dwelling, and I sit there and view the deep, and hear the seabirds yelling. There are a thousand wondrous tales in every wave that's rolling of coral isles and frantic gales and temple bells a-tolling. But who will tell a tale to me, so I may write the story? I have never been to sea, and haven't known its glory. And there are seamen all around, who've been to every harbor; I meet them by the village pound, and when I seek in every cove, they've fought through tempests thrilling, and they could tell a yarn sublime if only they were willing. In vain I tempt these ancient men to talk of seas and sailors, though they will spout again, tales of tinkers and of talors. They'll drool away on topics cheap and my soul grows flimber, but of the wonders of the deep I cannot draw a whimper. Oh, none will tell of heathen chiefs, who rate a blood-stained spear and I can't hear of distant reefs, or blue lagoons of breakers. The mariners of my ships, their secrets well are guarding, but they will open wide their lips to talk of Warren Harding.

WASTED ENERGY

For many, many weeks to come the officers, brave souls, will knock the welkin out of wherew, and shoot it full of holes. Whenever there's a stamp or keep some orator will rise and talk until he breaks a leg. dispersing truth and lies. The men who sell me lewis and knives and pink canaries—his system never varies, he stings me every now and then, but other seasons he's a little kinder. He's a little kinder throughout the season, the gods are good to me; their gifts they are bestowing. Their goodies are growing, still my teardrops flowing, I moan, "Oh, hully dice!"

OUR LITTLE JOBS

Some jobs are worse than writing verse, and some are more enchanting; I'd rather play a harp all day than be a statesman ranting. For office high some men will try, in beastly summer weather; and through all the times—some August dreams, where rubies get together, I wouldn't sleep six times a week to be a blooming seraph; I'd rather sing than be a king, or coroner, or sheriff. Let others rise, meath burning skies, our sacred bulwarks guarding; I've no desire to soak my lyre to be a Warren Harding. The statesman's seraph and fussy yard, and Gilbert jumps on Billy, while in the shade I drink limeade, and knock the lumber silly. My record sleeps and no one weeps of crimes I have committed; the country grins when statesmen's sins are to news columns fitted. Some jobs are slick and span and spick, compared with writing sonnets, but the woe that statesmen know when bees are in their honnet! I do not sigh for office high, I wish no White House laurel; I'd rather write my rhyme tonight, and spring an ancient moral.

POLITICS

I like to talk of corking books, and motor cars and outfit cooks, and other things of worth; and so I bore the village Hicks, for they will talk of politics, and nothing else on earth. Oh, how I long for some one to talk with me, not by day and night of art and dragon's teeth, of Science, and her great advances, and of that pugilist, from France who years for Dempsey's wreath. But all my longings cut no grass; the people shun me as I pass, and sometimes hard on me break; for I would talk of huntst things, of cats and cabbages and kings, and they'd talk politics. Oh, would I tell how my new boss could get the everlasting good of any car, I know, but none will listen while I prate; and I had box some candidate with a luck's face. Oh, I'd I would talk of Milton's harp, and of the bones in German carp, and of my Spanish "treks"; but none won't listen worth a cent; they seek me off—they all are bent on talking politics. And politics, that deary theme! The future's hope, the dotard's dream, that bore beyond compare! That makes men say the same old things, and talk fore-ere more in rings, nor leads them anywhere!

GOOD CLOTHES

My heart is right, but my pants are wrong, and I take my place in the has been throng. I fall in line at the merchant's door, and I seek a job in his useful store; I need the coin, and I'd gladly toil until each finger had grown a boll, but the merchant looks at my seamy shirt, at my shoes all stained with the highway's dirt, at my trousers-foons with their bagging knees, and says, "Oh, fade from my doorway, please!" I've a willing heart, I have active legs, but my vest is stained with the juice of eggs; and my whiskers leak and my hair is long, and so I trot to the hat-bred throng. Perhaps it's wrong that the seedy man can't find a place in the car-yon, perhaps it's wrong that he sits our mind; we want to show his sterling worth, but the world runs or in the same old groove, and the seedy man's worth won't improve; at every turning its sign-boards say that there's no place for the seedy jay. So I'll buy a suit at a princely price, and then perhaps I can cut some ice. With my whiskers trimmed and my hair in curl I'll sally forth like a belted earl; no more I'll look like a gutter swab—and I'll bet a nickel I'll get a job!

Dignified, But Dull

Kansas City shows the League of nations is a much more dignified subject for a convention to scrap over, than a booze plank; but not nearly so interesting to the delegates.

No Bar to Criticism

St. Paul Pioneer Press: An editor will be president of the United States during the next four years, but that won't prevent other editors from criticizing the manner in which he handles his job.

Costly

Omaha World Herald: It must have been a very expensive June, if old shoes were thrown after all of the record breaking number of June brides.

Think what depends on your tubes

They are almost as important as your tires. Yet few men watch tube service.

Miller builds the finest tubes that have ever been developed. For 24 years Miller has specialized in super-grade rubber goods.

Miller builds more surgeons' gloves, for instance, than any other concern in the world. And that's the sort of skill required in tubes.

Miller Tubes are built of thin sheets of pure rubber. They are built layer on layer—sheet on sheet—up to the proper ply.

Then each tube is tested for hours under air pressure to make sure it is air-tight.

You don't get such tubes when you buy tubes by guess. Come and try a Miller Tube, red or gray. Watch its service. After that you'll never buy an ordinary grade.

Miller cost no extra price.

Damaged by Storm

Walnut, Neb., July 20.—The storm which passed through here Friday afternoon was one of the best destroyers ever witnessed in this community.

Grain that was not destroyed by the hail, was left to the mercy of the wind, making it impossible to cut. Bridges and fences were damaged by the high water and many buildings destroyed. Amongst those destroyed were the home of the granary, Luther Burton, a granary, and a new garage belonging to Tobias Vahjardson, was completely destroyed. Mr. Vahjardson also lost a new Dodge car, when he attempted to ford a stream before the water rose. The car became stuck and he ran to a neighbor's close by for a team and when he returned the stream had risen several feet and the car was washed down stream, destroying it beyond repair.

THE LURE OF PURE BREDS

Stockman Expects to Return to Raising of Fine Quality.

Drovers Journal, Stockman: From the raising of pure breeds in good old Iowa to the handling of market cattle and hog-breeds in Nebraska and the hope of soon getting back into the pedigreed phase of the live stock industry is the hope of a man of O. W. Kilpatrick, who now operates several farms in the vicinity of O'Neill, Neb.

For several years Mr. Kilpatrick was a prominent pure bred stock raiser and breeder, living on a farm on the outskirts of Hartford, Ia., in Shelby county. He had good Durco hogs, Hereford cattle and fancy driving horses, and during his time gathered a neat collection of medals, ribbons and other awards at the various shows.

Gave Up Pure Bred.—Mr. Kilpatrick, however, after he had settled down in Iowa county, Nebraska, with the idea of following the pure bred work. However, the newness of the country and the failure of the average farmer in that section to recognize the real value of the pure bred, forced him to temporarily give up this branch of the stock raising.

He then centered his attention on buying and selling market hogs and cattle. Such a practice has been profitable one, as a sideline he has been dealing in land and for the last few years he has had in Hart county he has acquired approximately 3,500 acres. Right now he has one of the big herds of cattle in the county. The herd consists of 380 steers and 425 cows, all of which he expects to market at the close of the grazing season.

Wants to Return.—In spite of the fact that the handling of market classes of live stock has been profitable to him, Mr. Kilpatrick said he has not been in an interview, "and before many months I expect to give up the building up of a herd of blooded Durcos."

Mr. Kilpatrick said that just before coming to market he was tempted to visit Ed Kern's place at Stanton and purchase a bunch of pure bred hogs with which to build his herd. A few days on school thought he decided to wait until the fall of the year before he pursues his hat into the ring of the pure bred fraternity again.

Third-Party Psychology.

New York Times: Many find it hard to understand the mind of a third-party politician. They think that among the elegant line of parties already in the market something unique is found to suit the most exacting taste. It is understood of course that the moving spirits in the third-party movement are all the explosives into one gigantic bomb are in fact revolting against the two historic parties. Denigrate or denigrate the two historic parties. But admitting that, and allowing that a decree of separation ought to be granted on the ground of hopeless incompatibility, why do they not satisfy themselves else where? They frankly avow themselves socialists, some of them admit socialistic tendencies, and they join the socialist party. Others have conceived a sudden but rather platonic passion for workmen. It would seem that of the labor party were exactly the place for them to go. And those of them who feel that they cannot stop with the private property, except their own, are taken over by the state for the use of the community, might find a haven of rest and happiness, if only suggested, in one of the other of the branches of the communist party. Why go to all the trouble of trying to attain objects already ardently sought by existing organizations.

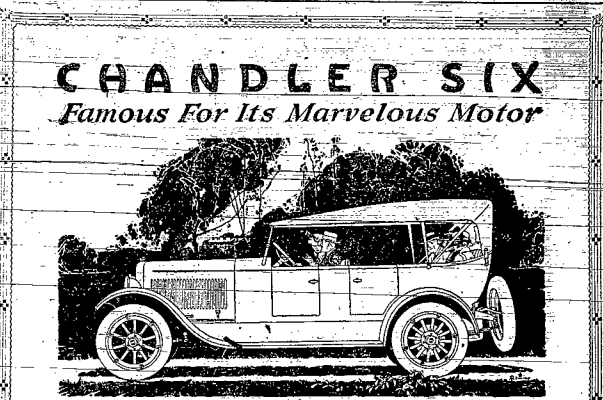

This answer to this question is to be found in the state of mind of the third-party founders and fathers. Their sincerity need not be questioned. They are doubtless honest in desiring nothing for themselves but the satisfaction of their political and social upheaval. They see the whirlwind and the storm coming, but they wish to ride the whirlwind and direct the storm. This is the root of their trouble. The secret of their insistence upon the third party, they do not mean to belong to a party; they want one to belong to them. Several of them have in times past played a considerable part in political movements. They had led prominent men whom Theodore Roosevelt listened to in the days of their youth. When Mr. Wilson flattered by listening to their prattle. But all of that, that fancy importance has long since dropped away from them. In the instant of publicity is again might within their breasts. If there is no other way to get themselves talked about they will create a third party to make sure of it.

Let not this move be hastily set down as merely a part of the frame of statement consists in having their names pass from mouth to mouth. It was Bagehot, who said: "The man who is talked about is the man who is talked about." They are already talked about by their own party. By that test the ambitions of the agitators for a third party should already be pretty well satisfied. They have made themselves frequent subjects of conversation. The remarks made about them are not perhaps precisely what they would like. Instead of being frightened by them as they might desire, people seem generally to be amused. Still they have got themselves into the public eye. That is the main thing for a framer of parties as well as for a writer of books or a singer or actor or prizefighter. And even if the third party is destroyed by internal explosions before it gets afloat, the agitators already achieved from it what they are precious to those who hunger and thirst after that kind of notoriety.

Run Not the Issue.

New York Times, dem: It would be an exaggeration to say that the cause for national shame and humiliation, if the liquor issue were brought to a place of prominence in the presidential campaign.

Dana once spoke of the "noble strifes of politics." Can there be a noble strife over the ignoble issue of rum? Can any decent citizen imagine without disgust that 30,000,000 people are to be asked to go to the polls and vote upon that miserable issue? What questions of the greatest weight and moment they could possibly be called upon to decide have been presented for their judgment? By their platform declarations by their candidates, the two parties have put before the people the supreme issue of the treaty of Versailles and the league of nations. None could be graver or more worthy of the serious consideration of an intelligent electorate. The nation wait upon our decision; the interests of civilization, the future of the world, are involved in that momentous issue. Domestic questions of importance await settlement. The costs of government must be reduced, oppressive taxes that rob the people of their substance and obstruct the channels of trade must be repealed and a sounder system of taxation established. There are problems of the vitalness of labor, of our foreign trade; there are many subjects vital interest to the people concerning which the two parties differ. These are issues worth talking about, worth fighting for.

To the heirs, creditors and all persons interested in the estate of George I. King, deceased.

You and each of you are hereby notified that on the 12th day of July, 1920, Daniel C. Shannon, John M. Peterson and John Sueli filed their petition in the county court of Wayne county, Nebraska, alleging that George I. King died intestate in this life in New Orleans, Louisiana, on or about March 12, 1873, and at the time of his death was a resident of Jerseyville, in Jersey county, Illinois, and died seized in fee simple of the South and North West Quarter of Section 17, Township 27, Range 3, and the South Half of the Northwest Quarter of Section 31, Township 25, Range 3, and the Northeast Quarter of Section 2, Township 26, Range 2, all East of the 6th P. M., in Wayne county, Nebraska, and left surviving him at his sole and only heirs at law, Emily B. King, his widow, Ella K. Smith, his daughter, and Clara King, his daughter, and his daughter, said Daniel C. Shannon is now seized of and is the owner in fee simple of the Northeast Quarter of Section 17, and that said petition John Sueli is now seized of and is the owner of said South Half of said Northwest Quarter of Section 31, and that John M. Peterson is now seized of and is the owner in fee simple of said Section 2, and that each of said petitioners is in the possession of the real estate so described by him; that all debts, claims, demands and obligations against the estate of said George I. King, deceased, including the interest of the appointment an administrator for the estate of said decedent and that his estate has never been probated in said State of Nebraska and that more than two years have elapsed since his death. Said petitioners pray for a finding and decree determining the true death of said George I. ### HOW THE LEAGUE PANS OUT

Mayor of North Dakota City Gives Herald Information.

W. D. Bonhus, mayor of Valley City, N. D., writes the Herald concerning Nonpartisan League work in his state. Mr. Bonhus says the way the league handles independent newspapers and puts them out of existence is to have the state legislature pass a law providing that legal publications must be made in league papers.

Mr. Bonhus says in part: "I wish to call your attention to the State Bank of North Dakota, which in my estimation is nothing but a great big political machine. At the present writing approximately thirty-five million dollars of public money are in this bank. By legislative control they have compelled all political subdivisions such as school districts, township, counties, etc., to deposit their money in the bank. Formerly this money was held in local banks, and on a good share of it 3 and 4 percent interest was paid, and could be retained by individuals and farmers in communities where the money belonged. At this now, this same bank of North Dakota does not pay over 10 percent for these same monies, but whenever they choose to re-deposit any portion of this money to any bank which they may designate they will charge a rate of four percent, thereby making a profit of two per cent, which, evidently, is not a profit to which they are entitled. The bank has been in operation for some time and our state auditor and his assistants have attempted to exercise that duty imposed upon them by law, to make an examination of public institutions, but in this case an attempt to make an examination of this bank has been prohibited to the present writing—it has been impossible for any citizen of North Dakota who is not a member of the bunch to get a look-in and find out what is going on. Our little county of Barnes has got deposited to its credit subscriptions, $50,000, and we are unable to find out anything regarding this or any other public monies, now in the hands of this bank."

After quoting from writers who have strongly denounced the "Wayne brand of socialism," Mr. Bonhus says:

"Regarding taxes I have been informed by people from other states that the claim is made that the State home industries of the state of North Dakota pay such big profits that our citizens do not pay one cent of taxes. I am not sure that this claim is probably not authentic and I would not vouch for its truth, but I will say that if such statements are made, they are false, and without the slightest foundation. As a matter of fact they have not succeeded in putting any of their money into the industries excepting the state flour mill at Drake, N. Dak., by reason of the fact that they have been unable to sell their industrial bonds, and we do not know how soon, if ever, they are going to have any more of them. It may be doubtful if any man would purchase industrial bonds under the conditions. We do know, however, that a certain number of these industrial bonds are today lying in the vaults of the State Bank of North Dakota, and that this famous bank on the days on which interest should be paid, closes the books and collects the interest from the state. That is one of the benefits we derive from Townleyism."

Mr. Bonhus concludes by saying: "In conclusion I wish to say that I am inclosing you under separate cover two magazines known as the 'Red Flame' and copies of the 'Independent' and one copy of 'Townleyism's Unmasked.' This magazine contains conditions which I think there here wish to say to you personally that whatever you may do in the light against socialism is in the best interest of the state, and the sooner you start the better it will be for you and your community. If there is anything else I can inform you as to in the United way be of assistance to you please call on me."

Quiet in Trade
Since the media began long and thick and jobbing trade has been quiet during the last week. There have been few orders and many cancellations and reductions in inventories of delivery orders. Midsummer always brings a stagnation in distributive trade, but the conditions this year are so pronounced that general trade is slow. Midsummer inventories are under way in many retail quarters, and the policy in that trade is to reduce

Some of the comb honey is off the hives. Most of the extracted honey is still ripening on the hives. The quality and flavor this year are away above last year's crop. the stocks on hand before placing new orders. Retail trade shows some improvement, but it is based on seasonal buying and price reductions. The former is a normal element of business. The latter is abnormal and does not reach the kernel of business. It is not an index of the retail trade.

Manufacturing lines show little change from the conditions which have prevailed for the last two months. The car shortage and congestion freight congestion are handicaps which are accepted as inevitable and no serious effort is made to fight against them, the tendency being to allow the situation to work its own solution. The freight situation, coupled with the decreased inclination to buy, creates a rebuffing from means reduction in effort in many of the standard lines of production.

Money remains tight and interest rates higher. Call loan rates have been substantially advanced. Exchange rates especially in sterling, have been lowered. The collapse of the dollar after two years of inflation in the country is indirectly causing in the present money situation. Many of these were floated on borrowed money and the collapse of the dollar secured for that purpose, will relieve the stringency and help to deflate the currency.

The number of isms is rapidly increasing, and it cannot be expected that hybrids can succeed in expressing their ideology upon the country as emphatically as it can be done by one strong centralized party.

No new idea shortly in laying the foundations of the nut party is in making them broad enough. Some good nut is sure to be excluded among the party founders are careful to make its platform as broad as humanity, as high as heaven, and as deep as hell, and to exclude no necessary distortion of imagination or theory, however obnoxious to other nuts, should be denied its place in the nut party. If the third party is to fully represent the malcontents, the disgruntled "hot chestnuts," the "nutty" nuts, the "nutty" nuts, the down and outs and the hypocrites, who have been run out of other parties, then the platform must be made broad, long and thick.

WATCHING THE MARKETS

Hubbard Farmer—Makes Cattle Breeding Pay by Close Study.

"Drivers Journal—Stockman—By continually studying the supply and demand on the open market and using his own good judgment in buying his feeder stock, John Feller of Hubbard, Neb., has built up an enviable reputation for himself as a feeder and has been able to place the cattle business on a paying basis throughout a period of years. "It is a practice of mine to cater to the current demands," explained Mr. Feller to a reporter while in the yard Monday. "I prefer the feeder is for baby calves, 250. I thought some yearling stock and fed accordingly," he continued, and pointed toward a pair of one-yearling steers and heifers which he had brought to market.

"Some seasons I marketed my stock as heavy for cattle, always playing the game in accordance with the rules set down by the buyers. I can't say that any one class of cattle is more profitable than another; a man can make or break on any of them if he is fed and marketed at the right or wrong time.

"In all the years I have been feeding I have raised few head of cattle of my own, but invariably purchase my feeders. A mistake some feeders make is to limit the sources of their feeder animals to any one market or locality. I purchase stock from anywhere I can get them. The feeders and times would just as soon buy them right by the head or lump them off by the pound, as long as they get the right price. Usually I make no discrimination as to breed or color, but I make it a point to have them uniform, as to color, appearance and ability to command a better price."

Mr. Feller's stock has been noted for the high condition in which when sent to market. This can be accounted for by the methods he follows in buying his stock and managing the farm. He markets all the way from three to five loads of cattle annually and sometimes more. Through his close observation, he has found that corn and alfalfa are the best fatteners and his stock shows that his judgment is correct.

On Monday's market, Mr. Feller had a consignment of 54 yearlings weighing 766 pounds that had been since December 1919. For $12.00 a price they would not have commanded had they not carried the quality and condition they did. The fact is that the market is bringing out stronger arguments in favor of Mr. Feller's system of handling his cattle.

Parties and Reforms.

Washington Post: The fiasco at Chicago illustrates the futility of trying to build up a political party and gain popular support by merely attacking the disaffected elements. The number of disaffected persons in this country is only equalled by the variety of their grievances. Each party could use any platform containing a statement of all the grievances and a remedy for each; there is a difference in the character of the grievances, also, some of them being sectional, other racial, others industrial and others political. When elements of opposing certain grievances gain the upper hand in a national convention of grousches it is natural that other grievances should be subordinated. Then there is trouble for if an extremist is anything, he is an extremist concerning his particular grievance. Hence it is inevitable that a lot of satisfied voters will break up into many parties as there are grievances, if they seek to reform the world through the organization of political parties.

But why should Americans form political parties as the cure of real or imaginary evils. It is an absurd performance, quite as absurd as organizing a new religion for the adjustment of the price of coal. Instead of some of the grousches being gathered at Chicago had succeeded to religion as a solace and a remedy, they would have accomplished more good for themselves and their fellows.

There are two parties in the United States, either one of them capable of taking hold of the government and administering it in a fairly satisfactory manner. The capable administration of the government is not all-important, anyhow. If capable administration had been the sine qua non of the existence of the government of the United States would have perished long ago, for there have been many instances of incapable administration. The people of the United States have shown that they are independent of the vagaries and weaknesses of their government, to the extent of controlling their individual well-being while the government was very poorly managed. When matters become intolerable there is always the alternative of a change of party control, and this alternative is applied by the voters without much regard to the merits of the government. The tendency shown at Chicago in the gathering of malcontents for the formation of a new party is a very foolish thing. It is a reminder of the foolish political divisions in certain European countries, where parties are split up that stable government

The Railway Wage Award.

Sixty City Journal: A cursory study of the award of the railway labor-board indicates a strong disposition to render justice to all. What defects and shortcomings and injustices a more careful scrutiny of the award may disclose are not taken into consideration at this time. Evidently the board intended to strike a common level between the demands of the employes and justice to the public, for the increase in wages will be passed to the public in increased passenger and freight rates and in that way will enter into the cost of living, adding the increase in wages to the present prices, except as these prices are reduced by other forces.

The employes receive a general increase of approximately 21 per cent over present wages. The increase in gross amounts to about three-fifths of what the employes demanded. Had they received all they asked the increase would have been approximately 35 instead of 21 per cent. But the law requires that that just rendered to take into consideration and base its judgment upon the following conditions:

The relation between wages and the cost of living. The hazard of the employment. The training and skill required. The degree of responsibility. The character and irregularity of the employment.

Inequalities of interests in wages or of treatment as a result of previous wage orders or adjustments. The principal demand of the employes was for a wage that would equalize their incomes with the increased cost of living. It will be recalled that President Wilson months ago staved off the issue by a futile information amounting to an assurance that the cost of living would decrease and that the brief-erhood spokesmen at that time stated they were willing to wait. They desired nothing except an adjustment of wages to the artificial inflation of prices. It is assumed that the board in making its award took into consideration the relation between wages and the cost of living. If it did, and the award is based on that principle, the employes should accept it without protest.

Another feature which the minor organizations of employes have objected to in the past is the inequalities that existed between different classes of employes. These inequalities have existed has not been remedied. That they should be remedied has been contended by almost everyone. A surface study of the award indicates that most, if not all, of these inequalities have been eliminated. This and the cost of living were the principal issues in the controversy. If they have been adjusted so as to satisfy the sincere workers of the organizations and the honest organization, the board will have solved something of a Solomon difficulty.

"TOO MUCH BUSINESS"

is Coming to This Town, So the Chautauqua Managers Say.

It is not that the Chautauqua managers object to too much business coming to this town, because that brings the things the Chautauqua seeks to foster, but because they have decided that our people will enjoy "Too Much Business" at it is presented by the well-known, outstanding one of the first to bring down, wholesome, high-producing entertainment to Chautauqua audiences through the medium of the specially adapted play, "The Wives of Woodbury" by the Drama League of America. Mrs. Wares is one of the artists to render one of the most of the drama, and if the enthusiastic audience in which her previous offering "Reluctation" was received is any guide she is achieving some success in the undertaking. While not forgetting the words of Henry Irving, "The aim and purpose of the drama is to cultivate the imagination, and through this means to bring some to the heart that mind the lessons which tend to advance the race," Mrs. Wares has selected her material so carefully as to make the presentation most thoroughly enjoyable, full of life, light, laughter and wholesome fun.

AT THE WAYNE CHAUTAUQUA, JULY 30 TO AUGUST 5

becomes well-nigh impossible. A minority is no sooner formed by a coalition of parties than it is knocked over by another coalition. There is no continuity of purpose in such a government, and the people suffer, both in their domestic and foreign interests. What do the innumerable parties, wings and "blobs" gain for themselves or their country? Their grievances are never removed, and the general condition of their country's affairs suffers deterioration.

If there is any real reform in the administration of the government, it should be effected through the support of the voters, whenever a sufficient number unite in the demand. If the states do not combine to make the demand, the wisdom or necessity of making the proposed reform may be questioned. Inasmuch as the two parties divide the entire vote of the United States, roughly speaking, it stands to reason that any reform which cannot command the support of one or the other of these halves is not very urgent or necessary. The two big parties are only too eager to take up and push through reforms which are conceived to have the support of the majority of the people.

Woman suffrage is an example of what can be accomplished when the two great parties were indifferent to the support of a third party. The woman suffrage movement amounted to very little while the members of the two great parties were indifferent to it, but when they became interested, suffrage was assured. A third party never could have hoped to gain the balance of power in that issue, much less elect a ticket of its own. The prohibitionists tried to make such a government, and in the process of a third party. It failed. But when prohibition was agitated with the two big parties, there was progress. The presumption is that public sentiment supports the prohibition legislation. Whenever the majority refuses to support it and demands a change, one party or the other will take up the issue and push it through.

There is no reform worth having that cannot be accomplished through the medium of one of the great parties. If it cannot win the support of the republican or the democratic party it is not ripe for execution.

Farmers and the Third Party. Mitchell Gazette: The Gazette has sufficient faith in the ability of South Dakotans to believe that they will not follow the lead set by the other will take up the issue and push it through.

Washington Post: It would be most of to put enough tickets in the field to accommodate all the men who are entitled to feel more or less disappointed.

London Opinion: If the paper shortage makes the dailies reduce their size, they will never be able to report all the strikes.
