

Important Change in Business Method

On January 1, 1921, we will change to A STRICTLY CASH BASIS

Why? Frankly because we can sell you clothing, shoes and men's furnishings at a much closer margin of profit than we have done under the credit system.

"Charging it" is truly an expensive way of doing business. It is not in accord with the present idea of saving and careful spending. In pricing merchandise under the charge plan merchants have to allow for interest on money they have to borrow to pay their bills, cost of collecting, and also for some accounts not being paid. Furthermore, through having money and good credit we can buy cheaper and also take cash discounts which many merchants cannot do. With the elimination of the above disadvantages and getting down to a cash basis, we can give you

Bigger Values and Lower Prices Than Heretofore

We know that you will welcome this change. It will pay you to watch and wait for our Big Value Giving Sale January 7 to 15, 1921

We thank you for the patronage you have given us in the past and we will endeavor to merit your business in the future.

Hoping that the year 1921 will bring you 365 Happy and Prosperous Days.

We are yours truly,

NEVER LOST ON LIVE STOCK

Stanton County Feeder Explains How He Manages His Business

Drovers Journal-Stockman, Perry Spence of Stanton has been feeding cattle and hogs for 18 years and has yet to show a loss on his operations at the close of each year. Good care of the stock, judicious feeding and a little common sense combined with a close study of the markets, is, in brief, a description of the doctrine of Mr. Spence.

This year will not be bred for early spring pigs, but for a summer crop and-very veasa. By following this practice, Mr. Spence enjoys the best truck with pig-sows. This fall from eighteen sows he secured 120 pigs with hardly a loss.

He has a large hog house on his farm with a row of farrowing pens at the top and a feeding section on the other. Contrary to the average hog farmer, Mr. Spence is a firm believer in water troughs with lots of good fresh bedding. In fact, he makes it a point to change bedding every day.

STUDIES WHILE IN PRISON

Life Career Prepares for Useful Career if Ever Released.

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 27.—Four years in prison have not had a depressing effect upon the life of R. G. Lukins, serving life for complicity in a double murder at Sunol, Neb. Always hopeful that he would be vindicated and released, Lukins on an average of thirty minutes set out for himself for a business career. He has completed correspondence courses in modern business, advertising and expert letter writing, and has hopes of soon being released, that he may demonstrate his ability.

Use Self-Feeders.

Self-feeders are highly favored by Mr. Spence, who declares that they are the greatest boon to the cattle feeder today. Most of the cattle which Mr. Spence feeds are western range cattle and when placed in a feedlot at mid and a bit backward about starting to eat. He claims that by having the self-feeders racks filled all the time, the timid steers will eventually come forward and get started on feed much quicker than by coming to the banks for their daily ration.

Shovels Snow for Sows.

About two weeks after farrowing time, Mr. Spence turns the sows and their litters out of the farrowing pens and into the feeding pens. The sunny side of the house where the sows may go outside if they wish. During the spring months and summer the hogs require little care after farrowing, but during the winter months when Mr. Spence puts in long hours with his stock, Pads are shoveled through the snow for the sows and the water troughs with out dragging their udders through the snow. He claims that if sucking pigs try to approach a sow with a frozen udder, the sow will turn around and attack her own young. During the farrowing season the sows and pigs are fed oats, rice and corn. A steady supply of fresh running water is kept on hand for the hogs and during the winter an automatic water trough is employed.

STUDIES WHILE IN PRISON

Lukins is not only a writer of unusual ability, but is an artist and an photographer as well. He draws all his own sketches for his advertising "layouts." His art work is not that of an amateur. Engravers have written Lukins complimenting him on his technical judgment in the execution of his drawings. To the advertising world Lukins is well known as good as the best appearing in daily newspapers and street car signs.

This fall he turned his cattle into a dry-cure corn field before placing them in the winter sheds. Corn and alfalfa hay via the self-feeder route. He had a bunch of cattle on the market last week, which sold for $10.25. They had been on feed but 120 days and averaged 1,245 pounds in weight.

Shovels Snow for Sows.

Mr. Spence, who is in his 78th year, is a native of Stanton and is regarded as one of the best feeders in the state. It is estimated that during the 18 years he has been handling live stock that he sent not less than 5,000 cattle and 4,000 hogs to market. His stock always is found at the top or near the higher ridge of the ladder and are always in prime or choice condition.

STUDIES WHILE IN PRISON

Lukins' story is unusual. G. E. Lukins, a prison warden, wrote the authority for the statement that Lukins' forefathers were among the best known early settlers of Pennsylvania. Lukins' ancestors were first settled in Germantown, Penn., in honor of the original thirteen families to settle that famous old town. Lukins is a descendant of one of these families. His parents are now living in Philadelphia, where they are well known.

Avoid Frozen Udders.

It is especially require the greatest amount of personal attention. A farmer can give them. The mother sows and pigs need care until they are large enough and strong enough to care for themselves. It is especially during the winter months, with a sow and her fall litter, special care should be taken so that the sow's udder never freezes. If you have a bunch of dead pigs, the proper feed must be given at the proper time and the right sort of bedding must be used for housing them.

People Out of Jobs.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 28.—Men who formerly received large salaries as salesmen and skilled workers, now out of work, have been appealing to employment agencies here for any kind of employment, even dishwashing. Within the last few weeks, I have had a score or more of carpenters, mechanics, salesmen and other high grade workers formerly getting $8 to $10 per day, or salaries of $250 a month, appeal to me for jobs as dish washers in hotels and restaurants paying only $12 a week and meals.

There are fifty-five brood sows on Mr. Spence's farm and, figuratively speaking, they work for him. If it is a sow which is bred for fall pigs,

Mr. Spence, who is in his 78th year, is a native of Stanton and is regarded as one of the best feeders in the state. It is estimated that during the 18 years he has been handling live stock that he sent not less than 5,000 cattle and 4,000 hogs to market.

After his return to the United States, Lukins, stopped off in Denver and obtained a job as a telephone operator. It was while in Denver that Lukins met his first met Frank Connell, who is blamed for his present predicament. Connell was a salesman for advertising specialties and had the same territory as Lukins. They decided to travel together.

Nebraska's Crop Estimate.

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 26.—Final estimates of Nebraska crops during 1926 as approved by the bureau of crop estimates at Washington and submitted by A. E. Anderson, agricultural statistician, are as follows:

Nebraska planted 7,430,000 acres last year.—The average yield of 33.2 bushels against 26.2 bushels last year is the highest since 1874. The production rank for in size since 1865, being 255,528,000 bushels, compared to 184,186,000 bushels a year ago.

The winter wheat acreage was third in size with a total of 3,335,000 acres, against 3,716,000 acres a year ago, the latter being the highest on record. The yield averaged 17.4 bushels this year and the production 58,025,000 bushels, compared to 14.8 bushels last year and a production of 54,927,000 bushels. This year's production ranks fifth and the yield third.

Nebraska's rank as a spring wheat state is gradually becoming lower.

In 1899, nearly 2,000,000 acres of spring wheat were grown, while this year only 258,000 acres were planted, which is next to the lowest acreage on record. The decline in acreage was very rapid from 1899 to 1909, but since then it has remained quite constant except when increased in 1917 and 1918 during the war demand for wheat. This year's crop averaged 9.5 bushels and the production was 2,451,000 bushels. Last year a 668,000 acres were planted, which averaged 8.5 bushels and produced a total of 5,678,000 bushels.—The production of all wheat is 60,400,000 bushels, compared to 60,675,000 bushels a year ago, from a total of 2,593,900 acres against 4,384,000 acres last year. Last year's acreage exceeded the next highest on record by 508,000 acres.

A total of 2,400,000 acres of oats were planted compared to 2,133,000 acres a year ago.—The yield was 34.8 bushels, and last year 32.8 bushels. The production is second on record since 1866.

Wayne Normal in List.
Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 28.—Eleven state college basketball quintets have indicated that they will enter the race for the state college basketball title.

The following institutions will enter teams in the race this winter: Nebraska Wesleyan university, Hastings college, Doane college, Grand Island college, Wayne Normal, Central Wesleyan, Park National University of Omaha, Midland college, Kearney Normal and York college.

Reports from the different schools point to a season of interesting basketball. A majority of the institutions have larger squads than last year and the coaches are confident of putting out well-balanced machines this winter. The schedules of the different schools call for games with members of state conference as well as contests with representative out-of-the-state teams.

The December Crop Report.
Lincoln Trade Review: The December crop report shows little variation from that of last year in the acreage planted to winter wheat in this state. The reduction from last year's acreage is estimated at only 2 per cent. This will give the state 3,300,000 acres of winter wheat in round numbers, 3,300,000 acres of winter wheat for the coming year.

The conditions of the winter wheat crop are reported at ninety per cent, a little above the five year average. The acreage of rye shows a material increase over that of last year but nowhere near approaches the 408,000, acres planted to rye in 1919.

The United States report shows a percentage decrease in winter wheat acreage about equal to that for the state and the acreage of rye planted this year over the entire United States is a little over 88 per cent of last year's total.

It would be natural to expect some tendency on the part of the farmer to cut down somewhat their acreage devoted to the cereal crops, following the enormous production of the past few years and the constantly expanding acreage devoted to wheat and rye growing that has been noticeable for a number of years. These figures, however, while showing this tendency to a slight degree, do not show as much of a decrease as was commonly expected.

That there is any great movement to shorten the acreage so as to limit the supply, these figures would not indicate. A 2 or 3 per cent decrease in acreage to winter wheat would, in the United States as a whole, be taken into consideration, make for quite an appreciable decline in the total production, assuming the acreage production were stationary.

There are other reasons for these declines. Statistics on production of all kinds from the soil this year show that the all major crops, even with the exception of winter wheat, are reported at ninety per cent, a little above the five year average. The returns from poultry, eggs and all other crops show a material increase over that of last year.

Where near approaches the 408,000, the dairy business and to raising poultry and producing eggs for the market. Figures at the close of this year on these commodities, exceed any previous record for the state. Even with no increase in the volume of dairy products produced or in eggs or poultry—the higher market values that prevailed up to the very last weeks of this year, made a larger return.

The state headquarters have approved the Cedar county application for the appointment of a nurse. Committees in different parts of the county are organizing the local societies. The actual work will begin as soon as the appointment is made.

Church Differences.—Randolph Times: A suit has been filed in the district court that is stirring up a little bad feeling in Hartington and is not giving any impetus to the church. Some few years ago the Methodist and Presbyterian churches, both too weak to maintain a viable separate existence, decided that both organizations could be combining under a live church. To be strictly impartial they both decided to have the new society called the Congregational church. It was further agreed that both church buildings should be the property of the new church, provided that a mortgage on the local society building of the former church organization to the new one. The conference wants to sell the church to the new organization for $6,400. The Lutherans were approached but refused to buy. Rev. E. J. T. Gonnels of Norfolk, is conducting the matter for the conference.

Agriculture Notes

Seen Through Microscope.

A lively business scene in which the pool is a dewdrop and the bathers are creatures too small for the naked eye is shown in one of the recent motion picture releases by the United States department of agriculture. The new film, known as "A Plant Disease and How to Spread It," is a phytographic series—the supervision of scientists in the bureau of plant industry. The pictures, most of which were taken through a microscope, deal with the organisms that cause rhabarh blight and result in heavy loss in truck-farming sections. Field studies are included. Symptoms showing the existence of the blight, the extent of damage wrought, and methods of eradication are depicted in the film, which will be distributed through department channels.

The new motion picture series of the fact that have been photographed largely through a microscope, and because of that fact is expected to attract added attention. It is designed for both scientific and popular use, and is expected to be much in demand among educational institutions. The department has proved that more than 500 films in circulation showing 113 subjects. They have proved of marked value in extending the work of the department.

Interest in Improving Pet Stock.

Applications to recognize the improved breeding of such stock as Belgians, hares, and ducks in this country, game birds, and dogs is making it difficult for officials of the bureau of animal industry, United States department of agriculture, to determine just where the dividing line between farm live stock and other animals, including pet stock, should be drawn. In this connection, "Better Sires" series, which containable efforts toward improvement by the use of pure bred animals, is directed include cattle, horses, asses, swine, sheep, goats and poultry.

A supplementary list of pet stock and miscellaneous animals is the latest, and thus far 176 such animals all bred to pure bred strains, have been listed. The predominance of interest of course is in the improvement of general farm live stock, of which nearly 400,000 head are now listed with the department.

Bollworms Seen Abroad.

The pink bollworm is a persistent invader, port inspectors of the federal horticultural board, of the United States in agriculture, have recently found. A short time ago some lion bands were shipped from Egypt by way of Russia, to show the method of baiting cotton in that country. These bands were wrapped in burlap. It occurred to the bureau inspector that caution was necessary and he examined the burlap, discovering two pink bollworms. In another case, 156 bales of cotton baling which had been used for cotton were shipped from Rotterdam, Holland. Inspection at the port of Philadelphia revealed 142 cotton seeds sticking to the burlap and twelve of them carried bollworms.

Better Sires Campaign.

The Better Sires campaign recently passed the $200 mark. This means that more than 3,000 persons have agreed in writing to breed all live stock kept on their farms to pure bred sires only. It is one of the results thus far accomplished by the United States department of agriculture, in cooperation with the state and county agencies in a systematic campaign begun only fourteen months ago to exterminate scrubs—especially scrub sires—throughout the United States. Breeder and owners of all classes of live stock and poultry are cooperating in the effort which eventually will mean a high quality average of the country's live stock.

Translated Into Spanish.

The United States department of agriculture's hog cholera poster, "Why Suffer Hog Cholera Losses," has been translated into Spanish by the Argentine embassy and is to be distributed among hog raisers in Argentina. This poster gives important facts about the disease, its symptoms, and explains the preventive serum treatment.

Representatives of the Argentine government are following the work of the United States department of agriculture very closely, according to department specialists, and are introducing discoveries and methods worked out by this country to the farmers and stock raisers of their native land. The original edition of the poster, as issued by the department, is particularly adapted to the Argentine growers in the United States, who may obtain copies by addressing the Division of Publications, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington, D. C.

Our Darkening Age.

Lincoln, Jan. 10. Mr. Mary C. Bradford, superintendent of public instruction in Colorado, in a recent address takes a gloomy view of the young people of the present day, and roundly predicts that another generation like the present will land us in the dark ages by 1950. A disesteet prophet surely avoids too great precision, especially in the matter of dates, and 1950 seems almost too near at hand for prophetic safety. But Mrs. Bradford may be right. It is our proud boast that we get things done nowadays more expeditiously than our remote ancestors did, and if we are scheduled for a return to the dark ages, we should like to manage it in better style than the time that did the ancestors who occupied several centuries in getting to the bottom.

The decay of classic civilization came about from a great variety of causes, some of them indirect and obscure, but Mrs. Bradford holds that for our undying two very obvious tendencies in the life our modern youth will suffer—class—the mad chase after pleasure; the other, the abandonment of studious habits. She believes unfavourably the fallings of young people now with the extreme play behavior of former times who, lacking the distractions of cinematograph, automobile, and radio, returned instinctively and successfully to books, and consequently, she affirms, they became "well read and acquired learning." It is regrettable that the rising race is not greatly distinguished for wide reading for the young people of the present generation were thus distinguished is an assertion the force of which is much weakened when we consider that a great many of ourselves and recall the companions of our early days—to go no farther back. To love pleasure and dislike hard study are certainly grievous faults in boys and girls, but they are scarcely peculiar to the on-coming generation, and it is difficult to realize that our wide-awake but frivolous children—and grandchildren are destined to usher in the dark ages by their own fault.

There is, however, one phase of youthful social life that has a somewhat serious aspect, and in the ever-increasing financial expense connected with up-to-date "good times." In the address above mentioned the speaker declared that four times as much money is spent for chewing gum as for educational purposes, and fifteen times as much for sodas and soft drinks. We have not verified the figures, but venture the opinion that pampering in particular is a great expenditure of the improvement of the growing prevalence of that habit suggests the alarming possibility that the said dark ages may get us sooner than we think. It is safe to say, at all events, that if we could reckon up the sum total expended for modern youthful pleasures, it would make a portentous showing, and would help to explain the plight of the Chicago high school lad, who, though allowed fifteen dollars a week by his parents for spending money, found himself obliged to resort to night hold-up robberies in order to secure additional funds to defray the expense of necessary social functions. But even the high cost of pleasure is not an insurmountable, and it can be remedied without recourse to the dark ages. A little touch of hard times such as we are now experiencing can work a great reform in these matters.

A Wonderful Health Science.

Chiropractic above anything else is scientific. It is in perfect harmony with Nature. Its principles are so simple that even a white man understands it. It is not natural to fix the wrong once one knows what and how. Chiropractic pays no attention to the effects of disease. It locates the cause, adjusts it and the result is health. But We Rather Like It.

J. H. in the Davenport Standard-Chicago Tribune: Two Japanese were killed, a number were injured, and two Australian policemen were wounded in a disorder in Broome, Western Australia, caused by a Japanese-seeking race equality with a revolver. The solidarity of the white people in the Pacific in their community of interests is revealed. When we ask the British to let the Japanese to stop naval building there's a reason. We are sorry that the Australians had a yellow peril too. Yes, we are not.

Names of Culprits Wanted.

Sioux Falls Argus-Leader: Well, well, well. So some of the government officials who were "axed" are alleged to have bought up huge quantities of coal for speculation, boosting up the price while the people have been putting the blame on the poor retailer. Certainly the country is entitled to names and dates and all the details.

A Fatal Mistake.

Cedar Rapids Republican: A Detroit man abandoned the use of tobacco at the age of 106—and he died shortly thereafter. Why did he quit? Did he want to commit suicide?

Helpful Biddy.

Mitchell Gazette: Biddy is saving the day on many a South Dakota farm, with a crate of eggs worth as much as a fair-sized load of corn.

The Geneva Signal calls attention to the law which permits county commissioners to publish personal assessment schedules, and urges the public to take notice in the interest of public information.

Without this week, the Herald had already published fifty-two times in 1920. The year began on Sunday and continued in an extra Thursday before the end which comes a day later than usual on account of leap year.

The paving-outfitting is the biggest material achievement in Wayne during the past year. The present contract will be finished next year and if conditions prove favorable, additional paving will likely be contracted for. It is hoped and probable that next year will also see the capital stimulated to invest in improvements made more feasible by reduced cost of material and labor. Let us all agree to do all we can for Wayne next year.

The announcement by President Eliot Klinging of the appointment of Henry C. Wallace, editor of the Wayne Herald, published at Des Moines, to the important position of secretary of agriculture will please farming communities of the middle west. Mr. Wallace is known as having a practical knowledge of agriculture and with having very sound and progressive ideas along agricultural lines. He was an intimate friend of the late Theodore Roosevelt.

The world has been rocking feverishly during the year now drawing to a close. We have been at peace with other countries, but have not been at peace with ourselves. High prices, reckless habits of living, social vices, have brought on a political propaganda, a class hatred and accompanying anarchy, have taxed endurance and robbed society of most of its peace of mind which it should have enjoyed. New trials came on when depression followed a few months ago. These are believed to have reached a turning point for the better. The future is not unpropitious. We have confidence in the incoming national administration as a material help in restoring equality and stability. We will need exercise of patience and courage, but we have good reason to look to the future with assurance. My highest hopes for 1921 come true.

The week between Christmas and New Year is always an off week. It is devoted mainly to reviewing the accomplishments of the year, to inching towards and getting ready to wind up the year's affairs. Men are now finding out what they have on hand, and how their business figures out for the year. For the last three months they have been slashing prices and accepting losses. Regardless of the cost of goods, they will be offered at a prevailing lower level of prices, and whatever profits were accrued earlier in the year, have of course disappeared. The viewpoint of this year is unusual in the fact that a declining market has pinched all lines of business as well as all branches of farming. The readjustment is a painful process, and deals more severely with some than others. But with the going of the old year, it will bring with it a new year, and with the coming of 1921, a richer and more encouraging period will dawn.

A glimpse of Crater Lake appearing on a calendar just issued by the National Geographic Society, recalls a scenic wonder. The lake is located in the summit of the Cascade mountains in southern Oregon. A landslide upheaval left a huge crater.

mountain, estimated to have been approximately about the size of Mount Shasta. The cavity varies from 3,000 to 4,000 feet deep, half full of water. The water is 2,000 feet deep in the perpendicular, unbroken rim, extending twenty miles around the lake, having an altitude of 7,000 feet. The water extends from 1,000 to 3,000 feet to the water line. There is no beach. If one should fall into the lake and could not swim, it would be dangerous diving to recover the remains. There is no apparent inlet or outlet to the lake. Until recent years, it was sixty miles from a railroad, and rather difficult of access. The color of the lake, a deep blue, is accurately portrayed by the bank's calendar.

It is a fact that while prices were running high and money was so plentiful that it owned one's pocket-book and jumped into it most of us were extravagant. If we made somewhat more than usual, we found it difficult to keep our money. We figured that the pendulum would swing the other way, but not so soon nor so far. We intended to look for a pocket or two, but it did not. We were spending too long and got caught more or less unprepared. We had a few dollars in our pockets, but were forced operation of indulging desires is one thing that hurts. As soon as we get used to earning $100 we are paid, and we are not going to get away again, we will feel more contented. In the meantime, values will continue. More confidence. We will have to be careful not to get carried high while a thing we buy is cheap.

The Wallace Appointment. The Journal books the news from Washington that Henry Wallace, of Des Moines, has been named for secretary of agriculture. It is confident no able man can be found to fill the position. It said so several times in the past. It is confident that he is well qualified for the position. The agricultural problems of the country are the greatest domestic ones that have ever been administered. There has been much talk about a dirt farmer, meaning a man from the farm, but the next year we will find that agriculture must depend not on those of increased production, eradication of plant and animal diseases, but on the improvement of old varieties, but the marketing of living prices of what the farmer produces. It is not a matter of more production, but sale and price. To that end the energies of the nation are bent in struggle. The great loss of the production of the agricultural industry for many years. The productive end of farming, so thoroughly broken by that time, that the farmer is unable to make his labor profitable. Jim Wilson, must not be permitted to deteriorate. But the farmer's production, conservation of fertility, and the improvement of his soil, and plants, eradication of diseases and other like problems are useless.

Henry Wallace is on familiar ground in the matter of marketing, distribution and business handling of crops. He has ideas gathered as a result of his question over a long period of years. His constructive, sound and aggressive, but neither radical, irrational nor erratic. He will be a man of the highest qualifications in the councils of the nation. He will be able to direct its agricultural matters with the ability that has been shown through equipment, long experience and intelligent observation.

The Coal Industry. Springfield, Mass., Republican: The economics of the coal industry is a very complicated and obscure for most people to master. Especially the anthracite branch of the trade is difficult to understand the connection between the coal industry, the railroads and the distributors. But the bigge grasses one salient fact after fifteen years of legislation, court litigation, investigations, and muckraking—that the situation here arose from had to worse. According to the report of the Calder committee to the United States senate, the coal situation is now a disgrace to the country.

In the Calder committee were two members, of whom one, Mr. Kenyon, is from Iowa, and the other, Mr. Edge, is from New Jersey. They are the most conservative members of the former, has been reputed to be somewhat radical in his views concerning government interference with big business, and the latter, Mr. Edge, has come out of this investigation as a militant aggressor regarding the situation in the coal industry. Mr. Kenyon says individual-ly.

"The great operators who apparently control the output of coal may as well understand that there is power under the constitution, as we believe there is, congress will find a way to exercise that power to prevent this continuous progress of the American people. If the matter goes on, I, for one, have as the remedy that I will have taxing over the mines, and it could be done, in my judgment, constitutionally, for coal is charged with a public use. That would, of course, be the last resort. Some of us are growing tired of appealing to the coal barons to cease robbing the people."

Mr. Edge, who finds that "a thousand and one evils might be exposed" in the industry, says with more moderation in language, but with no less significance:

"I am convinced that the coal industry is a national disgrace. It is a reasonable tariff, but the coal industry is not the suffering people, so I am ready to modify somewhat, in this case, my opposition to government intrusion into private business and to advocate legitimate scrutiny."

The Senators Edge and Calder, Republicans from New Jersey and New York, respectively, representing two of the most conservative constituencies in the senate, in a report declaring that coal speculation and profiteering have been carried to abominable lengths and that home prices, prevailing in the United States have been "choked" alike. When United States senators of their standing and prominence, submit such charges, after pursuing an official inquiry in which they were able to examine witnesses under oath, the effect is bound to crystallize certain opinions in the public mind.

One opinion is that after fifteen years of explanations and defenses of their trade practices and methods of organization, nothing said by the representatives of the big units in the coal industry can be believed by the public without the most searching and the most expert critical examination. This holds true of all branches of the trade, including marketing, profits, railroad relationships and dealings with labor.

Another opinion fast hardening into a fixed idea is that the situation so far as square dealing is concerned, is about hopeless under the private or corporate ownership system. It is a matter of time, it is believed, voicing the more radical view, hints strongly at nationalization of the industry, although in a last resort, as Mr. Edge refused to consider that solution as yet, contenting himself with saying that congress in his view, "can provide reasonable government supervision and the regulatory powers without government bureaucratic control or participation in private business and with protection for the people, without oppression of any industry."

The controlling public opinion is at present with the more moderate Kenyon and Edge. It will be satisfied with the Edge policy of conservative regulation if the evils now so bitterly complained of can be eliminated. But a few years more of experience like that of the recent past would threaten private ownership with extinction.

Government Control. Advocates of government ownership and control of this, that and the other thing, might learn something to their advantage by observing conditions over in Germany under reconstruction. Over there the government used to run nearly everything and about every other citizen was a petty official of some kind. In the most drastic the government was especially strong, but since the war, since the fall of the monarchy, the people have been revelling in freedom from paternalism. At a recent convention of veterinarians in Berlin Dr. Goetz announced boldly that "government control and rationing was a thing of the past, never to be resurrected."

Another shattered idol is the municipal ownership of public utilities. It had then everywhere in the fatherland and we were repeatedly told that all we needed to solve the producers' and consumers' marketing problem was municipal slaughterhouses. Evidently these institutions have not been such brilliant successes over there. The National Provisioner writes:

"The next important subject of discussion was the efficacy of municipal slaughterhouses. There is only one municipal abattoir in all Germany, the one at Goebeln, which says running expenses. It is a failure, however, is due to the fact that the Goebeln plant is selling ice as a by-product, realizing a profit of 150,000 marks from the output of the refrigerating plant."

Out Go the Winter Goods We Will Not Carry Them Over

We are invoicing. As we go through stock we are setting out every piece and article of winter goods and putting red tags on them with cut prices that will make them sell.

This is no year for carrying over winter goods. Last year with prices going up, it was good business, but this winter the thing to do is sell out completely.

So we are going right at it as hard as we know how and profit or loss or cost are not going to stand in the way.

We are going to take our medicine now and have it over with. If there are winter goods needed yet by your family now is the time you'll get them cheapest. Don't wait for a general business smashup and goods to be given away because no such thing is going to take place.

Already the manufacturers and wholesalers are pretty well cleared up their overstocks and their salesmen are out selling spring goods.

The retailers have been unloading for the past month and another six weeks will see them also cleaned up on winter goods and ready for spring business.

So if you need winter merchandise buy now while the clearance sales are on—it will be your final chance to get these goods cheap.

We can't publish a complete list of what we have to offer this week because we have not been all through our stock.

Here, however, are a few of the goods we are offering with prices that show we are making a genuine effort to close them out, regardless of cost or profit. From these few items you can get an idea of the savings that are here for you; you'll find many more just as good bargains when you come.

IT MEANT HEALTH. TO ME, SHE SAYS Indigestion, Palpitation and Tired Feeling Are All Gone Now. Says Farmer's Wife.

"Tanlac has brought me health and strength and has simply made life worth living," said Mrs. Nettie Adkins, wife of a well-known farmer, R. D. D. of the Nebraska State. "I had been in bed with fastidiousness for the last six years and the more I tried to find relief the worse I got. I had little or no appetite when I did eat anything it always lay heavy on my stomach and turned sour. There was a bitter taste in my mouth and often I could not retain food. My nerves were so bad that my heart palpitated something awful and nearly shut off my breath. My nerves finally broke down and I became so easily upset that I could get no sleep at all hardly. From morning till night I felt dreary and draggy and my nervous system had become a burden. I was discouraged for it looked like nothing would reach my case. I finally tried Tanlac and to my surprise I began to improve almost at once, and today I feel perfectly well in every respect. My nerves are just fine and my breathing is just as easy and more and my heart action is regular. My nerves are just as steady as they ever were and I enjoy sound, restful sleep every night. I weigh more than I did here and feel fine and healthy. My nerves can now attend to my household work easy."

Tanlac is sold in Wayne by H. J. Pelzer, in Guthrie by J. C. McCreary, and in Winslow by B. & C. McIntyre.

Efforts to buy two half-sections of land near Emerson from the Winnebagoes have caused great commotion in the tribe.

At the M. E. parsonage in Wayne December 25, Mr. William McMillan and Miss Minnie Oman of the DeWitt-Was-Cong.

From Ponca Journal December 30, 1920:

Christmas was a joyful day, but it was horribly cold.

The mercury was 20 degrees below zero Sunday night.

There were to have been two eclipses this month. On account of the cloudy weather, it is possible they were postponed.

In Sioux City yesterday, the price of five hogs was $4.00 per hundred pounds. Dreg, 75 cents per bushel; hogs, 40 cents; corn, 20 cents; and butter from 15 to 20 cents per pound.

Notwithstanding the cold weather, the snow, the wind, and the frozen feet and ears, the aching hands and noses, and the fact that all elements of winter have poured their issues and are jointly trying to rob life as an comfortable as possible, notwithstanding all these things, Ponca continues to be a rushing town, with prosperity in all its lines.

The stores are crowded and their multitudes of customers groan under the burdens of quantities of goods they carry away.

And to every other business there of the same activity and life. But the more lively branches of business of Ponca at all times are those for the young, getting married, and for the old, wondering whether the coal company will be able to get the coal out of the hole.

Among the many attractions in our town on Christmas eve may be enumerated the Christmas trees in the Presbyterian and Lutheran churches. At each edifice the crowd in attendance was large, and all must have been gratified by the pleasing exercises of the evening, the alluring spectacle of the well-lit trees and the more substantial supply of candies, fruits, nuts, etc., which were distributed with a lavish hand to the audience. Probably the day was never more heartily celebrated throughout the United States. We look upon this as a good indication in our opinion Christmas festivities should be so well maintained and so long prolonged that the memory of the event will be cherished by the next anniversary. We consider this unusual commemoration of the great holiday of Christendom as a rest of food in both social and religious considerations. It retains a grand, healthy, religious sentiment prevailing throughout the year.

There are any holiday by the great masses of the people bears evidence of the prosperity and well being of that people. It is often said that a nation we have too few holidays. We cannot concur in that opinion.

The Americans have holidays enough. They should be thankful for them and enjoy those they celebrate. Once each year we can give vent to our patriotism, and certainly enough to propitiate the manes of our revolutionary ancestors and testify our respect for their immortal memories.

The giving day is chiefly a religious festival, but the exercises attending its observance inevitably carries one back to those days when the great patriots after subsisting on oaks and acorns celebrated the occasion of their first harvest by devoting a day of gratitude to the God of the harvest who had preserved them from starvation, by causing the soil of the new world to respond to their labors in the production of such bountiful crops.

Each holiday has since the war been added to the list, appropriately termed Commemoration of Decoration Day, for, on that day, with songs of praise on our lips, with eulogies on our tongues, with floral offerings in our hands we gather together throughout the country to honor the land to decorate the graves and commemorate the virtues of those who died that we might live, and that the motto of the Union might be forever preserved. Another day is included in our list of national festivities is the twenty-second day of February, which holiday does not receive the attention it is important.

merits. Every school boy knows that this is the birthday of Washington. In his generalship we are prone to underestimate Washington's life and character. New political and military ideas have arisen, which in a measure, have supplemented the memory of him, the earliest, the best and the best of our soldiers and statesmen, but we believe that a reconsideration of his pure life and patriotic services which we believe would be induced by a proper celebration of the day that witnessed his birth, would reinstate him in the hearts of our people as a nation we have too few holidays. We cannot concur in that opinion.
