ANTONE C. BASTIAN IS DULY HONORED

Body of Young Man Received in Wayne and Is Given Military Funeral Monday Afternoon

GREAT CROWD IN ATTENDANCE

Appropriate Sermon and Eulogy by Rev. John W. Beard at Greenwood Cemetery.

The body of Antone C. Bastian who was killed while on duty in France arrived in Wayne Saturday afternoon from New York by a soldier in an escort and a funeral with military honors was held from the Episcopal Lutheran church Monday afternoon at 2 o'clock.

The church was filled with friends who had gathered to bid adieu to the remains of the deceased, being unable to gain admission. The church was decorated with flags and floral tributes.

Those who have attended friends' funerals in Wayne for many years say the one just held was easily in the lead in both costliness and general enjoyment.

Four out of nine days devoted to rest and recreation ought to hold people along for some time.

Congress shows symptoms of responsiveness to the general and growing impression that the presidential inauguration takes place at the wrong time of year, and seems disposed to push the date forward a few months.

We believe congress and the state legislature will, as they should, grant the reasonable requests of farming committees and other agricultural co-operators to the task of equalizing values and restoring normal, prosperous times.

January has thus far distinguished itself by furnishing a variety of weather unsurpassed in southern California or elsewhere. The mercury has been far above normal, and the heavy snow which broke over the country uninvited a few weeks ago, has been fast disappearing. We would suggest that the general practice of keeping up the noble stary mad, and show that it can successfully vie with early fall in mild elements.

A report comes from Chicago that whisky is prescribed for sick horses, dogs and cats in that city. It is doubtful if there is anything in the prohibition law to prevent four-legged animals from indulging in alcoholic beverages. The epidemic is said to be particularly sweeping and severe in the dog and cat hospital operated by Dr. Earl Franklin. If the sickness among animals in Chicago yields to the whisky treatment, similar sickness will no doubt take hold of animals of other cities.

Time is speeding, and at best the period for usefulness and accomplishment is brief. It is not just a question of earning money. It is more a question of building and leaving a creditable record of achievement. This cannot be done by shirking and loafing. It cannot be done by leaving things for others to do. We may prosper less one time than another. The financial return for effort may be greater sometimes than others. But pecuniary considerations should be subordinated to other obligations—other obligations to self, obligations to society, reflected in constructive and enduring work. We really have no time to waste.

The Lincoln Chamber of Commerce has published in its local newspapers a series of articles urging people to buy what they need to keep labor employed and increase the demand for production. The articles emphasize the interdependence of all classes and all lines of endeavor. It is pointed out that if people cease buying, we will have increased unemployment, deterioration of shop houses and bread lines, decreasing consumption and retardation of normal activities. During the stress of reconstruction, the commercial world would have people buy without extravagance, but in accordance with needs. It would have them act as natural as possible, getting back to a healthy prepar basis with the least possible delay and least possible harm.

We saw a comely slip of a girl at the railway station in Wayne Saturday morning in charge of the sheriff of Dodge county. The officer had gone to Bloomfield the night before to arrest her on numerous forgery charges. The prisoner was also accompanied by her father and sister. Sunday's Omaha Bee gave an account of the charges lodged against the girl, and the story is reproduced in today's Herald. If this girl is proven guilty, she will go to the penitentiary, stained as a felon and ruined for the rest of her life. It is a pity from the path of honesty. It should be understood by those who incline to forgery as a way to get something for nothing that it is a serious crime, punishable by a term in the penitentiary. On the other hand, people who accept checks should exercise greater precaution and thus make forgery more difficult. If there is any doubt, one should go to the telephone and call up the bank or the check cashing office. It is not so that whose signature appears as the maker. The fear of offending an individual giving a check increases the propensity of the maker to give. There should be taken to head off one of the infractions of the law now frequently appearing in the present widespread crime wave.

The Coat of State Flour.

Fargo, North Dakota, Forum: This is just a little story about the purchase of a carload of flour by the farmers elevator at Sharon.

Last July the elevator was in the market for a carload of flour, and it wrote half a dozen mills for bids.

A St. Paul mill bid $14.00 a barrel delivered at Sharon for its best patent.

A Valley City branch mill bid $14.80 for its best patent.

An Osakis mill bid $14.20 f. o. b. Sharon for its best patent.

A big Minneapolis mill bid $14.80 delivered for its best patent.

And the Drake mill, owned and operated by the state of North Dakota, which was designed "best the millers" bid $16.00 a barrel f. o. b. Drake for its best patent flour.

And the Drake mill is exempt from the taxes which the privately owned mills pay.

The Forum has the original letters in which the bids, and will keep them on file for a few days. If any North Dakota voters question the figures, we will gladly let them see the bids, and the time during the next week or ten days. They are an unanswerable proof of the extravagance and inefficiency of state ownership of industry.

Agriculture Notes

Price of Land in Iowa.

As a result of the phenomenal advance in Iowa land values during the spring and summer of 1919, the United States department of agriculture, in cooperation with the Iowa State College of Agriculture, made an investigation, which shows that the prices at which farm land was sold in many sections of that state were too high to justify the returns which can be made there. It was found that the average value of Iowa farm lands increased $121 per acre in the five years from 1916 to 1920, and that $68 of this increase occurred between March, 1919, and March, 1920, the twelfth month including the period of the boom. Over 60 per cent of the buyers and over 50 per cent of the sellers were farmers, while, contrary to general belief, persons other than 7 per cent of the buyers and but a little over 1 per cent of the sellers were real estate men.

The facts relative to the per cent of the return on the investment in farm lands which were brought out make it clear that they are valued in excess of their earning capacity. The investors who are buying are paying but 3 per cent on capitalization, and loans running at 6 per cent more, buying a farm on a large margin of credit is a difficult proposition for the farmer of average ability as a manager.

Savage Beasts Exact Huge Toll.

Compared with some individual members of the mammalian, bird and coyote families, Gulliver's puny giants and giants were light and puny creatures. All these animals are classed as predatory, but a few specimens develop exceptional skill and cunning in killing cattle, sheep, and calves. They are equally equal skill in avoiding traps, poison, and rifle fire, and often do thousands of dollars' worth of damage before they are killed.

The bureau of biological survey, United States department of agriculture, keeps a staff of expert hunters in the field for the purpose of eradicating government range lands of these four-footed outlaws, and thus assist in relieving the rancher. A government hunter killed a mountain lion near Roosevelt, Ariz., that had destroyed fifty calves and three colts on a single ranch. One wolf slain by another hunter in New Mexico had killed twenty-three calves. Another in Wyoming slaughtered thirty head of calves before one of Uncle Sam's hunters shot the criminal. A pair of Wyoming wolves that had learned exceptional cunning and cruelty ran a deadly board hill amounting to about $5,000. Their great ticks were collected by a couple of well-aimed rifle shots by a government hunter. Two other wolves were shot, and a young preference for mutton and young horse flesh, in a single month killed 150 sheep and seven colts, but at the end of the month a trapper collected their pelts.

Immune from Wart Disease.

Tests made by the United States department of agriculture, in cooperation with the Pennsylvania state department of agriculture and the Pennsylvania state experiment station, in 1919 and 1920 to determine the behavior of American varieties of potatoes in the presence of the wart disease, a serious European trouble recently found in this country, have shown that twenty-six named varieties of American origin are immune to the disease. These are: Irish Cobbler, Flourish, First Early, Esjay, Eureka, Early Poteskey, and New Early Standard, of the Cobbler group; Elmo, Extra Early Sunlight, White Albion, and Early Harvest, of the Early Michigan group; Spaulding Rose, Northern King, and White Rose of the Russet group; Burbank of the Burbank group; Grand Mountain, Green Mountain Junior, McKinley, New Oregon, McGregor, Norway, and Connecticut, of the Green Mountain group; Round King, Eye and McCormick of the Peebles group; and Keeper, Success, and Ureah, which are unclassified.

In addition twelve new, unnamed seedling varieties developed by the department were also found to be immune, as well as twenty-four English and five Scotch varieties. Seven of the English varieties, namely, Edzell Blue, St. Malo Kidney, Rector, Magic, Arran Rose, Great Scot, and Irish Queen, gave good yields, but only one, Edzell Blue, gave a yield that compares favorably with that of the best and most common varieties.

Potato wart has been a serious disease in northern Europe for many years, and in 1912 the United States placed an embargo on potatoes coming from countries where it was known to exist. Shipments received prior to that time were held responsible for its introduction into this country. It was discovered in 1918 in gardens at Highland, Pa., in the heart of the anthracite mining district, and subsequent surveys have shown that its occurrence is restricted to a limited number of mining villages in Pennsylvania, West Virginia, and Maryland, inhabited largely by foreigners, from which its spread has been restricted by prompt and rigid quarantine.

Wart is looked upon as one of the most serious potato diseases. In fact, it is the only one in Pennsylvania which practically entirely destroys the crop to be destroyed by the disease. However, the discovery that a number of American varieties are immune to it, especially the entire crop, is a discovery that is of great importance. It is a discovery that is of great importance. It is a discovery that is of great importance.

These Shoes are Fine Bargains

There is a saving of $2.50 pair for you in both these ladies' and men's shoes. They are real all leather shoes, up-to-date styles and finely made by high class shoemakers. Next spring shoes of this grade will sell for $10.00 at least. We know this because the factories have made their spring prices and there will be no chance to get around them.

They are going to make up only just as many shoes as they get orders for and there will be no overstocks or over-production to be sacrificed next season like we have had this year.

There will be cheap shoes of cheap leather, cheaply made, of course, to sell at bargain prices, but such shoes made of split leather, sheep skin, cabretta and imitation kid are always dear at any price. They don't wear, they soon lose their shape, it takes two pair of them to give you the service you can get out of one pair of good shoes like we offer you here.

Now is the time to buy good shoes cheap.

Ladies' Fine Dress Shoes

$7.50

150 pair of fine, black, gray and brown kid dress shoes in up-to-date styles are offered at this low price. Every pair of them will take the place of any $10.00 to $11.50 shoe you can buy next spring.

Pat. the Arch.

Ladies' Felt Shoes $2 and $3

Just a few pair of ladies' warm, felt shoes which we are closing out at half their value.

Men's Dress Shoes

Here is true value in shoes. Good sensible styles made of genuine calf skin and fine kid shoes the average man likes to wear because they are comfortable and good looking and made to give real wear. Such shoes will sell for $10.00 next season. Here is a mighty nice saving of $2.50 for you.

4-Buckle All Rubber Arctic

$2.50

Sixty pair was all we could get at this price which is about half the regular value. These are good overshoes, the same as we had last month. Men who bought them then tell us they are first class. Come early. They will sell quickly.

will not be easy for the disease to gain a foothold in our important potato growing districts even if it should escape from the areas to which it is now confined.

Should Be Greater in History.

Baltimore American. Criticisms of inauguration day come only from crabbled persons who attended in person to the grand spectacle. The country did the benefit of a protective tariff during the war; that protective tariff being the war itself. Now, all those who had that benefit of many of them at least, are prepared to deny it. They think they got rich in some other way.

War Was Protective Tariff.

Des Moines Capital: The whole tariff question is up for debate. The country did the benefit of a protective tariff during the war; that protective tariff being the war itself. Now, all those who had that benefit of the people who see placed in power the voice of their own sovereignty. To fit the November vote and express the general opinion, which should be the greatest inauguration day in history.

One Disguise Identified.

Omaha World-Herald: Denver police found a lot of bootleg whiskey in a shop disguised as paint. A lot of it would pass for paint without much disguise.

... "A passion for pink lingerie of the most expensive sort led to the arrest on New Year's eve of Ethel Harden 25, at the home of her parents at Bloomfield, Neb., on a charge of forgery. The arrest was made by Sheriff Condit of Fremont while Miss Harden who worked as a saleswoman at the Associated Western Jewelers, 1914 Farnam street, and roomed at 4832 Izard street, was home on a holiday vacation.

"Miss Harden, it is alleged, is wanted for a series of forgeries involving the passing of bad checks amounting in the aggregate to a large sum of money, on numerous stores in Omaha, Fremont, Lincoln, and other Nebraska cities. Officers say the forged checks put out by the woman have been passed at intervals since 1917.

Detectives Give Up.
Numerous efforts have been made by private detective agencies of Lincoln and Omaha to pry her down during the three years of her alleged criminal activities. Her identity was not established until Wednesday and then she was betrayed by a beautiful pink silk teddy bear which she had presented to a friend, the daughter of a Brock, Neb., banker, according to the Fremont college, Katie Davidson.

"Miss Harden, who is the daughter of a druggist, formerly of Brock, and now of Bloomfield, attended college at Fremont, where she graduated from the pharmaceutical school. She had as her intimate friend while at the Fremont college, Katie Davidson, member of a prominent Gresham family. Miss Davidson, it is alleged, had the privilege of checking on the account of a number of her friends. She wrote a peculiar back hand.

Omaha Firms Lose.
"A check for $4 one day came into the Gresham bank bearing the signature of Will Davidson by E. D. The check had been cashed by the Burgess-Nash company. The check was at once found to be a forgery. Numerous checks for varying amounts cashed by Omaha concerns turned up with the same forged signature, all in back hand.

"Mrs. Davidson married, becoming Mrs. Francis Barbée. The checks still continued to come in, her married name being used by the unknown forger. Later banks in Otoe and Nemaha counties began to receive forged checks. These were cashed in Omaha, Lincoln, and Fremont. They were for amounts ranging from $25 to $80, the names of Mamie Reeve and Nellie Lane of Brock, and Mary Ritter of Talmage being used. One check bore the name of Elsie Harden.

"It was this check that gave a clue to Sheriff C. D. Davis of Nemaha county. He investigated and found that Miss Ethel Harden had presented to a banker's daughter at Brock an expensive garment of pink lingerie. Following the clue he found that the woman answering Miss Harden's description had purchased numerous pink silk undergarments of the most expensive sort at the New York waist store here, the Famous at Lincoln. Blobs and Legs at Fremont, and at several other department stores.

Given Cash Change.
"Checks in payment for the garments would run in larger amounts than the cost and cash was given for the remainder. Each check bore a signature of some respectable and prominent girl at Gresham, Brock or Talmage, all in a peculiar back-hand chirography. One of the last of the forged checks had been cashed by the Nebraska Power company of Omaha.

"Sheriff Davis went to Brock where he found a note in a bank which Ethel Harden had given to procure funds to obtain an education. She wrote an ordinary flowery hand, but peculiarities of certain letters showed a similarity with those of the forged signatures written in back hand.

"Police went to the house on Izard street during Miss Harden's absence on her vacation, and searched the rooms occupied by her. In closets, dressers, and in various parts of the apartment, it is reported were found a large number of beautiful intimate garments, all of pink silk. Some of them had never been worn. Her accounts at the Western Associated Jewelers were found to be all right as far as currency examination showed.

Why Don't They Get Together?
St. Paul Pioneer Press: Only two things are necessary to make municipal markets, such as the federal trade commission, successful. The customers would have to get a desire to go to the market and haul their purchases home and the farmers would have to learn to stay around instead of selling out quickly to the regular dealers.

TURN FOR BETTER PREDICTED
Omaha Commercial Club Looks Forward to Renewed Prosperity.

Omaha, Neb., Dec. 31.—Prediction that conditions will take a turn for the better for agriculturists and stockmen of Nebraska and the west is made in a New Year's greeting to them today by the Omaha Chamber of Commerce through its agricultural bureau.

The statement, signed by H. F. McIntosh, manager of the chamber's farm bureau in part is as follows: "The Omaha Chamber of Commerce through its agricultural bureau extends New Year's greeting to farmers and stockmen of the west. We know something of your disappointment over the financial returns from your strenuous effort to increase production. And we realize fully the disadvantages under which you have carried on your enterprises.

"It is perfectly fair to say that the agricultural situation is not hopeless and not quite as bad as some would have us believe.

"The extraordinary corn crop with which our country is favored and which is almost wholly used in the live stock industry by farmers themselves cannot properly be regarded as a misfortune though it sells much too low just now. Its feed value is not appreciated and it is the basis for rebuilding all our live stock industries. It also affords 'carry over' to insure against a shortage of feed from any cause next year.

"The large amount of wheat still on hand has a present cash value which would have looked good to any farmer in pre-war times, and the growing wheat, though reduced in acreage by a small amount compared with last year, is a good prospect.

Stockmen Courageous.
"Many stockmen, even in the range country where hardest hit, are making a brave and winning fight to keep in the game. They know that as long as population flourishes meat will be necessary food. They too have faith in the future.

"To overcome the business depression all reasonable means are being used. The enactment of an emergency tariff on farm products, the restoration of the war finance corporation to provide means through which Europeans can buy our products, and especially the recently organized foreign trade corporation all promise well for the near future."

No Time for Pessimism.
"Drivers Journal-Stockman: This is no time for pessimism. There is no reason why we should be pessimistic," says David R. Forgan, the Chicago banker. "Nothing ever yet was half so bad as we had feared it would be, and this is true in this case. I have no patience with pessimists who are predicting hard times for two or three years—that is bosh. Two or three months is nearer the truth. The pessimists fail to take into consideration the purchasing power of 105,000,000 well-fed American people."

Some Chiropractic Facts. Chiropractic is the only science that exactly locates the cause of disease and then adjusts it by hand.

All the drugs in the world would not adjust a displaced joint, whether it be in the vertebral column or elsewhere.

Acute cases demonstrate the chiropractor's success in practice. Where medicine requires weeks, the Osteopaths by the chiropractor asks for minutes.

Chiropractic is now valued for its preventive qualities as much as for its curative. It is the science of adjusting the cause of ailments.

If you are sick use common sense. Do not miss the heart of a bystander which is caused by some nervous being impinged. Relieve the pressure.

Why search the world over for an exterminator of anti-toxins or disease? Why not look for the cause of our ailments in the person afflicted and then adjust it?

Chiropractors claim that when all parts of the skeletal frame are in proper proportion, there is health. That the bones are displaced during sleep, or when we are awake by accidents or poisons is a proven fact.

Some of the "great dailies" are pleased to call the country newspapers the "bucoic press." The title of "bucoic" is distinguished in country papers from the "great dailies" which properly speaking, are to be known as the "colic press."

At Sioux City yesterday live hogs brought $4 per hundred pounds for the best.

The town and neighborhood of Jackson, Dakota county, Neb., contains some good men. There are mechanics whose work is good for thousands, and farmers whose herds and acres are reckoned by hundreds.

There are many good, pious men and women there who fear God and eschew the devil and all his works. Indeed, the large majority of the Jacksonites are first rate people, morally and financially.

But there are among them a class, not large but conspicuous, that is not a credit to the community. A few nights ago a party of roughs went into Webb's restaurant in that town, called up the proprietor and ordered the oysters.

After they had finished they amused themselves by shooting the dishes to pieces. Then they put out the lights and robbed the shop of several cans of oysters.

Nothing was done about the matter until the next morning. At the dance on New Year's eve there was shooting, as is too common at the Jackson dances.

A bullet that missed the heart of a bystander, the men that carry things with a Pierre hand and Leadville arm at satisfaction satisfy the amount found due. Jackson are not numerous. They could be suppressed if the more numerous respectable class combined in the work but so far they have had their own bad way.

UNCLE WALT

The Post-Philosopher

We greet the New Year with a smile, and say, "Take off your things, and come right in here, and feel at home, by jings; for brand new years are quite in style, and every joy bell rings." Men always get a new pair of shoes in the world they tread, and though in darkness they may grope, they know they're stepping on a new pair of optimistic hope, and say the year is dead. This spirit always is on deck wherever men abound; it saves their souls from a chilly grip that makes the world go round; and so no cleaver in the neck can cause or confound. Old Twenty's weary course is run, so let him disappear; we bid to Nineteen-Twenty-One, and give a ringing cheer; the new year's blithe and vivacious, and we greet the number. The old year's petered out and spent, and now we hail the new, and every dame and every gent enjoys a new view, and every dreamer makes a new cent is likely to come true. This world would be a dismal place, a desert drear and vast, if man could not turn his back to the past, a troublous past, if he should after sorrow chase, and groan and stand against. But human beings are not like that; they are not like the gods.

...learned that care and quiet public places, and nearly break their backs; they've seen their mothers and their daurs with wild son for art work, well designed; they abandon 'em the times. They've learned that silk-lace is fit for gaudy-bloated. The prett may 'ber a girl, girls and boys to wear, but no one learns to sew or knit, or frame a de-...
...the gods.

Painted Faces.
The young girls paint their faces, and lock like works of art; they free-the photos of yesterday they burn, and laugh away with scorn; the photos have taught them how to yearn for brighter ones yet unborn.

The Modern Novels.
I reckon that a fossil, I fear I'm headed wrong, as down the world I roam, amid the modern throng, it makes me sad and weary to read the New Novels, wherein the authors dreary gray action out a change. The good old plot of Dickens, of Collins and of Remie no more a novel calling, and fiction's gone to seed. We have the glacial study of problems touching sex, instead of pirates blood-red and snippy deeds. And never a novel you can read but has social cranks, through modern times is tramping in pestilential ranks. Such books are not inviting to one who would avoid the carnal, and the world was writing "The Cloister and the Hearth." And time on them seems crowded, small, and do they yield, to one who's walked and pondered with "David Copperfield." They leer the old time writers; "Pater" they say, and him that they were blighters who wrote in that past day. I would that story-tellers, who write the modern grove, would emulate those old ones, and make their stories move! Oh, I am tired of fiction devoid of stirring plots, that banks on charming diction and lines of verse; and I am weary of the scores I go working for stuff to read, in vain; I like a happy ending, I want the villain slain.

The Knocker.
You buy a car you think is great, but that's strictly up to date. Your breast is filled with wholesome when you go forth to take a ride, for you have saved a long, long while to a horse that will take you for free, while gliding down the street, that life is sumptuous and sweet; you're bubbling o'er with genial mirth, good will to men and peace on earth. And when you park your car downtown, up comes J. Pumpernickel-Knowan, "Great Scott," he exclaims, "Jehoshaphat! I've ridden over a you like that! Oh, why in blitzen did you blow for such a cheese the hard-earned dough? Of all the lemons there's the worst; among the gold bricks it is first. Its working parts will break like glass, it is a salvo for oil and gas." And so this unimpeachable jay has knocked the pleasure from your day, and pulled a cloud across your sun, and spotted your little slice of fate. In every street of every town there is a Pumpernickel-Frown who can't be satisfied or glad unless he makes another sad. His cheerfulness shows not in his face, the cheerful neighbor's honest jay, but it's a thing that soon looks sick when some one hits it with a brick. And so this Pumpernickel-Brown distributes sorrow up and down.

The Peptomist.
The peptomist is one who works with most exceeding vim, and sets example to the shirks who may keep their noses to the wall, and their feet dragging feet, go to their tasks each day; with frowns they smack the ears of what and thrash the babes of hay. With scowls they fix the eyes that would the world the usual cheer; they're only happy when they draw the pay they think they earn. And when there is a slump in trade, and workmen must be fired, these delegates are first to fade—they've made the world a slum in trade, and workmen are laid off. The best announcements, through his tears, "We'll keep this hustling job. We can't afford to let him go, he's such a useful man; we'll keep him, though to Tom and Joe we must attach the ear." The peptomist is in demand wherever he makes a sale, his progress through the land, and wears his string of bells.

Peer Education.
I'm sorry for the girls and lads who grow up in these wanton times, for they have learned to blow the

HIGH COSTS CHECK ALL BUYING

Extracts From Bradstreet's Forecast of Business Year, with Review.

Nineteen hundred and twenty may easily lay claim to a costly experience. The business year, though certainly not one of the best, years in trade, manufacture and industry. Some new high records were set up in financial lines and in industrial output, though it will hardly be claimed that the year was as profitable in all lines as were some others when outputs were smaller and prices were lower but when final margins were larger. Closing, as it does, with wholesale trade slumped, retail trade below that of recent years, manufacturing output restricted, unemployment, including reduced working time in industry rarely, if ever, equaled, collections backward and depression widespread, the stamp of success as to the past is missing and the outlook as to the future far less favorable than prospects at its outset led the business world generally to expect. Indeed, the general feeling is to regard it as a year whose results might best be soon forgotten were it not for the useful lessons that the experience has taught, not only to this country but to the entire world.

The fact is that the year just closed was the true heir of 1919, and as such it reaped, in the full results of the bad seed sown in 1919, this referring to the extravagance in buying for which the latter year was prominently noted, the piling up of unreasonable demands by labor, and the increasing of costs beyond the ability of a people to pay who had already been taxed to the apparent limit to carry on a confusedly successful but immensely expensive war. The waste of that and earlier years, most of it unavoidable—because war is and always has been wasteful of mind and property—deadly demerit reckoning, and its payment bids fair to be a heritage for some years. In this respect, what the close of this year. The momentum acquired in 1919 was sufficient to carry trade generally at a very high volume throughout the first month of last year, but severe weather, the tie-up of traffic and the lowering of moral tone that followed the declaration of the war itself, the extreme congestion of the heartburnings involved, the strains to which the ordinary man and woman, debarrated from profiting by the boom, were reduced, should act as fetters to centuries to come and get the seal of civilization's disapproval and condemnation on those who would lightly-heartedly talk of war as a solver of problems, or who, with the terrible examples visible on every hand, should oppose any reasonable means of rendering future conflicts impossible.

A Glance at the Past
Whatever the cause—whether the overloading of trade and industry with excessive costs—overproduction certainly did not affect all lines—the exhaustion of mobile supplies of money, as shown by the marking-up of loans early in the year and their maintenance until the late months, or the attenuation of credit to a degree where a halt had to be called on the raising of prices of commodities to a point where further buying became impossible—the year 1920 will probably be memorable for what is now freely termed the "buyers' strike" or the "revolt of the buyers." It would be difficult to fix the date at which this "do-nothing" movement first became noticeable as a market factor. Necessity buying only was urged early in our war years as a national duty; later it became an apparent necessity with a large part of the public. Lost sight of for a time in 1919 when the strain of war strikes struck the country in the late summer of that year, and was powerfully enhanced by the countless exhibitions of extravagance to which costly extreme wage advances gave rise.

Signs of public insistence with the steadily mounting cost of living grew as the year 1919 waned, but were apparently lost sight of in the holiday buying orgy at the close of that year. The momentum acquired in 1919 was sufficient to carry trade generally at a very high volume throughout the first month of last year, but severe weather, the tie-up of traffic and the acute congestion of transportation noted earlier in the year, but culminating in the winter and early spring of 1920, slowed down trade generally in the second month; and the index numbers of February 1 and March 1, marking a nearly flat line on published charts, was a visible sign that wholesale prices were about at their peak. Brighter markets in the spring months and the approach and passing of Easter gave a temporary fillip to trade, while prices were driven upward temporarily by the coalmen's strike of early April. By that time, however, public abstention from buying had become marked, and a sharp and early May saw a big outburst of advertising having for its aim the moving of slow-selling stocks.

Some Measures of Movement
By and large, the past year was one of liquidation in industrial securities and commodities, of attempted readjustment of all values from a swollen war and post-war level, and of a slaughter of prices of commodities. The latter movement, in its turn of expensively—and badly—run railways to their owners, was signified by a moderate rise in railway as distinct from industrial shares, the weakness of the latter and the growing reaction in trade and industry, however, finally involving the former, as well as holders of bonds in final end-of-year depression. Not the least imposing feature of this liquidation, by the way, was the consolidation, with other notable rallies, of the period from early November, 1919, to late December, 1920, a period of fourteen months during which year the foreign exchange markets were greatly excited, and while early low-record levels in British exchange were not quite reached later, rates of exchange on other countries in most instances touched bottom twice before being again pushed up. Sales of stocks did not greatly expand with the liquidation, and aggregate sales were much below those of 1919, while slightly less than those of 1918. Bond sales broke all records, for which dealings in the war crop of Liberty and Victory bonds, that were liquidated freely by business houses as a result of higher money rates and credit restriction, were responsible. Municipal bonds sales were slightly below those of 1919. New incorporations and new domestic capital issues were of record size. Federal revenues were increased heavily by taxes, and the national debt showed a decrease despite what were regarded as extravagant expenditures. Money in circulation increased in total volume and in per capita allowance. Foreign trade broke all records, alike in exports and in imports, though exports never in any month reached the flow swollen totals of June, 1919. Imports reacted from the high record of June, 1920. Total exports of the preceding year were topped down from earlier records. Exports and imports of gold exceeded those of the preceding year, but silver exports were smaller despite the very high prices ruling early as a result of Far Eastern buying. The bank clearing of the country for eleven months equaled the record-breaking annual record of 1919, but this excess was due largely to early month totals dwarfing the corresponding periods the year before, because the totals in the last quarter of 1919 were never thereafter equaled. It was frequently said that, owing to our possession and operation of the Federal Reserve Banking system, the often predicted panic had failed to arrive—we were at least spared this old-time American luxury—and this was true to the extent that bank runs were rare, except in the Porto Rico banks at Boston and the small agricultural bank suspensions in North Dakota and other western states, but the volume of future liabilities as a whole practically equaled those of the panic years 1907 and 1914, though the commercial failures were comparatively light, exceeding only those of 1919 during the present century. As to this, the fat profits of preceding years were reflected in the carry many dealers through, a not very profitable calendar year, but the record addition to these in business in 1920 may contain some elements of future liquidation.

Retreat of Commodity Prices.
Nineteen hundred and twenty was an almost exact reverse of 1919 in the movement of prices, although this does not show in the yearly averages, which show a steady rise for the first three years past. After hesitation in the first quarter of the year 1919, prices very generally moved upward until coal and steel prices were dwarfed. In 1920, after somewhat paralytic hesitancy in the same period, the trend, though interlarded with the swiftness of a duck in a pond, introduced actual famine to some cities, was pretty generally downward, ending as first modern times have seen as the year advanced, until the record decline of November, recorded in the index number as of December 1 (13 per cent), involved a net drop from the peak point of February 1 of 34.6 per cent, the December 1 number being the lowest recorded since November 1, 1917. In other words, the general level of wholesale prices on December 1 was below that ruling in the months immediately preceding our break with Germany over the submarine warfare, but although the December 1 level was still 56 per cent above the price level of August 1, 1914, more than half (50 per cent, to be exact) of the six-year war and post-war advance had been canceled.

The Year's Crop
The drawback to the year's results lay in the less satisfactory prices secured as a result of the great increase in prices from the high levels of the preceding crops. The department of agriculture puts the decrease in value of the 1920 crop at 32 per cent over the 1919 level. This is a big quantity was exported at higher prices than in 1919; of corn, only about 20 per cent was exported at higher prices than in 1919; of cotton, only about 20 per cent was exported at higher prices than in 1919; of wheat, only about 20 per cent was exported at higher prices than in 1919. The loss in cotton was considerably larger, as all that crop leaves the farm and did not leave it this year until the price was much below last year. The fact is that even accepting the very low crop value estimate of the department, the return to the farmer, December 1 prices were in excess of anything of value to 1917, and 1918 and 1919 were not poor years for the American farmer. However, in respect to prices, the farmer is merely experiencing what the wholesaler and manufacturer in business has had to suffer. Despite the heavy loss suffered by the wheat farmer, the agricultural department places it at $672,000,000, the area planted to that cereal this year is estimated at 90,000,000 acres, a loss of only 2.8 per cent from a year ago and of 20 per cent from the war average record of 1918, while the condition is given as 87.5, compared with 85.2 a year ago.

Looking Forward.
Divergent views are held as to the admittedly clouded outlook. Those inclined to take the cheerful side point to the absence thus far of acute financial, especially banking, troubles, the expedient easing of the strain on credit from the dark point of mid-autumn, the evidences of price revisions having brought nearer to the point where conditions, those affecting money involved, relatively speaking, may be expected to be stabilized, the great basic wealth of the country, really untouched by the events of the year, and the demonstrated ability of the American to adapt himself to and master difficulties. The other less favorable views, advanced, have to do with the spread of unemployment, the slowing down of industry, the injection of short time and wage reductions into the situation, this tending to hamper buying ability among large sections of country, and the asserted crippling of the farming interests, heralded as meaning reduced purchasing power among producers and a swift reaction from that of trade and industry, the production of staple food and other crops. Only the very sanguine apparently look for a swift reaction from what economists describe as the secondary phases of cost and depression, a painful and altogether unpainable process of recovery from industrial disorganization and reduced production. Without attempting to make any hard and fast predictions, indeed with every disposition to keep out of the ranks of the prophets—who are proverbially lacking in honor in their own country—it may be well to set down a few facts which have a bearing upon the working out of either of these forecasts.

In the first place, it apparently needs to be again brought to the attention of the faint-hearted that this country has never known a trough lighter from the troubles which have beset the world as the result of the overwhelming ambition of the German marauder, that present trade and industrial troubles, due in part to our own extravagances, are the natural results of the antecedent causes, and that it is but that the reckoning came as early as it did. In other words, our condition might have been a whole lot better if it were not for a great deal better than is the lot of our European friends and allies. The industrial worker may be idle in unrecruited numbers and a fraction of his pay (25 per cent, perhaps) has been cut, but he had an opportunity to prepare for the inevitable reaction, while the farmer, mourning the fat returns of 1919, should not forget that his money and crop returns are better than in 1914, 1915 or 1916, which were not estimated bad years at the time. For the great mass of people who did not directly gain by the increase in money or prices, the return to former price levels is a nearly unimpaired good, and all three of the groups cited have the knowledge that, as a result of readjustments, a dollar goes and will go further than it did in recent days of so-called prosperity. The fact is that, for a while at least, business will need the present quiet period to recast its ideas—some new plans and require to put in operation new and better conceptions. As put by one observer, the old figures are blurred and new ones must be prepared.

It is hardly to be hoped that the present readjustment will not go far enough to retire a large number of those who in the past year and in unprecedented numbers sought the profits of a business life with a modicum of business equipment and a deficiency of ability to succeed. It might be well if we were able to forget some of the events of our recent "alkali-bait era" of extravagance were it not for the lessons conveyed that in the long run ability, education and experience are also entitled to their reward. Perhaps no better service could be done the American business man, wage earner or farmer than to hold up to him the example of barthelemy France, which in its patient rebuilding of its shattered fortunes, this year, shows a faith in its present assets containing favorably with all but the very largest gains in our own. With the experience of some past years of stress in mind, it is inclined to look askance at efforts of "medicine men" of both parties to offer patent nostrums to the people in belief that acts of congress will arrest, delay or mitigate the working out of the great natural forces now in operation. The patient's fever seems to have broken, and there remains now the process of building up his strength, for which time and care are the main requisites.

HE COULD HARDLY HARNES HORSE

Like They Were Tied in Knots Before He Begun Taking Tanlac.

"Tanlac has relieved me of a case of indigestion from which I suffered for years and has added ten pounds to my weight, besides," said Joseph Haas, a well-known farmer living at Kenwood Park, Iowa, "and that is the very thing I needed. I had no appetite and everything I ate caused severe pains in my stomach. I had miserable sick headaches, and after having such spells of dizziness came on me that I felt like I would fall."

"I had rheumatism in all my limbs, with severe shooting pains, and after after a day's work, my muscles felt like they were tied in knots. I had such pains in my arms that often it was all I could do to harness up my horse. I tried about everything that was recommended to me in the way of medicines, but in spite of it all I lost weight and strength continually and kept getting worse."

"But my first bottle of Tanlac convinced me that I had found the medicine for my case, and now I feel like a new man. My appetite is fine and everything I eat agrees with me perfectly. I no longer have headaches or spells of dizziness, and my arms and legs are free from those rheumatic pains. I am brimful of new life and energy and can plow all day or do any other kind of hard work."
