LELAND WOOD - Violin

It gives me much pleasure to speak from personal knowledge and acquaintance concerning F. C. Marshall, violinist and pianist. During our teachers' institute Mr. Marshall favored us with several examples of the best of classical music which was always received with hearty applause. In fact, Mr. Marshall always makes a hit with his audience and holds 'em all in perfect silence and attention throughout his entire program. Allan S. Stinson, County Superintendent Knox County.

I note with pleasure that you expect to give several concerts during the summer and it certainly gives me great pleasure to recommend you to any and all as I know positively that everybody who heard your concerts here in Creighton in the past was well pleased and are only awaiting an opportunity to attend another which we hope will be soon - H. A. Cheney.

Leland Wood and Miss Velma Wood appeared at the hall Saturday evening. These talented young people are deserving of high praise for their ability as musicians. Their rendition of classic numbers, which were given in an artistic manner, showing them to be real artists in the profession they have chosen - Plattsmouth Journal.

Niobrara, Neb., Feb. 27, 1918 - F. C. Marshall and his orchestra giving one concert for the benefit of the local Red Cross, in his home town of Niobrara. The old saying that "prospect is not without honor, save in his own town and among his own people, in this case proved untrue. Those who have known Fred since a boy, expected a good musical program, but were surprised at the exceptional ability of the members of the orchestra, in their solo work. The audience was carried away with enthusiasm, aroused by some of the numbers. It is a source of much satisfaction to Mr. Marshall to be so highly complimented by his own people, and we recommend him as a musician it is a pleasure and a privilege to have Sarah A. Houston.

Paris and Washington. Springfield, Mass., Republican: Americans will watch the proceedings at Paris with the most intense interest because of the presence of a representative of the United States. The discussions which began yesterday also will draw attention to their bearing on the progress of the conference on armaments and the far east to be held at Washington on November 12-13-14.

Essentially like the one now being held in the supreme council Great Britain, France, Italy, Japan and the United States are represented. The same five powers will constitute the gathering at Washington, for China is to be represented in order to present its views. Chinese negotiations are being a discussion rather than as one of the great powers, which are seeking to reduce the burden of armament. That the United States will be represented by its secretary of state instead of by an ambassador does not greatly matter, for whatever interests the administration may have to give to its representatives at Paris can readily be communicated by cable and the other powers are on their alert to discover, if possible, the opinions of the United States government. If this country has little influence in the Chinese negotiations, it is merely because the administration does not care at present to use its influence.

Upon the outcome at Paris, however, the chance of success in the conference for the reduction of armaments must largely depend. If the powers can agree on a treaty of Upper Silesia and the Rhine there will be reason to hope that they will agree about China and the Pacific. The supreme council takes action favorable to the pacification and gradual disarmament of Europe there will be a much brighter prospect of an agreement at Washington for the reduction of naval armaments. If on the contrary the supreme council, which cannot so nearly agree on European policy, or should in respect to Upper Silesia and the Rhine take action calculated to make Europe an armed camp for a long time to come, hope of any substantial results from the conference on naval armaments will be slim.

Thus even if the United States has no direct concern in European questions like the partition of Silesia or the occupation of the Rhine provinces by foreign troops, it is forced to take an interest in the negotiations at Paris because success or failure there is closely linked with success or failure at Washington next November. If failure at Paris should be sufficient to complete it might hardly be worth while for powers so impudently to add to the subject of armaments; on the other hand a satisfactory settlement of the controversies now active might open the way for an equally satisfactory concord in regard to fleets and the far east. The success of Mr. Harding's conference will be affected in no small degree by the discussions now going on at Paris.

A "Billy Sunday" campaign is in progress in Sioux City Sept. 18, and we judge the city will need the drastic treatment which the evangelist will administer.
During this period of agricultural fruition, when abundant harvest is assured, unfortunates are being afflicted with "eye-bright" suggested to us as satisfied by a profound sense of satisfaction.

It is claimed that the Klux Klan is an organization with worthy purposes. Would it not have been just as well to use some other name having the same connotation as associated with reconstruction in the south after the Civil war?
From the time they have been on our attention, have usually shrouded their absence and returned sooner than expected. They are invariably glad to get back speaking of other places they have visited, comparisons are always favorable to Wayne.

An advantage to one whose nose turns up is that it can't be stuck up; it's already up. Similar advantage accrues to one whose mouth is left hanging open; it does not have to be opened and is always ready for business.

Some people won't apply themselves to chosen work as long as there is anything else to do. Their idea of a business or industry is to get back speaking of other places they have visited, comparisons are always favorable to Wayne.
George Ade hits speeders a hard blow in an article in the current American. He says that they get their exercise by riding the fly-wheel at some power plant. He says they are never in so much hurry as when they are "bumped." They don't figure on going, but on arriving. He thinks they ought to be shot from one town to another by a Big Bertha. He says speeders are dangerously crazy.

Starving Russia is in the throes of the bolsheviks and the New York Tribune declares, "Russian misery reaches, as far as any famine is due to any single principle, from the application of bolshevik principles. If all governments had been dominated by bolshevism, it is likely we would now have a world of hunger and war, with no give food and relief. Though we have some near-bolsheviks in this country, they have been bitter critics of our government. It is found that this country is always willing and able to help sufferers elsewhere. In Russia, the government is in charge of our own, the people are looking to America for aid, and they are not looking in vain. While no government would, while there are yet inequalities to be overcome, the United States is so far above other nations in magnanimity of thought and generosity of deed that it is fitting to help our former enemies or friends, and thus win this way for help, and language to the people who are afflicted with America ought to tour and inspect other countries to sharpen contrast and stimulate content.

Hate-bounded partisans are not content, and their biased utterances deserve little or no consideration. Progress in power has been in the saddle two years without accomplishing any worthy legislation, forgetting to mention the executive veto was in the hands of the opposing party until a few months ago. The same editor shouts that Harding is following the "Whit" line. He is following the senate, whereas, before the inauguration, the blindly partisan assumed that the president would be friendly to the country. He has always believed the administration in power was doing its best to benefit the country. He says he did not always agree with its policies. Reconstruction was not accomplished by legislation, but by force, which surrendered control March 4, and it cannot be wholly accomplished by legislation now. Laws will help, but cannot effect a cure. The cure for ill that yield only to the rather slow process of reestablishing credits and re-adjusting supply and demand. Any one who expects a clouded vision or is talking through his hat.

If Henry Ford could do for the railroads generally what he has done in his own state, he would be a important and valuable aid in solving the transportation problems. Of his work the Lincoln Journal says: "Henry Spillane quotes a representative of the Lincoln Journal as saying that the most important things with the Detroit, Toledo & Ironport railroad. First he turned a deficit into a surplus in the first half of the year of 1921. Second, he reduced the train schedule two hours. Third, he took private cars from the officials. Fourth, he increased the maximum number of cars handled 1,200 in twelve hours. Finally he increased the pay for the men and established better working conditions without remaining subject to the restrictive rules established during the war period. This means that Mr. Ford did with this railroad practically what he has accomplished in his own factories in recent years. It is surprising to learn that business circles of this kind he will completely upset the theories of the numerous captains of industry who insist that he is no constructive business man at all but is merely a 'lucky inventor.'"

Bolshevik "Distribution"
Cleveland Plain Dealer: There are food ships in the harbor of Petrograd, ships bearing cargoes which might be the means of saving the millions in southeastern Russia from starvation. The bolshevik authorities are very glad to get the food. But they have no intention of sending it to the famine sufferers. They have used for it a manner here. It is announced, therefore, that all the food that has been received from the west will be disposed of in the two cities of Petrograd and Moscow, the "cradles of the revolution." Petrograd and Moscow are not starving, of course, but Petrograd and Moscow have never really had enough to eat since they were blessed by bolshevik control. Now they intend to make use of the victuals which have providentially come to hand. As for the pending catches in the Volga valley, they, too, many of them are not good bolsheviks anyway. This is a fair indication of the difficulties which representatives of bolshevik agents must expect in their work of aiding Russia. Whatever effective relief work may be done will be without the cooperation of the bolsheviks and probably with the handicap of bolshevik opposition.

To Play Out the Game.
Investment News: The heads of the four big railroad brotherhoods are among the most intelligent of the business world. They are men of big experience as well as common sense. They understand the conditions which face alike their organizations, the railroads and the country. They know that industry cannot do business as a profitable cost of doing so. They know that the industry cannot do business unless it can hold jobs. They know that no wage scale is worth a cent unless it is paid. They know that if it is not possible, therefore, that the brotherhood chiefs are serious when in a conference with a representative of the Association of Railway Executives they ask the railroad managers to "place the record clearly on record as to whether they will accept further decreases in wages. If the brotherhood chiefs might as well ask the railroad managers to place themselves directly in the line of going to the wall, they are going to the wall on next labor day. Wages and working conditions on the railroads will have to be readjusted as the industry, which is a matter of economics may require until the carriers can operate safely and soundly to do the work of the country and employ the men who depend upon the operation of the carriers.

A United Central America.
San Francisco Chronicle: For a long time past there have been recurrent efforts to unite the five republics lying between Mexico and Colombia into a united states of Central America. The five republics are of the same general character and origin. Their language is the same and their government is the same. They have the same conditions and methods. The Indian races which constitute the majority of the population vary a good deal, but at least have the common characteristics of illiteracy. In the opinion of Frank Arnold, recently minister to Salvador, there is a fair prospect of success. The union of these republics would give them a standing in the world which they do not expect to reach singly. It should put an end to the little wars which are so common in that petty part of the world. It would enable them to undertake enterprises impossible to any of them alone. The obstacles are presumably the same that were so difficult to overcome in the two-way case—personal ambitions, vested interests and long standing and acrimonious rivalries. In the natural course of things these republics must sooner or later unite.

Springfield, Mass., Republican: It is unlikely that the schoolboys of Springfield, Mass., will be able to eliminate the tax on soda water to have been a financial error. And the halving of the tax on soda water would be only half an error.

Nebraska Corn the Best.
Lincoln Journal: Eastern Nebraska cornfields—with their luxuriant growth, dark green foliage and manifold promise, offer a view which cannot be excelled in any state this year. "Even Iowa and Illinois," continues the statement, "the two leading states did not keep up with Nebraska's pace last season. They lost 10 points, Illinois 18 points, Indiana 25 points, Ohio 10 points and Missouri 15 points, as compared to Nebraska's loss of 4 points. With a large part of the corn at the safe goal, Nebraska can supply these leading states of the East, thereby suffering further deterioration during August."
"In winter wheat, Nebraska ranks second to the leading state—which has made no mention of Nebraska. Threshing is nearly completed on the eastern third of the state and is progressing nicely in western counties. Plowing for wheat continues in eastern sections heavy vegetation is being turned under. Harvest work seems to have the official estimate of 30 million bushels of wheat yield and rust resistance will stimulate its acreage."
"From present indications, the state will get three-fourths of a full crop of potatoes. The very marked reduction of the crop throughout the United States during July from 177,000,000 to 216,000,000 bushels has set prices soaring. During the past week prices to growers at Keosauqua have advanced practically 31 per cent. This indicates that demand for the late commercial crop of potatoes in western Nebraska."
"Reports on yields of both wild hay and alfalfa continue to vary considerably. The official estimates of production are considerably below that of last year, and the crop is fairly good. There are practically no apples in the farm orchards in the southern half of the state. The apple crop of the United States is considerably less than half of what it was last year."

Chemicals and War.
Springfield, Mass., Republican: Secretary Weeks and Secretary Dundy, basing their action on military and naval grounds, give their support to the demand for a permanent embargo on the importation of dyestuffs and other chemicals. This demand stems from a source mainly from the American chemical foundation, a company formed for the exploitation of the immensely valuable German patents on synthetic dyes. If foreign competition can be entirely eliminated by an embargo there is obviously an opportunity for tremendous profits, and it is not surprising that other business interests which use dyes and other chemicals and want them cheap should be deploring the proposal to create such a monopoly.
Economic considerations, however, seem less important than the close relations between this industry and chemical warfare. It must regretfully be said that the United States is now taking the lead in a movement calculated to increase manifold the horrors and destructiveness of war. There was a great outcry when the Germans resorted to the use of poison gas, and the allies had their chance when they dictated the terms of peace, to put this weapon beyond the pale. A step in this direction was taken, indeed, in Article 171, which says: "The use of asphyxiating, poisonous, or otherwise, and all analogous liquids, materials or devices being prohibited, their manufacture and importation are strictly prohibited in Germany." But this stands alone, and associates now the United States prohibited only to Germany, by the next article Germany is required to disclose to the principal allies and associates now the manufacture and mode of manufacture of "all toxic substances or other like chemical preparations." War has its chemical preparations. War has its international meetings since then, to take even the slightest action toward a general agreement not to resort to these weapons.

It is obvious that the difficulty of reaching such an agreement must be greatly increased in the case of various countries to create a monopoly in dyes and other chemicals on the ground of national security. The reason for this is the fact that in the event of a world war, the ports of chemical warfare, the more telling the argument on patriotic grounds for excluding foreign competition by a monopoly. On the other hand, the pure monopoly and influential such monopolies become, the more pressure they can exert for blocking international efforts for the international use of the use of poison gas in war. If anything is to be done to prevent the wholesale destruction of the lives of women and children in the next war, now is the time to do it while the world is being reconstructed.

for the recent war. But if the United States and other great powers once begin to build up chemical monopolies on the assumption that chemical warfare is not to be forbidden, on the contrary, greatly developed, there will be little chance of putting through a reform that would threaten influential vested interests.

Fall Tailoring Fabrics Are Here

The many friends of this store will be glad to learn that we have received our semi-annual treat in the form of New Fabrics to be made up into

Ed. V. Price & Co. Clothes

They will be grateful, we are sure, to have the assurance that, as always, the fabrics are absolutely virgin wool, and in addition that they offer fuller value than it has been possible to secure in the disturbed conditions of several seasons past.

The approved colors and patterns are the new Herring-bone patterns in grays and browns, together with neat checks and stripes in a variety of shades.

Come in and let us go into greater details. You'll be captivated with the quality of the fabrics and the prices are just about half what they were a year ago.

And if you are wise, you'll let us measure you at once for your fall garments and have the finished garments come out when you need them—next week, next month or two months from now. By making your selection now you will be assured of getting the fabric you want. The price range this season is $35 and up.

Just now we are showing fifty special fabrics at especially low prices that cannot last long, because of the great values.

Our new fall hats are ready. Come in and try them on

Let Big City-Fry in Small Juice.

Lincoln Journal:—Our county communities gasping under debt and tax-burdens may get interested in knowing that New York city is in similar case. The growth of the city has been so rapid as to make it difficult to provide necessary facilities. There is also much evidence of extravagance and inefficiency in the management of public affairs. The suggestion is made by the mayor that the metropolis would be better off without taxation from the state at all, being north considering the fact that country districts are unable to provide safe financial resources for the city. It might be a good idea to withdraw all restrictive legislation and let the big city try in its own juice for a period.

If War Comes, Make It Prosper.

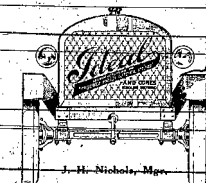

Chicago Tribune: No nation can produce as the United States can produce, and for that reason it ought to be understood that if any country is to get a share of the world's business, it will feel the effect of every war upon which an industrial genius can produce goods, loans, investments, bonds, etc. Anyone intoxicated with war or desirous of continuing it as an international institution may fire a Chesterfield code for it. But our idea would be to make it so extremely unpleasant for any nation to go to war that it would be a trouble that both would want to do it.

President Ambitious.

St. Paul Pioneer-Press: A nation "committed to the task of reforming the world" was pictured by President Harding as his ideal for America in an address at Corbin, N. H. He would have an established high principles of freedom and justice everywhere. The president is taking in too much territory. Probably he didn't really mean what he really said and his remarks may be ascribed to a desire to do something for his own promotion. Even a president can overdo eloquence at times.

New York Evening Post: The world needs more Plattsburg, says the French high commissioner to the United States. Well, they would have a hard time getting enough of it in this country or enough to eat anywhere else.

Old Settlers' Picnic.

The Old Settlers' picnic was held this week at Bressler's grove north-west of town. All manner of delicacies were necessary but service to carry the crowd to the ground and grove had been newly furnished. All preparations made for the enjoyment of the pioneers. Twenty tables, which were provided for the picnic dinner, were inadequate.

picnic each year, was made by Frank Fuller. At a business meeting the following officers were selected: President, J. T. Bressler; secretary, J. D. King; treasurer, W. A. K. Neely.

James Britton was called on for a speech and said that though he came here twenty-six years before he did not consider himself a pioneer. The owners, he said, were those who came here in 1869 and 70 and suffered hardships in maintaining a living. In the winter of 1981, Mr. Britton stated, there were thirty days when no one could get out of his home. Land was of little value, coal being worth about $10. A few lines the railroad in this country had 23,000 acres on which it owed back taxes, and Mr. Britton said that at this time for coal have secured 20,000 acres of land for 90 cents an acre from the railroad company. Even in 1878 a half-section of land could be bought for $500. Mr. Britton said that he nor Mr. Bressler, who was in business with him at that time, had not then acquired the sum sufficient to buy this cheap land. He spoke of the early life at La Porte where there were two stores, one owned by Bressler & Britton and the other owned by Tuttle & Hardenberg. The stores took turns in being open for business. In the winter two of three families lived together to save fuel, he said.

buildings near by, and hence causing much excitement. The stack contained about ten tons of hay. The burning was caused by some little boys playing with matches by the side of the stack, which as a matter of course took fire. Most of the buildings which are burned in this country (aside from those raised by prairie fires), are burned by allowing children to play with matches, and letting them touch off whatever their fancy dictates. Last year Mr. Bennett's barn was burned in the same way. A few months ago a fire was kindled against the old drug store of Rose & Potter, and only the most desperate exertions saved the block from being consumed. "Week before last, Mr. Hines' house, in the southern part of the county, was burned twice all its contents, as a penalty for allowing the children to tamper with matches. People will have to be more careful in this respect, or it will not be long before this town will have a conflagration that will wipe out a large part of it.

The Loneliness of Age.

Time once was when the day lacked hours'.

Enough to finish the tasks begun.

When morning scattered the seeds of flowers,

And evening's curtain was flung down.

Of moonlight's web and starry showers.

The lyre was touched and a song went winging.

Its favour as it fell in youth;

Easily laughter and hail came ringing.

And eve met eye with the glance of truth.

For some was sweet and the heart was singing.

Of love, furthest!

One by one as the leaves are shaken.

From old trees' branches by Autumn's blast.

So were the old companions taken.

Leaving him lonely, left to the last.

Living the just.

Some days makes no plans for the morrow.

When shall it work with, when who plays?

Burdened with duties of the days it leaves.

Age expectantly waits to pay.

Waits and dreams of the past, and sorrows.

Only to say.

E. L. Montgomery in New York Times.

Moral Causes Start Wars.

Yankee Press and Dakotan: Wars between nations, like quarrels between individuals, come about not primarily from economic causes, as all "experts" would have the world believe, but from moral causes—people, in the mass or singly, are ugly and unfair to each other, instead of being decent, courteous and generous.

J. Barleycorn Will Hang Self.—Stillwater, Okla., Gazette: Give John Barleycorn time and he will convert any nation to prohibition, is the conclusion of observers who have noted the great increase in drunkenness in England and Wales. In 1920 there were 96,763 convictions for drunkenness, as compared with 57,948 in 1919.

Beyond Our Understanding.—Baltimore Sun: London has chosen to the hottest midsummer of many years to return the silk hat to popularity. Now and then we think we thoroughly understand our British brother—and then something happens to persuade us that his reasoning is entirely alien.

Agriculture Notes

Shipping Association. - The organization of shipping associations has been successfully aided by the county agents in Illinois. The work has proved popular and advantageous to the farmers. New associations were organized during the second quarter of this year, during June 30 in Henderson, Hancock, Ellis, Randolph, Marshall, Putnam, and Kendall counties. The results shown by the shipping association in Adams county are typical. Sixty-two carloads of live stock were sent to terminal markets during the month of June. The shipments included 3,052 hogs, 343 cattle, and 25 sheep, belonging to 382 Adams county farmers. The total sale price for this shipment was $37,000. This was an increase of $23,000 in sales value over the same month last year. The average price per hundred weight this year was considerably lower than last, and it was especially noting the this year in sales was made by increasing the shipment to 36 more carloads than last year. The Henry County Shipping association shipped altogether $3,482,076.25 worth of live stock during the year ending March 31. Last year the total was $2,450,153.42. The increase in total sales indicates general satisfaction with the cooperative plan of shipment. - From Milk of Infected Cow. - When an early writer first framed the remark that truth is stranger than fiction, it was the outcome of vivid observation. The statement became trite through repetition, but occasionally leaps into strong outline in fact. A case in point has just come to the notice of the United States department of agriculture.

The department, through its office of motion pictures, recently produced a film "Dink of the Showers," which told of tuberculosis creeping into a family through the unnoticed infesting of a handsome herd of cattle. In the film the farmer disposed of his unhealed animals and built on a sound basis. - Now comes a report through the Vermilion County Farm bureau of a case in Edgar county, Ill., more striking than the picture story and equally as happy ending. A farmer had his herd tested for tuberculosis and one cow reacted. Instead of destroying her, the farmer declared the test dependable, removed the ear tag, and sold her to his hired man for wages. - Of seven children in the man's family, five were contaminated - prominent cases of tuberculosis. The other two did not drink this cow's milk. A pig and cat also contracted disease after drinking the milk. A warrant has been issued for the original owner on charge of breaking quarantine, and it is stated, should one of the children die, he will be subject to a charge of manslaughter.

Road Patrolling. - The road patrol system in Grant county, Wash., is pointed out by the United States department of agriculture as an illustration of how highways can be maintained most successfully and economically. Other counties in the state use the "grant" system, assigning to each gang a long section, upon which they make repairs at intervals, seldom reaching all the necessary points. In Grant county the plan is to prevent a road from getting into bad condition rather than to make repairs. There are 13 patrol sections, each from 6 to 10 miles long, in the 8733 miles of county highways. Each section is charged with a patrolman who works constantly on his piece of road, feeling that he alone is responsible for its condition. While the patrolmen work under the direction of the county engineer, the details are left largely to their own judgment. - A specially constructed light road machine called the "road fixer," is used. It has a long wheel base and two cutting blades rigidly connected with the carrying frame of the machine. The rear wheels are on separate axles, controlled by separate levers. The patrolman carries the necessary tools for cleaning weeds, trimming shoulders, cleaning ditches, and for handling surfacing material. He handles his own repairs, the county repair shop under the direction of a skilled mechanic.

The annual cost of this system, states the Bureau of Public Roads, averages $225 a mile, whereas in less than other counties pay where roads receive attention "only when they need it." Grant county has traveled roads second to none in the state, and its people are enthusiastic supporters of the patrol system.
