 THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

There are people who would make it their possibility find anything else to do.

Speaking of the Commercial club, we don't know what a postmortem examination would reveal. We don't know how long it has been dead, nor whether it is too dead to be resurrected or not.

People have been taking an enormous interest in the weather for the past week. The weather has been so hot and humid that some of us who could not stand so much rebelling, have nothing left but running gears.

Let us help one another. If we can't help one another, let's say the other fellow may need it worse than we do, and then if we owe it, it really belongs to him, not to us. We should do all we can to make possible, conditions would improve and better feeling would prevail.

We don't usually warm up to a proposed series of revival meetings, though we do strongly favor the impending "Billy" Sunday assent on sin in the next month. Like other American cities, Sioux City needs a revival of practical religion, and "Billy" Sunday is a specialist in producing results.

While we don't relish the extreme objectivity of the "Billy" Sunday people disposed to look around a little for the silver lining. The individual who always sees the dark side, and knows the objectivity of the "Billy" Sunday people, makes himself unhappy and lends misery to all those who come in contact with him.

Girls often err in extravagant attention to boys. They are in thinking they must manifest much love for boys. In that way they depreciate themselves. They would command more respect by holding some ideal and by maintaining a high standard of reserve. Wives are most eagerly sought from among those who have shown liveliness and manliness in their connection, relevant to upholding high standards, girls should be careful how they talk to boys, and they should be careful how they connect boys to talk to them. Habits of conversation should be of a high order. Girls want to be attractive. They should know that the objectivity they should "help" any suggestion of coarse familiarity.

President Harding has exchanged letters with a New York mother of nineteen children, sixteen of whom are living. He congratulated her and explained that she was one of eight children, and that his mother expressed regret that she did not have sixteen living. The president to President Harding that her husband was working in John Wamman's store for $20 a week, and asked the president to use his influence with that employer for better wages, so that the family of eighteen could have a little more to spend. The case was accordingly put up to Mr. Wamman, and favorable action has been promised. The kind of economy that will enable a family of such proportions to exist in expensive New York, or elsewhere, on $20 a week, would be a source of interest to far another families who think they suffer a good deal of hardship on much greater pay.

The amount which justifies most complaint at this time on the part of farmers is the fact that their prices are too cheap in comparison with other things. Manifestly, other prices ought to be reduced. Most of the blunders that have been made with prices of animals on foot. Cash is raised altogether out of "hog" prices. The present level of freight rates have had a considerable influence on retail prices, and they should come down. The railroad increase in business until rates have been revised downward. The railway commission, in which inside rates and reduction of rates, should not be sure that railroads will be hurt any worse by reducing costs and accepting losses than individuals engaged in buying or merchandising or other lines of endeavor. It would seem that railroads could best contribute to reduction in retail prices by reducing markets and business by cutting rates and insuring resumption of full-time business, taking the chance of supplying adequate revenues by increased volume. Transportation is vital to the farmer of crops and irreparable loss if they are not sold in time. The way of restoring normalcy. At present, prices of farm products are too low and prices of many other things are too high. If farm markets could be stimulated by the establishment of foreign credits, and railroad rates and other things that are too high could be brought down to a reasonable level, we would soon be able to travel along on a sound and prosperous basis. Conditions could not become healthy and satisfactory as long as one necessity is unreasonably high and another is unreasonably low. Until values become more equitable it would be better to have railroad rates and other present excessive charges too low than too high.

People of all vocations are disposed to join hands with the farmer. The creation of any worthy and helpful organization. On the production of the farms the property of other lines of endeavor depend. Country and towns are interdependent. The reason so much aversion is felt for the Nonpartisan League is because of its socialist leadership and its disastrous experiment with government in North Dakota. According to the speech of W. J. Arnold, North Dakota editor, in Wayne Saturday night, the farmers are simply being worked by league leaders who hope finally by a strange and incongruous coalition of farmers and labor unions to destroy property and establish a socialist form of government. Of the many different kinds of socialism, the most ruinous and deplorable that which is now in operation in Russia. The plan is working so thoroughly in Russia that the poor people there are starving and falling for food and shelter, and that well established and beautiful and kindly America. Contrasting conditions here with those in Russia, no American farmer would knowingly sanction the leadership of an organization tending in that direction. As expressed by the North Dakota editor, the Nonpartisan League is captained by socialists and its policies are socialist and contrary to American principles of freedom which we are wont to cherish and defend. Socialism would destroy initiative, would strike down hope for individual achievement. It gets a start by feeding on discontent. It comes into existence by famine, flood, tornado, drought, disease or any adverse happening or condition. Socialism comes along and whips its power to ride. It has no power to ride, but once enthroned, it has unlimited power to ruin and oppress the masses. The state of the city in Russia. No one should yield to the seductive blandishments or cunning pretenses of socialism, and no one should be led into the meshes of the Nonpartisan League as long as it is dominated by socialists—as long as the dangers of socialism lurk in its program.

THE POLICY OF HOARDING.
 The selfishness of hoarding is often pointed out by bankers, but is seldom active in likely to be charged. But when Wallace's Farmer emphasizes the importance of banking one's cash, self-interest can be suspected. The matter manifests the universal welfare in mind when it gave expression to the following: "Cash kept around the house is dead money. Cash deposited in the bank is live money. A dollar of cash deposited in the bank serves as a source of credit for $100 around the house is, in effect, preventing five to ten other men from borrowing $1,000 each. The man who hoards that there is at least $5,000,000 in the State of Iowa being kept out of circulation by hoarders. This $5,000,000 is it were in the bank would serve as a source of from $25,000,000 to $30,000,000 of credit, and would so give rise to ten thousand jobs and present critical situation.

"Never keep more than $50 in cash around the house, and if you do, keep it in a little tin. A $10 tin means do so. If you have large quantities of money on hand there is always danger of losing it by fire, theft or other means. But the biggest reason why all surplus money should find its way into the bank as promptly as possible is that the bank acts as a factor in the way in which the credit which they manufacture is hard cash. Remember that the bank makes out of every dollar of money which you deposit, from 85 to 110 worth of credit. We are satisfied that if only one-half of the money which at present is being hoarded in the United States were deposited with the banks that credit could be increased to such an extent that prices would rise by from 10 to 15 per cent. The man who keeps his money about the house is helping to hold prices down."

LIVING IN NEW YORK.
 The current Literary Digest contains a cutting indicating the present misfortune of living in New York City. People who enjoy plenty of room indoors and outdoors will relish some of these recollections: "California, writing movements in New York, with which he appears to be familiar, has this to say in part: 'Take the Bronx, the New Yorker lives in a room of nine live feet in San Francisco, 19th and 20th streets, near Fifth Avenue, not far from the corner of Carnegie and Otto Kahn and Central Park and Far Rockaway. Perhaps the nearest to Fifth Avenue is worth the price of two houses here. I know, but my friends pay for four. And what kind of a house do they pay for four houses for? 'It is narrow, deep, dark, and damp. It has no electric light except that in the hall. It has no rights of coming stairs so that when one comes home late, after spending 12 to 16 hours in the office, one gets into a room that is a battery of seventy-zives on the floor. It is like living in an elevator shaft. Traveling from the lower sub-basement, where the furnace represented in the coal-pit is kept, to the top floor bedroom means going in shape for track and Marathon events. The kitchen, where they keep the cockroaches, and the dining-room, where they hold the dinner parties for hunched fellow citizens, are in the next sub-basement. Climbing an unlighted and smelly stairway brings you into the dining room, dark and terrible, with ceilings 80 feet high—in January it is like warming the Cathedral of St. John the Divine.

"What does New York pay for these American homes? Eight hundred dollars a year? Not just four times that—thirty-two hundred dollars. And these are fashionable mansions in big demand. You are lucky if your landlord permits you to stay in them at all, for there are plenty of New Yorkers anxious always to get more if they can only get you out. In Oakland you couldn't lease such places to Chinamen.

"I know a family that spends $10,000 a year on New York. By this I mean that they give that much away each year. They get practically nothing in return. They are one of the hundreds of fashionable slugs first mentioned; they have no children, no servant, no automobile, belong to no country club, have no fountain, no stable, no garden, no horse; take no European trips. Luxuries they take the evening Globe, the Sun, the Post. They are very economical or they could never afford to live in their slum. And what does the money go to? All of the money that flows from the corner of Wall Street and Broadway.

"Compared with this, I know an Anglo-American family living in Worthington, Berks County, Pa. They own a good many acres of land, a roomy city, staid in dress of food and garden and smooth lawn. They eat eggs and drink milk and buy thick cream on berries and read butter on hot crumpets with strawberry tea on the tennis lawn. They are in London about seven or eight months a year. They cost them as much as a shuttle over from Grand Central to Times Square.

"They are allowed to have children, and an heir, and are allowed to play and the play is under the trees and not under a passing automobile truck. They have three automobiles, a horse and a Ford. They spend $6,000 a year? No, they do not; their income is one-half of that and they are saving money.

"After referring to a considerable length to the cost of living in New York, the correspondent says: 'The fact that there are no fourth-generation New Yorkers. No New Yorker has a great-grandfather who was also a New Yorker. The New Yorks are of the first generation. He is buried out of his descendants. He may have an Adam, but he will have no progeny going down to the Judgment Day. That is, unless he or his wife-in-law should leave New York. He can't afford to leave New York because he is probably a business that he's practiced here where else he could practice it. However, he has no home in New York elsewhere he would have less.

"I happen to know one queer old gentleman who practices and who is revered by New York. He lives in a dazling apartment, but his children have to be sent to the country to play. The family might keep a performing flea in the playground of the apartment if there were room enough for it. They own a car, but they have a $500 automobile which is a true New Yorker and goes out with the maid on a shopping excursion. In fact, the man himself has no home in New York and the way in which he lives is the other end of it.

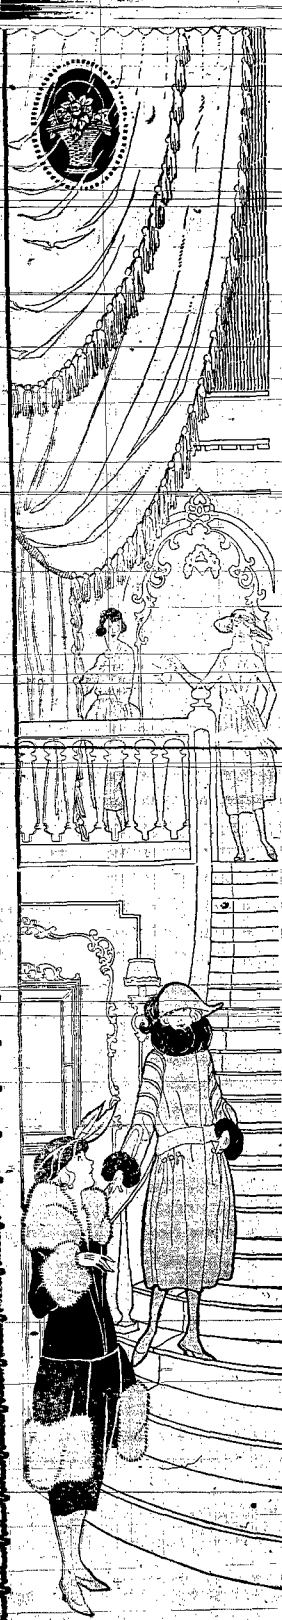

"This gentleman admits that it is ridiculous to have an automobile in New York City as the car costs more than it would cost to insure it in a taxi, but he keeps two cars because if he didn't he would be out of it by now.

"What is it that burdens the New Yorker? What is it that makes him bear the heavy load and the sweat and the blizzards that eat his skin and work in a blizzard, to play in a summer on the beach, to live in a winter in a fire and a winter in a winter? 'Why, it's because he knows that by doing he is not a child. He is not a monkey, a pig, a dog. He is a metropolitan-city-bred, up to the neck. You can call him anything you like, but you can't pretend a New Yorker except by taking him of a car from Greely, Col. Nor he did not. He came from New York, a newspaper, magazines, and money, and he is a New Yorker. He lives in New York or in trying to rent a room here there, and the second day he comes (Continued on Page Five) get out to Coney Island and see it for himself.

"A New Yorker can ride forty streets in a taxicab to the top of a skyscraper, free, and see New York magnificently, but he does not do it, not if he can help it. Instead, he goes to Coney Island, and sees New York from a taxi."

Home From Market.
J. A. Albin returned Tuesday from a highly buying trip in the eastern markets.

"A good many of his purchases were shipped by express to be here in time for the opening of school, an event which demands new-wearing apparel, especially suited to both teachers and children. This includes shoes, dresses, suits, coats, and hosiery, and you will find his new purchases in these lines, now at the store for your selection."

The dress goods and silks, together with the trimmings for making them up, are expected this week to arrive in quantities by railway freight.

The buying of the stock this fall begins several days longer than usual on account of the price question. To get new and stylish goods, especially at the price you want to pay, requires one of shopping around among many different wholesalers and manufacturers. And the price you want to pay is the all important thing about buying these days.

For example—any one of twenty factories visited and for sale good looking brown oxfords with military heels, but only one of them had such an oxford which could be sold at $6.00 and that was what was wanted. Similar conditions prevail in all lines and time and patience are required to get the best values.

You are cordially invited to visit the Albin store now and see for yourself the new goods and get the new prices.

Remember going to be agreeably surprised at how much further your money will go in your purchases this fall. Your special attention is called to the quality-to-value-stocks which is now at the extra.

The hundreds of extra coats, suits and dresses which John and Arthur Albin are in giving their special sales in outside towns are now at the store and if you come now you can choose your new garments from all these extra purchases. 1111

You can buy and use the cheaper grades and quality of oils and greases, and by changing oil very often you can "get by" and secure fairly good service for a time.

What is the Difference?

Many people ask: "What is the difference?" We will answer in the simplest possible manner: The cheaper, lower grades of oils are refined from an asphaltum base...

Practically all oils coming from the mid-continent or southern fields are of an asphaltum base, hence base in the middle word... The better and higher grades of oil are refined from a crude oil with a paraffine base...

Between these two extremes are hundreds of blended oils put up under different brands—asphaltum base oils compounded with paraffine base compounds...

SAVED LIFE OF

MOTHER SAYS SON

Burlington Woman in Splendid Health Since Taking Tanlae, Declares George Robinson.

"I believe Tanlae saved my mother's life four years ago," said George Robinson, living at 107 S. George Street, Burlington, Iowa, and it had kept her in the best of health ever since.

"Mother is now sixty-seven years of age, and she has always been frail and delicate. About four years ago she became so weak and nervous and unable to do anything that I was obliged to hang by a thread. Well, Tanlae proved to be exactly what she needed and the effect on her system was truly remarkable. She seemed to find the joy of living and having good health once more, and she looked years younger than before taking Tanlae."

"Ever since that experience Tanlae has been her stand-by. All her ailments have been cured, her appetite has been made in her condition, and we wouldn't be without it for anything. We are all deeply grateful to Tanlae and, in fact, Tanlae is a household treasure with us."

Tanlae is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

A little, black, dirty Italian has been paralyzing the town this week with a lot of plaster images. There is corn enough in this country this fall to run a thousand distilleries, barley enough to drown the state in lager, and eye enough to set the whole congregation dancing the can-can. And yet they say that liquor's the same old price.

Corn Crop a Gloom Killer. Drovers Journal-Stockman: All reports point to a splendid corn crop in Journal-Stockman territory, and in fact, in every portion of the crop belt. A feeling of optimism is up, permanent in the mind as one drives over our highways and sees the corn hanging everywhere, prophetic of a bountiful harvest.

How do you expect to enjoy the magnitude of the corn crop in the United States, a crop representing 75 percent of the corn of the world, a crop which in acreage exceeds the combined acreage of wheat, oats, barley, eye, rice, buckwheat and fax. The estimates of the nation's corn crop for 1921 indicate that the total will be 3,000,000,000 bushels or more. Imagine that this crop was all piled on wagons, each containing fifty bushels, and allowing twenty feet of space for each wagon. The wagons placed end to end would encircle the globe about nine and one-half times.

The story of corn is the story of the struggle of the human race for food in the western hemisphere. The corn is the life of the nation, the life upon corn, how it called into play his native genius, and the adoption of the corn as food by the early colonists is a well known story. A story probably not as well known, is the story of how the steady influx of population along the Atlantic coast made more agricultural lands necessary. The westward movement began and settlements were made beyond the Alleghenies, where much of the soil was found to be especially suitable for corn production. The Kentucky stockman and the surprising corn crop from west of the

Back From Chiropractic Lyceum

We have returned from attendance at the sixth annual Chiropractic Lyceum, held at Davenport, and are ready to resume practice of the science with renewed zeal and strengthened confidence. Eight thousand people marched in the parade which was six miles long and took over an hour to pass a given point. During the passing of the procession in which were beautiful and appropriate floats, the street car service was stopped and stores were closed. The city was profusely decorated for the occasion, and every courtesy was extended to the guests. Such elaborate and painstaking attention shows the great hold the science of Chiropractic has secured in the parent town.

Among the speakers at the Lyceum, was former Lieutenant Governor Edgar Howard of Columbus, Neb., who made these timely references among others:

"You must face the club of ridicule and it is the cruellest club in the world. It does not break your arm or your leg, but it breaks your heart. Can you face it? You must. The only pioneers faced it in every age and they are facing it now. Within Stevenson's discovery again he was ridiculed. Edison was ridiculed. Fulton was ridiculed. The age of intelligence and bigotry is still with us. Witness the fight in California. Brave men and women are suffering the club of ridicule and abuse, but the sky is clearing. "Out of 75 prosecutions in the state of California, through the magnificent efforts of lawyers and other fighters for medical freedom, but three cases have been lost. The attorneys have won all but three. Griffith Jones was ridiculed, stigmatized and strong on the numerous, but he has a heart of brich. It is almost inconceivable in this day and age that such intolerance and injustice could or would be put up with by an enlightened people. "And because others are prejudiced against you," continued the lieutenant governor, "is no reason that you should be. It will wear away and the less attention you give to it, the sooner it will give way. Constant attention, however, in the thing of evil or of good. Give away the caboose of prejudice in your brain and bear no malice and go steadily forward and face with unswerving courage the club of ridicule. Nothing can hurt you except that which you permit. Remember this."

Alleganians moved to the east in the shape of cattle and hogs. It was a not uncommon sight to see large droves of cattle and hogs being driven across the mountains from the Ohio valley to Baltimore. Increasing trade with the eastern part of the United States made systems of transportation necessary. National highways were opened, canals were constructed and at last railroads linked widely separated territory, so that the products of the West could quickly reach the eastern shores of the Atlantic seaboard and the coast.

The increasing production of corn and the increasing population of hogs and cattle developed the packing house industry. The increasing utilization of the by-products of the packing houses is many or less familiar to all of us. As for the movement of live stock from the farms to the various markets, the statistics are so large as to be almost incomprehensible. Trace the history of corn production and you trace a record of progress.

The history of corn toms with human interest. Time and again when drought and disease have ruined the wheat crop, the crop of corn has saved the day for many a farmer and inspired him with courage for the future. The bountiful corn crop of 1921, so evident everywhere, should be a gloom killer.

Blair Banker Returns Meets Warm Welcome

Blair, Neb., Aug. 30.—F. C. Claridge, missing banker, who returned to surrender, was yesterday welcomed by a scanty court to the October term of the district court which convenes Oct. 10. This action followed his waiving preliminary hearing. He is charged with taking funds from the banking house of A. Castetter of which he was president, and loaning them to himself. The loss to the state guaranty fund is expected to be about $200,000.

Welcomed as Hero.
Claridge's return to Blair after being a hunted refugee since the closing of the bank was marked by a reception of the warmth of which seemed to mark him as the hero of the town. He appears broken in health and prematurely gray. The missing banker was met accidentally on the road in an automobile in which he was riding with his attorney Frank Howell of Omaha and his wife.

Shouts News to Neighbors.
The machine which discovered Claridge returning to Blair immediately started and driving at a terrific speed returned to town and spread the news. Within fifteen minutes practically all of the stores of the town were closed and all of the citizens rushed out on the road by any means of transportation they could obtain to greet Claridge warmly.

From a machine moving 100 yards in the lead of the car carrying the former banker, a man with a megaphone screamed, "Claridge is coming back! Claridge has come back!" From every house along the pathway of the car, men, women and children left their duties and crowded into the line of march. Claridge bowed and smiled to all of his old friends, and those returned those smiles with displays of jubilation.

Weep on His Neck.
At the courthouse where he surrendered a delegation of the city's most prominent business men gathered under the leadership of Mayor Aye. As the banker came up the steps, the courthouse yard farmers who had brought their grain and produce to town and who had been depositors at his bank lost control of themselves and with tears streaming down their faces, threw their arms about Claridge's neck and wept.

Impromptu Reception Held.
An impromptu dinner was held at the courthouse steps while hundreds of citizens passed by and told him of their love and confidence. When Claridge filed into the courtroom of County Judge A. C. Deval, the room was swelled to overflowing. When the judge told him his bond would be $2,000 a score of persons, men and women, arose from their seats and announced they would subscribe the amount individually.

After Judge Deval had rapped for order Mayor Aye, B. S. Haller, real estate man, and C. E. Blair, implement man of Kenmare, Neb., marched out and signed the bond.

Cheers Drawn Out Speech.
"Ladies and gentlemen, I have all ways intended to return to you," Claridge told the delegation of friends who had signed the bond and returned to the courthouse square. "I could never desert the people that I have loved." For a few minutes his voice was drowned out by the low cheering and he had to quit speaking.

When he was finally permitted to talk he said, "When I left Blair I went to New York City. For a while I worked for $1.25 a day with my nervous condition all undone as my health grew worse and worse." As he continued his story of hardships in the great American metropolis news came in that detention was wet with tears.

"When I quit as janitor at the school building I went to an office and got a job at $15 a week addressing envelopes," he continued. "This was not quite so hard and I worked there until, with the scanty pay I had to get and the poor accommodations I had in this place, my health gave way and I was a complete wreck."

Has Only $175.
Broken and sick, Claridge was taken to the home of his brother-in-law, the Nash of Cleveland, O. Here he met his wife and after a few days' illness of three weeks he finally began to convalesce.

"I was just waiting to get well to come back," Claridge concluded. "I came back with only $175. I did not default the bank or the depositors. I am going to try to start over."

Miss Grace Ballard, county attorney of Washington county, said Claridge's case would very likely be tried in the fall term of the court. "With the assistance of the attorney general's office, I will prosecute the case," said Miss Ballard.

Other citizens of this city said it would be impossible to secure a conviction of Claridge. "There is not a man or woman in this town of county who has not been benefitted some way, indirectly or otherwise, by Claridge's business," one man said. "The way things are going would turn around and send him to prison? Never in a thousand years."

The banker, according to Miss Ballard, will be prosecuted on four or five of the four accounts in which he is charged with appropriating the money of the Banking House of A. Castetter for his own use.

Business. Sioux City Journal: As the summer season ends, the business conditions of the country appear to be in a healthy condition, but they are admittedly not robust. Things are steady in the business world, however, with evidence in plenty that the slow, steady upward climb will continue from now on. The depression observed now is more material than psychological. Notwithstanding of goods, no heavy manufacturing under-way, no extensive buying, little or no decrease in the unemployment figures—all these are recognized; and yet the business world remains cheerful in spite of the fact that actual conditions are placed at about 60 to 65 percent of normal. It means that beneath the strong fabric of economic life in America lies a solid foundation on which can be built a better society or at least a better business structure than ever was reared before. It means, too, that while the confidence of a great many Americans has been shaken and, perhaps, shaken, it has not been destroyed nor greatly impaired. The pessimists are becoming optimistic.

Governmental activity are more closely connected with business affairs by virtue of the increasing efforts of the Harding administration to effect a change for improvement can be seen as exerting a powerful influence on conditions. Congress is at present with a number of legislative left in committee; but outline of the most important work to be completed have been furnished, and the country has a concrete idea about what the taxation and tariff revision will be. That will enable the business interests to map out their courses to an extent that they have been impossible if they had been kept in the dark as to legislation for another month. The obligation imposed upon congress to revise the taxation system and the tariff without deviating greatly from the outline, thus can be appreciated. Practically everything promised about the new taxation system can be depended upon, and the same thing can be said for the tariff. Alterations, that may be made when the special session reconvenes will not greatly affect business programs arranged in the recent future.

The peace treaty with Germany, signed at Berlin but to be ratified by the senate, can be counted on as affecting immediately the business condition. Commercial relations between the United States and Germany will be established at once by a resumption of trade that will help but stimulate American business. The Germans need raw materials and will buy here. They will wish to put vast quantities of goods on the American market. Also they will expect Americans to buy.

That does not necessarily mean that the Germans are going to dump cheap goods in this country. The tariff proposed to be revised with the adoption of the American valuation plan, will be designed to give protection to industry. The tariff imposters are not to be so high that competition will not be keen. American manufacturers may find that they will have to reduce prices in order to compete with the Germans, who are at work in earnest while most of the rest of Europe is lagging. At home it is found that there has been little change in the industrial situation from a month ago. The changes have been slight and, for the most part, are local. Spinners are turning rapidly in the east, the textile lines offering the biggest decrease in unemployment. Croppers are better than were expected six weeks ago, with some sections reporting that last year's production will be exceeded. Bidding has been accelerated in widely separated districts, showing general distribution of the feeling that such work is a necessary part of the reconstruction and that longer waiting will not greatly reduce expense of materials and labor. The grain, money and live stock markets have done nothing spectacular; neither have they recorded any discouraging slumps. Wall street is undisturbed by the continued inactivity of business generally but New York is not working since it knows the autumn is sure to come. The ending of the vacation period can be depended upon to help business. Cooler weather also will aid the moving of the crops to market, purchase of the winter's coal supply and the assurance from every source that the business is slightly improving all the time will center the interest and the efforts of the rebuilding elements on the goal of reconstruction. Two things that stand out with particular emphasis as having a bearing on the business situation, and which should be given careful attention, are unemployment and dissatisfaction in labor circles. More men ought to be put to work as rapidly as possible to relieve unemployment, and every influence possible ought to be used to keep the men who have jobs at their tasks. Strike threats at this time are not welcome. Labor ought to hang on with all other elements, finish the job of reconstruction and then, under better economic conditions generally, throw out the issues with capital.

Tournament and Carnival.

Winside lost two games and won one in the baseball tournament which was held under the auspices of the American Legion Thursday, Friday and Saturday. The Winside Indians defeated the local players Thursday by a score of 10 to 6; Wisner defeated Winside Friday by a score of 15 to 8; and Carroll was defeated Saturday by Winside with a score of 15 to 12.

Many attended the festivities in Winside last week. Thursday was the big day when the American Legion put on the program consisting of a parade, speech by Rev. Father John of Stanton, ball game, and dance in the evening. A bovery was built between Bruns Brothers and Fleer's stores for the dances Thursday and Saturday evenings. The Winside orchestra furnished music for both occasions.

The carnival in town all week drew a crowd and presented good quality of plays and other attractions.

Car Explodes and Burns.

A Ford belonging to Lyle Williamson of Carroll, ran off the grading into a ditch at the Neis Anderson corner four miles south of Winside Sunday evening. It exploded and burned, the car being destroyed, but the three occupants escaping without injury.

Miss Martha Nelson, Miss Myrtle Christensen and Leland Nelson were in the car when it tipped over. The falling of the grading caused the explosion.

Firm Changes Owner.

Gay Auker who for the past year had been associated with his brother Art Auker in the elevator, stock business and farm adjoining town on the south, sold his interests in the business last Thursday to C. E. Needham of Long Beach, Cal., who was Mr. Auker's partner until a year ago when he sold and moved to California. Mr. and Mrs. Needham will move back to Winside immediately and are expected in about two weeks. Gay Auker plans to go to Argonnes, Colo., to be with his brother Clarence.

Forges Checks on Merchants.

Roy Lewis, a boy who was adopted by Mr. and Mrs. George Lewis seven years ago, forged three checks which amounted to $20, on George Lewis last week. They were caught by merchants in Winson and the young man escaped but was caught, taken to Wayne and put in jail. The young man has caused trouble at other times as a result of the fact that the Lewis family has done all in their power to reform him. He had just recently returned from the navy. In the county court the young man pleaded guilty and was bound over to the district court with bond fixed at $300.

Social.

Mrs. A. H. Carter's Sunday school class entertained Miss Josephine Carter's class at the church last Thursday evening. The two classes had a contest in being regular in attendance and bringing Bibles to Sunday school and Mrs. Carter's class led. Sixteen attended the social time. After playing games ice cream and cake were served.

The Ladies' Aid society met Wednesday afternoon with Mrs. J. A. Clayton.

The Home department met at the church Tuesday afternoon with Mrs. C. H. Row at hostess.

The fourth quarterly conference for Grace and Winside Methodist churches, was held last Thursday. The report showed that forty new members have been taken into the church the past year. All bills have been paid and Sunday is the treasurer. This also counts the expenses for the revival which cost $100. Financially the two churches are showing an excellent report. The pastor has delivered 137 sermons, conducted five funerals and had charge of one wedding during the year.

The Missionary society will present its playlet Friday evening.

Barley as Dough. Less-Avies-Times. There doesn't seem to be any medium of exchange in Russia and money will not stand still long enough to be counted. The country is in a state of chaos, proposing to make the pool of barley the unit of exchange. Barley is a national staple, and just now can be used in any form. It can be used for bread, coffee, or beer. A pool of barley is equal to thirty-six pounds in this country and might be called the new dollar of the soviet.

A commission has fixed its exchange value for so many eggs, potatoes, cigarettes, hairpins, collar buttons and the like. Any gentleman contemplating a trip to Russia would do well to carry a few pounds of barley in his trunk. He will go farther than he would if equipped with a bale of paper rubles. It seems funny that the basis of the home brew in this country should be accepted as money in Russia. But why not?

Minnesota Journal. Senator Fitzhugh, leader of the Wilson followers, "bows to the inevitable," and sees no reason why the treaty should not be ratified. Critics of his democratic colleagues are content with the agreement. The republican irreconcilables, believing that an honest effort has been made to comply with the terms of the Knox resolution, see no reason to oppose.

"Mild reservationists" like Senator Kollege, of Minnesota, are pleased with a treaty that saves the prestige of victory and violates no American principles.

WHERE POWERS OF WORLD MAY AGREE TO LAY DOWN ARMS

This new picture just taken of the Pan-American Building at Washington shows the beautiful structure all ready for President Harding's International Disarmament Conference, scheduled to start Nov. 11. It is considered the most beautiful building in the national capital and a fitting scene for such an historic meeting as the session promises to be.
