The Soviet Hope—America.

Philadelphia, Public Ledger. Through the wild, crazy, crazy, crazy, soviet denials and the colored lights flickering on the Russian scene a gigantic Russian famine is being revealed which cannot deal with it, that help must come from the outside and that one alternative source is America.

If Russia to be fed, America must do the feeding. That is the reasoned conclusion that Russians are reaching. "We need wheat, wheat and green—we have reached."

We have, despite sneers, protests and waifs from our suffering people, been asked to send wheat and grain. In Europe talks about helping, but American food is now being hoarded.

Who should be impressed upon the world, Russia and our own queasiness, yappers and whiners, is that the world is not getting any greater part of the food to be used in saving Russia do not give three whoops about the "political" aspects of the matter.

H. J. Miner, whose pure-bred attack farm is one mile south of Wayne, has been selected by a federal agent as a representative of the United States without any exception, above the respectation. Another test will be made, and then the bird will become duly accredited by the government and will receive certificates of character which will be known to all breeders in the United States. Mr. Miner also specializes in Spotted Poland China pigs, and during the last week has sold twenty-five pigs and one male pig to August Benavento of Wauka, six pigs to William Lessman, one to August Nelson and one to William Libengood. He shipped two to O. B. Eschelman of Spalding, and one to a breeder in Illinois.

Mrs. H. Fowler and daughter Maxine of Omaha, who had been visiting the M. N. Mills family at Carroll, returned home Monday.

Ivan Jensen, Sigurd Jensen and P. Iverson arrived home Saturday from an automobile trip to points in Colorado. They were gone ten days. They saw fine crops in western Kansas badly dried out and damaged.

Geo. Roe, Sr. and wife have rented rooms in Wayne and expect to spend most of the winter here. Mr. Roe says he will resume farming near spring on his place near Carroll. He quit the farm two years ago, but is now anxious to get back.

Dr. J. T. House who is in the employ of the American Book Company, with headquarters at Plainview, was at home over the weekend. The last of this week he will have finished his present work and will return home to be ready for the opening of the State Normal.

Word has reached Wayne relatives that Nathan Chase of Stanton, who has been touring Europe, will sail for home on Friday of this week. Mr. Chase reports a welcome experience in London. While waiting for a cab he chanced to meet Ed. Mitchell, formerly of Wayne, now of Tulsa, Okla., who had also been touring the old country.

Mrs. Nels Nelson left Monday evening for Sidney where she will stay until Mr. Nelson, who is attending to business interests in Wayne, will join her. They then plan to go to Oakland, Calif., to spend the winter months. Mr. Nelson is a pioneer of Wayne county. He purchased his first eighty acre tract, located southeast of Wayne, in 1873, of Philo Graves, paying $2.75 an acre. In spite of the price which seems very low now, Mr. Nelson met with difficulties in paying for the farm. At one time he couldn't meet payment and Mr. Graves asked him if he could pay the taxes on the land. Mr. Nelson could, but Mr. Graves had been unable to do that and this was his reason for disposing of the tract to him. This financial condition can be understood as Mr. Nelson gave the average market prices in 1880. Hogs sold for $1.60, wheat for 15c, corn and oats for 7c, butter for 3c per pound and eggs for 3c a dozen.

Demer Are Superfluous. Kansas City Star: The Kansas City postoffice, which is now outgrown, says one of the last postoffices to be built with a dome. Demer are used on state capitols to confine the hot air. On postoffices they are superfluous.

LUMBER

GOOD BARNS MAKE BETTER FARMS

No farmer is highly successful who allows his cattle and horses to "run down." Good shelter is necessary to keep them in prime condition. Good shelter means commodious barns and sheds.

Stock protected from cold winter weather and the cutting winds and rains of spring and fall will not require as much feed as if they were unprotected. Grain and hay stored in good barns and sheds will stay bright and retain the food value it had when stored away. And farm values are increased by good barns and sheds.

Prices of this class of building material are now down to a reasonable basis—a basis on which you can afford to use them. Let us tell you what it will cost to build the barn or shed you need. This service is absolutely free.

From Ponca Journal, August 23, 1921.

Here is a prophecy which we will venture to say will prove true, viz: "Land which now sells for from five to ten dollars per acre will before winter bring double that price."

Professor M. S. Davies, who is meeting with great success as a teacher of music in this place, will soon give another concert, of which lovers of good music may expect a rare treat. Mr. Davies, has now about twenty-five scholars on the organ, besides which he has a large singing class.

On Monday, much to our joy (and without doubt also, much to the joy of our readers) Mr. Rockwell, the poet laureate of Dixon county, appeared in this office and left for publication another poem, entitled, "The Old Man's Fall" in the leading issue of which the poet has doubtless had to wrestle with the muse in a very strenuous manner. It is hinted that Mr. Rockwell will soon go into retirement for the purpose of meditating on a poem concerning "grasshoppers," in which case we may expect him to bustle into his task with all his pristine vigor.

A total eclipse of the moon will take place this (Thursday) evening. Owing to the well known nature of that luminary, we can safely assure our readers that there will be no delay or postponement, and that we look forward to it with interest and joy and will go through the program as laid down in the almanac. In ancient times, eclipses of the moon were regarded with great fear, and as the forerunners of some impending calamity. Even in the enlightened age, many among the barbarous tribes of the earth, suppose that when such an eclipse takes place, the moon is being yanked and is in danger of being devoured by some savage aerial monster. On such occasions, an infernal uproar of guns, drums, gongs and horns is raised, in order to frighten the angry moon and water away. That such a bedlam of noise is always successful in rescuing the moon from its perilous situation is a fact which is shown by the fact that in a short time its serene face emerges from its trouble and smiles upon the earth again.

and when it there, it never lags behind time in coming out again. Let us look therefore this evening just as the moon is rising, and see the eclipse.

West Virginia Needs a Government.

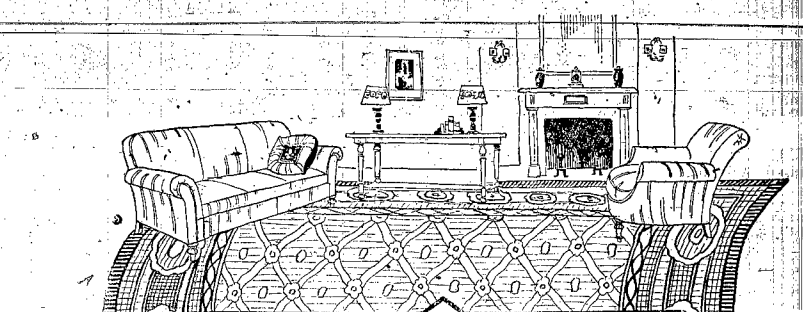

New York World: Gov. Morgan reports the West Virginia mine war as serious enough to warrant federal intervention, his idea of intervention being confined to the dispatch of troops and the establishment of martial law in the troubled districts. No doubt the situation is quite as serious as Gov. Morgan says, but if the federal government intervenes, it should attempt something more effective than dispersal of the rebellious miners by force. Under the constitution the citizens of each state are guaranteed a republican form of government in Logan and Mingo counties a large proportion of the mining population lives under an industrial autocracy controlled by the mine operators through their control of the local governments. The sheriff of Logan county is owned by the operators and he is surrounded by detectives sworn in as deputies. The community is too thoroughly cowed to dare assert its rights. Mingo is less absolutely owned by the interests and breaks out occasionally in violent protest.

Want Help to Cure River.

Lincoln, Neb., Sept. 2.—An urgent call has come to the department of public works to do something to make the Loup river behave itself. The report is that the river is trying to go through a neck of land two and a half miles north of Monroe that threatens to cut that town off from access to the south and leaves two state aid bridges useless.

Tax Revision First.

New York Tribune: The senate finance committee has decided to give tax revision the right of way over tariff revision. It was a mistake on the part of the house of representatives to "take up" the tariff bill first. An emergency tariff bill, passed by the last congress, vetoed by Mr. Wilson and re-passed by this congress, has gone onto effect and protects the producers—chiefly in the agricultural field—who, with a collapsing home market on their hands have feared the pressure of foreign importations. In other lines of industry there is little immediate need of revision, in view of the greatly unsettled conditions of production here and abroad.

Bargain Day for Poets.

Chicago News: It is said that the government has millions of dollars worth of surplus typewriters left over from the war. Of course, typewriter dealers did much to win the war, but that is no excuse for keeping the machines idle. They might be sold at a bargain to the poets and scenario writers.

Way Pointed to Hughes.

New Republic: The work of the conference in considering questions of the Pacific will be largely of the most technical nature. It is of the greatest importance that the United States should not repeat the mistakes of Paris. The cardinal sin of Mr. Wilson was not cowardice or vanity, but sheer ignorance. He did not know and could not be taught. His advisers were selected by caprice, and caprice governs his relations with them. Secretary Hughes has his warning. He should surround himself with the best informed, understanding and firmest judgment in regard to the situation in China and the ambitions of England and Japan. We have in mind such men as E. T. Williams, Chinese secretary to the legation at Peking; John J. Abbot, commercial attaché at Peking; Stanley K. Hornbeck, F. W. Stevens of the consortium; Prof. John Dewey and Dr. Paul S. Reber. The conference in its present form may find its chief value in a thorough exploration of the far eastern situation which will make possible a complete orientation of American foreign policy. At the worst it may result in a defeat, the humiliation of which will be especially resented by fire phrases and promises. The latter is a fair description of our diplomatic experience in far eastern affairs in the past, and it will be again if we leave others to work out the problems while we merely guess at the answer.

Agriculture Notes

Testing Association Conv. The average dairy cow in this country produces annually about 4,000 pounds of milk and 160 pounds of butter fat. According to 10,000 yearly individual cow records just tabulated by the United States Department of Agriculture, the average cow-testing association cow produces 5,980 pounds of milk and 240 pounds of butter fat a year. The world's records are 37,384.4 pounds of milk and 1,322 pounds of butter fat. The average dairy cow has plenty of room for schooling and such commendable live-stock improvement campaigns as the "Better Steps-Better Stock" drive will be attractive in increasing the efficiency and production of American dairy cattle.

Find Perforated Corn. Corn that grew in Tennessee in prehistoric times, possibly before Joseph put away his seven years' supply in Egypt, was unearthed recently by W. E. Meyer of the Bureau of American Ethnology, and sent to the United States Department of Agriculture for identification.

Yucca, recent excavations in Davidson County, Tenn., Mr. Meyer came upon a number of stone slab graves containing numerous vessels. Some of these held specimens of charred maize in fairly good condition. From the size and shape of the grains it was possible to identify the variety as Many-Bowed Tropical Flint, a form about half way between true flint, and popcorn.

The same type of Indian corn occurs in the West Indies, and there is no question in the minds of scientists but that there was a very early communication between the West Indies and North America. Not only corn but beans, squashes, pumpkins, and tobacco are of tropical and subtropical origin. These staples, now so important throughout both hemispheres, found their way into North America and were cultivated beyond the Great Lakes in Canada long before the discovery of America.

These are abundant evidence of communication between the United States and Florida, and to the Mississippi and the Gulf of Mexico.

To Eradicate Rat Pest. Lamage totaling 2,000,000,000 in stored commodities, grain, food crops, and other injurious materials is done up in the United States annually. Only the united efforts of every home owner and landlord can effect the abolition of these rodent pests. The Biological Survey, United States Department of Agriculture, is starting a big campaign against rodents throughout the eastern United States. Much already has been accomplished in the matter of control in the West-

Punctuality is important. Philadelphia Public Ledger: Isn't it time to swear off on the national day of unpunctuality? Can't we be prompt in something besides dispatching trains, which are generally sent off on time? Can't we be prompt in these usual daily contacts between people, in the ordinary affairs of home and business, where it helps everybody and where there is regard for the exact hour and his does so greatly if some, often from sheer carelessness or rick thoughtlessness, are late?

VOL. 35, NO. 13

Bloomfield Manages Without a Telephone

Omaha Rec, Sept. 4: What would you do without a telephone?

"Can you conceive yourself going day after day without mentally or verbally berating the central girl for giving you the wrong number or the busy signal when you feel the line is not busy?"

"Imagine yourself going to the grocery store every day instead of using the more convenient method—the telephone."

When Johnnie has the lumbrago from eating green apples think of the mental anguish which you inflict on the doctor's office instead of speeding him on his way, by a telephone call while you administered medicine and in per his telephone instructions.

It would be Tough.

"Mrs. So and So told Mrs. This and That, etc., etc." You know the old familiar guess that you have listened in on when the lines are crossed. Well, would you walk over to your friend's house if you had no telephone? You'd admit that it would be inconvenient to keep it bottled up until the next Aid society meeting.

"I know where we can get some bonded hooch reasonable." Or "How about a facemask with Jack and Bill this afternoon." Wouldn't you attend, boys, not have a phone to touch to this important business?" (Continued.)

How do they do it? H. H. Hanson, chief of police and chief of the volunteer fire department of the little Knox county village, expressed it tersely in one sentence.

"We do it the same as we did before we had telephones."

Questioned as to what action would be taken in case he was needed in a hurry to enforce the law or to direct his forces in extinguishing a blaze he replied laconically: "Well, we haven't had anything like that lately and I hope we don't. If anything serious happens I guess the folks haven't forgot how to hold."

Dr. S. B. Kalar, a woman physician, denies emphatically that the disconnection of her phone. "Why," she said indignantly, "at one time when my phone was not working during the height of the flu epidemic I went two days without getting any benefit from it. I appealed to the company employees repeatedly without result. As a last resource I had the central girl open the window and ring a hand bell whenever they had a call for me." Bloomfield, the jumping off place of the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha railroad in northern Nebraska, has crowded itself into the spotlight by inaugurating the first telephone strike in the history of the United States.

How did they do it?

Cooperation, the citizens of the town say, was the foundation upon which their campaign, for what they term equitable rates and useable service, has been developed to the nth degree. Not only do the townspeople cooperate in electing their representatives in the surrounding territory co-operate with them. In fact, the farmers are leaders in the co-operation. It was inaugurated by the farmers, who were successful in their organization. In this community it does not take the usual form of uniting neighboring parishes, buying, selling or obtaining the passage of special legislation.

The entire community has the reputation of co-operating for anything they think is for the community good. When the Nebraska telephone commission granted the Union Telephone company a rate increase of 23 per cent, mass meetings were called, with the result that practically every one of the 700 subscribers discontinuously refused on April 1.

Compromise Impossible

Compromise of the unique situation is impossible until after the expiration of the time for the award, January 1, 1922. Consequently both sides are maintaining an attitude of watchful waiting. The precedent which the strike will establish is anxiously awaited. Upon it will probably rest whether other dissatisfied communities will follow the same procedure.

Summarizing the results on the life of the community as outlined by the "victims" of the strike:

Aid society and lodge meetings are being more largely attended by the sudden stoppage of gossip over the phone.

The two newspapers report increased circulations. The people have been more solidly centered socially by reason of personal contact forced by the "wireless" condition.

Business has increased in the village by reason of attractiveness of goods to patrons who were forced to call in person. Doctors have fewer calls for minor ailments since relatives of patients are often forced to drive as high as 18 miles to get their services. Night calls are reduced to a minimum. Business men carry home bundles of groceries and the children have nearly forced the delivery boy out of the house.

Postal revenue has shown an increase by mailing of announcements instead of phoning. Practically all admit however that the telephone is a necessity and subscribers as well as the owners of the company look forward to the day when their differences will be settled.

Do not judge from the situation at Bloomfield it a backwards village.

Everything But Phones.

Although an occasional Indian can be seen on the streets, his leggings are being dragged behind a calico pony ridden by his squaw. He is more likely to be seen at the wheel of six-cylinder automobiles.

The citizens of Bloomfield are extremely progressive. The merchants are wide-awake. Large stores tastefully arranged carry large stocks of the latest merchandise. The residences are models of comfort and convenience. The churches are clean and of the best of taste.

The farmers are not behind their city cousins in keeping up-to-date. In the heart of one of the richest agricultural sections of the state they have the most modern improvements and labor saving devices.

The streets are amply lined with automobiles hurrying back and forth to make up for the time lost by their absence from the use of one of the most modern labor saving devices—the telephone.

Drowned in Missouri River.

Charles Homer of near Ponca, was drowned in the Missouri river, August 28. The following extract from the Ponca Leader-Journal explains the accident. Charles Homer was drowned while swimming in the Missouri river Sunday near Ionia at the old ferry landing. Charles and one of his brothers were on the river with a skiff and it seems neither of the boys knew how to swim. Charles was taken with the cramps and began to hold on to the boat. The boat was drowned. Deputy Sheriff M. S. Nelson was notified of the drowning about noon Sunday, and by the aid of a drag and net was unable to recover the body until about three o'clock when George Groth, who is good at diving in the river, was successful in recovering the body at a distance of about 25 feet from the shore, the water being about 10 feet deep. The body was taken to the home of Joe Bottorf where the funeral was held Monday afternoon. He is the only child and lived with his parents on the old Pioschieu place.

Geneva's Buck. New York Tribune: The allied council at its 11th meeting, washed the hands of the Upper Silesia controversy. France and Great Britain were at loggerheads and no compromise appeared possible. Each government was involved in too many commitments to back down gracefully. So a mandate to make a decision was given to the council of the league of nations, which on a 11th voted method of passing the buck.

For the past two months we have been without evening service. They have again been resumed. The hour is 8 o'clock. The way to make these services a delight and a blessing is for the members to take sufficient interest in them to attend. The evening service is a nation-wide problem and there are only two ways of solving it. One way is by discontinuing it; the other is by the people patronizing it so as to make it worth while to maintain.

The September meeting of the Junior society will be held at the church next Sunday afternoon at 2:30.

The Ladies' Aid meets next Thursday afternoon with Mrs. Warner Anderson. Some important matters relating to the entertainment of synod next month will have to be considered. It is therefore important that every member be present.

constitutional, Assistant Attorney General Mason Wheeler declared that the German Lutheran synod, which is plaintiff, is attempting to prohibit the use of the German language under the pretext of religious teaching.

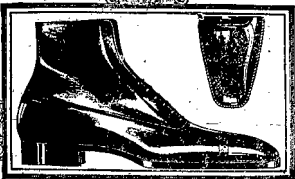

The case is one where the synod is seeking to obtain the enforcement of the law on the ground that it is unconstitutional, being an interference with the freedom of speech and religious liberty and taking property without due process of law.

Mr. Wheeler said that the synod was apparently seeking to determine the position of dictator of educational policies in the state, pointing out that it asserted that it expects to abolish the use of languages other than English at some time in the future, but declines to do it when the state as represented by the legislature decrees that it must be done.

The attorney general took the position that the German language is no more a necessary part of the plaintiff's religion than was polygamy a necessary part of Mormonism, and that the state having lawfully exercised the right to curtail licenses by forbidding polygamy under the guise of religion, it has equal power to prohibit the ingrafting of German into the young American children through the guise of the church.

Record Crowd Attends Big Show at Norfolk

Thirty thousand people, the largest crowd ever gathered in Norfolk, was the estimate of the number in town last Thursday to attend the Ringling Brothers and Barnum Bailey circus. The only time the crowd has been equalled in size was the first night the circus showed in Madison Square Garden in New York City. Nearly eight thousand automobiles were said to be in Norfolk that day. After all seats had been sold in the afternoon about five thousand were seated on the race track and parade ground, necessitating the cutting of some seats on the performance because of lack of space. One estimate says that ten thousand people were turned away in the afternoon. Eighteen thousand tickets were sold to the afternoon performance. One of the managers said it would have paid to show two days at Norfolk because many who came from a distance were turned away and could not stay for the evening show. The crowd in Norfolk far exceeded the one in Sioux City the previous day. People from Winnebago, S. D., Long Pine, Albion, Columbus and even from Sioux City were here.

IT'S FLAVORY

4:30 O'CLOCK EYES!

Every mother who has one or six children in school knows what we mean when we say 4:30 o'clock eyes. They are those bright, healthy—but hungry eyes—just home from school and wanting "a bite 'til supper is ready."

And it is most impossible to keep the ol' cookie jar filled.

As a matter of fact it cannot be done—that is—so cheaply as our bake shop.

We wonder how many mothers have stopped long enough to figure it out?

Flour, shortening, fuel, time and the wear and tear of small batch baking. It is expensive—if you will put it down in dollars and cents.

We can bake cheaper because we buy in large lots and we bake in large lots.

Come by some evening on the way home.

Try a loaf of our bread—a dozen of those big, brown savory doughnuts.

Indicates Sound Business.

Lincoln Journalist. It was reported or partly decayed trees which last week's six mile wind blew down. The wind leveled them, but it was not the price of their fall.

The report of the accountants on Nebraska's recent flouiring mill failure indicates a role for the financial stringency similar to that of the wind. The stringency was an occasion for the failure. Poor business methods, including a neglect to take the usual hedging precautions with grain stock in hand, had weakened the business until it needed only a moderate blow to topple it over.

A similar state of facts has occurred for practically every bank failure which the stringency has brought. The belief that the tide is turning is going to be a great vindication for sound business.

The Carhart Hardware store at Emerson, was broken into and robbed one night last week. The incident according to the Emerson Enterprise was as follows: "Carhart's Hardware was broken into again last week. The manager, Mr. Carhart, said that the thieves used a combination of flash lights and an automatic gun taken, besides other small articles.

The robbers left two larger automobiles. One of the automobiles had been removed by Mr. Carhart for just such an occasion. Nick Ryan and Wm. Garey were sitting in front of the hotel and Mr. Carhart noticed a light in the hardware and called the attention of Mr. Garey and one or two others to the same. C. G. Deanna and Garey after looking in vain for a gun of some description went around to the back entrance to intercept the thieves. The big door in the basement wide open, the thieves having made their 'get away' before these gentlemen met them. Mr. Carhart was obliged to go and he came down from home at once. After looking around he found the above articles missing. The store was searched carefully hoping that the robbers might have hidden themselves in the building but such was not the case. Entrances were gained by removing a pane of glass from a back window, using a step ladder to climb up to the window."

The Banker and the Corn Crop. Daily Drivers Journal-Stockman: In this period of national readjustment, the relation of the farmer to the banker is being studied as never before, and one of the features of this analysis of business has been the discovery of the fact that in the corn belt the farmer stands in a different relation to the banker than in any other part of the country.

Many seven months ago required for raising and marketing pigs. Borrowings are likely to be only for the short period necessary for the finishing of the hogs. Implements, notes and fertilizer notes in such areas are usually for 90 days, occasionally a little longer. Local banks may buy them, or take them for collection.

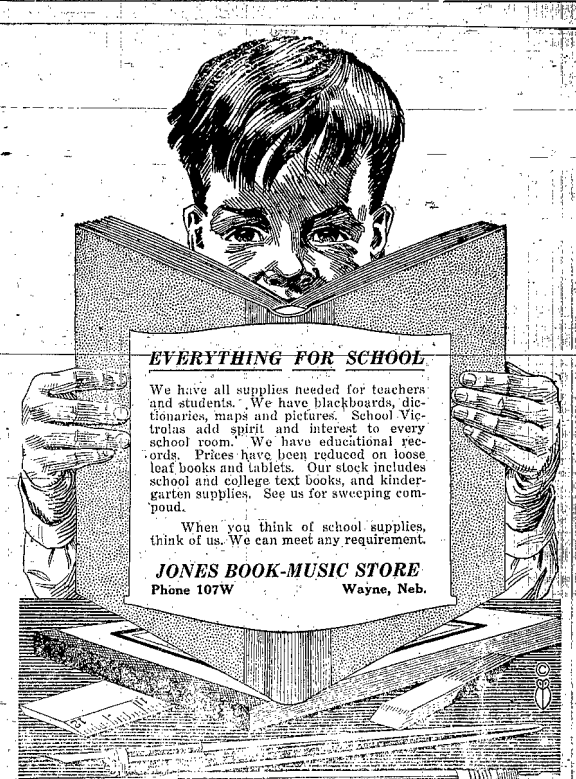

"A result of this clean-cut relation of the farmer to his banker, whereby he is a borrower, on a short time basis, and against self-liquidating assets, is the extension of the use of bank checks. This has reached proportions undreamed of by the banker in large cities. The smallest account is welcomed, and nearly everyone has a bank account. The farmer takes a check in payment for his hogs, pays for his automobile by check, and by check he likewise pays his farmhand. The farmhand in turn pays his grocery bill by check. The actual amount of cash circulating in such a community is amazingly small. This substitution of bank credit for cash in country communities is one of the great accomplishments of American banking."

Rouge and Rice Powder. San Francisco Chronicle: Rouge and rice powder find tolerance among the members of the Woman's Christian Temperance union. There should be nothing surprising about that. Perhaps the uncomprehending nature of the fight the W. C. T. U. has made against alcohol has given rise to a picture of the members of the organization as a grim lot. Obviously this is wrong. The members of this great organization are the American mothers, sisters, wives and daughters. They are distinguished from others only by the fact that they are banded in an association to support a particular principle in which they sincerely believe. That they are good women need not even their bitterest opponents ever question.

Publicity and Coming Conference.
Philadelphia Inquirer: Efforts of Mr. Borah and a democrat or two to bring about the same certain instructions to the American delegates to the coming disarmament conference failed. What was sought was a demand for the opening of the doors to the public. The attitude of our representatives undoubtedly will be favorable to as much publicity as possible, but to expect the members of the body to discuss delicate questions, such as those relating to the far east, in the presence of an audience so abundant, they would do it in any more than the senate would admit outsiders when treaties and negotiations to office are under consideration.

America Not Taking Back Seat.
Editorial article. According to a government report Germany can sell machinery in Europe at a quarter of the price of American machinery. Germany can do this on the straight basis of lower production and selling costs. There are five chief elements entering into the price of a manufactured product: 1, raw material; 2, capital; 3, management; 4, labor; and 5, profit. In every one of these Germany now has the edge on us. If its products are made of native raw material, some Americans have a fit when they read this statement. They forget that while Germany and other foreign countries can undersell us on some products there are plenty of others that she cannot even touch when it comes to competition. Why then worry about the situation? We cannot expect to monopolize the world's trade. There's business enough to satisfy anybody if it is gone after in the right way. America is not taking a back seat in the scramble for foreign trade.

Opportunity Awaits the Rural Teacher

Drovers Journal-Stockman: The linking of the every-day studies of the school up with life is a privilege that comes to every rural teacher. In so doing the teacher can create an interest in country life and in the farm that will have a tendency to prevent the all too prevalent tendency of the young life of the farm to drift cityward.

The rural school teacher of today, who is succeeding best in his work is the one with the rural viewpoint, the teacher who has never failed to take advantage of learning opportunities possible about the soil, plant life, live stock, orchard work, vegetable gardening and all of the other essentials of farm life. The rural teacher that stretches on every side around the school house are all of interest. To her, the fields are laboratories where she has the chance to impart lessons that the country boy and girl has never learned. It is such a teacher who is deeply interested in the boys and girls club work in all of its phases and lends her help in every community enterprise.

How the Teacher can Help.

Most of the rural school teachers of today have attended a Normal school and have had the chance to secure instruction in nature study and agriculture. In fact, the up-to-date Normal schools of today insist that every teacher who expects to teach in a rural school shall have knowledge along these lines. In most cases the work is rather general, of course, but at the same time there is a chance for the one interested to obtain some excellent practical information along agricultural lines that will enable her to take up the duties of a rural school teacher equipped with knowledge that will be of inestimable help.

A Weed Survey.

One of the most interesting and helpful studies that can be carried on in connection with the rural school is a weed survey. Such a survey would involve a study of the weeds in the territory served by the school. If the regular day's work seems too full to admit of field trips necessary in this connection, it would be a good plan and an excellent use of time to devote a few Friday afternoons to such a survey. The writer carried on such a survey at one time and the pupils in this particular case in the rural schools. Although this particular survey was carried on in September and October, the general nature of the common weeds of the community could not be secured, yet 64 different kinds of weeds were found in fairly good condition for seeding. These weeds were studied from many standpoints. When pulled up, their roots were noted, since the character of the roots is often the real cause for the plant being hard to eradicate, as in the case of the Canada and sow thistle and quack grass. Then the methods of seed dispersal were noted, showing how by such methods weeds may become scattered over a wide range of territory. The weeds were all taken into the class room and the pupils were given the name of the various specimens.

Although most of these pupils were brought up in the country, it was surprising few of the weeds were recognized. The same condition would probably be true in any group of pupils that could be assembled. It would be an excellent plan for every rural school to have mounted specimens of all the weeds in the locality of the school and so encourage the pupils to bring in new weed specimens from time to time during the year. The study of weeds is just as important as the study of certain portions of the text in arithmetic, history or grammar, and most pupils would prove to be as much or more interested in such studies.

Testing Seed of Corn.

During the winter months, many rural school teachers carry on the testing of seed corn in connection with the school work and it is of interest and value. Germination boxes can be fitted up without a great deal of trouble and pupils can bring samples of corn from their farm. A study of the different kinds of sprouts can be made in the germination, such as strong sprouts, medium strong sprouts, and weak sprouts. A little good-natured rivalry as to the merits of the samples from the various farms can be easily induced.

Judging Contests.

Nothing in the rural school or in any school can excite more interest than a judging contest where such products as corn, apples, potatoes or vegetables are judged. Preliminary work before such contests should include a study of the points to keep in mind in the judging of each particular product. The teacher should give over the various exhibits and make her placements before the judging starts. After the contest, the names of the winners can be announced and the teacher can go over each exhibit and give reasons for the way in which she has placed them. Ten ears of corn may constitute a corn exhibit, five apples an apple exhibit and 10 potatoes a potato exhibit. These judging contests give the pupils some good pointers on what specimens to select for showing at fairs, and at the same time stimulate interest through good-natured rivalry.

There are other studies that can be introduced at various times into the work of the rural schools, such as field trips to examine different types of soils, analyses of different varieties of wheat, corn, oats, barley, etc. The whole idea is that work in the rural school may under the direction of an interested teacher be so arranged as to arouse interest in the part of the pupil in interesting things all around the farm.

Improvement Noted:
Lincoln Trade Review: The Monthly Review of the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City, in a summary of conditions in this district up to the last week in August, shows that the heavy marketing of wheat from the farms has brought about additional reductions in bank loan deposits and for the first time in a long period a slight upward turn in bank deposits.

July receipts of wheat at the four big markets in this district are given at 17 1/2 per cent over the record of a year ago. Flouring mills are reported as operating to full capacity with production for July this year 76 per cent over that of the same month of last year.

The suspension of the progressive discount rate by the Federal Reserve Bank of Kansas City on the first of August was most excellent evidence as these later reports show that improvement had continued to the extent that the situation was well in hand and that this progressive rate was no longer necessary.

The aggregate loans of some 70 banks in this district, which had a slight reduction from the month previous and from these same banks the report as to the aggregate demand deposits showed a slight increase.

This increase in funds, as a result of this heavy selling of wheat by the farmers, has not been greatly reflected as yet in other businesses. Jobbers and retailers report that to date collections have not shown any great improvement, but it is most certain that with this better financial condition, with country banks being able to cut their loans and in a much better position to handle the covering of these heavy wheat shipments, there cannot help but follow better collections both by the retailer and the wholesaler.

It takes time for this revenue just recently forthcoming from this marketing of a great crop to reach other channels, and it can be expected that within a comparatively short time this same improvement that is noted in the banks of the country will be felt in all other lines of business.

Boat on Other Leg Horse.

Catarrhal Deafness Cannot Be Cured by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased part of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrhal Deafness and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALES' CATARRH SUPPRESSANT acts through the blood on the mucous membrane of the system. Catarrhal Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation is removed and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be impaired forever. Catarrh of Deafness has its origin in a general inflammation of the condition of the mucous surface.

Catarrah Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure Catarrah Deafness, and that is by a constitutional remedy. HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE acts through the Blood on the Mucous Surfaces of the System. Catarrah Deafness is caused by an indolent condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result. Unless the inflammation can be reduced and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing may be destroyed forever. Many cases of Deafness are caused by Catarrh, which is an inflamed condition of the Mucous Surfaces. ONE HUNDRED DOLLARS for any case of Catarrah Deafness that cannot be cured by HALL'S CATARRH MEDICINE. TROUBLES OVER AT AGE SEVENTY Burlington Woman Feels Like She Has New Lease on Life Since She Began Taking Tanlac.

"I'm a woman over seventy years of age is relieved of troubles that have bothered her for ten years I call it remarkable, and that is exactly what Tanlac has done for me," declared Mrs. John Sabin, 1064 S. Leebick St., Burlington, Iowa.

"My principal trouble was indigestion. My appetite was about gone, and I always had a heavy feeling in my stomach after eating and bloated up so with gas I felt utterly miserable. This gas almost suffocated me at times and crowded around my heart and caused such a throbbing it frightened me. Many a time I became so nauseated I could hardly retain a thing.

"I had awful pains in my back, and whenever I stopped over I felt like I would break in two. I also suffered awfully with rheumatism and often my feet would swell up so I could hardly walk. My nerves were shattered and many a night I couldn't sleep a wink and would get up in the morning feeling worse than if I hadn't gone to bed at all.

"But thanks to Tanlac, I feel today like I had been given a new lease on life. I have taken just a few bottles of Tanlac and now have a splendid appetite and am never troubled a particle with indigestion. All those disagreeable feelings after eating and those rheumatic pains and the misery in my back are things of the past. I am free from nervousness and sleep like a child at night. I have gained several pounds in weight and the difference in my condition is wonderful."

Tanlac is sold by leading druggists everywhere.

Chicago Caught in Own Trap.

Lincoln Journal: Chicago was for Chicago first. Accordingly it permitted its gates to be shut to outside building contractors and laborers. Its reward was to have its favored building contractors and laborers combine to bleed Chicago. Now Chicago opens its gates to outside competition in building. It finds this the true Chicago first policy. The other way meant building trust first, not Chicago first.

UNCLE WALT
The Poet Philosopher.

The Happy Face.
Put on your happy face, my friend, and seek the throbbing marts, and, as on sprightly limbs you wend, cheer up desponding hearts. One buoyant, cheerful, whistling chap, helps others by his mood; some delegate who sees your map may find his hope renewed. I know I've felt at divers times that life's a ten-cent game, that like a grapevine trouble climbs around the human frame. And, feeling thus, upon the fence I'd lean and shed some brine; ay, though it had no lick of sense, this dippy course was mine. And then some joyous jay appeared, with sunshine in his grin; I'd wring the briny from my beard and go and prance with him. Contagious is the cheer-up smile that happy people wear; contagious also is the bile that makes you seem a bear. Put on your happy face, old scout, and see it's rightly clamped, and as you chase yourself about you'll have the people vamped. They'll be ashamed of little gries o'er which they used to sigh, when viewing one who never beads as he goes whizzing by. Put on your happy face, my boy, and tie the strings behind, and try to show that life's a joy, and not a dreary grind.

At the Door.

There's some one knocking at the door, and I shall rise and let him in; I'll show no visage grim or sore, but greet him with a cordial grin, and hang his hat upon the floor, and brace him up with kickless gin. I do not tremble any more when some one at the portal knocks, and fear it is some beastly bore who's come to bone me for the rocks that I am owing at the store, for shoes or sugar, sacks or seeds. For now I pay my bills on time, and ask no man an hour to wait; I look upon it as a crime to fool the trusting merchant sate who sells me lollipops or lime, expecting pay on such a date. Time was when I gave little heed to keeping Credit good and bright; I blew in all my chicken-feed for every kind of vain delight, and let said Credit go to seed until it was a blowsy sight. Collectors chased me down the shore, and through the den, and up the brae, and, as they tolled behind, they swore they'd get me yet, and make me pay; and when they thundered at my door I hid until they went away. It was a sport I did not like, it filled my weary days with care; it always kept me on the hike, and always dodging, here and there, and oft I called on Pete and Mike in stony accents of despair. But how I dodge my bills no more, I hold that course to be a sin, and I regret the days of yore, when chased by bailiffs and their kin; when someone's knocking at the door, I do not fear to let him in.

The Cripple.

Old Jimpson Jones has spavined limbs, he cannot use them any more; the gay world round him scoots and skims, as he sits by his cottage door, and casts his tired and ancient glims on autos passing, score by score. The autos glitter like a star, they're painted up in gorgeous tones; the back seats often empty are, and well might rest some weary bones; the joy carts journey near and far, but no one stops for Jimpson Jones. The drivers look to left and right for damsels who might like a ride; they'd like to show some maidens bright how smooth and fast their boats can glide, and cripples languish through the night, forsaken, sad, and heavy-eyed. Old Jimpson Jones has bungled up feet that will not stand the walking test; and shining cars go down the street and show all kinds of pep and zest; he often sees an empty seat, on which a poor old man might rest. And he is sick to go afield to country roads where green things grow, to see the orchard and the field, the farmyards where the roosters crow; oh, such a joyride well might yield more pleasure than he'll ever know. The autos roar and chug and crash, and throw up clouds of dust and stones, and some of them were bought for cash, and some involve extensive loans, and some are good, and some are trash—but not one stops for Jimpson Jones.

Canned Voices.

The singers of the olden time were silenced when they reached the tomb; no voice, majestic and sublime, emerges from the final gloom. We hear of human nightingales whose singing gained our father's praise; their fame still lives in bearded tales come down from dead and distant days. But when they left this life of stress, their music ceased forever more; we'll never hear their tones unless it be upon some other shore. But now dead singers leave behind the record of their skill and power; my timeworn phonograph I wind, and hear Caruso by the hour. A hundred years from now I wot, such music mills will still be wound, and that grand voice will hit the spot, and charm the listeners around. And though Caruso lies asleep, throughout the world, on all its shores, in humble cot and stately keep, his voice still rolls and throbs and soars. To me it seems a wondrous thing that when a man is in his grave, I still can hear him grandly sing great songs triumphant, strong and brave. I would that phonographs were made ere Eve first struck the breakfast gong, and

Adam, in a sun-drenched glade, sent forth the race's primal song. Great singers lived in every age, and when they died their voices ceased; oh, could I hear the psalmist-sage, and eke the Wise Men from the East!

A Good Front.

"A man's no older than he feels," I cry, in cheerful tones, as I limp by on aching heels, with stiff and creaking bones. And I imply, my friends, by this, that I am feeling young, that in my form no spark-plugs miss, no bolts are bent or sprung. My false teeth slide around my face, my truss is upside down, my liver pad gets out of place, as I toil through the town. I have a creak along my back, and stitches in my side, and yet I cry no hoarse "Alack!" but meet men, cheery-eyed, for they would rather hear me tell how young and blithe I feel, than listen for a weary spell to some unhappy spiel. I go to pieces very fast, my eyes are weak and dim, my neck is in a plaster cast, I need a wooden limp; I daily don my laurel wreath and haud the busy marts, to buy me, gutta percha teeth and other store made parts. I need more extras than a Ford to keep me on my feet, and yet by me no man is bored as I jog down the street. For when they ask me how I am, I say, "I'd have you know, I'm young as Mary's little lamb, whose fleece was white as snow!" They look at me through kindly tears, and cry, "Long may you thrive! You're surely younger than your years, and very much alive!" If I began some dreary tale of sickness and decay, they'd wish I'd hit the long, long trail without an hour's delay.

Gunmen.

The guys who'd kill us are running loose; they plug and drill us without excuse. Their guns are cracking throughout the land, the stiffies they're stacking to beat the band. When darkness gathers the gummen rise, and shoot our fathers and other guys; they rise by dozens, a grisly crew, and shoot our cousins, and nephews, too. Their ways don't suit us, they jar our souls; they come and shoot us, then take our rolls; if they'd just rob us we might not care; alas, they mob us, with guns to spare. The bullets drizzle along the road; the law's a fizzle, cops buffaloes. The law seems able to cinch the gent who, at his table, drinks two-percent; it brings disaster to that poor cuss who fast and faster propelled his bus; with paltry muckers it fills the jails; it catches suckers and misses whales. The gummen scamper, and crime is rife; they put a damper on modern life; their tribe increases, like fungus plants; they shoot our nieces and eke our aunts. I fear to travel around a block, lest shot and gravel give me a shock. In nooks and crannies—the gummen crouch, and shoot our grannies—and hence my grouch.

Watch Your Kidneys.

Inhaling the fumes of turpentine and white lead often weakens the kidneys. That's one reason why so many painters have bad backs and sick kidneys. Exposure, frequent colds and chills and the strain of climbing up and down ladders help start the trouble.

If your back aches, if sharp pains strike you in the back when stooping, lifting, or working; if you have headaches, dizziness, rheumatic pains, try Doan's Kidney Pills, the remedy so widely used and so well recommended by men in the painting trade. Here's a Wayne testimony:
"Melvin Norton, painting contractor, says: 'I have been a painter for the last forty years and the continual inhaling of the turpentine fumes put my kidneys in a bad condition several years ago. At times I could hardly move or get around on account of the steady aches and pains in my back. I tried other remedies for this trouble but to no effect. At last I tried Doan's Kidney Pills and they benefited me. I kept on using Doan's and several boxes relieved me. I use them at different times now when I feel my kidneys need a little attention and they always remedy the trouble.'"

Keeging the Faith.

Washington Post: "The accuracy of the old saying that 'you can fool all of the people part of the time' and part of the people all the time" is subject to question in these modern days of communication and wide circulation of the printed word. There are instances when the public as with individuals, may be the victim of deception, but it has a way of punishing its deceivers and of commending its friends, so that the political party which keeps faith with the American people has no cause to fear, while the party which forgets the fervent promises of the campaign is in dire danger. The strength of the present regime lies in the fact that it is saying its promissory notes to the American people and keeping its word."

The Trend Today.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: Of more than local significance is the proud message from Gann Valley, S. D., to a world leaning on the hoe handle to listen: "We have a population of less than 100, engaged chiefly in farming. We are twenty-three miles from a railroad, but we have a nine-hole golf course." Now, adays when a town or village sends in its little "blurb" to the encyclopedia it is expected to "fess up not merely to the number of banks, schools and churches per square yard, but also to the number of holes in the golf course. It is all very well to boast of factories employing their hundreds or thousands of hands, but what employs the hands outside the schedule of shop labor? A golf course is no longer a club's restrictive pleasure; it is as much a communal enjoyment as a bathing beach. So it is not surprising to find the little South Dakota hamlet priding itself on bunkers and hazards carved out of the prairie. It is work to dig potatoes, but it is fun to dig in the loam for golf balls. The fact that you don't have to do it is the great difference between golf and ordinary forms of agriculture.
