The Wayne high school debating team, Grant McEachern, Ben Moran, Valmar Peterson, Fred Bollen, on Friday afternoon, debated on the state question with a team from the high school faculty, led by J. C. Denning, who was assisted by a committee of Sept. R. W. Shiley, Miss Mary Goodrich and Earl Schroer. The judges were Mrs. Al. Rolland from the faculty, A. J. Crossland from the high school, and Miss Elizabeth Mines from the city.

The I. O. O. F. lodge recently held a meeting at the teachers' A. A. C. club members of the local order, at his home in Carverville, Mo. on December 17. Death was caused by apoplexy and occurred incident to old age. Mr. Miner was an uncle of former Marshal George Miner, served as Wayne county sheriff in the early days of the century. He was a member of the G. A. R. of Carverville which held the funeral services. The Odd Fellows had charge of the services.

Arden Nelson, who is advertising a public sale for Jan. 25, plans to move March 1 to a farm in Tama county, Ia. Mr. Nelson has been farming in Wayne county for eight years on the Nuernberger place, nine and one-half miles southeast of Wayne. Mr. Nelson is really a horse raiser and has his trade in Chicago until he took up farming in this county. The change of occupation happened in this way. He was engaged in the city and launch into agriculture. He decided to do it, and accordingly he rented a Wayne county farm and planted one lot. He has done better than he would have done with his haring trade in Chicago. He is pleased with the results of his experiment, and is well satisfied with Wayne county. His move to Iowa is prompted by the solicitation of relatives who live there. If the Iowa experience should prove disappointing, he says he will come back to Wayne county and resume farming here.

A woman writes the Herald to state the paper to her address again. She thought in view of the times she ought to be able to get along without it, but she found after a few weeks that she was missing it, she could not. And why try? The county paper is no luxury. It has become a necessity. After the stress and strain of the winter months comes along and takes one's mind off of accustomed burdens. It does its duty, it faithfully chronicles the many little events that go to make up the life of different neighborhoods with which one is more or less familiar. If it has the welfare of society at heart it emphasizes the good and minimizes the bad, presenting word pictures that relieve trouble and put courage into the souls of tired men and women. There is no other paper to be so comprehensive and so just in serving its field that people cannot keep their homes without its regular visits. Many who renew and those who come back after brief remission, often express satisfaction that encourages the belief that the paper is making headway. And if it were the least a family could expect from the head of the household would be the comparatively small expense involved by subscription to the county paper.

Mr. Arthur E. Sieck who has been farming in this county for five years, is to have a public sale Friday, Jan. 20, preliminary to moving to Omaha with his mother, Mrs. Arthur Sieck, who markets her home with him. The young man has pros-

Copper-Clad

Because the Copper-Clad Range is Clad with a Sheet of Pure Copper Where Other Ranges Rust Out.

Study the section of the Copper-Clad wall as pictured above. No. 1 is the copper lining or fire lining. No. 2 is the thick layer of long fibre asbestos, the heat-holding material that makes fuel do double duty. No. 3 is the sheet of pure copper between the sweaty asbestos and outer casing or range body. Notice the domes or round bumps on the sheet of copper. See how they hold the copper sheet away from the range body, leaving a dry air space next to the range body or outer casing.

As all moisture in the asbestos must escape toward the cold side, or away from the heat, you can understand why the sheet of copper must be between the asbestos and cold side or outer casing.

When the moisture strikes the copper, it can find no further, and as copper never rusts, it is not affected by the moisture. The dry air space is almost exactly like the air space in a thermos bottle. But for the air space in a thermos bottle it would not retain the heat. Just so with the Copper-Clad. The dry air space holds heat better than solid iron even if an inch thick, and is a great fuel saver. It is estimated that this air space saves a shovel of coal at every meal, or over a thousand every year.

Then the name Copper-Clad means something to you. It means a range clad with pure copper where other ranges rust out.

Balmy Sleep. For those who fall, for those who sleep, there is no comfort like sleep. Sometimes, I think, who napping lay, there is no finish to the day. The sun is shining in the sky and we are tired and weary. We long for evening and repose, but this long day will never close. And yet, the longest day will end, and the night will come. The weary plowman leaves the field and hies him to his lowly bed; the plowman duffs his workday in the night, the plowman hies to his night is theirs for slumber deep, and there is no comfort like sleep. This is like a summer day, the sun is high, the day is long, the hours are long, our burdens galling, the recompense seems all too small, our weary feet get the softest jobs, our smiles all turn into sighs, we are taxed beyond our wisest means, and some one always slips the beams, we get the worst of every deal, and we have chores that will not end, and so we grumble through the day, in our poor foolish human way, but night-come, and the dawn will wipe out all the cares that work; and more we'll labor in the sun and count the wages we have won; no more we'll cry for more we'll reap; the greatest comforter is sleep.

The Evil Act. John Justus, a trooper, his coat and overcoat, a man who looked as though he'd traveled far, a foot-sore also. In 'get in and ride, he had a paper sack of the hobo's. The hobo, then, stuck into a paper on the head, and took his purse and slipped. Along that road a thousand hobo's were changing every day, and pilgrims who have lost their hats on foot proceed that way. But now in driver, since his wain to give him a lift, he is a hobo, it would not be same, since Jasper's dome was bifid. A hobo with a wicked heart knocked Jasper's brow awry, and then, with a flourish, he passed the pilgrim by. Limping strangers by the score toil up the thoroughfare, and they can catch a hobo by the nose, and they can spare. And some old and broken down and some are young and frail, and all must suffer. For the clown who swiped the job, before he had a thousand feet with aching cars toil onward day by day, the auto drivers with their horns, demand the right of way. And that right of way extends its influence abroad; the comfort of a legion ends because John lost his wad.

Pender-Feeder Says Pig Business Pays. Pender-Feeder, Stockman, A. Egan, farmer, stock raiser and feeder of Pender, had a load each of cattle and hogs on Friday's market, but they were all paid at the rate of $7.25. The hogs were quiet, weighing averaging 202 pounds, and the cattle were mixed yearling steers and heifers that sold at $10.25. Mr. Egan is a farmer of the type that is successful because he likes his work. He admits that farming suits him better than any other occupation he knew anything about. "I like to go out in the field and there watch things grow after I have prepared the soil," he declared, "while there is nothing better to me than a healthy, thirty bunch of pigs and a lot of hogs."

Hogs are paying good money this year, close to seventy cents a bushel for corn on the basis of present hog prices, and the average price of 22 cents a bushel for corn are by far the best paying proposition on any farm. I have been raising the red Duroc hogs for over twenty years, and my herd is practically pure bred, though I have never kept up the papers on them. Well, by the state of affairs in the near future, it always finds a ready sale and is usually profitable."

Mr. Egan is a strong advocate of the clover as a soil restorer, and each fall seeds down his stubble fields to this crop. The following season he pastures them, and the next spring he plows the clover in. The hogs are ready to produce big grain yields. About half of his farm is in pasture and half in corn. "Proper soil care is essential to the success of any farm, it is essential to keeping up the fertility of the soil on any farm, he contends."

While Mr. Egan is well enough off in this world's goods to retire, he takes pride in the fact that despite his 35 years, most of which were put in doing farm work, he is still able to do as much work as ever, and enjoys doing it. He tends all the stock, does the other chores, and is in the fields enough to see that things go as they should. "Farmers have more sickness among their stock, as a rule, than they would if they cared for it properly," he declared. "A herd of hogs is worth looking after, and the personal satisfaction when you see them can't turn over all your work to some one else and expect it to be done as well as it is, and that is why I do the work myself." Mr. Egan is getting back down where they belong. Nebraska land should never have sold over to a man who would not take care of it. He had a few years ago when I was offered $400 an acre for my farm. When I talk things over with my wife, though she said, "No, we have built this up from nothing, and it is the only place that would ever be home to us. We have fine improvements as there are on any farm in Nebraska, and we would never be satisfied anywhere else." So we stay, and I'm really glad of it.

"People with bad backs and weak kidneys are apt to feel old at sixty. Many old folks say Dean's Kidney Pills help them keep young." your neighbor, here's a Wayne case: "Mrs. Mary Beckenham says she can surely recommend Dean's Kidney Pills for I have used them. When I began over I had awful pains in my back. I was never able to get out of bed for a week. I was out of bed after a week and my kidneys didn't act right. Dean's Kidney Pills relieved me of all the symptoms and an occasional use has kept my kidneys in good condition." (Statement given July 17, 1916). On May 25, 1920, Mrs. Beckenham says: "I still think the same of Dean's Kidney Pills now as I did when I first used them."

All agree that public expenditures ought to be reduced, but no one is willing to concede retrenchment that would curtail self interest. It is always the other fellow who is being overpaid.

The Herald is advancing its time of distribution for the purpose of giving earlier publicity to Friday and Saturday magazines and other week-end attractions. They may thus be more generally taken advantage of. We believe readers and advertisers will alike appreciate the change. The manifest benefit to advertisers will usually receive hearty cooperation. Copy must be in the day earlier than heretofore necessary, most people will respond promptly.

The live stock market has been encouragingly stimulated during the week, and many farmers have gone to market multiplying the circulation of needed funds. This is not the only evidence of more health in the live stock market. A better tone is reflected in commercial and manufacturing circles. Money is not so shy and bashful. It has again inspired our confidence and is coming more within reach. Everything points to large headway toward the restoration of normalcy during the next few months.

A Newman Grove citizen, a former state senator, is quoted by the Lincoln Journal as being perfectly in accord with the governor on the proposed gasoline tax, giving as his reason that he owns 1,380 acres of land and that accordingly he would like to see real estate taxes reduced. He is quoted as expressing the wish that his tenants might have the privilege of paying a share of the tax by way of a gasoline tax. This argument may suit large land holders, but it is likely to stimulate the opposition of farm renters.

The so-called middleman is often subjected to unjust criticism these days. Any one who does business between the actual producer and consumer is a middleman, we assume. The middleman is essential to the distribution of products of the farm factory or mine, and it is unfair to always make him the goat in the matter of prices and profits. There are of course some supermen among middlemen, and there are those among them who reap larger rewards than their services warrant, but sweeping condemnation hits the many who are not guilty but who are giving valuable service to society, as well as the comparatively few who are hucksters and who are deserving of criticism.

The unpropitious insertion of leading stories in the Sioux City Tribune recently by an irresponsible editor, worthy unknown to the management of the established paper, prompted an appropriate and adequate article of explanation and apology in the subsequent issue of that paper. Any one in any way connected with the newspaper can fully appreciate the horror that would grip a publishing group, from junior to editor, by revelation of facts presented as a matter of fact on the honor of newspaper making. Every branch of the business presents it. Integrity and faithful performances are indispensable to newspapering, and those who are employed in the different departments should reflect these high essentials. Thus, how aggrieved must members of a newspaper force feel to suddenly discover that a very important newspaper understanding has sought deliberately to cause discredit, humiliation and shame. Suppose some Judd Leacrot, sportsman, editor, makes a delicious change in medicine prescribed for a patient? The act compares with that of an individual who, for the purpose of revenge, would stealthily put infection into a caterer's food which was to be served to customers. Could there be a more imp in Tartarus? As a victim of abhorrent treachery, the Tribune well expresses the profound regret that it feels. It says that although it left its employ if he were gathered on the toe of an iron boot and kicked into interplanetary space they would gain much and lose nothing.

TEACHERS' SALARIES.

Both the Omaha-Bee and World-Herald are fighting against a recent increase in teachers' salaries proposed at a meeting of the Nebraska Association of School Boards in Lincoln last week. Both publications point out the need of retrenchment in public expenditures, but hold with much emphasis that the salaries of teachers should not be disturbed. They contend that fields for the education and development of our children should not be made less inviting.

"The wages of teachers, especially in the rural districts," says the Bee, "were for a long time disgracefully low but in late years have been brought up to a higher level. There ought to be no invidious haste in setting them back again. If the price of farm products does rise as it should, to a level of 60 per cent above prewar rates, it will not be so difficult to maintain schools at their present level of efficiency."

"The higher the wage paid to those who educate our children, the higher the quality of man-and-womanhood that will issue from the teaching profession. Lower pay for teachers undoubtedly would drive many fine characters out of the profession and leave their places to be supplied by mediocrity."

The World-Herald says this among other things: "These times demand both men and women teachers of character, learning, personality, aptness for the highest and most exacting and ever-changing conditions. A teacher is something more than a machine. A photograph can reel off stereotyped lessons and never a word from the way it spoke the day before. A real teacher is never satisfied with the work of yesterday."

"Mediocre teachers are better than none. But the best should be none too good for our children. It is not many years before we are beyond the influence of parent and teacher. The strategic period is while they are susceptible."

"Good teachers can supplement and reinforce the hopes of parents. Without sympathy between teacher and scholar, teacher and parent, how can we hope to build the educational system essential to our national well being? And if taxpayers, because their money is probably wasted in other fields, refuse the money to secure the best teachers for our schools, there is nothing for it but to expect retrogression instead of progress."

"We need more of the strength that the best men-teachers, who devote their lives to teaching, can give. We need the qualities of women teachers, who teach, not merely to fill the gap between high school and the time they marry, but who sense their greatest responsibility."

Business.

Sioux City Journalist: It is the way of the American-Journalist to desire immediate improvement in any situation that does not please him. He becomes impatient as a result, and accomplishes less because he is not in a mood to make his best contribution for a changed and better condition. That is observed in the business American's attitude toward business today. He wants to get things done too quickly, although it would seem that, at this advanced mile post, he should have learned business depression, he should have learned patience and tolerance. Perhaps he has learned these things, but there is some doubt as to their effect upon him. Has he risen to his responsibilities and faced the issue as an individual, or does he continue his lethargy while waiting for someone else to undertake the great task? If every citizen thought about these things in the right way, there might be a chance doing it more in the interest of improvement in business, to accelerate, as it were, the return of prosperity.

Prosperity will return, he sure of that. The only question now is: how soon? As The Journal frequently has advised and suggested, it is useless to expect such a gigantic task as reconstruction to be finished in a hurry. It simply cannot be done. Little by little progress can be made, and that little only can be made big by close cooperation on the part of all the people. Shirkings only adds to heaviness of the task which they are attempting and increases the length of the time necessary to finish the job.

It is a fact that politics and business have more closely related themselves than ever, not that government is interfering with industry, but that commercial relations everywhere are dependent upon political understandings. At present there is a good illustration of that in the view European governments have of their most important work which is soon to resolve itself into an economic conference at Geneva, Italy. The leading powers of Europe recognize that, before their business conditions can be restored, certain political tangles will have to be untangled. Great Britain, France and Italy have come to the realization that the condition of Germany and, likewise, that of Russia, affect the condition of all the rest. They see now that what might be called a leveling process will have to be undertaken. Peter cannot be robbed of all he has to pay Paul, and the same applies to nations. There will be on even terms, happy and contented.

Concrete developments in the United States for big business are not lacking to show how the wind is blowing. Steel is coming back into its own with a spring as vigorous as the most hopeful could expect. Pittsburgh makes the dramatic announcement that the output of steel for the first quarter of 1922 is expected to approach prewar production. It is not an indication of recovery in this line what would be? A reason for steel's recovery exists, of course. The railroads have asked for bids on certain necessary repairs, the motor car builders are pursuing aggressive plans, some having given orders for full speed ahead and building of mandating structural iron and steel, nails, piping, sheet products, etc.

Grain markets are a little uneasy over its and starts, but the fluctuations are without sensation. The financial conditions continue as good, or better, and investments that are made do not lose for capital. As that ought to be a measure of comfort for Americans who see things in the large. They thus are enabled to understand that the underlying business are just as solid and safe as ever, which means that the foundation is there for the rebuilding of the structure that depression destroyed. All that will take time, but 1922 surely will see the work carried far.

They were extremely well fed Herefords.

WAYNE HERALD, THURSDAY, JANUARY 19, 1922.

VOL. 35, No. 31.

Call For Session of State Legislature

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 16.—Nine subjects upon which legislation is recommended, either creating new acts or amendments to laws now on the statute books, are contained in the official call of Gov. S. R. McKelvie, sent out today summoning members of the assembly to meet here Tuesday, Jan. 24, at 9 a. m. The legislators are requested to convene "for the purpose of considering the passage of the subjects named."

The tenth subject is an act creating a sum sufficient to cover the cost of holding the session.

The act amending and reducing certain appropriation items for the present biennium, contained in House Roll 923 as enacted by the fourth session of the legislature, is listed in the subjects in this call. This subject follows the governor's previous statements and concerns the relative changes in wages, maintenance and expenditures in the departments of state.

Gasoline Tax Included.
An act fixing an excise tax of 1 cent per gallon on gasoline used in motor vehicles and appropriating the sum thus raised for the building of highways with federal aid, contained in the next subject, was provided for in the study and report regarding amendments to the recent laws, prior to the convening of the next regular session of the legislature, follows. Amendments to the banking laws and re-appropriating the capital fund are next subjects.

The four other subjects contained in the call either are comparatively minor of local nature. An act relating to legal notices in probate cases; amendments to the general laws relative to the payment of special taxes that may be assessed within any improvement district; an act relative to the commitment of women to the state reformatory at York and their transfer to the state penitentiary, and a law relating to removal of prisoners in any of the reformatories of the state constitute these subjects.

Business Limited by Call.
"Business before the special session is confined by law to the subjects contained in my call," the governor declared in a speech here today. "Let the bars down for all other things. Of course, there is no limit to the bills that may be introduced affecting the foregoing subjects."

The governor said that he expected to prepare the other bills, aided by state administrators in touch with these subjects.

The act regarding legal notices in newspapers was entered, he said, after conversations with representative members and the Nebraska Press association. Drafting of the law will be left to the association, according to the governor. He said, it was the desire of publishers to have all the legal publications before made validated by a special act and also an amendment which would make the record affidavits a part of each proof of publication.

Changes were made to him by publishers that, due to the failure of some to comply with various statutory provisions, one of which requires affidavits to be filed with the county clerk as a necessary formality for publishers to acquire legal status for their papers, if the law is strictly construed there would be a limited number of legal publications in the state.

Amendments to Section 25, Article 4, Chapter 116 of the general laws are the first because of competition chiefly in Omaha, and would clarify the charter law as it affects funds from improvements.

The bankers' association will cooperate in the preparation of the bill amending the banking laws. Gov. McKelvie said. It is expected that the changes will be brought out at the meeting of members to be held at Omaha this week.

Legion in Athletics.

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 16.—Plans have been worked out by the Nebraska American Legion whereby basketball teams of containing the greater number of the 320 posts in the state will contest for county, congressional and state championships. The arrangements were made by the Legion athletic committee; Harry H. Ellis of Holdrege, Lem Doyle, state boxing commissioner, and Walter Kucke of Central City.

The tournament for the all-state American Legion title will be played on March 17 and 18 in some central town. Effort will then be made to match the Nebraska champions against the Legion winners in other states, and a try made to place the Nebraska players at the top of the list.

The Nebraska Legion is also developing other sports among its members, notably boxing and wrestling. Past champions are engaging representatives of other posts to determine the best of each class in the districts and state. Nebraska is given credit for being the first American Legion department to organize thoroughly for athletics.

Reminiscences of Blizzard of 1888

January 12 was the thirty-fourth anniversary of the blizzard of 1888, which pioneers here remember as the blizzard ever experienced because of the suddenness and the continued severity of it through twelve hours.

W. Mason who was living on a farm in Wilbur precinct, tells that at the beginning of the storm the thermometer dropped twenty-eight degrees in an hour.

By J. M. Strahan, father of Frank Strahan of Wayne, and Tom Steele, later county representative in the house of congress.

Oscar Milliken was well prepared for the storm with a supply of coal on hand which he got in immediately before the blizzard arrived.

As an example of the suddenness with which the storm came up, a reminiscence of Mrs. J. S. Lewis may be cited.

Ed Wallace relates that he and his wife were in the city on the day of the blizzard when he was in the city.

Two of Ed Wallace's sisters were attending school in Wayne and stayed in a house located on the corner where Mrs. J. J. Williams now lives.

W. O. Goss who had several children in the public school at that time, grew worried about the children.

Mr. Wallace remembers hearing of the anxiety of Mr. and Mrs. E. J. Nangle who lived on the first farm on the east side of the road from the mile corner just south of Wayne.

W. H. Gilderseave and Ed Wallace while reminiscing about the blizzard, both mentioned the cattle loss exper-

Dairy Extension Service in State

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 14.—Stimulation of interest in dairying, organization of cooperative sire associations, cow testing, etc., were the chief work of the dairy extension service during the year 1921, N. N. Lawritson, dairy specialist, states the general policy in carrying out the projects was to outline and develop all projects in cooperation with the farm bureau.

Particular attention has been paid to those counties in which dairying is least adapted and more generally practiced. Mr. Lawritson says, "Interested farmers were assisted in selecting and bringing in good dairy stock. We were credited for buying cattle outside the state but the surplus of high grade cattle for sale in this state would not come anywhere near supplying the demand."

"We have not been able to organize a sire association chiefly due to the large number of sires for sale at very reasonable figures. It appears most farmers prefer to own a sire privately rather than have an interest in an association. However, ever, we are in hopes of impressing them further in the value of such an association, especially as more dairy cattle are placed on the farm."

Cow Testing Important. "Cow testing associations are far more important to the advancement of the dairy industry than generally is comprehended. One or two of these associations have been organized and as dairy cattle increase we believe such an association is to be a success. These new operations have proved satisfactory in results and stimulation of interest."

"In a few years the calf club project has grown until it is one of the most important projects as it teaches the boys and girls the fundamental principles of dairying and its relation to successful agriculture, as well as training them for leadership and good citizenship. Eight dairy calf clubs, composed of seven boys and girls, were organized in the state last year. Our greatest handicap has been to obtain the right kind of calves at a figure that the club members could afford to pay. Better cooperation of breeders will aid greatly to the success of this movement."

Death of Senator J. H. Millard. Omaha, Neb., Jan. 14.—Former United States Senator Joseph H. Will Separate Give His Message. The new Sovietian having brought Russia to its present fearful condition, the Reds are permitting "capitalism" to be re-established as a last resort, but they are careful to say, as they do so, that their theories have not been altered in the least, and that they will seize the first favorable opportunity to restore communism, which is their aim as much as ever. Yet Senator Joseph P. France and others urge Americans to cooperate with the Soviets and give them a better opportunity to try out their ideals.

This is especially true during cold weather. When your car becomes sluggish and refuses to pull uphill, you are likely to find that a change of oil is needed. Your problems may be easily solved by bringing your car here and letting us drain out your crankcase and fill it with our high-grade product which is greatly adapted to your engine and the weather. Another consideration of vital importance is use of high-grade gasoline—the kind we sell, the kind that will give your car energy and pulling power. Your motor troubles will readily yield to our expert treatment.' Wayne Filling Station, Merchant & Strahan.

Agriculture and Peace: Topeka Capital: There are some minor interests of the farm that were highly profitable in 1921, these are being poultry and dairy birds. It may be said that farmers made money during the year in all products of the market for which is strictly domestic, while losing money heavily on all products whose market is affected by export and the foreign demand. These latter are, of course, the great staple agricultural products, and it is evident that agriculture can have little hope of prosperity until a world-readjustment of the market for such is strictly domestic, while losing money heavily
