The Copper-Clad Is a Regular Cooking Machine

The Copper-Clad range can and has been called a "cooking machine" because, like a machine, it does the same thing the same way every time. It is machine-like.

The Copper-Clad cooks as good as it looks, and because of its Copper lining outlasts two or three ordinary ranges.

Wayne Man Questions "The Wonder Girl"

While V. A. Senter was in attendance at the Nebraska's Clothiers' convention in Omaha recently, he questioned Eugene Dennis, "the wonder girl," as to the condition of his nephew, Donald Higher, whose mother, Mrs. Brown Hoole, of Laurel. The boy is 11 years old and for the past year and a half has been confined most of the time to his bed, as the result of a bone disease, which has afflicted his legs. The boy has suffered much pain and it has been doubted that he would ever grow to normal manhood.

"The wonder girl" appeared at a meeting of the clothiers, told of her past life and how the all-knowing power seemed to have been hers since childhood and then answered questions put by those present.

Mr. Senter put his question thus, "I have a nephew, who has not been well for a year and a half. What is the nature of his disease and will he ever be cured?" The girl advised that something could be rubbed on the afflicted parts of the body that would help more and advised that the boy be given lime water to drink. She said, "he has bone trouble but he will eventually be cured."

Mrs. Senter, who was in Omaha at the time but was unable to attend this session, immediately wrote the laurel letter and the brasses now used and they received much encouragement from the report.

Mr. Senter was encouraged to question the girl through the secret law saundness of the replies which she made.

The same afternoon meeting, a letter or in the city had asked if the right treatment was being given his crippled boy and what chance he had to overcome his bodily defect. The girl stated that the brasses now used were all right and that the boy would outgrow the defect.

In connection with the marvelous ability of the girl to know about so many people, various authentic stories have been told which bear out the truth of the information which she had given. One Omaha mother wished to know the whereabouts of her son who had left home several months ago, leaving no trace. The girl volunteered the information that the son was in the navy, that since his departure from home he had been in many parts of the world, that he didn't wish to be heard from but would be back at the end of his enlistment period, but that a letter would reach him at a certain western coast station which she named. The mother was indeed deeply from her son bore out the information given by the girl.

In Remembrance.

Jacksonville, Ill., Feb. 22, 1922.
Dear Sir:
Will you permit me to say something regarding Mr. T. W. Moran, whose recent call away has fallen so heavily on your care.

I began going to Wayne in 1886, and have been there every year but one—since, some years three or four times. I am desiring to do with the railway agent. In all that time I had found Mr. Moran the same gentlemanly and attentive, if representative of the great Northern system. He was always polite, respectful and informing. This latter point is one on which many railway agents are neglected. That he was a fine looking and hearty man only added to his capability and the success of his long and well deserved administration. He had the faculty, a feature of his race, of being strictly attentive to business and yet, not annoying a patron of the road.

Some years ago, I had the misfortune to have the same day, unsatisfactory dealings with agents at the office of Portland, Maine at Boston, Mass. Mr. Moran was always equal to the occasion, and Wayne was the winner thereby. It is singular, but lately the thought of owing to him and telling him how I appreciated his service, came to me. I still had the intent, action on which I suffered from an old person's habit, when your paper told of his departure. If all our public places had such affable and efficient officers it would be a great advantage.

Yours respectfully,
Easley Moore.

Fred L. Blair
Wayne's Leading Clothier

Poling, set out on a very interesting inland trip to spend Christmas and New Years with friends at Lashan, Kwangshu, and Kwangchow. We left our home at Sengangchow which is our closet large city to the north and it required about two hours on the train to reach it from here. Before the day of trains, the same trip was considered a day's journey in sedan chairs. Previous to setting out here I had spent a few days with friends and had had to dress my second Christmas tree. In this part of the country, where we were to travel, they travel either by wheelbarrow or sedan chair. The chairs made faster time and were far more comfortable, we decided on them. These chairs are carried by two men each, lashing the three men who carried our baggage, we had twenty-three coolies.

Early in the morning just as the sun was making its appearance, the large caravan set out on its trip to Lashan. As we were carried with a certain rhythmic swing along the narrow bridges, moandering paths, out among the miniature fields we were interested in watching scenes along the road. Judging from the people we met and early morning, we must think all of China was going to market to Sengangchow. All or nearly all were walking and most of them were burdened. I saw a lot of dead loads as applicable to Chinese when he said, "Come Unto Me all Ye That are Weary and Heavy-Loaded." Across the shoulder of most of them was a long pole to which were attached two bamboo or willow baskets. In these were rice, turnips, carrots, cabbage, meat and many other things which they were bringing to market. We saw a lot of long bags of other market products on the backs of the donkeys. The driver never rode, but walked alongside the cart, and drove him with one line. The driving was done chiefly with word of mouth. Some were bringing their produce on a water buffalo, others were carrying them on wheelbarrows. The wheelbarrow here are of two kinds. Both have a high wooden wheel which is very narrow and can bear its approach well. This is done so to frighten evil spirits, I've been told. It is awful enough to frighten anything. The one kind has a high elevated platform, above the wheel, and the other has two low platforms on either side. The former is generally used for conveying passengers. The traveler's baggage had, consisting of two light weight mattresses on top and his pillows, blankets, and so on, and he had his reclining on top of the bed, hanging down in front. This way is slower traveling and you can make only about twenty miles a day. The latter kind is used generally for conveying baggage. The baggage or products are strapped on either side of the wheel. Two or three men, sometimes two persons on one, sometimes a woman on one side and a pig on the other side.

Sometimes a woman or a man on one side and all his or her worldly possessions on the other, which generally consists of a basin, towel, teapot, tea cups and a few other things are packed into a basket resembling a clothes basket and a few chickens with feet tied together. When the load is heavy one man pushes the wheelbarrow and the other man pulls it having a rope fastened to the front part. We see men bringing chickens to market by having their feet together, and three or four in one band, with heads hanging down. We see men literally driving flocks to market. One man has a willow basket. He drops a perch here and there and the fished ones make a struggle to reach it. Every minute you could see their sides fall in. Were it not for the long hair and dirt on their bodies they would be transparent. Another man walks behind them with a long pole and a hook with a red one in a while. Sometimes when they have only one hog to sell they tie the fore limbs together and the two hind ones together and then they put a pole between the legs; lift this onto the shoulders of two men and carry it to market. Most of a lot of men go together and the two hind ones together and then they put a pole between the legs; lift this onto the shoulders of two men and carry it to market. Most of a lot of men go together and the two hind ones together and then they put a pole between the legs; lift this onto the shoulders of two men and carry it to market.

As there are only one or two families here with a wall of stone or mud or brick about them. Most of them have only one long street along which all places of business and most houses are built. On market days this street is a solid mass of humanity. People from all directions come to the market. Such things as rabbits of cats, dogs, squirrels, rabbits, cows, horses, donkeys and oxen are all hung up along the sides of buildings for display. Their owners tell that they have never been properly cared for. Whole hogs hang up here with all inwardly nicely washed and gleaming in the sun. They come and smell of it and long for it. Fish and other vermin also sample it. Dried goat's meat which your ordinary nerves have noticed long before you see it is also hanging up or spread out on tables. Fish and vegetables and grain are packed all about on tables or on the ground. They brushwood and cattle are for sale at the entrance to city or village. As our chair bearers approach they scream, yell, elbow and fight their way through this mass. Just as some one is about to strike back his hand is stayed when he discovers that the chair contains foreigners. We foreigners are always things of great curiosity to them. Finally we are safely on the other side of the village. After such a strenuous time our carriers generally place down our chairs and go back to one of the numerous inn-keepers. We ladies brought our own lunch with us. In the meantime crowds had gathered around us to closely inspect all our clothing, to find out our name, age, occupation where we came from and where we are going and many more questions which according to our training is rude to ask, but to them it is quite proper. Finally we are on again and the show is over. We never walk through a city as the mob spirit, like home, is a rather uncertain quantity. We do not care to afford them too much pleasure. Along country roads we do continue to walk to rest our cramped limbs and to help carriers.

All the fields in China look like garden patches and are irregular shapes. There are no fences around them but a few feet of elevated earth divide them. This time of the year some fields contain wheat, corn, peas, beans, etc. and others submerged with water for rice in the spring. The rivers are as interesting as roads are. China finds it cheaper to run a ferry across rivers and then bridge them, so she has only a very few large bridges. You come to a river and you find it is a narrow, shallow boat, men, chair and all. The boatmen instead of rowing, use long poles to push you across. Once we were on a river and had a short distance from shore. One of the boatmen got out and waded to shore and then came back to the boat and carried all passengers and goods on a mat on his back, to shore. I had expected to be taken to shore this way but it was not made. The smaller boats are used to carry goods and are generally made of driving two parallel rows of poles into the ground. To these cross-boards are nailed and lashed several long poles, which are laid. You need not be level headed to go across on one of these. In the spring of the year, before floods come, they pull up the bridge so it does not wash away.

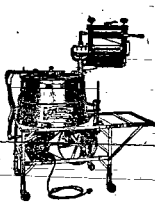

We arrived at Lashan, a distance of forty miles, about seven o'clock here. We spent our Christmas, and here I helped dress a third and fourth Christmas tree. I'm not going to tell about the four days of traveling for they are all the same in Kwangchow, which was the last place I visited, is over eight miles from a railroad or two good days' journey. At all these places, as there are only one or two families besides Chinese living there, visitors were welcomed with open arms. The best of everything was given to us as it was like celebrating Christmas at each one of these places. Now we are back at school and have the usual school routine. Besides my school work, I'm busy studying Chinese some each day. I do enjoy this.

We've had a big snow storm this past week which is the first of the year. The children are having lots of fun coasting. Grace Soderberg.

Candidates for official places are beginning to come to the surface, and soon another pre-primary campaign will be on in full force.

President Harding has been in office a year, and an unbiased review of the work of his administration will lead to the conclusion that a good deal has been accomplished in adding restoration of normalcy and in bringing the cause of permanent peace.

People of Nebraska are giving Nelson B. Updike, Omaha grain dealer and publisher of the Omaha Bee, a great deal of deserved credit for his earnest advice to farmers to hold their grain for a few cents a bushel. The price is not far from fifty cents this week, and those who heeded the advice have saved themselves the trouble of having to come to the public the benefits of his knowledge and judgment as a student of grain markets. Becoming a part of his grain, they are able to reach and inform and counsel the public. He has performed a real service.

Laywers have suffered more than most groups during the unhappy reconstruction period. Their suffering has not been in the way of pecuniary loss as in multiplying and unending series of financial problems brought to them to solve. Following the heyday of speculation when the boom collapsed, many people found themselves tied up in all sorts of tangles. Each poured his own trouble into the ears of his lawyer and asked for advice. By night fall each day, the average lawyer has been over-charged with tales of grief and deep apprehension. A year of the experience would seem enough to turn a happy optimist into a chronic pessimist.

People know more about unhappy than happy marriages, and thus the number of the former becomes considerable. The latter, however, by great majority, pursuing matrimonial content and success, makes no noise and attracts no attention. In defining the terms of his law, the great majority, pursuing matrimonial content and success, makes no noise and attracts no attention. ...arrive in the thought. Divorcees some when one of the other partner no longer wishes to carry out the contract. Happily corn and hog prices are going up, and the increased value are being reflected in the condition of the times. More money is being put into circulation, and it is expected that the price of corn will reach the low level that was predicted, and it is coming back to a level that is being predicted last fall that hogs would drop to an unprofitable level before the end of the year. On the contrary, the price of corn has steadily advanced. With fifty-cent corn and ten-dollar hogs, one can see only good things ahead.

A. C. Townley, national president of the nonpartisan league, talked before an audience at Lincoln last night and he confessed that his organization could not elect any one to office by independent action, that the way to do was to support candidates of other parties who would favor the league program. He spoke against the new third party in this state. He advised withholding approval, support, and all parties but his own nominations. He expressed a good deal of disappointment over the rough and rocky course which the league has taken, and he did not offer much encouragement for the future. Answering a query, he said he was no longer a socialist, having changed his mind. If so, he may change his mind in other respects. Acknowledging his error in favoring socialism, he may acknowledge other mistakes in time. He talked like one whose star is fast descending in the west.

Business and all claims are beginning to make an impression on general business conditions. Over a wide area in the middle west, where gains have been principally attributed, there have been indications of a renewed confidence on the part of the farmers, who are buying a little more freely than they were. The process necessary for the reaction of the improvement in the price of agricultural products on general business no doubt is slow. Governor Harding, of the federal reserve board, says, but better quotations have been seen in the market now for some time, so the influence for improvement is beginning to be felt. Dun's report says there has been a moderate enlargement in the volume of business in various lines, although there is still a lack of uniformity in improvements noted, which indicates the irregularity will continue for some time. That can be expected in view of the uneven tone of most markets, where sporadic trading is likely at any time. Securities are holding their own on Wall street, their strength discounting somewhat the reports of numerous failures by brokerage firms which have overreached themselves in their dealings. New York seems to be quite unperturbed and waiting for the rising tide, confident that it will come. The week-end New York report told of lower figures on foreign exchange and grains, but insisted they were higher than the close of the previous week. The report also mentioned an underlying firmness in the stock market. The inference then is that the foundation is solid so far as finances are concerned. There is no sound to encourage confidence. Slight breaks in the wheat market at Chicago amount to nothing more than fluctuations due to the weather. The main thing is that grains are selling in large volume, and, of course, continued demand will keep the price up to the level of the present level. Europe is taking American wheat. Corn, in enormous amounts, is going to Russia. Only a day or so ago 500 carloads of corn left Mitchell, S. D., for Russia, bought by the American relief commission. Live stock is holding steady on the various markets. In some, is making appreciable gains. Locally, higher prices have been registered for hogs, which went to $10.40, and lambs which touched $15.75.

Industrial activity has not been greatly increased except in sponsored employment. It is claimed, is not so embracing as it was a few months ago, but it is still to be reckoned with. The economic conditions cannot be what prospective demands until everybody who wants work may have it. The trend now is for better business, which means a further decrease in unemployment. The coming of the spring season, no doubt, will bring an acceleration to industry, which for the past several months has been struggling to right itself. One thing may be accepted as settled—any changes in the future are going to be for the better. The worst has come and gone.

Wakefield News. The ladies of the Eastern Star planned a surprise on Mrs. C. W. Long on Saturday as it was her birthday. She was presented with a beautiful bouquet. After a pleasant afternoon of visiting, refreshments were served. John Halle of St. Helena, Neb., who is promoting a plan for the erection of a hydroelectric plant in the Niobrara river, has announced a meeting of interested parties to be held here within the next two weeks. A petition is being circulated to obtain the names of 100 business men of northeast Nebraska as members of a stock company to build the building of the power station. The plan is to provide electric power for this part of the state.

Morgan's Toggery "The Postoffice is Just Across the Street" Wayne, Neb. Gettin' Up Steam. Omaha Bee: General trade and industrial conditions, in the words of the monthly review of the Federal Reserve bank of this district, are healthier than one year ago. Increased activity is found in some lines, while others are experiencing seasonal dullness. Financial conditions in the agricultural districts are reported to be improving with the buying power of the farmers increased by crop prices advances and financial relief. Liquidation of loans is progressing steadily and the banks position is stronger. In Nebraska, with 986 banks reporting, the aggregate of home-made discounts at the beginning of this year was $207,000,000 as compared with $212,000,000 August 6, 1921. This is a decrease of $5,000,000 or 2.3 per cent in five months. Throughout the district building operations, according to the information secured by the Federal Reserve bank, increased 31.6 per cent in January as compared with the same month a year before. The reports of permits issued in the first month of the present year show a total of $9 for Omaha, with an estimated cost of $262,240, an increase of 74.5 per cent in twelve months. In varying degree the situation all over the nation is similar. With every show of right the Federal Reserve bank announces a speeding up of progress toward general economic adjustment in the tenth Reserve district. who shot Lieut. Langdon, an American officer, in Vladivostok, last winter, is reported to be drawing large audiences in Japan as a movie lecturer. Japanese Sentry a Lecturer. Facing Age: The Japanese soldier.

Sec'y. Denby Hears Market Reports By Wireless. A photograph of Secretary of the Interior Clegg Denby sitting at a desk, looking at a wireless receiver. The receiver is a large, ornate piece of equipment with many dials and knobs. The scene is set in a room with a window in the background.

When radio-phonograph wireless stations of the East recently started sending out daily market and weather reports even Uncle Sam's calligrapher could no longer resist the radio "bug." This new picture shows Secretary of Navy Denby at his desk, carrying on government business. Extensive news, educational and entertaining programs are featured daily for amateurs by broadcasting stations in the East.

UNCLE WALT The Poet Philosopher

Skill Learning.
I keep on reading, reading, until my eyes are sore; my dame of thought I'm feeding with new and ancient lore. I read the grand old masters, the poet and the seer; their thoughts, like porous plaster, to memory adhere. I read the modern feller, the "Main Street" type of scribe, whose book's the foremost seller among the human tribe. I read the thoughts of Caesar, the works of Herod Bell; I buy of every geezer who has a book to sell. One can not grind forever with any sort of mill, if he makes, no endeavor the proper part to fill. So many brilliant strappings start to conquer fame; they'll all be newer Kiplings, and beat him at his game. That they may really give in person can deny, who marks how they have lifted their eyes and hearts on high. They make a brave beginning, their fires spirits soar; we say, "They'll soon be winning the wreath that Milton wore." They dash off something clever, they glitter for a day, and then wink out forever, and cease to put up hay. They do not read or study, their minds they do not school, but chase where lights are ruddy, to play a game of pool. No will can function properly or turn out flour, I wish, unless into its hopper you put some sort of grain.

Still Works.
When I paid up my income tax, a few brief days ago, some wild alasses and alacks I uttered in my woe. I had to pay a frightful sum, a tribute much too vast; I for a time was stricken dumb, and made to stand aghast. I have to earn my scanty pence by lunk and patient toil, by packing coals into a box and hauling midnight oil. And so it jars me back and forth, and back and forth, the product of my wavy grind must go to Uncle Sam. I said, "I'll seek some other land, some quiet place abroad, where tax collectors do not stand, and rob man of his wad." I tried to locate such a shore, there's no such place of bliss; in other lands they tax men more as we are taxed in this. A poet on a foreign strand who earns three bucks a day, would find an officer at hand to take two bucks away. However great our griefs may be, however fierce they seem, they're twice as bad across the sea, where eagles do not scream. So let us bear our trifling load and cease to tear our hair, and gambol up and down the road, our costliness in the air.

The Old Promise.
New stationers rise, at every shift and seam—as sleek as—any of the tongues they have the gift, and they denounce the tax, if they're elected they'll bite the burden from our backs. Oh, we are taxed, we're taxed, less taxes, our load is sad to see, and ever greater grow the weights that cripple you and me; but there are always candidates who'd gladly set us free. We listen to these breezy chaps, who fly the taxist embers, and give them all the public snugs, and hope for better times; soon we may pay our tax, perhaps, and have some surplus dimes. And we forgot how in the past we've heard the same old song; heard stationers make their pledges vast to right our every wrong; and idle as a veering blast were all those pledges strong. And we elect those gaudy birds who make the eagle scream, who charm us with a flow of words like language in a dream; and in the end they feed us curds where we're expecting cream. "You'll have to pay a whole lot more," the tax collector cries; "I know you're feeling sad and sore, but still the taxes we've got to pay for the days we won't help you weary guys." So to his door men, cries, we take the iron men, the coin we've earned by bearing weights or plying saw or pen; then come some breezy candidates, and we are stung again.

Ancient Aches.
There are so many ways of curing the aches that torture bone and flesh. It does seem strange to us, enduring the same old pains our fathers knew. On our main street the signs are swinging, the signs of healers by the score, who'll market antidotal hearts a-singing, if we'll dip five bones or four. By every mail I get a letter from one practitioner or two, who'd free me from my gout or fever, the rheumatism of the flu. And all these healers I have tried, I've tried them money by the yard; I've had my ancient spine adjusted, and I've been bottled in rancid lard; I've taken pellets green and yellow, I've taken tablets flat and square, and guided by some healing fowl, consumed a horse's bill of fare. I've taken brown and brimled bitters, and pills that taste like toilet soap; for he must rank with tincture quitters who doesn't sample every dope. And yet with all my ceaseless taking I'm where I was long years ago, and as my grand-sire's bones were aching, so my old bones much anguish know. I read how science knocks diseases, and wipes out human aches and stings; I also read some other vheezes concerning pills that fly with wings. The Science tales are most alluring, but while I read them in my lair, I wonder why we're still enduring rheumatics, mumps and falling hair.

Greatness.
Our leading citizen is dead, the greatest man in Pankville town; no more we mark his stately tread, no more we shiver at his frown. He used to think—and so did we—that when he died all things would stop; oh, where would poor old Pankville be, without its anchor and its prop? And now he's resting in the shade, and he's done with every mortal game; and Pankville reaches out for trade, and things go on about the same. Tin cars are scolding everywhere, at five old song; heard stationers make their pledges vast to right our every wrong; and idle as a veering blast were all those pledges strong. And we elect those gaudy birds who make the eagle scream, who charm us with a flow of words like language in a dream; and in the end they feed us curds where we're expecting cream. "You'll have to pay a whole lot more," the tax collector cries; "I know you're feeling sad and sore, but still the taxes we've got to pay for the days we won't help you weary guys." So to his door men, cries, we take the iron men, the coin we've earned by bearing weights or plying saw or pen; then come some breezy candidates, and we are stung again.

Going to Sleep.
My years are ten and fifty, and when I meet my friends, I say I'm feeling nifty my cheery spell accents. Healer by the score, who'll market antidotal hearts a-singing, if we'll dip five bones or four. By every mail I get a letter from one practitioner or two, who'd free me from my gout or fever, the rheumatism of the

this fiver business keeps on growing. I've got to fix my collar bone; as daily I grow older, some grievous wart appears; I need a wooden shaver, so need some new tin ears. The surgeon long has beckoned, the doctor brings his pill, and I must go in second when I would climb a hill. Yet cheerfully I center along the village street, and blithely josh and banter the debugger I meet. "I've stacked up greater," I cry, "in hollow glee; 'I'd whip an alligator, and make a loked floss.' Some men may say I'm dotty as on my way I went, but I've even say I'm naughtily to four-flush and pretend, but I believe it's better to spring a cheerful whoopee than talk of gout and tetter and foot-and-mouth disease.

The Man Out of a Job.
Kansas City Star: The man who wants to work and can't find a job, who sees his family in want because of his idleness, who is unable to do for any wild organization that promises him better conditions. It is up to the people who believe in the existing system and the one that for all its faults is, to the best interests of the whole country, to show this man that he will be taken care of if he wants to work. A realization of this duty has been a strong factor in inducing communities to undertake extensive public work just at this time. These public enterprises have helped to take up the slack in the employment situation. They have made it possible for men to get jobs to tide them over until such time as a better adjustment of industry is possible and the country gets on a normal basis. The more jobs are created, the society must plan intelligently to meet the recurring problem of the man-out of a job, the better it will be for everybody. Only a social system that makes it possible for every man to earn a living can be enduring. If it fails in any considerable extent in this it will open the way to such social experiments as those that have ruined Russia.

WAYNE VARIETY STORE

J. C. NUSS

Membership in the C. M. S. means buying in small lots at quantity prices.

One of the Best Bargains This Store Has Ever Given
Traveling Bags at $1.39

We all make short trips once in a while, visit a friend or spend some time away from home. In all such cases we need a traveling bag.

A good leather bag is of course the best, but most of us do not travel enough to spend the price for it. $10 to $20 looks mighty big to most of us now-a-days. For the same reason we hesitate to discard an old one though it may look shabby enough, and detach from our personal appearance just when we want to look our best.

These TRAVELING BAGS are made of waterproof material. They imitate a black seal leather as closely as I have ever seen it imitated.

Have leather handles, brass-edged lock with key, two brass ball clips to fasten, four brass bumpers on the bottom.

Come in two sizes, 18 inch length for men, 16 inch for ladies. Both sizes are 12 inches high.

They look like the high priced leather bag and will stand the wear-and-tear.

Why is this bag so low priced? This question is really out of order but I will answer it just the same.

Because—Over 750 C. M. S. stores scattered all over the U. S. bought this same bag at the same time. Bought in many carload lots reduced the factory price immensely.

Because it is sold by over 7500 stores next Friday and Saturday at just a nominal profit, to show what concentrated buying will accomplish and at the same time give customers something extra good for their money.

You can see these traveling bags in one of the show windows and you can examine them in the store. It is not exactly as represented, do not buy. Also take out your various mail order catalogues and compare their prices with ours.

From Popca Journal Feb. 22, 1922.

The story has just come out that some time or three months ago a reverend gentleman of this place was invited one day to be present and officiate at a wedding which was to be consummated in the city of St. Paul, Minn. Marrying being somewhat in his line, he readily consented to go, and on the day appointed he arrived there in the city of St. Paul, Minn. After he had performed the marriage ceremony in his blandest and smoothest style, and invoked the blessings of heaven upon the bride and groom, he turned to the bride and said: 'You are now a young couple who had assumed the responsibilities of married life, you were accompanied to this happy hour by the great and good bridegroom, who in the fullness of his heart slipped a crisp bill into the hand of the reverend gentleman, which he rolled into his vest pocket with the feeling that he too was glad of this occasion, glad for the joy of the newly wedded, glad to be able to confer happiness upon appreciative hearts, and glad for the new bill which he tucked so snugly beneath his waistcoat. Thus in a reverie he continued to stand at the wedding home. He found that the charge for his lively team was $2.50, and with an I-pay-as-I-go air he brought forth the bill given him by the man in the blacked buggy, and handing it to the man of liveries told him to take his change out of that. The liverman looked at the bill and then wisely handed it back. Then the reverend gentleman looked at it. Ah! It was not a bill against the treasury of the United States for $10. No; neither was it for $5, nor $3, nor yet for $3, nor $2; not even for 12 shillings, nor 10 shillings. It was a large, fine looking bill and bore the honored picture of no less a personage than George Washington, but to save your soul it would bring but a dollar in the money market. The reverend gentleman passed it over and told the liverman to charge him with the balance, and he would draw out his money and pay the man, devoting his spare time to figuring in that part of the arithmetic called 'profit and loss.'

Why You Should Use a National Vacuum Washer?

Because: It washes much quicker, does it much cleaner and with a great deal less work to the operator.

Why With Less Work to the Operator?

Because: By the vacuum principle it requires only power to handle the water.

Why Does It Wash Quicker?

Because: The rapid action of the dasher driving the hot water and suds through the soiled clothes forces the dirt out. The agitation of the hot water makes the dirt respond immediately. Two- to six-minutes will remove the dirt from any fabric that can be cleaned with soap and water.

Some Good Farm Maxims.
"Drovers Journal-Stockman": "Nothing will help the farmer, and the sentiment out of the hole so quickly and effectively as individual work," said a well known Nebraska farmer in Omaha this week. This farmer said that he had not much confidence in many of the current schemes proposed for farmers by doctrinaires and others seeking advisory jobs in which the hours were short and the pay high.

Among the policies suggested by the farmer for his brethren were: A few hours' attention to the care of machinery each month to prolong the period of its utility. Intelligent work, which makes the largest possible use of every minute of time and every effort.

Keeping up farm buildings by repairs and occasional painting, so that a dime in time may be enabled to save a dollar's dollars.

Using stuff produced on the farm for the table instead of selling everything at deflated prices and buying at high prices.

Hogs, small flocks of sheep and chickens, and a well-selected dairy herd to take out the daily income and utilize waste products.

The establishment of short personal credit at banks to enable a small loan to pay a long way instead of pledging all of his possessions for loans that can be used to advantage.

Keeping out of the clutches of exploiters, especially the suretying stock promoter.

The acquisition of the business methods by which other business men obtain the far-working value of their capital.

That prudent sense which lays by a surplus, however small, for a tight time, which is a policy followed by the humblest business man.

Harding Not a Dictator.
Lincoln Journal: There is nothing to the charge that President Harding, with his numerous daily suggestions to congress concerning legislation, is usurping the functions of congress. There is no sign of dictation. Rather it looks like congressional abdication.

Open Letter No. 2 from the Omaha Grain Exchange to the Farmers and Grain Growers of the West.

The United States Grain Growers Inc. opened in Lincoln a school of instruction in which to coach their growers in the grading of grain. There they were taught that grain exchanges collected two commissions on grain sold—one from the owner of the grain and one from the buyer. This was proved to be untrue, but they continue to stick to their "instruction" because—silly as the farmers with unwarrented prejudice against all grain merchants.

In December, United States Grain Growers' organizers in northern Nebraska told their auditors that corn was worth 95c a bushel in New York for export, and that after allowing for freight to the seaboard, the grain netted 30c a bushel.

Many farmers and grain growers are realizing the service that the Omaha Grain Exchange performs in the rapid, accurate and far-reaching distribution of market news and quotations that affect the seller of grain.

Any information that the exchange has is always at the service of anyone who asks for it. In fact, it is one of the rules of the exchange to give out such information upon call, and there are several persons in the office who misrepresents conditions or gives out false quotations.

Wives investigate the Omaha Grain Exchange before the farmers and grain growers in the country are entitled to hear about the marketing of grain.

Women Give Out Housework is hard enough when healthy. Every Wayne woman who is having backache, blue and nervous spells, dizzy headaches and kidney or bladder troubles, should be glad to heed this Wayne woman's experience.

Mrs. Iva Hoshaw says: "I had a severe attack of the grip. My kidneys were weakened and I suffered from sharp darting pains across the small of my loins and a terrible bearing down feeling. My head throbbed and I could not rest well at night. My kidneys acted two weeks. I got a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and after taking them all symptoms of kidney trouble disappeared and there hasn't been any return of the complaint." (Statement given August 23, 1910).

On May 31, 1920, Mrs. Hoshaw added: "I seldom have to use a kidney remedy now. If my back gets lame I take a few Doan's and am all right again."

Baby-Pig at Norfolk Weighs Seven Pounds

Norfolk Daily News: What is described by breeders to be a record developed on the farm of W. H. Rasmussen Tuesday when a fall yearling sow gave birth to a male pig which weighed seven pounds, was eleven inches high and fifteen inches long from ears to root of tail and which weighed three pounds.

The pig was born in the foreleg above the hoof. The pig is a full son of Giant Sensation, Dorset Jersey boar. Many people interested in breeding of pig-bugs were attracted to the farm by the pig.

The average weight of new pigs is two pounds, and breeders doubt if this record has been duplicated in the United States.

The pig was in excellent condition on Tuesday and was brought to the city to be photographed. The owner of this pig weighs 60 pounds and presented her first litter Tuesday. She is being held as a show hog.

MR. STOCKMAN!

SIoux CITY IS YOUR MARKET

Sioux City is your logical market for several reasons. The haul is decidedly shorter and you who have had costly experience in the matter of shrinkage can appreciate the importance of reducing that loss and with the short haul to Sioux City it is reasonable to assume that the shrinkage is reduced to a minimum. Another important consideration is the freight. The table below will show you the difference in the rate to Omaha and to Sioux City.

To You Who Have been shipping to Sioux City and know the advantages of so doing, this advertisement is directed with the intention of manifesting appreciation and a desire for your continued patronage. To You Who Have Never shipped to this market, this advertisement is an invitation to weigh carefully the advantages offered by Sioux City in contrast with other markets, and if you will let your own good judgment decide the matter, that is all we ask. We have no fear of the outcome.

Regulating the Dance.

Mitchell, S. D. Feb. 9.—Mitchell's new dance hall regulations, which this city administration declares will be rigidly enforced, has been passed by the city council. The ordinance prohibits boys and girls under 18 years of age from attending public dances unless attended by their parents or guardians. The ordinance provides a fine of not less than $10 nor more than $100, and an addition of 30 days in jail at the discretion of the court. The penalty is principally aimed at the dance hall proprietors who permit boys and girls under 18 to enter their halls. It further specified that the youthful offenders also may be arrested. Their cases, however, would be handled in juvenile court, and it is possible that a training school sentence would be forthcoming in the case of persons who have made it a practice to frequent public dances.

The ordinance goes farther and defines "minor and immoral dancing, prohibits check-out-check dances, and check-out dances of unbecomely movement and any "shaking or jerking of the body in a suggestive manner."

moonlight dances and twilight dances also are prohibited and the ordinance further provides that all public dance halls must be well lighted at all times and that the surrounding grounds also must be lighted. In addition there must be police supervision at every public dance.

An Excuse for the Lazy.
St. Paul Pioneer Press: Lazy men have an excuse, Dr. Edward H. Ochsenruef, of Chicago, says that overwork of professional men intoxicates them with the poison of fatigue, makes them "grouchy" and probably shortens their lives. Few will wish to be intoxicated that way, but many are advocates of great temperance as far as work is concerned.

Had You Noticed It?
Kansas City Star: You have noticed, of course, the tone of deep regret in which democratic leaders are beginning to speak of the "fall-out" of the Washington conference. They feel very badly about it, and promise to feel worse as the congressional campaign gets under way.

Councilmen Becoming Brave.
Minneapolis Journal: Our city council has gone on record against the return of most and light wages. The world must be progressing. No council of the 80s or 90s would have shown this front against the enemy.
