The way some people act, we half suspect they have been attending schools of instruction on how to avoid paying just obligations.

Late property exchanges at good prices and started or planned building enterprises being convincing to the public, and encourage the belief that we are entering a period of old-time activity.

It used to be considered quite the proper thing to hate the larger town. This feeling has largely passed. There is now more of a disposition to kindness and sympathy. All towns gain much by the new spirit of good will and helpfulness.

The mayor has designated next week as "clean-up week" and it is hoped people will heed the call and make special effort to rid their premises and neighboring alleys of unsightly rubbish, and make them more sanitary and more agreeable to the eye and nose.

John I. Lewis, president of the United Mine Workers of America, who is directing the present coal strike, is quoted as strongly urging nationalization of the coal mines of the country which proposition is virtually a confession of failure on the part of the unions to function successfully and effectively.

Bloomfield seems to have a public rest-room that serves thousands of travelers, and is out of debt. Wayne county has long contemplated such an enterprise, and may get busy in that direction before long, according to reports. It might be advisable for the local women to ascertain the Bloomfield plan.

In deciding to publish assessed valuations for 1922, the county commissioners believe they are acting in behalf of the best public service. The policy of publishing such a list which has not heretofore been published in a number of Nebraska counties, and has proven a source of much interest and satisfaction.

The coal strike started Saturday in accordance with schedule, and thousands of workmen are taking a vacation. The attorney general is quoted as saying that the public is not menaced by fuel shortage and that the government has no ground for interfering when miners refuse to accept a reserve order and protect property.

European nations seem inclined to two things—rebuild war machines and cancel obligations due the United States. If they would quit making costly armaments, they could make headway toward wiping out their obligations. The burden of debt owed by foreign countries will have to be met by home folks if not paid by those who received and used the loans. The United States wants to reduce war preparations, and asks European nations to do likewise. It also wants foreigners to begin digging up what they owe. But they act like the imprudent citizen who buys another automobile before having the first one paid for.

Narrow partisanship is gradually giving way to broad contemplation of men and policies. People are taking public business more seriously than party organizations. They're not so disposed as formerly to condemn a man from all angles merely because he affiliates with an opposing political organization. Time was when one would not associate with another who belonged to a disagreeable political party. One's judgment was good for nothing on any subject if it conflicted on party preference. As in politics, so in religion, people are becoming more liberal. People are more serious about their religion than about church denominations. There was a time when members of another church was not, on that account, considered a social equal. Progress is being made in both political and religious thought. People are becoming more tolerant, emphasizing rather the spirit than the form. Out of the near chaos following the war, this improved state of mind seems reasonably sure to be evolved.

Another Baseball Meeting.
The small attendances at the meeting last Tuesday evening in the interest of baseball for Wayne, had prompted the calling of another meeting for 7:30 o'clock on Friday evening. The meeting was held at the Y. M. C. A. building. Chosen executive chairman, with power to choose a committee, to see the business men about attendance at the next meeting.

Mr. Roy Okblom of Carroll, and Miss Mattie L. Servon, of the latter vicinity, were united in marriage, on Wednesday afternoon, April 5, in Wayne, by Rev. J. H. Peterson. The bridegroom is son of the late Swan Okblom, and was born and raised in Wayne county. Mr. and Mrs. Okblom will make their home on a farm near Carroll.

IT RESTORED HER AFTER ALL ELSE FAILED

Her Whole System Was Built Up by Tanlac and Five Years of Suffering Was Soon Overcome, Declares Little Chicago Woman.

"The way Tanlac has helped me after everything else failed is more than I can understand," declares Edna Johnson, 712 East Chicago Avenue, Chicago, Ill.

"For nearly five years, I had attacks of sick headache and suffered as much as I could to stop my stomach but I just had to stop my stomach and lie down for hours at a time—I often had sharp, like pains in my head and if I stopped over I would get dizzy and nearly fall on my tracks. I got so badly run down and my entire system was so weak that I hardly knew which way to turn for relief.

"Hearing Tanlac praised as often, I decided to try it. After taking that bottle, my stomach has been built up; my headaches are gone; my back never pains me, and I feel so good I enjoy every minute of my life. Tanlac has certainly made me a healthy and happy woman and I can't praise it enough.

Tanalac is sold by leading druggists everywhere. ad 11

Indifference

"The groundhog doesn't care how often his predictions fall—he rests in comfort in his lair, and lets the hide go with the tail." On groundhog day the property man's criteria's shadow does not show. We may expect an azure sky, an end to winter and its snow. And so they welcome Good Spring before the season is on deck, and while they gambol, dance and sing, a blizzard sweeps them in the neck. The groundhog, from his lair, eyes behind the tempest rear and soot, and listens to the wild winds rave, and doesn't seem to care a hoot. And much I envy him his sense: I can't not shoo bad dreams away; I suffer agonies intense, whenever I've pulled a bonhead—play. I'm tortured through the waxy night by recollections of a time when I departed from the night and sprung a carnival of crime. I traded horses now and then when in the glowing flush of youth, and routinely sold a lot man who trusted that I told the truth. I've done a lot of graceless things, but I don't regret any; and in my consciousness there rings a voice that says, "You'll pay up yet!" For me there is no soothing balm, no comfort for my jaded soul; so I admire the groundhog's calm, as he sits gazing from his hole.

Evening

"The young men are explaining great courses, they'll run and I can outspanning, my work nearly done; I'm not a bit angry, I'm just a bit sad; I like not the fogging we know when we're young; the fury and passion, the strivings are gone; in indolent ease, I sit on my feet, I have no profession, I toil at no trade; I watch the procession, the human-parade. I sit in the morning out here by my table, and offer my lament to mankind's fate. "The road you are taking," I tell youths, "is wrong; your bones you'll be breaking in mantraps ere long." I know for I tried it, and now that I'm old I sit here and audit its sorrows unfold. At first it is pleasing and bordered with flowers, and on you are breathing, for a few hours. Alas that you follow that treacherous way! It's promise is hollow, its pleasures decay; oh, turn, I beseech you, for if you persist the bogies will reach you and slay you, I wist." But little they mind me, they vote in a hazy, my years are behind me, and they are before me. All buxant the friskers walk on in the morn; they look at my whiskers and laugh me to scorn. Some think they'll be sitting on I'm seated on worn out by their kicking, or pushing the plot; and they will be shining as sisketh the sun. "We're glad that the trying and striving are done."

The Slayers

The murderers in countless sections, are looking to a happy jail, all hoping that the prison doors will open when their luck prevails. No doubt they think the law is rank that fails them, even for a time, for pulling off some playful prank like murder, or a kindred crime. In cozy cells the slayers sit, and all around them quiet rains; red-headed ladies calmly knit, and gory gents make horsehair chains. They loom around in gilded ease, they labor not, and they smile, and they are glad to be birds as these long since, when justice was no joke. But now there's no such doom as that for those who hang in the gibbet, for the gloomy hangman's growing fat for lack of wholesome exercise. The murderers are borne to jail when first their crime is made—made—made—made—there's some piffle, fat and staid, about the gallows or the chair. And when we look up thoughts away, to other crafts, the rain we cheer, and on the street, see me pleasant day, we meet the killers face to face. They've been expelled or pardoned out, some warden's bunked, some justice died; some entering legal scout has found a loophole, big and wide. And thus our modern justice runs where it's contrived with slayer's ease, they're going now to purchase guns to kill some other delicacies.

The Old Way

When I was young my teeth would ache as though a record they would break. Then to the village dentist's chair in trembling haste I would repair. Some simple tools were on his bench, and a crowbar, a monkey wrench, a pair of pliers and an ax, a hand saw and a bunk of wax. He rectified his appliances to my teeth, and gave "Bp back" and charged four bits and he was through—no scientific curves he kept. Now to the dentist I go, to be relieved of toothache woe. He has diplomas everywhere; he has a silver mounted chair, and instruments of the quart. He talks huxione and jagged things; and an electric-bunk he springs; and X-rays he shows; and he takes away my teeth, and finally he gives me a denture, and he tells his harrangues; he tries out all the little tools indorsed by modern dental schools, and fools around and chews the wax, and finally he pulls the snag. I hand him then a big fat check, and leave his joint a nervous wreck. The old time dentist has a joke. At the end of his job, he says, "The best I'd rather have a blacksmith come and jerk a molar from his gum, than seek the dentist."

Pass First Anniversary

A year ago the Wayne Grocery was launched, and an invitation was issued to Wayne and vicinity to come and take advantage of a new stock and better prices. A review of the twelve months that have gone by, shows a steady growth in patronage, far surpassing our most ardent expectations.

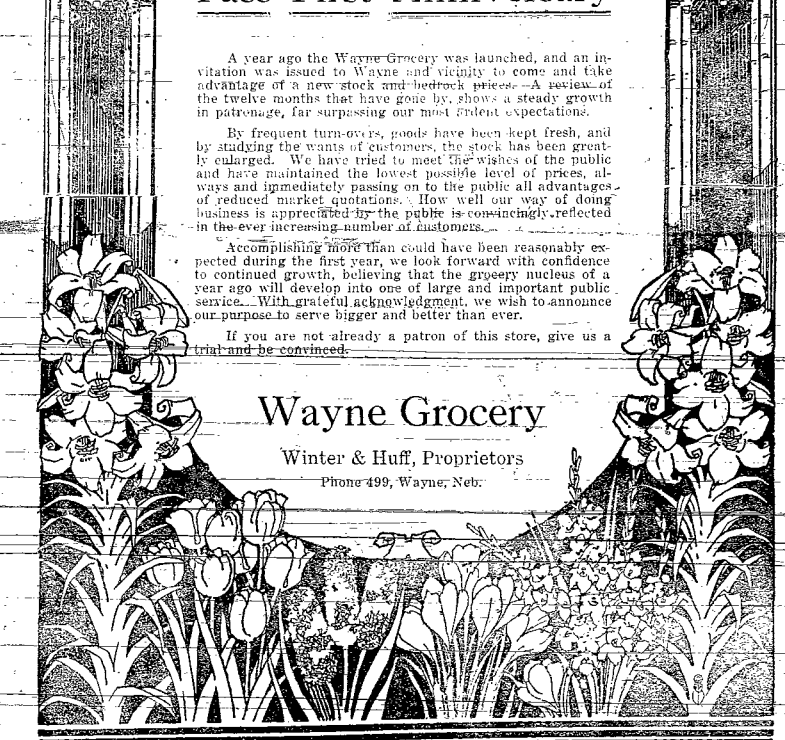

By frequent turn-overs, goods have been kept fresh, and by studying the wants of customers, the stock has been greatly enlarged. We have tried to meet the wishes of the public and have maintained the lowest possible level of prices, always and immediately passing on to the public all advantages of reduced market quotations. How well our way of doing business is appreciated by the public is convincingly reflected in the ever increasing number of customers.

Accomplishing more than could have been reasonably expected during the first year, we look forward with confidence to continued growth, believing that the grocery nucleus of a year ago will develop into one of large and important public service. With grateful acknowledgment, we wish to announce our purpose to serve bigger and better than ever.

If you are not already a patron of this store, give us a trial and be convinced.

Drugs

We buy your drugs in large quantities, in boxes and in cases to cure your ailments we buy your pills and pour them in our faces. We drink brown sodas distilled from buds, stovecooled and water-filled, contain such things as water, sugar, and various things, and variously hope that it will cure the wiles. The doctor bumps through dental swamps and gathers tin-tin tools, bladders, and makes a brew of mottled-ink, for invalids' consuming. The learned men chase to every place, in search of drugs to cure us; they bolt up rock, make pills of chalk, that they may reassure us. The faith and hope we place in dose, no knowledge ever throated; what faith we have in pills and salve, and everything in bottles! The wise men say, "Throw drugs away, and you'll be feeling better than if you drink some bottled ink, or something water and wetter. Eat wholesome food, like oatmeal stewed, go roasting with the chickens, quit chewing pills, and soon your pills will vanish, and the dickens." The learned men speak their wise words leak through lips that spring no folly; but all things same give us a pain and cause us melancholy. We pin our hope on bottled dose, or pills in crates and baskets; we'll drink our drugs from dacks and jugs until we're in our caskets.

The weather cannot make me glum, through torments pour and tempests howl. Whatever climate it may be, I wear a brightly-beaming may, and write a sane and sounding verse, contending that things might be worse. When wild winds blow my hat away, I raise no sheep, I lackaday; I have another hat to wear, and if it goes, I have my hair. And this glad thought I still retain: Somewhere the weather is much worse. ## THE WAYNE HOSPITAL

Reflects Hospitality

A hospital should reflect hospitality. Patients should be made to feel that they are friends of the institution, not strangers, within its walls. This institution strives to create such an atmosphere. All patients are treated as guests in a private home; their smallest wants are met, even before they are expressed; every patient receives the same solicitous care accorded others. Gracious hospitality is the key-note of this institution.

Tilden High School Building Destroyed

Tilden, Neb., April 5.—Fire early this morning destroyed the Tilden high school building with all its contents with a loss of approximately $25,000. Insurance for the amount of $22,000 was carried on the building.

One man, Pat Stanton, Jr., was probably seriously injured in fighting the flames.

The fire was discovered about 2:30 o'clock this morning in the coal bins and is believed to have been caused by spontaneous combustion of the coal. The fire department was on the scene immediately and put up a heroic fight, but was unable to stay the flames in their course until the building had been completely gutted. The north wall was still standing this morning but the south wall had crumpled to the ground.

Was Modern Building. The Tilden high school building was considered to be one of the most modern in this part of the state. It was constructed in 1917 and was a two-story brick structure.

Young Stanton was injured while standing on a ladder handling a piece. As he looked into a window a coal bin burst into flames. The extent of his injuries have not been determined yet. His condition is considered to be rather serious. It is believed that he will recover. This morning he was still in a semi-conscious condition. He is about 22 years old.

The board of education was in session this morning planning to take care of the students until a new building can be erected. All of the Tilden teachers were in the city attending the county institute when the building burned.

of the factories the Deluge.

Philadelphia Public Ledger: Why must an industry as great as the coal industry, so vital to the nation and highly necessary to the country, be run by a few men who have had only a few years of experience back of them, or drifting on steadily closer to big trouble? What is there inherently wrong with the industry as it exists, with the men who are its heads and captains and with the controlling interests of the business?

Can't the board see the reality drift toward government regulation or supervision and possibly nationalization? Can't they understand that it is to follow the same path as the railroads and that over the hill, unless there is a halt and a new dispensation, an interstate coal commission with federal powers as great as those of the interstate commerce commission, is waiting for them and their industry?

Be it understood that, with the exception of a group in the United Mine Workers union, nobody wants government handling of this great private key industry of the country. The operators do not want it, but they act at times as though they were working to get it. The public, after its experience with government operation of railroads, wants none of it. It will put up with much and suffer long rather than demand it.

There is, however, a limit to public endurance and to the national patience. With increasing frequency the nation is being pushed to the limit of that patience. The coal situation and menaces growing out of its fuel supply. The public interest, though it is ignored by miners and operators and sneered at by the per-class conscious journals, is, after all, the big interest. Where there are hundreds of thousands of miners and thousands of coal operators there are tens of millions of coal users, tens of millions who pay tribute through power, light, heat and manufactured articles to the barons of King Coal.

There was a great coal strike in 1894. There have been strikes year by year since. There was a memorable strike in the spring of 1914; and in the autumn of 1919 the miners complacently proposed to freeze the nation to death or submission. The public is sick and weary of the everlasting wrangles, the settlements that do not settle anything, the strikes and suspensions that strip millions of dollars on the national coal bills.

The nation is not certain who is doing the "trimming," but it is certain that it is being trimmed. It does not think coal is costing too much; it knows the price is exorbitant. It has grave suspicions that at times the unions and operators have an unwritten, unspoken, tacit understanding to make the best of the situation for themselves and to the devil with the public.

Suspicious, resentful, sneezed, threatened with freezing, industries menaced and at the end of its patience, the public, that is the government with at no distant day, demand a sweeping change unless the coal industry is warned in time and puts its own house in order. It is because the public is resentful and impatient and its suspicions, it is likely to do its housecleaning and reorganizing with a battleaxe and a bludgeon.

It will be a bad day, of course

for the coal industry when that comes. Railroad operation by Washington was a terrible thing to see and a terrible thing to think of upon. We may and probably will rue the day when we take over the coal mines. Nevertheless, it will come just as regulation came to the railroads and for the same deep-rooted human reasons. The coal operators are waiting the same bluff trial toward their hobbles that the railroads washed. They are not efficient, miners and operators are too greedy and they are not serving the nation as it has a right to be served.

The coal industry is a mighty, sprawling and unorganized giant. Leaving the anthracite fields out of the picture, the remainder of the coal fields of the United States are over developed to a criminal extent. New fields are being opened adding to the troubles of the industry. There are too many men who are trying to make a living and to build up fortunes out of coal mines. Too many coal and promotion companies are flourishing. Let the price go up and you will see a strike throughout the "smoke fields" the operators are looking for a crack to slip through into the business. Open another mine. Open another tries to keep open.

There are too many men who are trying to make a living by digging coal. The struggle between 150,000 and 200,000 miners in America cannot be given steady jobs because there are no steady jobs for them. This leads to demands for five-day weeks and special privileges in the limited periods of annual working days.

The coal industry can wild during the war. Coal fields were tapped that should have been held in reserve for peacetime. Men came from farms and from other cultures to work in the mines, and have stayed there, expecting and demanding jobs through fat years and lean. The result has been too many men on too many mines and a possible maximum production of 250,000,000 tons of coal yearly over and above what we need.

Here is a business that can open mine, recklessly, overman itself criminally and be contented to get its product to the consumer any old way. There might be less trouble in the industry if it could organize its marketing and coal marketing is a headless, footless, handless, inoperative affair. The mine kings and barons pay little attention to it. The business is not thought out, developed and sustained all the way from the mine to the consumer. It is due to the general irritation and the public impatience and helplessness.

Irritation and helplessness—the April 5 business—has raised prices that rise but do not fall and with threats of business disruption and possible human suffering, finally force action to be taken. The mine capital and mine labor will fight they are but parts of a greater whole and that parts cannot be greater than the whole.

The trouble is, or will be, that the present system will not be given a chance to reform or a chance for an life. It will be broken up by mass action just as the railroads were lynched some fifteen years ago and may be again.

Which Paper Doesn't Come? My father says the paper that he reads isn't put up right.

He finds a lot of fault, he does, pe ruse, it at night.

He says there ain't a single thing in it worth while to read.

And that doesn't amount the kind of stuff the people need.

He says it aside and says, it's strictly on the bum.

But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

He reads about the wedding and he snorts like all get out.

He reads the social editor's with a most derisive shout.

He says they make the paper for the women folks alone.

He'll read about the parties and he'll fume and fret and growl.

He says of information it doesn't have a crumb.

But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

He's always first to grab it and he reads it blank, clean, through.

He doesn't miss an item or a word—that is true.

He says they don't know what we want—the "blamed newspaper guys."

I'm going to take a day some time and go and put 'em wise.

Sometimes it seems as though they must be deaf and blind and dumb.

But you ought to hear him holler when the paper doesn't come.

times the unions and operators have an unwritten, unspoken, tacit understanding to make the best of the situation for themselves and to the devil with the public.

Suspicious, resentful, sneezed, threatened with freezing, industries menaced and at the end of its patience, the public, that is the government with at no distant day, demand a sweeping change unless the coal industry is warned in time and puts its own house in order. It is because the public is resentful and impatient and its suspicions, it is likely to do its housecleaning and reorganizing with a battleaxe and a bludgeon.

It will be a bad day, of course

America has in fact as well as in right title and that expediency in name, become a leader of nations, where justice and hope for human along the path of civilization's promiscuity take place of the brutal gross.

Paul Crossland Wins In Oratorical Class

First places in the oratorical, humorous and dramatic sections of the annual Northeast Nebraska declamatory contest held in Wayne Friday evening, were won respectively
by Paul Crossland, Wayne; Wilms
Bradley, South Sioux City; Cita St.
Clair, West Point. The result of the judges' decision follows: Oratorical, first place, Paul Crossland, Wayne;
"Universal Peace," second place, Howard Campbell, Winnebago, "The Unknown Speaker," "An Aspirer," Wilms Bradley, South Sioux City,
"An Aspirer," Diahwasher," second place, Russell Lindskog, Pilger, "Old Skjansen's First Touchdown," Dramatic, first place, Cita St. Clair, West Point, Madame X," second place, Ida Lyman, Wakefield, "The Daughter of the South," it is interesting to note that Paul is upholding the reputation of the Crossland family in the oratorical business, his brothers having been winners in similar contests while attending school here. A share of credit for Paul's victory goes to Mrs.
Albis Parhad, principal of the high school, who was his coach.

Debaters Chosen For Wayne-Chatron Meet

Earl Schroer, Miss Leila Mitchell, Donald Miller and Howard McEach-ern will represent the Wayne State Teachers' College in the debating section of the annual literary contest with Chatron next Normal, according to the decision of the judges at the preliminary debate, Thursday evening. The two first-named will take part in the debate here, and the last-named will go to Chatron. The question for debate was "Resolved:
That the Principle of the Closed Shop
is Justifiable."

School Children Run Rampant on Parkings

Complaint is made that children going to and coming from school thoughtlessly tramp the numerous newly made parkings in which grass seed has been sown. A good deal of effort and expense have been devoted to fixing up the town's terraces since the paving was completed and the improvements should be given a chance to grow grass and become beautiful. Parents and teachers ought to advise the children to follow the sidewalks, and when they want to play select ground that can not be injured by an army of rambun-tious feet.

Miniature Pioneer Home is on Display

A miniature log cabin, home with surroundings in imitation of pioneer days, makes an attractive window display, this week, for the Hixcox hardware store. F. D. Breed is the designer and maker of the willow log cabin, with the rustic bench at its doorway, the rail fence, surrounding the yard, the old-fashioned well, with its time-honored bucket and watering trough. It will be remembered that Mr. Breed made the miniature locumotive and coal car for the Hixcox window at the Christmas season.

Mrs. August Brune of the Winside vicinity, has purchased from A. M.

few months.

IS YOUR BARN SAPPING YOUR PROFITS?

Modern manufacturers pay large salaries to efficiency experts, whose duty is to keep their eyes open for needless expenses and to stop the leakage of profits. On the farm you must be your own efficiency expert. A leaky roof may ruin your hay lot. A broken down stall can injure your horses. A rotten, worn-out floor may breed disease or break an animal's leg. A cold wind-swept barn is a bad place to house cattle. When figuring up your profit and loss for the year you will find these little things are sapping your profits. Look over your farm buildings, fences and stock and see if you aren't letting profits leak through which a little lumber and labor would stop. Then tell us what you want to do to stop this leakage, and we may be able to offer some suggestions. We will tell you what the materials for the repairs will cost. Some rainy-day when it is too wet to work in the fields and the help is idle, you can set to work repairing your barn and other buildings.

Come in and talk it over now.

Agriculture Notes

Labor Prices Decreasing.
Labor prices for road work still continue gradually to decline, according to figures collected by the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture from road jobs in all parts of the country. Prices paid for common labor in February decreased slightly more than they have below those paid in January, the average prices for the whole country being 29 and 28 cents an hour, respectively, in the two months. Prices paid for skilled labor also showed a general decline.

In February the price of common labor ranged from 15 to 29 cents an hour in the southern states, 23 to 30 cents an hour in the middle western states, and around 35 cents an hour in the Pacific states. The prices of teams without drivers ranged from 24 to 42 cents an hour.

Cucumber Disease.
Investigations of the cucumber mosaic disease made during the winter show that it is carried over by the common perennial milkweed, as well as the wild cucumber. Both, therefore, according to the United States department of agriculture, are a menace to the growing cucumbers, muskmelons, and related vine crops.

The eradication of the wild cucumber for a considerable area around cultivated cucumbers has given encouraging results in controlling mosaic, and it is believed that the combined eradication of wild cucumber and milkweed may prove a practical method of control.

Another step looking toward the control of cucumber mosaic was taken recently through the action of the Seed Trade Association at its meeting held in St. Louis, when, at the request of the United States department of agriculture, it agreed to withdraw wild cucumber seed from the trade.

Continuing the investigations show that the rapidity and severity of the development of cucumber mosaic are related to soil and air conditions. A temperature of 50 degrees F. (30 degrees C.) favors infection and the rapid development of the disease, while temperatures below 68 degrees F. (20 degrees C.) retard or entirely prevent its appearance.

Cucumber mosaic is serious and widespread in the large pickle-growing areas of the middle west, as well as other localities, and the discovery of methods for reducing its incidence is therefore a distinct contribution to the progress of the industry. The department plans to purchase test the eradication methods before making general recommendations.

Data on Road Building.
A great deal of useful data on highway construction are soon to be made available to all persons connected with highway development by the bureau of public roads, United States department of agriculture. "In its supervision of large appropriations by congress for Federal aid road construction, the bureau has assembled complete records of contract prices for all types of roads in all sections of the country since 1916. In addition, engineers of the bureau operating in each of the forty-eight states report monthly on labor and material used on jobs inspected by them."

To put this information in the most usable form statistical machinery has been installed and the work so arranged that a small force can make available a great variety of information at a small percentage of the cost of such work when done by hand. The data assembled will consist of monthly reports on the status of Federal aid work, prices paid for labor and contractors' bids for new work in all sections of the country. From time to time reports covering a large volume of work will be made on costs of various types of surfacing and grading, percentages of various types of roads built, proportion of total cost which goes into grading, surfacing and other items of construction together with other information for which there may be need.

As an example of what can be done: The question was recently asked as to what widths of roads were constructed on 7,480 miles of completed Federal aid road; cards were fed into a machine and, in about two hours the information was available, giving widths at intervals of two feet and subdivided for the various sections of the country.

Business.
Sioux City, Iowa. Generally the nation's wholesale and retail trade is slower than usually marks the approach of Easter, the retarded movement being due to a somewhat belated spring. Weather conditions always may be counted on to affect the buying public, and this season there is no exception to the rule, particularly when caution is still a part of the individual's plan of economic protection. Buying is healthier than it was two or three months ago, but it is not as quick as was expected. The situation, however, is regarded as merely temporary and the responsibility for its near bright spot on the season. Basically, business is somewhat improved, iron and steel, railroad returns, building construction, employment conditions and fi-

BROOKLYN MINISTER HEALS SICK

Spiritual perception which makes possible physical healings seem to be developed with more frequent regularity of late years, as indicated by newspaper reports in world affairs. The most recent is by Rev. Charles H. Jones of St. Paul's Episcopal Church in Brooklyn, N. Y., whose cures by simply laying on the hands has aroused considerable attention throughout the East.

ance all reflecting its truth in unmistakable ways. It should be remembered, at the same time, that the process will continue to be slow and, therefore, more thorough.

Of intense interest has been the work of the senate within the week, the ratification of all the remaining treaties resulting from the armistice conference has created a feeling of satisfaction throughout the country. It is a sure sign in the restoration of confidence in the nation's economic success. The people now see for the first time that the government can and will save hundreds of millions of dollars because of the arms conference treaties. This saving, of course, means that the taxpayers will be enabled to keep the possession and to use the funds for the expansion of industrial life and activity. Knowledge of the fact that taxation will be prevented from going higher than it is and probably will be reduced is bound to have a desirable effect upon the public mind, and that will help business.

Congress is now expected to do something definite in regard to the tariff. The industrial leaders are interested in that development step much of their program for the future must await the announcement of the schedule. The "twenty-two" reduction plan, stubbornly opposed by the mercantile interests of the country, is expected to go through, but the determined opposition will be forced to the legislative floor in an effort to thwart it and thus enable business to proceed with fewer restrictions. That matter has not yet been settled as between members of congress themselves, and an extended debate on the question impends. The coal strike has been launched, but it is too early to predict the effect of the movement on business. The government is confident that enough fuel is on hand to meet the individual and industrial needs for some three months, within which time it is hoped the altercation between the miners and the operators will be settled. The strike creates one very unpleasant situation: unemployment is increased by about 600,000 men, but for some time this will not be felt as a distressing condition. The miners are supposed to be able to finance their needs for a considerable period so that no immediate suffering is threatened by the voluntary illness.

Safe Milk Supply Insured For Towns

Milk inspection is of prime necessity in most of the larger cities. Laboratories are maintained where bacteria counts and chemical analyses are frequently made on samples drawn from routes of delivery wagons, stores, and restaurants. But the small cities and towns that can not afford the expense of a tester and laboratory find it hard to give proper supervision to their milk supplies.

The United States department of agriculture suggests that a practical way for such cities and towns to insure a safe milk supply is through the cooperation of two or more adjacent towns in hiring a milk inspector and maintaining a laboratory. The cost of supervising such a plan may be prorated among the different towns on the basis of population without the expense being burdensome to any one of them. State and federal authorities are always willing to cooperate in work of this sort.

This plan of town co-operation in milk and dairy inspection has been carried out in different parts of the country, probably the most conspicuous example being the group of towns in northern New Jersey known as "The Orange" in that the plan has been in effect for a number of years with results that have been very satisfactory to all concerned.

Public Not Blamed.
Minneapolis Journal: The soft coal fields present a condition of enormous waste, overproduction and mismanagement that must be remedied highly inefficient by any efficiency expert or industrial engineer. It is the thoughtful opinion of this branch of the industry needs a careful checking up and a thorough overhauling. The public is not without responsibility in the matter. It has done little or nothing to foresee its needs or to distribute its demand for fuel. It should do its part to catch up on this important problem. Bad conditions, accumulating through years and aggravated by indifference and negligence, will only grow worse and breed more strikers, unless fundamental causes are looked into and remedied.

The Newer Gospel.
Philadelphia North American: Take the thought of socialism, what you shall eat and what you shall drink, and where-with you shall be clothed, for all these things will be regulated by statute.

Election is Coming.
Minneapolis Journal: The republican party has the bonus dilemma by the horns, and the democratic party has the tail bob. Neither dares let go now.

Two Questions.
Lincoln Journal: It will greatly simplify one of our national problems if we bear in mind the complete distinction between the soldier bonus question and the taxation question. The two subjects are not related. The question of how much money we shall pay in salary to the president is one thing. The question of the sort of taxation by which we shall raise the money is an entirely different thing. A Pennsylvanian may propose to raise the money by a tax-in steel. The Nebraska who oppose that method is not thereby opposing a salary for the president. The question has nothing to do with the presidency. The bonus bill which the house of representatives has passed included both subjects. The members were deprived by their special rule of the opportunity which should have taken of treating the two subjects separately. There should have been a vote on the merits of the soldier's claim for adjusted compensation. That was one thing. Then the question of the method of raising money or representatives has passed favorable to the payment, should have been considered by itself as separate and distinct question which it is.

HERRICK HIGH GRADE REFRIGERATORS

Herrick Five-Point Insulation

No refrigerator is better than its insulation. Defective insulation wastes ice and interferes with the efficiency of the refrigerator just as much as defective cylinders waste gasoline and prevent perfect operation of your automobile.

Herrick Five-Point Insulation Offers You Five Important Advantages

- It is positively air-tight and weather proof.
- It makes food and ice last longer.
- It is the most successful non-conductor of heat and cold.
- It neither admits nor allows animal life to exist in it.
- It cannot decay or mildew, or become affected by age.

Herrick refrigerators are all insulated with mineral wool—glass heated to the melting-point and then blown into fluffy or wooly particles. The heat required to make the mineral wool kills all the foreign matter, and as there is no food value in it there is no attraction for insects. Compare this feature with the ordinary insulating materials such as hair, fibre, and other vegetable products such as are used in the ordinary refrigerators. Buy a HERRICK.

Male Chorus Will Give Concert.
The Wennerberg Male Chorus of Augustana college, Rock Island, Ill. is making its nineteenth annual concert tour. The chorus and its soloists will appear in the Salem Lutheran church next Saturday evening at 8 o'clock. The Wennerberg ranks as one of the foremost male choruses of the country. For almost a quarter of a century, through its annual concert tours, it has sung its way into the hearts of music lovers from the Rockies to the Atlantic sea board.

In the quality of music and interpretation the Wennerberg Chorus has established a precedent in the realm of male chorus singing. It sings more than merely entertain; it brings to its audience an inspiring message in song.

The chorus is assisted by Mrs. Agnes I. Wallis as accompanist. Mrs. Wallis is endowed with an unusual understanding of the qualifications for accompanist work. She was a scholarship student at the National Conservatory of Music in New York City, doing work under Arthur Russell and Max Spicker.

Miss Gerda Seedoff of Rockford, Illinois, is soprano soloist. Possessed of rare natural ability, her training has enabled her to develop a voice of surpassing beauty and excellence. Her pleasing personality, coupled with her masterful interpretation and expression, greatly enhances her singing.

Ralph Ostrom, cornet soloist, although only thirteen years of age, has already gained a wide reputation. Several of the leading cornet instructors of the country have predicted for him a very brilliant career. Hear him at the Salem Lutheran church next Saturday evening.

Monday, Rev. R. N. Pagan addressed the high school. He used as his topic, "The Great Mystery of Life," and told of our spiritual, physical and mental life and how each was not a distinct part, but rather merged into each other. He remarked that a person's character is the merging of the three lines into one as common ground.

China, favored the high school with a splendid address. Rev. R. N. Pagan read the bible lesson in English while Dr. Hollister read the same in Chinese. His talk was very interesting, telling of life in China, Chinese homes, school language, and great separations.

The struggle for supremacy in the furniture company lies between Ted, the rightful heir, and the villain, Stone. Molly Macklin, the housekeeper, helps Ted. Ted does not return to sign the register and Molly and Stone find another man to take his place. The lawyer, Jim Hyker, says he is acquainted with the real Ted, and things are very complicated until the lawyer disappears and all is well.

Act II. Miss Loganberry, an old maid, has been in love with Ted for seven years and just falls in love with the young heir, Diana Garwood. A widow from Honolulu appears, and she also owns shares in the furniture company. That night a robber appears and takes the widow's bonds.

Act III. All turns out well. A dead old man appears, the widow from Honolulu turns out to be the lawyer's ex-wife. The real Ted turns up, Stone is routed, and Molly and Stone find the road to happiness together. Miss Dortha Ebbell has been coaching the play.
