Vigorous and even explosive speech is not impossible without profanity, but speech of that kind requires some acquaintance with the resources of the English language. One who is always ready to assist and has no objection to being suspected on his own ugly inclinations.

The big reception given Charles H. Randall of Republican nomination for governor, by his home town Monday evening, shows the high regard of those who know him best. His solid and enthusiastic support of home people will be a powerful impetus to his triumph in November. Mr. Randall's popularity will grow as the best estimate spreads and acquaintance ripens.

Young man, "don't write a letter to your best girl or any other girl. If you have something burning to be said, don't put it in writing. If you do, it is liable to give and haunt you. If the divine afflatus attacks you and you feel like getting out some silted and sepulchral phlegm of great emotion, just go to the telephone and tell her how you feel. You will reference less as you grow older and more seasoned. The burdens of later life are heavy enough without having the literary tribulations of adolescence to come along and nag you.

Northwest Nebraska may become rich in oil development. There is no law against it. There is no reason why other states should have a monopoly on the oil business to the exclusion of this section. If it is decided this country, it is needed by the world and ought to be produced. We understand an organization at Wellford is pursuing a prospect at that place. A similar enterprise is contemplated looking to development of an oil discovery on the Robinson farm just northeast of Wayne. Other suspicious springs in this neighborhood are reported. Oil deposits thus appear anxious to be discovered.

RELIGION AND INDUSTRY.
 The church is struggling and arose from inertia and knit together its broken fabrics, while the industrial world is disturbed by bitter strife between those who should be friends instead of enemies. Practical Christianity, founded on the rock of truth over nineteen centuries ago, but strangely lost in a labyrinth of conflicting doctrines and non-essential dogmas, may be the solution. The religion of the future, to be constructive and useful, must more heavily breathe the spirit of the Nazarene, and prepare men's souls to get along well together here, as well as prepare them for the infinite hereafter. The church must be reenergized to the cause of human uplift. It must leaven with love the hearts of contending people and lead them to understand and co-operate.

Employers hold too much aloof from those who are working for them. Employees are denied the personal touch which engenders interest and mutual helpfulness. Neither group knows the other. Neither understands the problems and perplexities of the other. Over a widening abyss their diligences are fought. This employer does not try to find out the trials that beset the pathway of his helper. The employee seems to feel he must be the cause of all troubles befalling the source of his paycheck. Those who capitalize an enterprise assuming all responsibility and risk and receive its return operating coal and dividends, travel in one direction, forgetful of life's obstacles to be overcome by the indispensable working force of wage-earners, ignorant of and therefore indifferent to the vexatious burdens of employers or employing institutions, travel in quite another direction, nursing and often magnifying grievances and cultivating ill will rather than good feeling. What appears to be the simplest things in life are often the greatest. No one is so powerful nor is any one so unimportant that he is not stimulated by happy faces, encouraging words and kindly interest.

Here is where the church, stripped of materialistic trappings and restored to spiritual fundamentals, may serve. It may inaugurate industrial groups—leaders and followers alike—with the revived spirit of original Christianity. Then employer and employee would see each other's viewpoint, hateful asperities would yield to the warmth of friendly contact and clarified understanding and obstructive competitiveness would give way to mutual support of an industry on which both depend. Then earnings on the one hand and wages on the other would reach fair and just levels.

Out of the crucible of present industrial conflicts, is it too idealistic to expect a new heat for capital and labor, touched, softened, burnished and exalted by a rebirth of Christian principles?

THE FARMER COMES BACK.
 The farmer of the corn belt has had many vicissitudes, many ups and downs, but he never fails to come back with undaunted courage. The spirit of the soldier of the frontier, of the pioneer who braved untold privations to tame raw prairies and make them productive, is reflected in his hardy and resourceful descendants. The first settlers who ventured into the central west, had all kinds of hardships to meet. They had innumerable obstacles to surmount. There were no forests, no modern means of transportation, no convenient markets. Unbroken areas invited only toil, perseverance and self-reliance. Primitive implements provided with grasshoppers, chin bugs, cutworms and thistles, and ran the gamut of lightning, hail, hurricane, drought, insectal and frost attacks, and quantalizers. By exercise of unflagging energy and iron will, the landscape has been changed. Well cultivated farms, with hedges, protected and beautified by groves and hedges, have altered the aspect of the once desolate prairies. Cradled in pioneer hardships, accustomed to meeting and overcoming difficulties, it may be said with truth that conquering blood courses through the veins of the middle-west farmer. He has had many ill fortunes, but he has never failed to come back with undaunted courage, his character and invincible courage. He is coming back now after a period of depressed values. The reaction from high prices has produced a reaction with a heavy hand on every farming community. When sudden deflation paralyzed markets, sending farm prices to the bottom, and when many other people were not ready for the crash. Then the blood of antecedents counted. The farmer renewed his hold on the land, and he went down to the task ahead. He did not lose heart or relax effort. He accepted the inevitable like a good sport. He kept up production, he kept the brakes on expenditures and re-organized the future with confidence. He now sees a large rift in the clouds that is likely to bring a bright and profitable agriculture—the backbone of the country—is fast being restored.

The corn-belt farmer has again defeated serious obstacles, and is coming back stronger than ever. His fruition is well earned. To the telephone, electric plant, automobile, truck and tractor will be added the airplane and broadcasting set. His advantage contrasts sharply with the hardships suffered by the pioneer father. The courage and industry which he inherited and which he preserves, trench him with the words of wonderful growth, achievement and comfort. The resolute blood of the pioneer has told.

Death of Dr. Bell.
 Alexander Graham Bell, inventor of the telephone, died the morning of August 2, at his summer home at Halescott, Nova Scotia. Dr. Bell was born in Edinburgh, Scotland, March 3, 1847. He received his education at Edinburgh high school and at the University of London. He came with his father to Canada in 1870 and two years later moved to Boston. He became first a teacher of deaf mutes, and later professor of vocal physiology in the University of Boston. In 1867 he began the study of voice transmission by electric currents, and after nine years of research and experiment, he invented the telephone in 1876. The American Bell Telephone Company was organized in 1877 and in the following year the first telephone exchange under Dr. Bell's patent was established. By 1879 the new method of communication had become firmly established as a business and social necessity and since that time has gone into use in all parts of the world, until today there are more than 19,000,000 telephones in use throughout the world, 15,000,000 of them or about two-thirds of the world's telephones, being in the United States. Immediately after the death of Dr. Bell, the following telegram was sent to the employees of the Northwestern Bell Telephone Company and Associated Companies of the Bell System by Harry C. Sawyer, President of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company, company known as the "parent company" of the System. "In behalf of all the men and women of the Telephone System which bears his name we extend our sincere sympathy and expressions of respect in the passing of Dr. Bell. History will record the inestimable value of his services to mankind, but we who are carrying on the telephone art find ourselves particularly appreciative of his genius."

Arrangements were made to keep the flags on all buildings of Associated Companies of the Bell System at half mast until after the funeral. As a mark of respect to Alexander Graham Bell all telephone service suspended operation for the (1) minute from 8:25 p. m. Central Time, August 4, 1922. This suspension

A Popular-Priced Cord Tire Without a Rival

The new Goodyear Cross-Rib Tread Cord Tire is built with genuine high-grade long-staple cotton as a foundation. It is liberally over-size—the 4½-inch tire, for example, measuring nearly 5 inches.

The deep, clean-cut, cog-like pattern of its tread affords excellent traction even in snow and mud, engaging the road like a cogwheel.

The scientific distribution of rubber in this tread—the wide center rib and the semi-flat contour—gives a thick, broad surface that is exceedingly slow to wear.

This new tire is a genuine Goodyear through and through—in design, in material, in construction.

If costs less to buy than the net price you are asked to pay for many "long discount" tires of unknown reputation and value. Why be satisfied with less than this efficient tire can give—why take a chance on an unknown make?

Your Visit to Christy Bros. Fouraring Wild Animal Exposition.

Patrons' attention and evening August 11, will not be complete without a tour of the colossal sawquerry. Even though you are not a lover and admirer of blooded stock, it is claimed you will find an hour of genuine pleasure and much to interest you inspecting the beautiful horses and ponies. For the last year agents have been in different parts of the world making purchases for this department, with the result that today Christy Brothers possess one of the largest, most varied and costliest collection of representative members of the equine family which wealth can procure, and it is doubtful if anywhere near the like has ever been exhibited before by any traveling show. There are powerful, blocky Normans; sturdy western and Canadian drafts; coquettish Arabian stallions; English bred long distance jumpers; fleet footed Kentucky runners; wild spreading Roman chariot flyers; Irish Sheldons; Welch and native ponies; and other high grade specimens of earth's finest horse flesh. Ladies and children are particularly invited to visit the horse fair, which all may safely do without except an unimpaired and courteous attendants are always present to look after the welfare of the callers. Every child visiting the afternoon performance will be given a free pony or elephant ride; special attendants to care for the kiddies. All

UNCLE WALT
 The Poet Philosopher.

Bedtime Story.

"Oh, granddad, are we hit the hay, tell us a tale," said little Jay. And Peterkin and Abigail insisted that you tell a tale. "Tonight," I said, "you had a trip in my new car, and saw it zip at speed along the sea, until a speedy cop climbed on me. But you so used to wondrous things, you caloused modern dicks, by jings, the finest car that ever was can't move you to a mild applause. When I was young, aged six or five, my granddad took me for a drive; my doubtless hoped I might indorse the amble he called a horse; but I was a little ungratefully beast, and had fur-shawling legs, at least; it had no place for oil and gas, but burned up gas and heavy and warm; and when I was in, it might as well, and it grew rather peeved thereat, and kicked a wheel through granddad's knee. Now, it's all its pep and power, and took us seven miles an hour." "It's seventy no doubt you mean," said Peterkin. "You mean," I said, "I was an mile-an-hour, by gum; we thought that we were going some; and granddad, he looked down at me, and he looked up to him in glee. Now, it's a speed I heard him call—'Your story is no good at all,'" said Peterkin and little Jay; "we don't believe a word you say; you mean might drive a horse, indeed, but who would whip a word of speed when hitting up a gink-a-pink?" "Well, my dear little Jay."

Arctic Regions.

There's always those far famed explorers preparing for an arctic trip, where climate is a ring-tailed rascal, and forty kinds of blizzards zip. Oh, dangers are these men who have us; and I applaud them as they go, although I have a certain graveness that all they'll ever find is snow. I hand a wreath to every hero who hooks his dachshunds to a sled and travels to the land of zero, to wear a map in green and red. I think of tired explorers reeling exhausted, on their way, and I can't help the foolish feeling that they're a little being. The north is full of frozen corse which serve no purpose good or wise, while by will feed our helpful horses, and stay warm, which man likes. I think if scientists impassioned would leave the wild wastes unexplored, and haul him in, in stoves, let's fashion a pair of they'd do more for their bed and board. We need strong men to harvest squashes, and it is sad to see them go to share an ice cold cup of fashion a constant heaped with useless snow. We need good men to fix our lizzies, for which we'd pay a sixty price; and yet the daff explorer busies himself with dreams of endless ice.

Be Patient.

Last evening, I drove my car along the thoroughfare, a blue bow with frightful jar, at which I lure my kin. To me it is a punishment to change a rubber tire for me, a wide and portly get, I fluently nip. And so when I had stopped the kin, and it had ceased to choo, I roundly started in to cues as "Banders troopers do." "Be patient," said my stately aunt, who on the back snags; it hunko we trust to hear you rant and see you smash your hat. Just wait till some one comes along and sees your damaged cart, some youngster, in his hair and strong, with kindness in his heart. He'll note that you are too obese to play an iron tool, that when you toll the bell, you are then withdrawn, and play an anarchistic game. The law prohibits stealing hens, and though this fills my soul with woe, no longer to my neighbors' hens. I wish to see at midnight, the law prescribes the—'Demon—Rum, and though my thirst is truly great, I make an honest job of my chum, but seek the hydrant near my gate. But us obey the law, my friends, in all its curves and hooks and crooks; and if the last ordinance ends, it's ours to wipe it off the books.

The Bible as Literature.

J. P. Perry, of the Council Bluffs Nonpartisan: The clergymen of this city—both Catholic and Protestant—agreed recently to co-operate in an effort to inaugurate a series of lectures on the Bible. The move is most timely, for in spite of our modern schools and Sunday schools, the present generation of children know very little about the Bible. Nor can it be said that the older generation know very much about sacred literature. My aunt, she wears 'Eligah's' rubber, her visions—'all come true, and soon arrived a young named Job, who made things good as he went. My aunt, she wears 'Eligah's' rubber, her visions—'all come true, and soon arrived a young named Job, who made things good as he went.

The Way We Think.

"Life is full of grief and trouble," said the man who seldom grins; every tribulation's double, every joy is all its pep and power, and took us seven miles an hour." "It's seventy no doubt you mean," said Peterkin. "You mean," I said, "I was an mile-an-hour, by gum; we thought that we were going some; and granddad, he looked down at me, and he looked up to him in glee. Now, it's a speed I heard him call—'Your story is no good at all,'" said Peterkin and little Jay; "we don't believe a word you say; you mean might drive a horse, indeed, but who would whip a word of speed when hitting up a gink-a-pink?" "Well, my dear little Jay."

The Croakers.

I'm weary of people complaining, I'm tired of the briny they shed; they come to me, and when it's raining, and say that they wish they were dead. They come when the sun is dispensing the warmth that is vital and sweet, and say that the corn is coming to shrivel and die in the wind. They come when the winter is spreading its radiant mantle of snow, and they say, 'I wish I were dead.' It rounds out their burden of woe. They come when the gentle caressings of spring should get everyone gay, but they have forgotten their sittings, it's always a grouch they display. They come when kind Providence chooses to talk of their acts and their business; their corns and their bunions and woe. So more like a hermit I'm, for I find in being in my hat, for visitors always are fretting, and fumbling and wringing their hair. Sometimes there's a caller who glee, for that reason, the work attempted should be very broad, and once a capable teacher is secured—or teachers there should be commensurate preparation for the modern child—along with his so called secular education, certainly needs to have some understanding of the classic Bible.

though from a hose, over me. I weep and think and I couple him, and tell him his presence is sweet, and hope that good fortune may chase him all over the world and repeat. To many have I read the breaking stories, too many shed tears in a flood; this world in their eyes has no glories, they can't see the roses for mud.

The Law. I don't indorse that traffic law which holds me down to thirty miles. It makes my eyes and ears, and from my nap removes the smiles. I'd like to send my old tin-bus like streaks of lightning through the town, but law is sacred to the cuss who would enjoy a fair renown. And so I derive my creaking within the limits law prescribes, though I am dubbed an also-ran by all the whizzing speedster tribes. My face is always sad and dour when to the road my bus takes; I'd like to ninety miles an hour, but thirty versus is all I make. For if we break through any law because we do not like the same, or for virtue's sake, then withdrawal, and play an anarchistic game. The law prohibits stealing hens, and though this fills my soul with woe, no longer to my neighbors' hens. I wish to see at midnight, the law prescribes the—'Demon—Rum, and though my thirst is truly great, I make an honest job of my chum, but seek the hydrant near my gate. But us obey the law, my friends, in all its curves and hooks and crooks; and if the last ordinance ends, it's ours to wipe it off the books.

No Question of Patriotism. Shon Fair Press President Harding is to be commended for his recent attitude in holding that the railroad strike is purely an economic question and no question of patriotism or lack of patriotism is involved in the issue. Unpatriotic acts call for force on the part of the government, while questions of an economic nature call for the conference table.

Theobald went to Chicago where they will visit two weeks and will purchase their fall stock of goods. L. J. Hughes of Carroll, says the corn in that vicinity is in excellent condition. He says many ears are seven feet high on the slopes. Wayne was well represented at the annual M. W. A. picnic held at Laurel. Officers elected for the ensuing year were: secretary, F. M. McCarthy; secretary, P. H. Kohl; treasurer, E. R. Gurney. Mayor Levy invited the members to hold their next meeting at Wayne and the vote fairly doing so. The eleventh annual commencement of the Nebraska Normal College is being held this week. Rev. P. N. White of Sioux City, delivers the baccalaureate address. Ella Grier, Claude Wright, M. H. Chapin of Winslow, started with his company for North Dakota. W. I. Lowry was the lieutenant. Privates who went were: Earl Johnson, M. Kelly and Donald Dysert. He was sick all night but this morning was better and able to be out. The president continues slowly and surely to get the better of his swarms. That he will recover there can now be heard. On Tuesday Jeremy Smith performed the marriage ceremony for C. R. S. and Miss Melissa Bell, both of this place. One of our business men states that according to his experience lately, it takes about four tons of freight from Sioux City to this place over the railroad, and he, like many others, considers such slackness an imposition on those who patronize the road. Do the political pots of the county commence boiling yet? If they do the bubbling is very slight. We saw very slight, because not over twelve candidates for each office have thus far been mentioned. We believe there will be numerous tickets in the field this fall. The board of trustees intend to enforce the order relative to cattle running at large in the streets. The marshal will build a pound in which they will imprison all stray cattle. The fact that it is now so late in the fall and destroy gardens in the way that has been done, and the trustees propose to put a good one. Lots in Sioux City are booming up very high. Thus, as appears from the Sioux City Journal, a gentleman last week bought a lot on Fourth street for $2,000, on the bluff a residence lot for $700, and other lots ranging from $200 to $2,000 were sold readily. Sioux City is now on its high wave of prosperity and it would not be wonderful if that town within a year would have 15,000 in. From the fact that it is now very far behind that figure. Yesterday was by all odds the hottest day of the season here, the thermometer ranging way up in the hundreds a great part of the day, and standing at 108 in the shade for some time in the afternoon. Not a breeze was stirring during the whole day. About twelve o'clock last night a breath of air from the west was perceptible, which steadily increased till morning, and today a nice invigorating breeze cooled the atmosphere and the people suffering humanity rest from the heated term. Feeder Makes Good. "Cattle cannot be expected to repeat the big profits they have given us this season, but the business ought to pay for next winter's stock," says a dealer of Bloomfield, who had cattle on Wednesday's market. "These last three seasons have shown the dealer that the live stock business, ranging from big losses to big profits. Neither can be expected usually, for in the long run the business is a steady one. It is a sure, handy market for crops, and the fertility that is returned to the land. The stock that was hauled to the elevator last fall hardly paid for the axle grease used on the wagons, but by feeding it to the stock it has made good money. I have found that it always pays to feed, however, and can see no future for the grain farmer, but the eventual ruin of his land." According to S. Hupp, another Bloomfield stockman who had cattle here, crop conditions this year are very satisfactory, and there is every indication of another bumper yield of corn. Oats, however, is poor. He says the best corn is a very good one, many longed cattle to be marketed from that section. They are mostly yearlings. Mr. Ziegler's experience in the cattle business this year was one of the most profitable and satisfactory he ever had, he reports. Last winter he bought two loads of stock bulls here at $3.30, their average weight when taken out in December being 1025 pounds. He marketed them at $4.50, some of them here, and about a month later deborned them. They ran in stinks all this time, and did not get into the feed lot until about the first of February. Yesterday he marketed twenty-one of the stags at $8.15 and they averaged 1,265 pounds, giving him a net profit of 100 percent margins returned thus far this year. Mr. Hupp also made a very satisfactory profit on his bats, which were mixed yearlings. When bought here last December as calves they averaged 300 pounds and cost $1.60, and yesterday they sold at $1.00. "For the poor start these calves made, they have done fine," he declares. "When I first got them I thought they had shipping fever and I had to vaccinate them for that. Then as soon as they began to pick up a little they were vaccinated for blackleg, and it set them back so they began to be two months before they began to gain noticeably." Farmer Becomes Machinist. Minneapolis Journal: The American farmer is more and more becoming a business man of brain power and brawn muscle. It is a job of science and skill. It is a profession of thought and study. From the hoe farmer to the tractor farmer is not a great stretch of years, but it signifies a big change in method. The farms of Minnesota show it. It is reflected in their well kept homes, their club of all sorts and even in dress and manners. The farmer is developing intellectually, and machinery has stimulated him along that course. WELFARE OF THE PEOPLE

Editor: Rev. M. A. Matthews is a Presbyterian Minister in the First Church at Seattle, Wash. The Presbyterian Church has been one of the greatest forces for liberty, education, and evangelism in America has ever had. I think it is one of the greatest forces for modern representative government. I think America owes much of her government to the Presbyterian Church. She has been one of the greatest forces for the greatest examples and most powerful defenders in the old days of the Presbyterian church's adherence to doctrines and principles, added to the strength, character, and integrity of American citizenship. In these latter days, it seems to me she has come upon perilous times. FIRST - The Presbyterian Church commits a folly and sin if she permits infidelity here. She who deny the duty of Christ and the infidelity of the Bible to stay in her ranks and to obey her and place-hunters who constantly devise schemes and plans and organizations to increase their power, patronage and patrimony. They live and work exclusively that they may subsist upon such efforts. THIRD - The Presbyterian Church commits a folly when it permits her enemies to begin to build machinery and centralize her government. thereby detracting from her power. I don't believe Presbyterians will submit to centralized power nor to domination by agents and machines. They crushed that kind of power once. I hope they will crush it again. It must be crushed in governments and it must be crushed in the church. The Presbyterian Church should return to the sovereignty and power and supremacy of her Presbyterian government and to the control by her presbyteries. Hear my plea! Awake, grand old Church of liberty, righteousness and evangelism.

"Whoop! Whoop! Hee! Hee! Hee! What if real Indians got some of these good Kellogg's Corn Flakes? They wouldn't let us fellows have any at all! Hurry up, they might come in any minute!"

Change your diet today! make it Kellogg's CORN FLAKES

Every day this summer more and more men, women and children are cutting down on the heavy, indigestible foods and turning to a lighter diet for health's sake. They are getting away from that uncomfortable heaviness and sluggishness and they find they can think and work and play better and get more enjoyment out of the hot days. Kellogg's Corn Flakes are ideal for breakfast, for lunch, for any meal or between-times nibbles because they are so easy to digest. With cold milk, Kellogg's are wonderfully delicious. Nothing can be better for the children than Kellogg's! And, how the little tots love the Kellogg's! They are so crispy and crunchy and refreshing!

Also makers of KELLOGG'S CRACKERS and KELLOGG'S BRAN, cooked and crumbled. Order Kellogg's today—the kind in the RED and GREEN packages that bears the signature of W. E. Kellogg, originator of Kellogg's Corn Flakes. Note are genuine without it.

U.B. Thrifty says

Opportunity walks in on the fellow who has money without waiting to knock Opportunity always seems to come to the man who has saved his money. Because there is always a time that a small capital coupled with a big ambition to succeed finds a place among the winners.

Start saving toward the small capital today. Rest assured that when it is acquired you will find an opportunity to go in and win.

ONE DOLLAR will start your time deposit. And the desire to keep it growing will be a big factor toward success when you come face to face with opportunity.

Business. The dull season for retailers finds them moving a reasonable volume of goods, warning weather having contributed somewhat to a quickening of trade, but which came a little late for some lines to show improvement. The main volume of summer business must be indicated early in July, or the season does not come up to the standard of expectations, and last month the cool weather was decidedly against summer goods in various sections of the country. Notwithstanding the slowness; however, merchants do not seem to be worrying and are going ahead preparing for the opening of fall business with new shipments. Confidence, after all, is the thing that really counts, and the successful merchant is not worrying now about the future of his own country. He knows there will be an improvement in time and is looking forward to that.

The coal miners and railway shippers' strikes have not yet made any great change in general business conditions. So far the trains continue to run with very few schedules curtailed, and, while the coal supply continues to dwindle, the point has not yet been reached where a widespread reduction in production has become imperative. That is not saying that the situation is not becoming more serious day by day. It is. Manufacturers are beginning to see the bottom of their coal piles, and, unless the miners' strike is settled without much more delay, reduced production will be a fact. No other way out is possible. Manufacturers must have power, and those who cannot depend upon electric energy must have fuel. That is either coal, and if those equipped to handle only coal at last will reach the end of their reserve supply. That will leave them depending upon what portion they may receive under the rationing program. So the miners' strike is still able to create uneasiness if not anxiety.

As this is written the government contemplates emergency action to end the strikes and insure the country of protection from the economic embarrassment they might bring about if allowed to go on. So far President Harding has temporized in the hope that the controversies could be settled peacefully, but the reserve strength which he has as the chief magistrate may be used at a time when the railroads, the coal operators and the strikers do not expect it. Then the government would make the best of the situation possible in behalf of the people whose welfare it is pledged to safeguard.

A considerable stir has been created in the minds of the American people—government officials and private citizens alike—by the hints from abroad that the allied debt to the United States be canceled for the economic improvement of the whole world, this country included. Little sympathy has been given the European suggestion. Officials are dead set against it. So is the mass of public opinion. A few New York bankers are in favor of cancellation. The point at which those favoring cancellation are striking is America's export business, which has fallen off considerably since the time of deflation. It is represented that international trade will pick up this country if the allied debts are canceled, and that probably is true. At the same time, the cancellation of the enormous debt owing to the United States also would make taxes pick up for every taxpayer in this country. No other way to cancel the debt is possible. The government borrowed the money from the people and loaned it to the allies. If the government cannot collect the money owing, it cannot raise the Liberty and Victory bonds and other war time paper, unless it imposes an enormous tax on the people and raises revenue to meet its obligations. The Journal does not believe American public opinion ever will sanction debt cancellation.

In spite of the financial embarrassment of European governments, emphasized at every opportunity by themselves, it is observed that there has been a steady grain movement from this country.
