No Ugly, Rusty, Red Doors on a Copper-Clad Range

The doors of your old range are red, rusty, ugly. The Copper-Clad doors are clean, bright, plain and pretty all the time.

Copper-Clad doors have two walls or panels; an inner panel and an outer panel, with a big air space between. This air space saves the outer panel from the heat and it never burns red. With double-walled doors, a four-walled body, and an air space, you can understand why the Copper-Clad is the best heat-holding range known.

The small amount of fuel and the regularity of the heat is a pleasant surprise to every buyer of a Copper-Clad—The World's Greatest Range.

From Ponca Journal, Oct. 6, 1881:

A most destructive tornado visited a part of this state early Thursday morning of last week. The storm traveled to the southwest. It struck Madison at 1:30 a. m., doing immense damage to property, and killing and wounding a number of the people. The Presbyterian church was overturned and completely destroyed. It also leveled Bancb's printing office, grinding nearly every board and stick of timber into kindling wood. Telegraphic reports from Madison the morning after the tornado struck the town, give further news of the devastation:

The roof and south side of Gross Bros' store are scattered to the four winds of heaven, separating the shov and magnificent stock of goods to the mercy of the elements. Charley Schram was sleeping in the store at the time but fortunately engaged with his life, although badly cut by broken glass. The windmill at the depot is a complete wreck and the depot building is nearly ruined. No one was injured there. The roof and the east end of C. Midings' store are strewn over the prairie to the east of the town, and the main street of the village is barricaded with debris. Huge pieces of flying timbers and pieces of boards are seen sticking through a number of the buildings.

The large frame barn north of the Madison hotel is no more, and a number of dwellings are destroyed, and three children killed and others are dangerously wounded.

One little boy sleeping in Sloan & Engler's drug building on 4th street, was blown into the street on a mattress and nearly scalped. The town hall was moved about twenty feet, and the four-story house half of that distance. Huffman's jewelry establishment was moved from its foundation and one corner was firmly imbedded in an adjoining building. Calls for help from the country in the track of the cyclone are already coming in, but the loss of life and property continues to be determined. The storm was of but three minutes duration but the loss of property is considerable. Sadder still is the loss of life. All night long the lightning flashed continuously, and balls of fire were seen at intervals, adding terror to the scene. During the storm, the mercury indicated seventy degrees, and the air was very oppressive. We are at a loss to account for the phenomenon, since a heavy frost had been determined to the storm. The rain fell in torrents, accompanied by some hail.

Buildings are demolished and other men from their foundations. Nearly all are devoid of sashes and panes of glass, and the street is filled with rubbish. All is confusion.

Columbus, Neb., was also visited by the same cyclone. Thirty buildings were blown down and many others were damaged. A water main was blown 600 feet and fell through the roof of a house, killing a child. In another house two children were injured, one of them fatally. There were seriously hurt but not dangerously. Among the buildings destroyed was the Presbyterian church, the railroad depot, and several large business houses. The loss of property at Columbus amounts to not less than $25,000.

Stanton the storm is reported to have been beyond anything of the kind ever known in this country. All the stores in town excepting two, were blown down and utterly demolished. Two city buildings were entirely blown away, and twenty more so shattered as to be worthless.

Two persons were seriously wounded, one of whom, a lady, was not expected to live.

Killed by Falling on Wires.

Wisner, Neb., Sept. 22.—Falling across two "live" wires, carrying 23,000 volts each, Ed. McClain was instantly killed here about 7:45 this morning.

Mr. McClain was working for the city, assisting City Electrician Henry Reimers in reconstructing the power lines and putting in new work. He was working at the top of a pole when the accident occurred. It is not definitely known exactly how he came to meet his death, but it is believed that he lost his balance and fell across the wires carrying the heavy charge of electricity.

He was working only a short distance from the power house and when his companions on the ground noticed the accident they ran to the power house and shut off the current, but it was found that McClain had died instantly. His body was found to be only slightly burned where the wires had touched him.

Mr. McClain had been working here for about two months. He came here from Scribner, where he has a brother and sister living. He also has another brother and his mother living in Fremont.

The state of Washington has set aside next week for "Smile Week." People are now releasing for him they can smile for a week, they may keep it up during the year. Every week should be "Smile Week" everywhere.

Scientists and anthropologists in Chicago are taking a curious interest in the proposed combat between Pige and Jack Dempsey and Batsing Siki, concluding, after an examination of the skulls of Siki's recent ancestors, that the world champion will need a horsehoe in each hand to make an impression on the head of his new rival. The anthropologists say that while Siki has not much above his shoulders excepting a wading place for his hat, he is a trained fighter and is almost immune to punishment. A Paris report states Siki resembles a highly trained goliath. Would it not be just as well to give Siki the championship without contest and let it remain within his racial connections for all time? He and his counterparts could decide how far back into the jungles they should go for future competitors.

THE PROPOSED BONUS.

Congress passed the bonus bill without making provision to meet the obligation, and President Harding vetoed it. While the president expressed highest consideration for the soldiers, he did not wish to be responsible for a bonus without knowing where the money was coming from.

With many questions the wisdom of a bonus at this time with a stagnant tax-bearing indebtedness, it is a fact that millions could have been saved during the war if less money had been paid for labor outside of the army and navy, and less money had been paid for manufactured products for the government service.

Good reason had been conscripted for riveting ships, making harness and saddles, running trains and doing other things for the war as were the soldiers and sailors, indebtedness would be agreeably less today, and provision for the proposed bonus would not now seem so difficult or inadvisable.

There was no earthly reason why packing houses and their employees, with other essentials to the winning of the war, should not have been drafted and compensation fixed the same as was done in making the army and navy. There seems no good reason why the civilian employee should have drawn big pay while the soldier was at the front on small pay. Industries and men outside the army should have been required to give service to the government on moderate pay. Then, with a far less tax-bearing indebtedness, a bonus would not now look so big nor seem such a tax to provide.

VISIT TO PACKING HOUSE.

With other editors, we visited the Armour packing plant at Sioux City last Friday, and saw the execution taken by pigs and steers in being converted into cured hams and bacon and other usable products. We did not see the actual killing. The guide explained in a half apologetic way that the initial business of exterminating animal life had been suspended for the noon hour, and to tell the truth we were glad to escape that.

In reducing an animal to desired fractions, each one of many employees has a particular task. One cuts off the head, another the tail and so on. When the animals emerge dead from somewhere, they travel around like a merry-go-round, only slower and less joyful, and they are combed, carved, slashed, whittled and scattered until ultimate packages for the consuming public have been completed.

It does not take long for a pig to lose its identity and become widely and irretrievably distributed. Into one huge can goes a part of the side intended for the best bacon, another part into another can for the less fastidious settlements of the south, and so on. After an animal goes through this disgusting and dismembering process, it is beyond consideration as a pig. In due time, part of a pig may be in South America, another part in Europe.

The Armour handle hundreds of hogs and cattle every hour, through the guide explained that, due to light stock receipts, the plant had not been running of late up to its full capacity. It is a wonderful system which converts the live stock of the farm into finished products for consumers. It furnishes a ready market for the animals of neighboring territory, an advantage which contrasts sharply and favorably with the condition which obtained in the primitive middle-west when, before the advent and development of the packing industry, stock growers had to depend on fickle and uncertain local markets.

UNCLE WALT The Post Philosopher.

In Mourning.
My Aunt Ophelia bumped the bumps and left this world of care; she died, she departed, she departed, all kinds of bleak despair. My life seems desolate and flat since Aunt Ophelia died; a band of eraspe is on my gown, and my sleeves are wide; and on my lapel and my sleeve are other sable bands, and everywhere I go I grieve and sigh and wring my hands. My letter paper's edged with blue, that no one may forget; and on the front door of my abode there is a dark-rooster. The yesterday the parson said, "In grief you run and leave; and that is beakly; I know she was a good old dame, I understand your woe; but she would have you play the game if she were here, I know. If she could come from 'Other land, a vague but kindly shape, she'd ask that all your tears be earned, and she'd kiss away all the eraspe. Some little mourning she'd accept, as tribute safe and sane, but if she knew how long you've wept, I know she'd hand you a pain. She was a bride and blithe old maid, and laughter filled her home; she wouldn't like the eraspe displayed upon your arm and dome. She was a bird, and the golden shee, she's happy as a bird; no doubt she thinks you are a bore, and all your gloom absurd."

Buying Junk.
We spend too much for foolish things, for things we do not need; for Alredale pups and piston rings, for a sales to read. Tired Father draws his weekly wage, and says to wife and kin, "Since blowing coin is all the rage, come let us blow it like our first tears when I'm gray, like other shiftless skates, but I live no man can say that I have tightwad traits. So now, Miranda, with me; along the village street we'll skid, and buy all things we see." Tired Father labors long and hard to earn the helpful seads; through weary days he renders laud, or fashions liver pads; through long, long hours he greases pigs for use at county fairs, or manufactures oak-tree wigs like that which attracts his wears. And when he stands his weekly pay, all stained with honest sweat, he stands to wife and kindred say, "The bank's the one best bet. Let us now buy handkerchiefs and hints that she would shopping go, but I must see your plans and prints before a cent you blow. I give you, wife, a silver dime, the change a cent; there'll be no carnival of crime, no coin for doodads spent, in wonder bank I'll place my roll, and when we're old, old-fashioned, we will not freeze for lack of coal, or starve through dearth of prunes."

Making a Hit.
James Ganking a Hoop wrote a skit that made a wide and instant hit. Men said, "The gent who wrote that screed is a phenomenon, indeed." And publishers of mirthy prints sent, checks of pink and rose tints, and urged this James to gird his loins, and they would keep him staked with coins. And James, he told from sun to sun, and turned over stories by the ton, and everywhere you chanced to look you'd see his name, in mag or book. "If I shot a case for half a day, some dollar bill might get away," he muttered, as he punched the keys; and greed became his chief disease. And as he struggled for the sale, his brain grew tired and sagged and stale; his yams, that once were full of pep dragged to their end with faded glow; and so he lost his grip; and, joined the herd who has been class. To one who has a gift, I say: Don't grind the precious thing away. Don't try to corner all the dimes that have been coined in modern times; and when your labors gash and tire, hang up your chisel, brush or byte, and go and gambol on the grass; but turn eight quarts of gas line. For man has reached an evil pass when he is in the has been class.

Bury Days.
The sexton views the rows of tombs with pride, because he planned them; he says, "These little quiet ones. Few words of folks demand them. Few wish to sleep beneath the grass in robes that have no pouches; and yet they will step on gas, and I prepare their couches. The dust and grass tossing, and he should halt his chivo-coach, and not attempt the crossing; but foolishly, he thinks to pass, and in a minute, and fiercely step on the gas—mark yonder grave; he's in it. One would enjoy an evening jaunt, to see how well he takes his wife and maiden aunt to his rear seat level. Another auto would pass by; it hinks and it seems why? He's in no earthly hurry. But he's a sport, and naught shall pass, no boat can beat his Lizzie; he steps down hard upon the gas—and so they keep me busy. One journey says sadly while it rains, and sighs, 'I know I'd ought to, but how I hate to put on chains. Take chances! He's my motor, and he's my horse; in dirty grass, in mud and slime to wallow, and so I'll feed the old bus gas—he rests in yonder hollow."

The sexton often sighs, "Alas! My lot is hard and dreary, but while the boys step on the gas there's no rest for the weary."

Extremal.
He said, "Jemima, in a prize, a gem among the girls; is vain, the gifted artist tries to justify her gold on curls, and when I contemplate her eyes, my heart within me whirls. She said, 'He is a fine young man, all wool and three feet wide; his whiskers have a dainty tan, with black pecks he's supplied, and in his hand some tin sedan I' travel as his bride.' So they were wed, and pounds of rice came swishing through the air; the pastor said, 'I'm glad to splice so sumptuous a pair; I'm sure though put up with ice are they have snowy hair.' But he was proud to pin the dime when once that dime was won; to him the program most sublime was hoarding mated moon; he thought it was a low down crime to spend a gram, or so. And she regarded chickenfeed as something made to spend; to buy up junk she didn't need was her chief aim, and ends she was inclined to give no heed to maxima; bankers lend. Her tresses glimmered in the light, just as they did before; her husband's whiskers were as bright as in the days of yore; and yet each day they had a fight, and raging, walked the floor. It's well if brides, like roses bloom, make ushers stand; and though it's well for bridegrooms too; they own a spread of whiskers vast; but sympathetic hearts alone will make a marriage last.

Omnous.
Last night a dog, in mournful tones, the gibbous moon was baying, and then I felt through nerves and bones a sort of palsy playing. For I thought, when I heard that dog (what tales I used to swallow) that when a bow-wow this gave tongue, disaster soon would follow. "An evil omen," the Englishman said, "a sign of terror marking; and some one will be lying dead when moonlight dogs are barking." Some fifty years have gone away since first these tales were told me; yet when I hear the black dog bay the old time fears often find me. I know such fears are empty things, that dogs are not prophetic, but knowledge of my time in childhood clings—and is it not pathetic? The grownup's heart in darkness quails, or breaks like some brittle beam, by the fire and frightful tales he heard when he was a child. I lay in fear a little while, I awaited, and I shivered, and then I said, "Well, Englishman, 'Am I so chicken-livered?' Sial! That bandog make me sick, all sense and logic scoring!" And then I soaked till morning.

Studebaker LIGHT-SIX CLOSED CARS

Present prices are the lowest at which Studebaker Light-Six closed cars have ever been sold. Yet the intrinsic values are emphatically the greatest Studebaker ever offered. This means they are the best values that the industry affords, because Studebaker cars have always been above par in the amount of value per dollar invested.

Capacity production and the savings resulting from Studebaker methods of complete manufacture make these low prices possible.

Light-Six closed cars are sturdy build of finest materials and best workmanship. The bodies are the product of Studebaker skill and craftsmanship, and the prices of $1550 for the Sedan and $1225 for the Coupe-Roadster are no index to their inherent value.

When you buy a car you want to look at several makes. Include Studebaker in your list and after you have ridden in the Light-Six Sedan or Coupe-Roadster it will not be difficult to make up your mind.

The foundations of Studebaker success are quality, durability, comfort and integrity—principles that have been upheld steadfastly by Studebaker for seventy years. You can depend upon Studebaker automobiles because of the name they bear.

Men of Dixon and the surrounding country are planning on organizing a fire department.

The Norfolk state league baseball team was to play the Pilger team at Pilger Saturday. They also played at the Stanton county fair and are picking out men for next year's team.

No Action on Barge Parole.
Grand Jury, Sept. 24.—The grand jury of pondon Thursday in announcing a number of paroles from the state penitentiary took no action on the applications of two bankers now serving time for violation of the state bank laws. Charles Mainar, a former banker of Cresco, had appealed for a commutation of his sentence that runs from one to twenty years. H. H. Barge, connected with a bank at Hoskins, has applied for parole.

Contempt of Court.
Baltimore Evening Sun: A certain judge in Iowa has brought a contempt of court charge against an editor, in whose paper the opinions of the grand jury were published as follows: "A strained effort at humor and sensationalism wholly unbecoming in a judge, who, of all men, should be the last to become intoxicated by the exuberance of his own verbosity." Perhaps the court did not recognize the last phrase of this structure as a quotation from what Dismail said of Gladstone when the former was prime minister of England. But if Gladstone, when he refused to power, clapped Dismail into jail for such an utterance, the account of it belongs to a page of history that even Van Loon failed to unearth.

When Greek Meets Turk.
Los Angeles Times: The Turks have given the Greeks the worst licking in modern military history, and only parallel that can be found for the defeat of the Greeks near Smyrna was the defeat of the Greeks by the Persians in the battle of Salamis at the time of the first Balkan war. They seem to be specialists in disaster. In this campaign the Greeks seem to have thrown away their money and their lives. The cable dispatches report that Greek leaders, intended as reinforcements, refused to get off the transports. All of which goes to confirm the military theory that, as a fighter, the Turk is one of the finest soldiers in the world and the Greek one of the most unfortunate.

German Sarcasm.
Kansas City Times: It is offered as a comforting view by a German diplomat that there has been no war in Europe because the central powers are disarmed. "It is unthinkable," he adds, "that the allies should fight each other." It is, it is!

Women Give Out.
Housework is hard enough when healthy. Every Wayne woman who is having backache, blue and nervous spells, dizzy headaches and kidney or bladder troubles, should be glad to heed this Wayne woman's experience.

Mrs. Ira Hoshaw says: "I had a severe attack of the grip. My kidneys were weakened and I suffered from sharp darting pains across the small of my back. There was a lameness through my loins and a terrible bearing down feeling. My head ached and I couldn't rest all night. I got a box of Doan's Kidney pills and after taking them all symptoms of kidney trouble disappeared and there has been no return of the complaint." (Statement given August 3, 1910.)

On May 31, 1920, Mrs. Hoshaw admits she seldom has to take any remedy now. "If my back gets lame I take a few Doan's and am all right again."

Children are quick to know Kellogg's superior goodness

Little folks instantly recognize Kellogg's Corn Flakes from imitations! They know the delicious Kellogg's flavor and they know that Kellogg's are never tough or leathery or hard to eat!

Kellogg's Corn Flakes are so superior in flavor and in crisp crunchiness that once you know Kellogg's you will always serve Kellogg's! And, Kellogg's should be best because they are the original Corn Flakes—the most delightful cereal ever made! Insist upon Kellogg's—the kind in the RED and GREEN package, because none are genuine without the signature of W. K. Kellogg, originator of Corn Flakes!

Business. Material gains in business development actually have been made and reported since ending of the miners' and shopmen's strikes, which meant the cessation and hauling of the country's fuel. One of the outstanding features in the advancements made is the resilience with which the coal and oil producers sprang back after coercion. The big plants had been forced to curtail work in a degree that threatened a serious shortage, especially as to immediate needs. Now they are moving at a constantly increasing speed, with the general average of production in the Pennsylvania and middle west districts placed at about 65 per cent of normal.

The iron and steel people are aware of a condition that has been existing in this country for some years and for the first time since before the world war settled, are making preparations to meet the demand it will make. That is the imperative need of the big railroad lines for increase of production in the Pennsylvania and middle west districts placed at about 65 per cent of normal.

The motor car output for the month of August was the record for the year, totaling 272,000 vehicles, an increase of 10 per cent over the corresponding month for July and of 43 per cent over August of last year. Still dealers everywhere are complaining that they cannot get cars to supply the demand. The way motor cars and other motor vehicles are selling proves conclusively that the automotive manufacturers knew what they were about when they carried their plans for reconstruction forward at a swifter pace than those in any other industrial line. Some cars are for export, but the major portion is sold right here at home. What prices went up the moment Turkey became belligerent toward allied occupation of Constantinople and threatened war. That condition is one that may last for some time or may collapse suddenly. War scares in wheat prices always have a jumpy effect, nor does it require much of a quarrel to start something of that kind. Wall street refuses to attach much importance to the war talk from London and Asia Minor, the attitude of the financiers being reflected by the increased strength shown by foreign exchange. The franc and the pound sterling both made gains when the reports from abroad were most ominous. Foreign bonds also are strong in the New York market, which would indicate that there is no great uneasiness. Chicago reports the highest price for steers, $311.75, reached in a year. Choice hives, light hogs and hams are selling over a wider area at high prices, the impetus given to live stock several months ago continuing in a way to make the required confidence of the producer permanent. The most impressive development in business at this time is the fact that pay rolls are increasing in size with reference to the number of men employed. Several strikes having been settled, the agreements have thinned other related industries to an appreciable extent. Henry Ford has given the order for reopening his extensive motor car plants, explaining that coal is now available. This development does not come as a surprise. The general impression still being that the Ford shutdown would not last more than several days or a few weeks at the most.
