Clemenceau is Thick Skinned. Minneapolis Tribune: M. Clemenceau seems to be as unresponsive, if not just as thick as it ever was. Far from resenting those alleged remarks, he expresses himself as pleased if he has stirred things up and brought verbal explosions of his head. That he says is precisely what he aimed to do when he set sail for this country. It doesn't do these senators much credit to grow feverishly exercised about Mr. Clemenceau's comments on France and European affairs. The old man still cuts a figure and wields an influence on the thought of his country, to be sure, but after all, he is just an interesting private citizen who knows things that we ought to hear about in this country, whether they please or displease us.

Test Calf Rations At Lincoln Station

Drovers Journal-Stockman: "The end of the first 30 days of our cattle feeding experiment—now—seven progressing nicely," said Prof. Howard J. Gramlich, head of the Nebraska experiment station, who was in from Lincoln, Wednesday looking over the local market.
"Our feature experiment this year is that being made to determine the relative value of various rations commonly used in feeding baby beef," Prof. Gramlich continued. "After getting such excellent results with the calves in the test on cattle of different ages, we concluded that the popularity of young cattle was a permanent feature of the cattle feeding business and that a ration test on calves would be of greater interest to feeders than the one on 2-year-olds which we have been conducting. It is the first experiment of its kind ever made in the state.

On this test we divided our calves into six lots of 16 head each. There are five lots of steer calves, and one of straight heifer calves. Feeding the heifers by themselves was suggested to us when cattle raisers in the Marfa, Texas, district complained this year that buyers insisted on buying heifer calves at a $2.00 per hundred discount.
"The heifers and one lot of the steers are being fed straight shelled corn and alfalfa. The second lot of steers is getting shelled corn, oil meal and alfalfa, the third lot gets ground corn and alfalfa, the fourth ground corn, oil meal and alfalfa, and the last bunch shelled corn, oats and alfalfa. At present this last lot is getting one part oats to two parts corn, and the proportion of corn will be increased as the test goes on."
"It will be seen that we have taken the rations on which yearlings are most commonly fattened. The experiment will run 200 days and the various lots will be weighed and appraised from time to time.
"Decide this, the experiment made last year on two years ago, on calves, yearlings, two's and three's on the same ration over a 200-day period is being repeated.

Young Stanton Woman Killed In Accident

Stanton, Neb., Dec. 1.—Mrs. Reona Doran, 19 years old, a divorcee of this place, was almost instantly killed yesterday afternoon about 12:45 o'clock in an automobile accident about two miles east of here. Her 10-month-old baby and Harry Davis, who were riding in the car with her, were uninjured. A tire blew out and the car turned over in a ditch.

Mr. Davis and Mrs. Doran were on their way to Pilger to have Thanksgiving dinner with Mr. Davis' sister. They were not traveling at a very high speed, but when the tire blew out, Davis, who was driving, threw the brakes on suddenly. The automobile skidded around off the grade and tipped over into the ditch.

In the fall, Mrs. Doran in some unknown manner received a blow at the base of the brain, causing her death instantly. She spoke a few words after the accident, but was dead before she could be extricated from the wreck.
The automobile was badly damaged.

Mrs. Doran is survived by her father, J. A. Stunaguole of this place, and two sisters and a brother.
Bloomfield, Neb., Dec. 1.—Willis Hamill was seriously injured yesterday when the automobile he was driving turned over several times about five miles north of here. A broken wheel was said to be the cause. Earl Jones, a companion, was uninjured.

Capper's Weekly: If boards of trade are public market places, why do they so bitterly protest against the admission of co-operative farm associations as provided for by the Capper-Tincher act? That which boards of trade in truth represent is private control of the public's market and we find them restating public supervision just as more recently did the packers who controlled the live stock markets. Why shouldn't a public market be subject to public supervision? The Chicago Board of Trade sets itself up as the last word in farm marketing and then excludes the farmer, although there can be no possible best method of grain marketing which does not include him.

power to think clearly, logically and objectively. It means capacity to leave good and contribute sound and helpful judgment to society.

Thanksgiving day came nearly a week later than usual, and accordingly the time between that holiday and Christmas has been shortened. People do not think earnestly of Christmas until Thanksgiving day is out of the way, and now Christmas is little more than two weeks off. They will be kept extraordinarily busy getting ready for the joyous occasion.

Three men are held in Beatrice as murder suspects. An affecting scene took place when the wife and children of the prisoners visited him in jail. The man went there as he regarded the two innocent sufferers. Why did he not shake his hands, leaving behind his family?

Will you people not think of the injury that would be done blood ties by questionable associations or criminal acts, and then desert or leave?

News reports tell of a 16-year-old boy who killed himself because people made fun of his attentions to a school teacher older than himself. Are people becoming so sensitive and feeble that they cannot stand the stings and kicks of society? The way people sometimes ridicule youth is cruel and merciless, but it is less so than it used to be, as we remember. And it is well to be less so if many are as thin-skinned and easily crushed as the one who found relief in suicide.

Henry Ford has a reputation for paying good wages and otherwise dealing generously with his employees. Notwithstanding that fact a trusted timekeeper kept eleven men who had quit their jobs on the payroll until $29,000 had been fraudulently expended. The timekeeper said he kept the men on the payroll to help them complete their college education. What kind of an education would one receive on a basis of fraud? These young men undoubtedly could have borrowed funds for education from Mr. Ford. The loss of money is not so important as the evident purpose to get something for nothing, the poison of ingratitude and the destruction of confidence. The consequent character wreckage will hamper the young men in doing much with their education when they get it.

The Kearney state normal is a good deal disturbed over the fact that its students, barred from dancing, are seeking other places in town for such gymnastics. Other normal schools of the state permit dancing under strict supervision. Kearney has been up and down over the question and wants the state board to make a ruling that will apply to all four schools uniformly and impartially. Thus, as we understand, Kearney leads the subject into the arena for discussion at each board meeting, but no action has been taken. The same has been followed in one way at Kearney and in another way at the other schools. Therefore, we would suggest that the board appoint an impartial committee to investigate the results of the policies and find out how Kearney's students compare in scholarship and behavior with those of the other schools. The committee's finding would form a basis on which to fix a general policy—whether to exclude dancing from the campus or permit it under proper supervision.

UNCLE WALT The Foot Philosopher.

Sill Living.

I have the living in my throat. I sound a jangle and a hive, but still I have a meane note, for it is good to love. Sometimes I hear a voice to say when some cheap grief has made him sore. "This fierce old world is grim and gray, and I'll be glad when I'm no more." I hand him out a stem rebuke, and say, "Ode his, why wear a frown? If you find life so bald a fluke, there is the pond, where you may drown. I have my share of bitter weep, but seldom do I feel forlorn; I still can prize the blooming rose although I know it has a thorn." I have my friends; tried friends and true, they come to me in blocks of five, to tell old tales when day is through, and it is good to live. I have the goat, I have the heave, and yes I fail to understand the weary wight who weeps and grieves and plies a hammer with his hand. For every trouble I endure there are nine joys to compensate, and that one trouble I can't cure by putting up a hymn of hate. However much in joy and grief, I've found that I can't be three, I've found my hat and cry, "Hurray" for it is good to be alive.

World Weary.

At times my jaded spirit pants for solitude afar; I fain would flee from all my aunts, in my tin motor car. I care in none, acquiescent alone in what I've long desired; my aunts are talking all the time of things that make me tired. They talk of pink and purple teas and games I most despise. Of Mrs. Johnson's cottage cheese, and Mrs. Twitler's pies. Sometimes I'd be at vic things, or climbing hills on high, of Dempsey's scraps in many rings, of brands of whiskers, dogs, and then my aunts begin to rave and show that they are bored; they have no use for tales of bravado, of sandbag, gun or sword. My conversation makes them sad, and their upsets my mind, and would like to jump the guard and leave the dames behind. I often vow, when I retire that in the morn I'll flee, and henceforth twang my noble lyre in some large hollow tree. But when I wake I have a pang, all kinds of pain I feel; then come my aunts, a stately gang, with yards that scotch and heal. They put a bottle on my nose, bind splints upon my arm, and make my poor old morgaged home a place of light and charm. It is when dire affliction daunts the stricken mortal hulk that one appreciates his aunts, and blesses them in bulk.

Wedded Bliss.

At Doorn the half-worn bridegroom dwells, and can't from gloom emerge; the echoes of his wedding bells are sadder than a dirge. All nearly his faith he dunks in each of princely taste, and strut a while, leaving rubbernecks are gazing through; he says, "There's no one now to cringe and bend, to flatter or to praise; in all the world he has no friend to wish him happy days. He puts his helmet on his head the one with flowing plumes, and looks like one who's doomed to tread between long rows of tombs. The saddest bridegroom of all times he is, as the pathos of Doorn, and thinks, perhaps, about the crime that made the millions mourn. "Ach, Wilhelm," says his gracious frau, "what's eating you, old cousin?"

There is a pink swell on your brow, your hand's as cold as kratt; and in the night you wince and scowls like one who is accurst; is it remorse that breaks your dream, or too much livereports?" The bridegroom goes through stately forms with pained repulse; but nothing in such grandeur warm his wintry heart or feet. The shadows on the castle walls, the shadows on the hill; and no one in the whole world calls, "Hurrah for Good Old Bill!"

Cars Everywhere.

Mid in his icy grotto the Eskimo abides and marvels at the auto in which the stranger rides: "By many an ancient river, on many a palmy plain, there scoots the creaking fiver, some 'reared' to 'win'—besides the cold Mackintosh, and by the winding Po, speed demons, in a frenzy, on bughouse errands go. Along the desert reaches, where camels used to trail, the Yankee buswart screeches, demanding gas and oil. Where once the hungry jaguars watched heathen council fires, the old gas wagon staggers with flat or blow-out tires. On Greenland's icy mountains, the super-sevens stand; by Africa's sunny fountains the henrys paw the sand. The motorist's remedy is to long wail and drawn; it is discouraged, very—it knows its graft is gone. The steed we used to cherish, that lived in high romance, is killed to wit and wretched, it sees its doom advance. In all the storied places, in every sacred vale, the wild-eyed chuffer chases, with speed cops on his heels, for even is yearning to shoo the vans away, and motor cars are burning the road to wretchedly. In China's secret cities the fires of rubber, pipes and nuts, from motor ditties Gibbon's gates within. Now Paul Revee's deriding the steed that won his race, and Lockivar is guiding a bus through winnowing space."

The Safe Course.

I harvest my tomatoes, and sell them at the store; I grow two mashed potatoes where but one grew before. The raker-off's a slaver, but every little while I save some legal tender, and have a decent pie. The shameful name of piker on me is oft heaped, it is true, but I make on speculation's road; "Oh, come, my fortune beckons," my smiling neighbor cries; he takes his all and reckons that he will draw a prize. He spends, where others are making great riches to behold; he goes where gold is quick, where mines are yielding gold. I still am proung carrots, or mowing fragrant grass, or feeding piebald parrots to lay three eggs a day. My humble labors keep me contented, year by year; no get-rich craze can sweep me from this my proper sphere. "I see," says "Neighbor, sadly, you're at the same old tricks I saw you at when nearly I went to buy gold bricks. I thought your toil was soiled. I feared as I went by, I'd soon have money corded around me ten times over. May I never reach you, for all my dreams were bunk! And now I would beseech you to stake me with a plank."

Another He-Man.

Jack Reuben plows his stony acres, but not because of tilking soil; he looks upon all men as farmers who boast the jobs of tilling soil. He'd like to be a famed attorney and battle with his peers in court, but up the furrow he must journey, or feel himself a tin horn sport. He'd like to be a leading banker with bonds and money as his tools; but vainly does he yearn and hanker—he'd like to drive his claybank mules. He has his dreams of high endeavor, but as he tells he knows full well his dreams will never be fulfilled. He'd like to have corn and hay to sell. His hands are strewn with corn and blisters from mowing in his rocky hills; he must support his ailing sisters, who try each day new brands of pills. Without him they'd have no resources, and to the poorhouse they must go, so he pursues his handiwork course and solves his mule team to and fro. When tolling his mules to and fro. He shoves his mules with his plows and listens he has a weary, grumble mien, but when he's bright, his sisters his face is bright, his smile serene. So all his days he'll go on reweaving a humble life, and never, but never for an hour, forgetting the dreams that never could come true.

Voters Resent Hypocrisy.

Omaha, Neb.: Edwards may have been elected on his "sopping wet" platform, but some of his voters may have come from persons who suspected a lack of sincerity in the "dry" profession of his opponent. The Amesbury public is expressing anything favoring of hypocrisy in a political candidate.

From Ponca Journal-December 12, 1922:
 The Princess Louise, despite the flood of the Guelphs, which flows in her veins, is said to be as homely and as craggy as a Virginia worm. Hence there are many young women on our Nebraska prairies who have no claim to higher descent than from the Mul-Higgens, Nooks, or Browns, who can give her both hovers and the ace, and then euchre her in a game of beauty.
 England lately met with severe reverses in the Afghan war. The wild mountaineers of Afghanistan fight well, and in several recent battles have driven back the crack troops of Britain with heavy loss. To further add to England's discomfiture, Russia, apparently sympathizes with the Afghans, and if they stand in need of any assistance, will inundate the seat of war with her own troops, chased by their late victory over the Turks. Taken altogether, England's present position is not an enviable one.
 Down in Kentucky the other day, at a little town called Meadsville, quite a speck of war transpired. The sheriff of the county had been pusillanimous enough to allow a man just because said man had indulged in the playful Kintuck pastime of slapping open the diaphragm of another chap. Of course the chronic friends of the slasher couldn't be expected to stand that, so they gathered in force and fell on the sheriff and his aids, and smote them hip and thigh. Both parties entrenched themselves behind logs, buildings, etc., and the battle was kept up for twenty-four hours, and between thirty and forty men killed and wounded, the county judge being among the former. The governor finally sent a detachment of soldiers to the scene, who succeeded in restoring order among the long-geared combatants, and the murderer was safely lodged in jail.

Mr. Cowie, one of the citizens of Clark precinct, made us a friendly call on Tuesday. He says that good health and general prosperity seem to be the rule in his neighborhood. A large number of families from the east have settled in that precinct during the past fall, and many more are expected in the spring from the vicinity of Monticello, Ia. Clark precinct will soon be regarded as one of the richest and most desirable portions of the county. The land is fertile; probably no better can be found in the state. The surface of the country is greatly undulating, and is sufficiently supplied with streams of pure, good water. There is no healthier region in the west. Until recently a lack of timber was quite an objection to that part of the county. Within the past few years, however, the enterprise of the citizens has been rewarded and enriched the farm with numerous groves—probably in all, a thousand acres of timber, much of which is now large enough for firewood.

The ultimate end of all beef cattle is the butcher's block. The producer to be successful must produce a quality of beef acceptable to the packer and in demand with the consumer. Chicago is the largest and most representative market in the world for prime beef. Records show that Herefords have for the past few years brought the highest price, on finished carcasses, OVER ALL BREEDS.

During 1921 Herefords sold higher than other breeds. 174 out of the 261 regular market days; 44 out of the 51 weeks; 11 out of the 12 months. In other words, regular market loads of Herefords outsold other breeds 82 per cent of the time.

In January, 1922, the Hereford record was still better than during the previous year. They topped the market 18 out of the 20 leading market days.

A. W. W. JOHNSON

Col. W. H. Neesly, Auct. Security State Bank, Clerk

UNCLE WALT The Peat Philosopher.

spise, of Mrs. Johnson's cottage cheese, and Mrs. Twitter's pie. Sometimes I'd talk of vital things, of blinding hills or heights of Dempsy's scraps in many rings, of brands of whiskey-dye-and-then-my-aunts-behold-to yawn and show that they are bored; they have no use for tales of bravn, of sandbag, gun or sword. My conversation makes them sad, and they upset my mind, and I would like to jump the great and leave the dames behind. I often vow when I retire that in the morn I'll flee, and henceforth twang my noble lyre in some large hollow tree. But when I wake I have a pang, all kinds of pain I feel; then come my aunts, a stately ~~seag~~ with ~~packs~~ that, ~~smo~~ and deal. They put a poultice on my nose, bind splints upon my arm, and make my poor old mortgaged home a place of light and charm. It is when dire affliction dunts the stricken mortal hulk that one appreciates his aunts, and blesses them in bulk.

Still Living.
I have the guttary in my throat. I have a measles and a hive, but still sound a joyous note, for it is good to be alive. Sometimes I hear a voter say, "Why aren't they getting mad like him sore, "This fierce old world is grim and gray, and I'll be glad when it's no more." I hand him out a skin rebuke, and say, "Ode fish, why wear a frown? If you find fire so bald a fluke, there is the pond, where you may drowner—I have my share of bitter water. But seldom do I feel forlorn; I still can prize the blooming rose although I know it has a thorn." I have my friends; tried friends and true, they come to me, in blocks of five, to tell old tales when day is through, and it is good to be alive. I have the gout, I have the heaves, and yet I fail to understand the warty night, who weeps and grieves and pines a hammer with his hand. For every trouble I endure there are nine joys to compensate, and that one trouble I can't cure, by putting up a hymn of hate. How ever much in joint and then the rheumatic may seem to thrive, I'm sowing my hat and cry, "Hurro!" for it is good to be alive.

World Weary.
At times my jaded spirit pants for solitudes afar; I fain would flee from all my aunts, in my tin motor car. A day in some sequestered cove is what I've long desired; my aunts are talking all the time of things that make me tired. They talk of pink and purple teas and games I most de-

There is a pink sweat on your brow, your hand's as cold as kratt; and in the night you wake an scream like one who is accout; it is rannore that breaks your dream, or too much liverwurst?" The bridegroom goes through stately forms with manely replete, but nothing in such grandeur warn his wintry heart or feet. The shadows on the castle walls, the shadows on the hills, and no one in the whole world calls, "Hurrah for Good Old Bill!"

Cars Everywhere.
Hid in his icy grotto the Eskimo abides and marvels at the auto in which the stranger rides. By many an ancient river, on many a fishing plain, there soots the crackling river, some record to obtain. Besides the cold Mackenzie, and by the winding Po, speed demons, in a frenzy, or bughouse errands go. Along the desert reaches, where camels used to toil, the Yankee buzz-cart screeches, rattling over the sand. The hungry jaguars watched heaton council fires, the old gas wagon staggers with flat or blowout tires. On crestled hills, throughout the suprassevens stand; by Africa's sunny fountains the henrys paw the sand. The patient dronary is in looking pale and drawn; it is disencouraged, very. If news its graft is gone. The steed we used to cherish, that lived in high romance, is killed to wit and perish, it sees its doom advance. In all the storied places, in every sacred vale, the wild-eyed chuffer chases, with speed cops on his trail. The animal is yearning to shoo the vans away, and motor cars are burning the road to Mandaly. In China's secret cities the tires of rubber and steel, and the motor ditches Tibetan gales writhe. Now Paul Reverse's deriding the steed that won his race, and Lockinvar is guiding a bus through winnowspet space.

The Safe Course.
I harvest my tomatoes, and sell them at the store; I grow two-mashed potatoes where but one grew before. The rake-off's rather slender, but even a little will do me no harm. I'll order, and have a decent pie. The shameful name of piker on me is oft bestowed; I ought to be a hiker on speculation's road. My aunts are fortune beckons, "my snifling neighbor cries; he takes his ail and reckons that he will draw a prize. He speeds where hatters are busy, and nits hum to behold; he goes where oil is gushing, where mines are yielding gold. I see him come back, plodding, with his feet and hands all red and sodden, or prunning thubarb trees. I still am growing carrots, or mowing fragrant hay, or teaching pebbled parrots to lay their eggs. My humble labors keep me contented, year by year; no get-rich crime can sweep me from this my proper abode. I've not a cent, says Neighbor, sadly, you're at the same old tricks I saw you at when nearly I went to buy good swick. I thought you'd got your mind, I jeered as I went by; I'd soon have merry corded around me ten feet high. My luck never reach you for all my goodly stock. And now I would beseech you to stake me with a plank.

Another He-Man.
Jake Reuben plows his stony acres, but not because he likes that toll; he looks upon all men as fakers who boast the joys of dilling soil. He'd like to be a famed attorney and battle with his peers in court, but up the furrow he must journey, or feel himself a tin horn spot. He'd like to be a leading banker, with bonds and money as his toils; but vainly does he yearn and harrier—he still must drive his claybank mules. "He he he" his dreams of high endeavor, but as he toils he knows full well his dreams will all be in vain. His neighbors have corn and hay to sell. His hands are strewn with corns and blisters from mowing in his rocky hills; he must support his ailing sons, who try each day new brands of pills. Without him they'd have no resources, and to the poorhouse they must go; so he pursues his husband courses and shoves his mule team to and fro. When toiling with his plow and listens he has a weary, tragic sigh, but when he's with his aching sisters his face is bright, his smile serene. So all his days he'll go on sweating, a humble he-man, known to few, but never far from his dreaming, the dreams that never could come true.

Voters Resist Hypocrisy.
Omaha Bee: Edwards may have been elected on his "sopping wet" platform, but some of his votes may have come from persons who suspected a lack of sincerity in the "dry" profession of his opponent. The American public is quick to resent any such avowal of hypocrisy in a political candidate.

Notice.

Further, openly sympathizes with the Afghans, and they stand in need of any assistance, will inundate the seat of war with her own troops, flushed with their late victory over the Turks. Taken together, England's present position is not an enviable one.

Down in Kentucky the other day, at 18th the town called Meadville, quite a speck of war transpired. The sheriff of the county had been just-animous enough to arrest a man just because said man had indulged in the playful Kintack pastime of slashing open the diaphragm of another chap. Of course the chivalric friends of the state, who are the expected—be-lauded, so they gathered in force and fell on the sheriff and his aids, and smote them hip and thigh. Both parties entrenched themselves behind logs, buildings, etc., and the battle was kept up for twenty-four hours, at between thirty and forty men killed and wounded, the county judge being among the former. The governor finally sent a detachment of militia to the scene, which succeeded in restoring order among the long-geared combatants, and the murderer was safely lodged in jail.

S. C. Covie, one of the citizens of Clark precinct, made us a friendly call on Tuesday. He says that a goodly kind and general prosperity seem to be the rule in the neighborhood. A large number of families from the east have settled in, and that precinct during the past fall, and many more are expected in the spring from the vicinity of Monticello, Ia. Clark precinct will soon be regarded as one of the richest and most desirable portions of the county. The land is fertile; probably no better can be found in the state. The surface of the country is gently undulating, and is sufficiently supplied with streams of pure, good water. There is no healthier region in the west. Until recently a lack of timber was quite an objection to that part of the county. Within the past few years, however, the enterprize of the citizens has benefited and enriched their farms with numerous groves—probably in all, a thousand acres of timber, much of which is now large enough for firewood.

The ultimate end of all best cattle is the butcher's block. The producer to be successful must produce a quality of beef acceptable to the packer and in demand with the consumer.

Chicago is the largest and most representative market in the world for prime beef. Records here show that Herefords have for the past few years brought the highest price, on finished carloads, OVER ALL BREEDS.

During 1921 Herefords sold higher than other breeds, 174 out of the 251 regular market days; 44 out of the 51 weeks; 11 out of the 12 months. In other words, regular market loads of Herefords outsold other breeds 82 per cent of the time.

In January, 1922, the Hereford record was still better than during the previous year. They topped the market 18 out of the 20 leading market days.

We have some choice young bulls for your inspection. Visitors Welcome.

December Sale of Ladies' Ready-to-Wear

A real sale in December is a novelty, because it is a tradition among merchants that a sale isn't needed in December as people buy anyway. This store doesn't go much on tradition. We've got thousands of dollars' worth of good winter coats, suits, sweaters, etc., and the more we sell now the less we will have to worry about later. This has been a backward season, consequently we find ourselves overstocked with these lines.

We figure this plan will put us a month ahead on our selling and give our good customers a holiday sale opportunity.

Sale Will Continue to Christmas Eve.

How Science Is Increasing The Wealth Of An Industry

THE age old art of animal husbandry has never received such powerful aid as is now possible thru science's discovery and perfection of a process that revolutionizes the raising and management of swine.

For the first time in history, milk, the foster mother of mankind and all four-footed animals, the very foundation of life itself, indispensable, with its mysterious nourishment still unraveled and the greatest boon to health and success with livestock is available in unlimited quantities, at all times and to suit the needs of everyone.

Nature, in her all discerning wisdom, has decreed that that portion of milk known as buttermilk shall contain the greatest amount of health and growth-producing properties of the entire milk. Manifold for centuries has known that buttermilk is Nature's greatest tonic, invigorator and aid to health and longevity.

"That which buttermilk does for humans, it does still more effectively for animals, and that this product often called 'Food-of-the-Gods' is available for the livestock industry of America is due to that marvelous development of science which makes possible the pasteurization and concentrating of the heretofore unusable buttermilk from our creameries into Semi-Solid Buttermilk.

For the first time in the history of animal husbandry, a nation has been able to use buttermilk constantly and in a way to meet its universal and individual needs. With such widespread use of so remarkable a product, which could follow more naturally than a new wealth of experience and knowledge concerning its well high invaluable use on every farm and in every herd.

Semi-Solid Buttermilk, because of the extreme care with which it is made, and through the exclusive patented process of its manufacture, possessed by no form of simple condensed buttermilk, brings back to the farmer the original buttermilk with all its health-giving values maintained intact and more greatly enhanced, in which, now, buttermilk does for livestock, Semi-Solid Buttermilk does also and much more besides.

Through the experience of hundreds of thousands of users, Semi-Solid Buttermilk stands today as the greatest health-giving and growth-producing product available for universal use by farmers. Its lactic acid is Nature's greatest purifier—keeping the system sweet and clean—fostering all organs against disease attacks, maintaining a healthy condition and developing a keenness of appetite and capacity for digesting and profitably transforming into pure, larger quantities of grain in much shorter time.

Necrotic Enteritis, that dreaded disease of swine, is unknown in herds fed Semi-Solid Buttermilk. Numerous tests conclusively prove that this product not only prevents this disease, but is the best known agent for its cure. Abortion and sterility, two formidable foes of the breeder, are reduced to negligible quantities through its use. Scours are prevented and internal parasites find no lodging where Semi-Solid is fed.

The development of the physical structure of the animals receives even greater benefits from Semi-Solid Buttermilk, for buttermilk contains the vitamins essential to rapid growth and the mineral elements that nature uses to build bone and frame. Greatest of all, in some mysterious way that even science cannot fathom, buttermilk more than any other product, possesses the power of rendering available to the development of the animal a greater percentage of protein and bone-building materials in the other feeds consumed. This is the power that gives Semi-Solid Buttermilk fed hogs the wonderful finish, quality and bloom that finds favor in the show ring, the bone, scale and frame that delights both breeder and feeder and the remarkably fast gains that send hogs to market weeks earlier and always in such condition that they bring better prices.

In truth then—Semi-Solid Buttermilk, because it makes available to every farmer the wonderful qualities of buttermilk in a form still more valuable, at a price within the reach of all, in maintaining the health of an industry and yearly developing to an ever-increasing degree the wealth of a nation.

Such an achievement of science is a landmark in the progress of husbandry and in the development of mankind.

EVERY STREET IN WAYNE
 Has Its Share of the Proof That Kidney Sufferers Seek.
 Backache? Kidneys weak? Distressed with urinary ills? Want a reliable kidney remedy? Don't have to look far. Use what Wayne people recommend. Every street in Wayne has its cases. Here's one Wayne Woman's experience. Let Mrs. John Sylvanus tell it. She says: "There was a continual dull nagging ache across the small of my back which at times made it difficult to bend or lift. I had read of Doan's Kidney Pills helping others and was sure they would help me. After using Doan's I was much better in every way. One box of Doan's was all I needed as I took the trouble in time and I have had no signs of backache since."
