Wayne is Magnet for Christmas Shoppers

Business District, Rich in Holiday Attire, Draws Big Crowds.

Merchants who bought large stocks for the Christmas trade had their expectations fully met, during the past week. The weather was good and roads with absence of snow, have stimulated buying. Dealers have given their pieces of business-garments and dainty arranged holiday decorations, and show windows look resplendent and inviting with their holiday suggestions.

People who have motored to Wayne to lay in holiday supplies, have come from greater distances than usual, proving to merchants that there is a record here which is appreciated and rewarded. During the few remaining days before Christmas, activity in trade circles proves to be a record here.

Places of business will be kept open evenings during the rest of the week for the accommodation of shoppers.

As a stimulator at Christmas time for the Radio fans we offer the Clapp-Eastham Radak receiver for $35—amplifier also $35. The factory list price on each section is $40.00. This makes a saving of $10.00 to any one purchasing a complete set.

The Radak is without question the easiest set for an amateur to tune; and at the same time a set that will pick up transmitting stations from either coast. This has been done many times this winter, some of the "fans" getting Los Angeles, California, and Schenectady, New York with the detector alone.

high figures, but it should be remembered that the better combination is that which employs the fewer number of parts. The country is struggling upward in its business recovery, and the starting place was in 1921 when the lowest prices for farm products prevailed.

More money in circulation now will result from the government's payment of $1,000,000,000 to redeem war time paper. This may have influenced easier money conditions throughout the country, which have been noted in various finance and market reports. Foreign exchange has been irregular, with the British pound sterling showing a disposition to continue with its recovery.

The present iron output is reported to be twice what it was in 1921. Steel production is put at 75 to 80 per cent of capacity. These increases in production are due to heavy buying on the part of railroads which are strengthening their equipment of cars, locomotives, rails, etc. Coal mining is particularly active and might be expected. The weekly output, it is predicted, soon will go back to fully 11,000,000 tons at the bituminous mines. Anthracite production, according to Broadstreet, is now at the peak.

The department of agriculture's report is somewhat significant of the trend of business upward. The crops for 1922 are given a value in excess of last year's production by nearly $2,000,000,000. The values it may be observed, are lower than former

Business.
Sioux City Journal: Colder weather, widespread and more severe because it came suddenly at the end of a season of balmy temperatures, has affected business sharply in many directions. The retail trade has benefited as a result, but outdoor activities have been extensively lessened. Merchandising has picked up appreciably, heavy woolen moving more rapidly, together with ready-made apparel and to catch retailers with short stocks. That has influenced a large number of hurry orders and replenishment of shelves so the jobbers are now active in supplying the rush demand.

On the other hand, road and subzero temperatures have greatly affected building. Lumber buying has fallen off since the coming of cold weather. Paints and other materials used in building are slow in sympathy with the lessened demand for lumber and brick. However, the decrease in building activity has not been so great as seriously to affect employment. Much work on building can be continued in cold weather, such as interior finishing, and of course contractors will take advantage of breaks in the weather to

Crimp Put In Auto Stealing in Fremont

Fremont, Neb., Dec. 19.—A youthful "auto bandit" gang, consisting not only of young boys of the city, but also implicating several girls, students of the local grammar schools, was broken up last Saturday night when the sheriff's office in cooperation with the city police took Samuel Howard and Patrick Nestle into custody while they were driving a car stolen from Dr. J. S. Deviet Saturday night.

The chase ended a search of the officers were gradually closing in on the persons guilty of stealing a large number of cars in the city.
In the stories told by the two boys, Charles Cady and Merle Livingston, it was also indicated that these two lads admitted complicity in some of the thievery to the police.
Several school girls, who were riding in the cars with the boys on their wild night rambles, were also questioned and told several different stories of the escapades. Other boys and girls may be implicated later.

If this world were run by bigots, would it be the best of luck in trying to get a square deal?

European countries act a good deal like children in one respect: they want help, but are not inclined to accept advice.

By how narrow a margin one escapes being an idiot, we do not know. But to make one profoundly grateful that he has escaped one, only by how much has a hapless, helpless, helpless humanity.

This is no tropical climate, anyway. It does not promise to be. We must therefore expect an occasional blast of zero weather. But we may be thankful that no snow blocks the roads and lampers travel.

We want taxes reduced, but we usually want curtailment of expenses to do with the other fellow. We are interested in are necessary, whereas things the other fellow wants are homestead. That is the way people often act. In order to get tax reduction, trimming of expenses will have to be carefully followed along all lines, all making reasonable concessions, but none making such sacrifices that will destroy important public service.

A little news dispatch tells of a man who killed his wife and then killed himself. He was working in a cafe, and he became jealous. As sometimes the case, she was likely supporting him in idleness. Whether he had just grounds for suspicion or not, he had time to imagine ground and laid the brutal, inclination to destroy the one whom he evidently did not or would not support. Determined to use a gun, he should have turned it on himself first.

If the railroad expects to compete with automobiles, it ought to speed up its passenger service. Waiting for trains is an intolerable nuisance which people will avoid if possible. Whenever possible they will use automobiles. The west-bound passenger train, due here at 11 o'clock, is usually late, and often causes people to miss connections with the main train for Omaha and Lincoln. The railroad company ought to be able to figure out a way to make that connection every day. It ought to be able to figure out a way to be on time with less infrequency. If it will do a little more figuring in the way of service it will need to do less figuring in trying to find out why passenger traffic is not so large as it ought to be.

Communists of Russia seem bent on disturbing society as often and as much as possible. Now they propose to abolish Santa Claus—the delightful Christmas myth—but it can't be done. They can no more destroy Santa Claus than they can destroy ideas. Santa Claus typifies good nature and generous giving, and has breathed inspiration and joy into the souls of countless millions of little children. Why should we be bent on destroying the beautiful and uplifting idea? Because they are possessed of the lowest minds of darkness, apparently seeking to upset social regularity and religious customs about which cluster noblest thoughts and highest impulses. They seek to destroy, but they shall not replace what they would tear down with something as good or better. With insensate rapacity, with boldness, openly and without inhibition, they would wipe out the highest ideals of a world that has often helped them and stood between them and the pangs of hunger.

CHRISTMAS.

Flooding the world with Christmas messages, expressing good will and good wishes, must yield an influence for a better and more charitable state of mind. Society is charged with the finest sentiments at this season, and we believe people generally are sincere. If this widespread prevalence of sympathy and kindness could be perpetuated and not lost in currents of selfishness, there would be less strife and more happiness.

This good feeling is inspired by commemoration of the birth of the Nazarene—the world's greatest exemplar of pure and unselfish service. The brief span of years from the manger of Bethlehem to the cross of Calvary, furnished an example of peace and good will that has since beckoned society to higher and nobler standpoints of thinking and living. Shortcomings people have shown are due to failure to follow the perfect leadership that came into the world 2,000 years ago.

At this time, having thought of the gentle Nazarene, the best comes to the surface. People think more kindly and act more generously. They are prompted to extend the hand of good fellowship and helpfulness. They forget petty differences and join in breathing the spirit of hope and cheer. May they let the force of the Christ ideal, omnipresent now, give society higher standards permanently.

Looking for a Place to Cut Taxes.

Omaha Bee: The editor of the Nebraska Gazette expresses doubt of any material reduction in taxes, in spite of all the pre-election promises. However, the activity of taxpayers' leagues in various counties throughout the state evidences the popular determination to fight the issue through.

State, county, school and city expenses are being surveyed and scrutinized. A questionnaire recently sent to a number of Nebraska editors by the Omaha Bee revealed little vent of the campaign idea that millions could be saved by abolishing the code system. The chief target now appears to be the schools.

The three chief expending agencies of the state, the penal and charitable institutions, the state normal schools and the state university, have presented requests for increases of $3,000,000 in appropriations for the coming two-year period. A large portion of this is for the purpose of expansion, including new buildings.

Frank O. Edgcombe, the Geneva editor, declares that if the other state institutions had additional housing facilities as badly as the industrial school for girls in his town, it would be cruel neglect to deny relief.

A justification for economy that is seldom heard is that of consolidating some of the widely scattered state institutions. W. A. Farley of the Hamilton County Taxpayers' league recently said something on this topic:

"We have four normal schools, what two are simple." They started only to provide for two-year courses, but soon enlarged to double that term. The agricultural school at Kearney was needless extravagance, and there are many applications that should be wiped out."

Not many will agree with his position, but the need of large institutions by the state is not properly a field for public support. Training for public service is to be distinguished from mere education in the product motive. There is a feeling that education along business lines has been carried too far in the schools of Nebraska. The plan of the taxpayers' committee declares that shorthand and typewriting should be taught in business college, and not in high school. It is in a position that home economics and domestic science should be learned at home instead of in the classroom.

There is a feeling, however, in the protest, as is also music teaching and the giving of class plays. There is some sign here of an unwarranted opposition to cultural courses, and a pinch-penny policy that would deprive the children first of contact with anything more than hard facts. There is reason, however, in the proposal for closer methods in the purchase of books and supplies, and the standardization of texts throughout the country.

The schools of Nebraska must not be allowed to suffer through mistaken economy; neither should they be directed into a fetish, in which they are never perfect than any other function of the government, but those doing wrong would lessen their valuable service as a means of lightening the tax load, even while allowing other divisions of government to escape without paying their expenses. The small attendance at the recent state convention of Taxpayers' leagues in Hastings may be attributed to the belief that too much criticism was directed at the schools and not enough at other expending agencies.

Might Qualify as Leasary. The Yankton Press and Dakotan, The New York appellate court has decided that false teeth are not toilet articles. Yet, dentists would hardly consider the toilet complete without them.

Opportunity Overlooked. Washington Star: If the publishers of German marks had reserved a little space for advertising they might have made the enormous circulation profitable.

Students Write For Business Law Course

"How I Fed My Steer."

(Prize-essay by Charles Donaldson, Albion, Neb.)

Last summer my steer was lame so he could not go to the pasture; I cut corn for him and gave him hay. In the fall he got over the lameness so we thought he would be a good calf for a club. In January I bought him. I gave $30 for him. I put him in the barn twice each day. I fed him about two gallons each day. He weighed 605 pounds the 24th of January. I let him run with the cattle in the day time for about two months. Then I fixed up a little yard. I let him and my other calf stay together then.

September first he weighed 1,084 pounds. He made a daily gain of about one pound. Two of his club calves went to the Lincoln fair, got third prize at Lincoln in the class of purebred steers. He also stood next to the calf that won the silver cup for best purebred Shorthorn.

I also showed him at the Boone county fair. The judge put him second in his class for quality, but when the committee examined the reports they gave him first in his class and made him champion of the Baby Beef Club.

Monday after the fair we shipped the steers to South Omaha where he sold for $11.75 (per hundred lbs.) which was 25c on the hundred higher than any other steer in the club sold for and was also 25c on the hundred more than any other beef animal had sold for in Omaha for almost two years.

The Message of Death.

Portland Oregonian: One issue of a daily paper will show how progress of civilization has increased the number of causes of death. Time was when it was a disgrace to die with boots on; now that is a common way. Electricity, carbon monoxide, gasolines exploding in a cookstove, all deal death freely with the dependable automobile as accessory. No more is one sure of dying peacefully in bed.

Poem by UNCLE JOHN

When the breezes blow contrary, an stranded on the beach, where there ain't a sign of light, or a harbor in yer reach—When yer haversack is empty, you can't produce a dime.—Remember that we've all been there—many a time!

When you think yer lot is harder than yer moral frame can stand. An' it's plainer every minute that you're runnin' out of sand.—It makes me want to cheer ye with a soul-in-time!—Remember that we've all been there—many a time!

We got to have a sperit that is able to contend, if we'd reach the crown of glory that is just around the bend.—There never was a mountain-top that courage couldn't climb.—Remember that we've all been there—many a time!

for your Uncle John

Self Destruction.
Bixby: It is an old theme but merits attention ever and anon. Monday's Journal carried a graphic picture of a diver salting a diver cap with a full cup of youth, as it were. It was a case of suicide, so apparent was the danger, that it hardly needs a question. Why did he do it? In his case it was not the intelligent reporter who ventured a conjecture. His own near relatives reasoned the matter from every angle and reached the unanimous verdict that he was "dependent." It is a safe bet that one who thrills with the joy of living, will not end life because of the rupture of it. If he wants to die it is because he is weary of the world and all out of harmony with its arrangements. That he is dependent is a matter of course, but it is a mockery to mention the obvious when the vital cause of the tragedy is that which makes one dependent. To say that one killed himself because he killed himself would make the matter quite as clear as to attribute the act to idleness.
If ever I employ a gun,
Or best my brains out, one by one,
Let it be known that I was free
From terror or dependency.
Let it be published far and wide
That I committed suicide today.
Because this earth was just a bit
Too joyful—I put up with it.
The best I could till really I
Was feistly surfeited thereby.
Sometimes I felt so glad and well
I almost wanted to raise the roof.
No songbird in the forest free
Had ever much to boast of me.
Fact is I had more joy on hand,
More sweet content than can be told stand;
Hence was it that I up and died
From one full dose of cyanide.

Clarence, Neb., Dec. 20.—Clément Adams plotting to be an ex-service man, and claiming Pueblo, Colo., as his home, was placed on trial this morning in county court before Judge Heath, charged with obtaining money under false pretenses. It is charged that he went about the country and by giving a hard luck story prevailed upon the Red Cross, American Legion and other patriotic and charitable organizations to advance him funds. He also claimed to have just been released from a hospital but that he was on his way to a hospital, it was said.
He obtained money in several towns in northeast Nebraska, it is claimed, among the places being Stanton, Plow, Neligh, Camargo, Plainview and others. He was arrested at Neligh Monday and brought back to Pierce for trial.

Richard Lloyd Jones tells About The Light Maker

WE were groping our way across the street intersection which was hidden in the pitch darkness of a moonless midnight when we were startled by the rattle of the dead arc-lamp above us. Then we heard the creak of the pulley that held it and we knew that somewhere close to us in that dark-stillness was a man feeding out the wire to lower the lamp to the street level. We waited and watched. Presently a flash lamp was laid on the ground and revealed the lame lamp and its doctor. By the dim reflection we saw him place a platform which he presently mounted and then went to work.
"Stand back a little," he said, "the wind might sweep the lamp over to you, and you're on the ground."
"I suppose you're perfectly safe on your platform?" was our next query.
"Safe as long as I use but one hand at a time," he said. "By using two hands I can easily make a short circuit through my body."
"That would kill you of course?" we added knowingly.
"Maybe not," he replied.
"If that's the instant shock that kills but the continued shock, the current cooks the blood cells. I thought of the blood cells become so cooked that the other cells cannot cure them, you die. But if most of your blood cells are left normal you will live. I should certainly current that was three times the voltage here. It was so great that instead of killing me it repelled me. It threw me to the ground. I was unconscious many hours. But as you see, I was not killed. The burning process did not last long enough."

"Does this street meet with Jenner down there?" he said, pointing to an arc block below. "I am not much acquainted about this district. I am a student. Good night," he said, and he was off to higher up the curb highways of men.
We didn't learn much about electricity in that dark talk in the midnight hour, but we learned again the scholar's duty.
He is a wasteful student who does not use that which he knows for the benefit of other men. It is the scholar who serves, and who justifies the universities of the world. The man who finds in culture only a source of self-gratification, who is contented with the mere possession of culture, who is not impatient to use it, who is unwilling to take the risk of getting thoroughly into the currents of life that he might while he lives do his part to light up the dark avenues of the world, is not living true to the highest purposes of life. He serves a high service who goes about alone, content, but fearless, spreading light in his still dark and troubled world, and giving it without the applause of those who profit by it and who never see the good deed done.
Along the dark and silent pathway in that midnight hour that student was putting out practice the highest prerogative in life. Willingness to do some good unseen, some good that brightens the pathway of others, is the subtle practice open to all.
If each of us would mend a lamp or fix a lamp, risk a little to do a little for the common good, the world would find a greener letter and seem much brighter.

Pretty soon in congress we may expect to see the farm bloc, the labor bloc, the Wall Street bloc, the brewers' bloc, a hotbeds' bloc, and a do-gooders' bloc, and every one sent according to its voting strength and the way it is massed. And they will log-roll, each with all the others, and get everything they want, and then the country will be happy, wealthy and wise, and everybody supported by everybody else, and every body mooching on everybody else.

"With the passing of the parties there is no more control of party control and party responsibility. Which is somewhat the same thing as to say there will be no control and no responsibility."

"We shall have government by the interplay of little groups and of individuals upon each other. It looks as if a good time would be had of all for each, day by day, in every way, in getting madder at all the others. And everybody is preparing to enrich himself by the success of his party, else, who no doubt has acquired it unjustly—and even if he hasn't it doesn't matter very much anyhow."

"That is the way they are doing it in Europe, where in most parliaments, there are about half as many 'blacks' or 'parties,' which are purveyors, except in Russia, which has gone all the way and there is only one bloc with Lenin and Trotsky's prophets. Who are we of America, there should be no such thing as the example of our own father and mother's countries that are so hilariously demonstrating the capacity for government—fidelity and efficiency?"

"If George Washington—and Thomas Jefferson and Alexander Hamilton—were still alive, they would see us now they'd leap from their clinging cerements to join in the glad festivities. And they'd bring axes to make it more democratic—and get done with it quicker."

"Meanwhile we fancy 'my' Reed will not lament overmuch because he's without a party, and he'll get much use for a party anyhow, except to kick and cack and caw."

The Easy Way. Beatrice Eckstein says some people spend their whole lives—in an effort to live longer. They spend their time and energy in first one fad and then another, until they've lived long enough their days, and forget to fill them with the things that make life really worth living.

There are other people who give no thought at all to the maintenance of life, until they suddenly realize that their days are shortening. Then they cry out for a miracle, and they begin to lengthen their days, and forget to fill them with the things that make life really worth living.

The first mistake people who give no thought at all to the maintenance of life, until they suddenly realize that their days are shortening. Then they cry out for a miracle, and they begin to lengthen their days, and forget to fill them with the things that make life really worth living.

This report will doubtless raise the hopes of numerous credulous persons who are constantly on the watch for a new and wonderful cure. There is just one way to a long life. That is the careful, conscientious, and consistent observance of the laws of life—physical, mental and moral. There is no short and easy way. It is long and hard. But it is worth while.

Escaped Convict Caught. Stanton, Neb., Dec. 20.—Joe Lutker, arrested here for stealing two horses and a cow, was taken to the county jail here, where he confessed that he is an escaped convict and that he is wanted by the prison authorities at Hastings, Neb. He was sentenced to a three-year sentence on a charge of forgery. A telegram to the Huntsville prison confirms Lutker's confession. He will probably be returned to Hastings.

Lutker served a year and a half of his three-year sentence and escaped in 1919. He came to Stanton in 1921 and remained here until Christmas of that year. He returned here last summer and has been working in the south part of the county since.

Showdown Seems to be Coming. Philadelphia Public Ledger. Ambassador Harvey is having some trouble in London. A significant time he comes as the British mission with the chancellor of the exchequer at its head will be in Washington on the matter of allied debts. "Debts" is the keyword in the tangle. Always it is an American debt. American loans are the only thing all Europe can agree upon. Every hand extended across the sea is palm up. Washington is the first pivot upon which great events may swing. Temporary expedients may help for a little time, but it looks as if a showdown is coming.

First Seaplane Flight From Battleship

Richard Lloyd Jones tells Us To Reduce Musical Temperature

WE recently referred to an American musician who, in his splendid ability to play the piano was highly greeted by music lovers across the seas. Her fingers were educated to tickle the ivy but she was not a copy of musical genius that she thought America shared nothing of the highest culture, that to find a law she must consult the laws of nature. She had to go abroad to learn America's worth.

The American may be a boastful bird; he may swagger and strut about his inventive genius, about his bulk production, about his manufacturing enterprise, but he is not a copy of nature's justly boast. But his boast may go farther. Nowhere in all the world is so good a hearer being written as in the music of the great composers.

Most of our art producers, which includes our poets and philosophers and novelists, our writers, our architects, sculptors and painters, have arrived at a high appreciation of this fact. But the musician has still much to learn. This is due to the fact that too few of our musicians have a cultural foundation. That is why they speak in terms of "great masters" and talk of appearing before "crowded benches," duking an artist, contesting and all the fool-ery of royal rubbish.

This simply means that such musicians, however well they may warble or vibrate the violin strings, have not touched the first and highest of all art which is appreciation of poetry and the understanding of philosophy. When they do they will sound as if as fine a compliment to be privileged to appear before a cultured Chicago audience as to be invited to suit some of those no-account Counts.

The musician shows his literacy by having to his appreciation of music and over appreciation of advertising "the great masters" has been in contact with and the crown before which he has bowed.

The one thing that the musical-minded men and women need most is a more liberal education with which to grasp ideas, to reach understanding and comprehension that they may go through life with a temperature that is modified by rational common sense.

Win Fifty Ribbons

Drovers - Journal-Stockman.
Fat cattle and hogs exhibited by the U. of N. Agricultural college at the International Live Stock exposition, Dec. 2-3, won fifty ribbons and 1000 in prizes. The show was the largest they far held and the competition exceedingly keen in both the fat cattle and the fat barrow classes. In the latter class, only its stock did not win any championships this year, several reserve championships and quite a few first prize blue ribbons were won as well as a number of group ribbons.

Fat Cattle Classes.
In the fat cattle classes, competition was made up from twenty to forty entries in most classes. James of Sundance, a senior-yearling Aberdeen Angus steer, was placed third in a class of twenty-eight. The first prize winning steer in this class was shown by the Texas college and was later made champion Angus of the class. Roy Marvel, a Junior Shorthorn calf bred at the college, was placed sixth in a large class of calves. Mischief 10th, a junior yearling Hereford showed the college ranked 7th in a class of thirty-three. Charmer's Favorite, a junior yearling Red Polled steer was made first and reserve champion of the breed. Sam, a senior calf of the same breed was placed fourth in his class. Lancaster Girl, a white-faced, black beifer, representing a combination of Hereford and Angus breeding, stood seventh in the largest class of the show—namely, the grade and cross bred senior calves. She also won second in the Hereford species. In the Gallaway division, Nebraska won four firsts, one third, and the reserve championship. In the carcass competition, three steers were entered and won a total of $55 in premiums. Worthy Davis, a senior yearling Gallaway, was placed second on foot and fifth at the packing house. Worthy Choice, a junior yearling Gallaway, was sixth in his class. Charmer's Favorite, the junior yearling Red Poll, was third in the class in which he showed in the slaughter test.

Four Hog Breeds Shown

The hogs displayed by the college numbered thirty-six and represented the Poland China, Duroc Jersey, Chester White, and Hampshire breeds. Practically all of these hogs as well as the cattle mentioned above were bred at the college. The Poland Chinas showing in the light class, won third and eighth in the individual rating. The hogs stood first, second, and fourth in their class, and won first on both the live and the slaughter test. In addition, they were made reserve champions of the show. On get of sire, the Duroc Poland barrows rated fifth. The Chester barrows placed fourth as pen in the light class, eighth in the medium class, and second in the heavy class. In this latter class, the individual barrows constituting a pen of three, were rated second, fourth and fifth, prior to the awarding of the pen prize. On get of sire, the group won third and eighth in the individual rating. Only one pen of Chester Whites was shown, which won third. They were very tumpy, but not quite as fleshy as hogs shown by eastern exhibitors. The light weight Hampshire barrows won second, fourth and seventh individually and as a pen, stood third, while the heavy barrows took the first prize and as a pen stood fifth.

Considering that the 1922 International Live Stock exposition has gone on record as the greatest show of its kind ever held in the world, the University authorities feel well pleased with the showing made by live stock which they exhibited.

Judging Term Does Well

In addition to the above awards, the team of students representing the University of Nebraska in the college student's judging contest which was held on Saturday, Dec. 2, ranked fourth in a field of twenty teams. Mr. Arnold Fouts of Diller ranked second among the one hundred individuals that competed, and Mr. Lynn Grandy of Eden, Wyo., ranked third. The team ranked first in sheep judging and second in Percheron horse judging. Prof. Wm. H. Savin coached the team.

The Nebraska team has made a very creditable showing at the International Live Stock exposition since 1917. That year the team stood first, the year following third, while in 1919 and 1920, Nebraska ranked second, in 1921 sixth, and this year fourth. Considering that approximately twenty teams have competed during each of these years, Nebraska has certainly made a uniformly acceptable showing. Judging contests are very teacher-ous, as was indicated this year by the fact that the state which won the contest in 1921, namely, Ohio, had to be content with thirteenth position in the contest recently held.

When an infant his family was in hard circumstances and the mother was ill so the child was given into the custody of a neighbor whose name was Anderson. The Anderson family moved from the home town in Iowa and took the child with them. The Sachau family had for years been searching for the son and Dr. Anderson had likewise been searching. His mother and sisters are still living but his father died in 1910.

A meeting of the Oakland Ministerial association was held last week at the home of Rev. and Mrs. M. G. Nelson of that place to welcome Rev. J. A. Carlson, new minister of the Baptist church.
Gilbert Nelson, mail carrier for a number of years at Oakland, Monday of last week suffered a stroke of apoplexy while on his route. The serber found him lying by the car in an unconscious condition.
Mrs. J. E. Mahoney of Plainview, died Tuesday last week. She was one of the pioneers of this part of the state.

Mr. Corson was standing between the sheller and engine, and as the belt was being put on, it slipped off and became tangled in one of the wheels pulling the sheller and engine together. Mr. Corson attempted to escape by stepping down, but his shoulder was caught between the machines and dislocated. The ligaments were torn loose and the shoulder-bone was badly crushed.

Randolph Man Makes Marriage Settlement
Randolph Times-Enterprise: J. H. Ostrander of this city has untangled the tangle of his recent wireless marriage at Omaha to a young widow of 22. The girl after the marriage, refused to live with the man she had accepted as her husband in the marriage service and in a week thereafter sued for divorce, temporary alimony and attorney fees, bringing the suit in Omaha and securing temporary support of $10 per week. This without notice of suit to Mr. Ostrander and the latter didn't hurry very fast to comply with the court order, but did lay his case before Attorney Peasinger, who by a speedy while on his route. Peasinger was entitled to no standing in court, much less a divorce and alimony.
With his attorney Mr. Ostrander went to Omaha; the girl and her lawyer were called into a consultation, at the end of which the Omaha lawyer was obliged to admit he had no case and the girl's cause for action. By agreement Mr. Ostrander declared the party who was entitled to a decree, the alimony feature was dropped and the case settled between the parties, the court action for setting aside the marriage to come later.
Ms. Ostrander gave the girl a modest sum of money, not because he was compelled to do so, but rather because he felt so disposed. He has lived long enough to run up against and to solve numerous perplexing situations, but this was the first experience of this kind. But J. H. takes it all as in the day's work and with the proposition that there always has to be a first time, but not necessarily a second one, anyway he didn't get his picture in the case daily papers and that helps some.

and China bear crawled under some alfalfa on the Carl Warden farm west of Enola and the hay makers covered the animal up while building a hay stack. The animal lived there for forty-seven days without food or water. When the stack was broken the hog was found to be almost blind, so thin that the ribs nearly protruded through the skin and so weak it could not walk. A little scientific feeding has brought the hog around in good shape and it will be ready for the market soon.
This story is brought from the farm by John Tannehill who saw the hog and is authority for the story.
Farmers who discussed the story of this hog's hunger strike, say they have known many cases of hogs hiding away for many days and living without food or water for weeks at a time, but there is no local record of a hog living forty-seven days without food or water. Farmers declare that they think the story may be true and that a healthy, fat hog can live a long time without food by the absorption of the body fat. Anyway, it's a story that is being argued among hog breeders.

The ultimate end of all beef cattle is the butcher's block. The producer to be successful must produce a quality of beef acceptable to the packer and in demand with the consumer.

Chicago is the largest and most representative market in the world for prime beef. Records there show that Herefords have for the past few years brought the highest price, on finished carcasses, OVER ALL BREEDS.

During 1921 Herefords sold higher than other breeds. 171 out of the 261 regular market days; 44 out of the 51 weeks; 11 out of the 12 months. In other words, regular market loads of Herefords outsold other breeds 89 per cent of the time.

In January, 1922, the Hereford record was still better than during the previous year. They topped the market 18 out of the 20 leading market days.

We have some choice young bulls for your inspection.

Visitors Welcome.

Brown was one of the early settlers, coming here in 1838.

From Pines Journal, Dec. 11, 1879:

If the railroad runs to Martinsburg, it is presumable that the depot at this place will be moved across the creek.

Our esteemed postmaster, Mr. Reynolds, went hunting on Monday. He shot two rabbits and some quail. Those he did not shoot were badly frightened.

The ferry boat between Sioux City and Covington has had a sorry time for the past week, working its way to and fro through the ice. It is to be supposed the boat is now frozen fast for the winter.

The price of wheat and hogs is consistently going up in Sioux City. On Tuesday, wheat was $1.10 per bushel and hogs $34.00 per cwt. The Sioux City Journal says that the price of wheat is higher than it has been before in seven years.

Wa-ha-hop-bog and Sne-he-pug-wug, two noted Winnobago chiefs, are henceforth to look much like Tuesday, with their horses and wagons, and a big drove of cows, mules, oxen, papposes, squaws, sisters, children and ants, enroute for the Santee agency.

The St. Paul and Sioux City railroad is splendidly built and equipped, and hence does not look much like the little wheelbarrow track and toy wagons of our C. & B. H. However, all these things will be changed shortly, and this country can deem it well to estimate about the St. Paul company has the matter in hand.

The river is frozen over, but no tennis cross is yet laid. A man with a heavy load of green cottonwood lumber attempted to cross at this place this morning, when the ice gave way and both horses went through. It was at a point where the water is only a few feet deep, however, so he succeeded in getting the team out.

The coal company had a meeting on Monday at Stough & Welty's office. At such meeting, O. P. Sulzberger, Esq., and Judge Kings were appointed a committee to lease land for the company, and members were required to pay up half of their subscription or before the first day of January next. The meeting adjourned until next Monday evening, at 7 o'clock.

Randolph Hogs Top Market.

Provers Journal, Stouleville. A load of April pigs averaging 202 pounds were brought in Wednesday by Schuyler Wilson of Randolph. These hogs were well finished Durocs and were sold at $8.00, the top price here yesterday. Mr. Wilson is specializing in Durocs and although he is at present feeding a load of cattle, he is giving most of his attention to the raising of hogs. The load today was the first shipment out of about 250 head which he had on hand. He plans on raising even more hogs next year as he is breeding 64 sows for spring farrowing.

"I am a strong advocate of running hogs in the cornfields and letting them do the work of weeding and feeding. In my opinion hogs do equally as well and possibly better when fed in this way. Also there is a lot of expense and work eliminated which naturally results in a better margin of profit.

"There was an excellent corn crop in vicinity this year and with a lot of cattle on feed there is a good demand for it from feeders who are paying better prices for it than can be obtained on the markets. Indications are that the big end of the year's crop will be fed locally with only nominal amounts being sent to market."

He Doesn't Have to Talk. Omaha Bee: Credit at the bank about. One of them is the never ending stream of advice that is being given him.

Ever Have It? If you have, the statement of this Wayne citizen will interest you. Ever have a "low-down" pain in the back? In the "small," right over the hips? That's the home of backache. If it's caused by weak kidneys, use Doan's Kidney Pills. Wayne people testify to their worth. Ask your neighbor. Mrs. Jake Welburn, Wayne, says: "I had a lameness and soreness across my back and kidneys and my kidneys did not act right. I was led to believe Doan's Kidney Pills were the remedy to try. Doan's bought at the Wayne Drug company, benefited me so I kept using them. Two or three boxes made my kidneys healthy again and my back strong. I haven't been bothered since. Doan's surely did a world of good for me." Price 50c, at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mrs. Welburn had. ### UNCLE WALT

The Peet Philosopher

The Hidden Case

Each fellow has his dark blue sorrow, his fierce, corroding grief or care; and one, some sympathy to sorrow, will talk about it everywhere. He'll butt his head against the bound corner, and say "These lines while I tell, in language strictly chaste and proper, about the woe that makes me yell." And he will stop the village banker, who is intent on honest gain, and cry, "I have a secret canker, a large three-cornered convex pain." He corners now the earnest pastor, he backs him up against a wall, to tell about the grim disaster that o'er his life has cast a pall. And how the people dread to meet him, at sight of him their faces pale; they're tired of all the woes that eat him, they're weary of his rancid tale. Another comes to him a trouble, a man size grief, a super-woe; and yet he hears his laughter bubble, as he goes weaving to and fro. "My grief's a private thing," he reasons; "why advertise a heart that's sore?" To air my sorrow at all seasons would make me a dinary bore." Another comes, he goes he's greeted with smiles that warm his careworn heart; to needless stories he is treated, by all who meet him in the mart.

Iron Justice.

My cousin, Charles Augustus, is so on modern justice, he makes an earnest wail; for he was pinched for speeding, and; heedless of his pleading, they sentenced him to jail. Before the peepers nailed him, before the jurist jailed him, he used to talk a lot about the loved voters who speeded up their motors—their conduct make him hot. "Here fines will never punish these speedsters wild and Hunnish," I often heard him say; "in prison let them languish; perchance such dole and anguish will make them change their ways. No matter what their standing, I hope to see them landing in prison for their crimes; here fines won't make them wrighter; they merely grin and giggle as they dig up the dime." And after all this talking a peeler caught him rocking his old tin bus creeds are fashioned, and old ones to the dump are tossed, his essays, snuffing and impassioned—I read them all, and hang the hours. And thus my golden hours are taken, I have no time for honest toil; my aunts must scrub fore and the bacon, my grandpa tills the fertile soil. The pastor says he's sorely smitten because I go to church no more; but books by Wells have at my belt, and I must get those at the store. The statesmen seek me at my writing, to ask me why I do not vote; they find me with a new law. Well, now, that strikes a high and ringing note. The greaser comes, his pencil whittling, and counts up such he says are true, he sees me sitting up with Britling, and Mr. Britling sees it through. If one would go where Wells is leading, he has no time for other things; the long, long hours he spends in reading, until the village curfew rings. If Wells would take a brief vacation, I might get something useful done, regain my long lost reputation for industry and triumph won.

Youth and Age.

When I was young my trenchant pen for all reforms was strong; I looked upon my fellowmen, and saw them headed as long since, and triumphant in its den, writte virtue limped along. Abuses of a hundred sorts were thick as they could be; I called upon all dead games wretches to usset things with me; and writing fluid, quarts on quarts, I spilled, to make men free. Where fell corruption bared its fang, the Nemesis I tread; and no one seemed to care a hang for anything I said; men listened to my wild harangue and said, "You have my head." I look back from the heights of age, where I serenely rest, and wonder at the foolish rage that used to fill my breast, a deadly warfare I would wage for things that were a joke. The evils that aroused my ire are all forgotten now; the dragon, with its mouth of fire, I have not seen; it's wiggler, to assault a lyre, some wreaths upon my brow. Where are the wild-mines I would assault, the Nemesis I tread? Where are the issues, throbbing, warm, of that dim, distant day? Where are the fiends in sinners' form, that went forth to smite? The goblins and the bogies died, and others took their place; the heroes laid their sword's aside to hand a loaf, and others took their place on their broomsticks ride, new perils round us race.

Just as Good.

I wished to buy Bill Shakespeare's plays, and to the Book bazaar I fared. I'd heard some people highly praise the stuff the Shakespeare had prepared. Now authors, every day or two, spring up, in these exciting times, and it is all that I can do to keep up with their prose and rhymes. I think so hard to keep in touch with all that's good and up-to-date, and oft I find I've got in dutch, when it is time to say the truth, and to say "Shakespeare's latest book, and said the clerk, who by me stood, "We're all sold out today, goodness, but here is something just as good." "Perhaps," I said, "the books you show make Shakespeare's cheeks with envy burn, but from your simon-stone I go, and nevermore shall I return. For long and weary years I've stood the gall of salesmen who assert that they have something just as good when I would buy that or skirt. I ask for pills of cottonwool, I ask for spark-plugs for my lyre, and they have something just as good, but here it is, things that I desire. So I have framed a solemn vow to boycott merchants of that kind," then with my wreath upon my brow, I left the book bazaar behind.

Crosses Polands and Hampshires.

Drovers Journal Stockman: "I have been following the plan of crossing Polish crosses with Hampshires," said M. G. Bley of Plainview, "and have been very much pleased with the results. This cross produces a hog that finds favor with buyers, and that is a good rustler, is hardy and makes rapid growth. They also fatten quickly. The load I had in today made practically all their gain in the cornfields and were in the lot on a finishing feed only a little over one week.

"They sold at $7.85, the top price, and had an average weight of 238 pounds. This was the second load marketed of this year's crop, the first load reaching the market on November 14th and averaging 231 pounds. My hogs took care of the harvesting of fifty-five acres of corn and did well on this feed. I fed some supplementary feeds, giving them tankage at all times. I am rather partial to this feed and believe it pays good returns on the investment.

"There has been very little cholera reported this year. This is due very largely I think to the fact that it has become a pretty regular thing for breeders to vaccinate. I invariably vaccinate when the pigs are small and consider that it is always well paid for the labor and expense. We had 79 brood sows last year and have about the same number this year.

"Although we had a good crop of corn, cattle feeding is so extensive that indications are that there will be hardly enough to feed out what cattle are now on feed. What corn is selling is moving mostly to feeders and there seems no question but what it will nearly all be taken care of this way."
