HONEY PHILOSOPHY For 1922

HERE'S the housing problem. HERE'S the "high taxes" business' but how do you get back to the ways of our sturdy and hardy forefathers? Well, we've got to face all this marital discontent, Everybody got married, got divorced, got married again, got divorced again, and the whole trouble could be stopped by nobody and no one at all. Then we've got the trouble with children—nothing but cry and meretricious and the people decide not to have any children. Really, there isn't a confounded thing right with the whole world, so why not stop it? Can't it be done? Boy, were, in a fix. Maybe the doctor not waste time grooving. Then we'd have time to fix things up.

Poem

by UNCLE JOHN

Though she's fickle and contrary, there's a charm in January—to the fellow that accustomed to her curves. . . . With her north wind and skally boots and her temperate prootinn' in among a feller's sensory nerves! . . . And when she fights a duel with the little jag-o'-fuel, that's waitin' out-o'-doors to keep ye warm,—O, it takes a cheerful giver, and an optimistic liver, to demystify the old "Ferry."

But—when the neighbors gather in defiance of the weather—to taste the joys of settin' by the fire, there's an institute of learnin' where the home-fires is a burnin'—with every patriotizm is parent of desire! Then we find in January, not a handi-gaunt an' heavy, but a bosom friend beneath the wintry vest. . . . Where we find congenial labor, swappin' ideas with our neighbor, and adoptin' the conclusion which is best. . . .

While her breath is mighty searchin' in the naked trees is lurchin' and there ain't no hint of mercy in the grip,—yet the maple sap flows sweet and the budding old "Ferry" comes at the final crack of January's swish. . . . Then, rally all ye merry, to the call of January.

—Awake, an' taste the real joys of life.—No season more enchantin' with fiddin' an' dancin'—

—Brace up, an' get acquainted with yer wife!

Community Christmas Tree

A community Christmas tree in the Gem theatre building at Concord was attended by a large and joyous crowd Saturday evening. The program carried out the spirit of the occasion, and was a success in all respects. Ample funds had been provided by the business firms of Concord. Following a short program, the children were delighted by a visit from jolly Santa Claus who distributed gifts, including bags of candy. Then came an appropriate moving picture, which proved highly pleasing.

The following program was given:

- Community Singing..... Primary Folks
- Christmas Acrostic..... Intermediate Pupils
- Song of Welcome..... Miss Helen Salmon
- Reading..... Willie Wurzbarger
- Piano Duet..... Mrs. Borg and Miss Smith

Stanton Man Killed in Accident Friday

Stanton, Neb., Dec. 23.—Frank Belz, 40 years old, of Stanton, was killed shortly after 7 o'clock Friday evening in an automobile accident on the Norfolk-Stanton road about a quarter of a mile west of Stanton. It is believed death was instantaneous. The overturned car and the dead man, with his skull badly crushed, were found shortly after the accident by a passer-by.

Ran Off Grade.

Mr. Belz was alone when the accident occurred. It is not definitely known how it happened. However, it is believed that he was caught at a pretty good rate of speed and that he ran off the edge of the grade, which is very high at that point, and that the soft dirt caused the car to go off the grade. The tracks of the car could be seen for about ten or fifteen yards along the side of the embankment and then for about half a block in the ditch, where it disappeared. It is thought that in trying to bring the car back on the road he cramped the wheels too shortly, causing the automobile to upset. The overturned car was back on the grade when it was found. Directly ahead in the ditch was a post, and it is believed that in trying to avoid hitting it, Mr. Belz turned his car so abruptly as to cause it to overturn.

Found by Clarkson Man.

Mr. Belz had been to his farm about two miles west of Stanton and was returning to town with the rear of his car loaded with corn. Jay Arnold of near Clarkson and F. C. Kern of Stanton arrived on the scene shortly after the accident, extracted the dead man from the wreck and notified the Stanton authorities. Ray Eick and Milton Griffith of Norfolk also soon arrived at the scene of the accident.

Mr. Arnold, who had been to Norfolk, saw Mr. Belz turn into the road from his farm and followed for some distance, then saw his lights disappear and thought he had turned out of the road until the wrecked car was found.

Auto Not Damaged.

The automobile, which was a heavy Case car, was damaged but very little. Mr. Belz is survived by his widow, three sons, Ails, Louie, and a boy at home; two daughters, Mrs. Ed Knudtson, Mrs. Fred Beck; two sisters, Mrs. H. H. Beck, Mrs. H. H. Beck, Mrs. Kronz and Paul Belz, all of Stanton.

Business.

Stout City Journal: The holiday trade this year proved the claims that business in the city had improved. It is a fact that retail sales for the past month have been greater than for a similar period in three years. Those who recall what an effort of spending surged over the country in 1919 will be impressed by the statement that 1922 approaches the record established at that time. It should be remembered that three years ago there was more money in circulation than at any other time in the nation's history. The returns were available from war contracts. Everybody was employed and there was no distress. Wage earners had labored steadily for higher pay than they ever had received before, and the spirit of Christmas was abroad within them. They bought. Nothing like it ever had been seen before. That was three years ago, and it was a banner year for the holiday retail trade.

Consider, then, what Bradstreet's says, that the December mail order business is the best on record. Mail orders, of course, come from everywhere. A mail order business could not exist save for the fact that it is not a specialty shop. That guarantees volume, which makes possible the operation of a concern on a narrow profit margin. This year's mail order business does not, however, tell all the story of the holiday trade. It is but one small feature. The retail trade has been remarkably heavy. Many merchants have been surprised by the holiday demand and were caught short stocked. Those who were more optimistic and more conservative have profited. They placed orders early in anticipation of a heavier holiday demand. Shoppers crowded department stores and specialty shops. That section of the country seems to have been especially favored. New York for weeks has been enjoying a wave of holiday buying. The same thing is true of Chicago. Coast cities from Seattle to Los Angeles have had a big holiday business. San Francisco's volume of trades for the week, both exports and imports, has been a record. The south also has won a new independence. The advance in the price of cotton put that section of the country solidly on its feet, and it is also seen that the co-operative marketing idea is taking hold down there.

Farmers, according to Secretary of Agriculture Wallace, may look forward to a better immediate future. They will receive fully $1,500,000, 600 more for their 1922 crops than they got for their products of 1921, and without their present sales prices being proportionate to other costs. Production will be easier for the farmers as a result of legislation already enacted or pending with the certainty of becoming law. That will restore in even greater measure the country's buying power, for the farmer, with a new spirit of independence, will more freely enter the markets.

Steel production is steadily mounting. Some mills now are running at 83 to 85 per cent of capacity and others are close behind them. That does not mean that orders are being filled as actually needed. Orders increase more rapidly than they are met. Two railroad demurrage car loadings have improved somewhat, but coal production is high. Meanwhile, unemployment has been further decreased.

A better outlook, perhaps, is promised in the international economic situation. Export trade may improve within the year, with American officials interested in European assistance aiding their betterment. The British pound sterling has staged a remarkable comeback.

Week's Report From Bureau of Markets

Dec. 23, 1922.

Cattle—The cattle market has been uneven the past week, steers showing a decrease of 2c; butcher cattle steady to 2c lower; cutters and cutters 2c lower; veal calves steady. Feeder steers 15c to 25c lower, mostly 15c.

Hogs—The hog market for the week shows an increase on all grades with the exception of a 2c decrease on stock pigs. Butcher hogs increased 20c to 40c and packing sows 25c. The top for the week shows an increase of 20c and the bulk of sales 20c to 35c.

Sheep—The sheep market ruled lower for the week, most decline shown on all grades and lambs are 45c lower. Lambs decreased 10c to 25c; yearlings show a decrease of 25c; ewes and wethers mostly steady.

Wheat—Cotton prices have been unsettled, but closed slightly higher for the week. Bullish sentiment is still apparent, especially on declines, and market showed considerable firmness in face of heavy profit-taking and local selling. Holiday dullness prevailed early in the week with prices unsettled and slightly lower, but there was a sharp return due to late reports of keen foreign demand and bullish statement on foreign wheat situation. Wheat 34,847,000 bushels compared to 48,070,000 bushels last year.

Corn—Good export business developed on declines. Stimulating sales and some local selling gave corn market heavy undertones with the buying limited to routing orders and profit-taking by shorts. Visible supply—13,111,000 bushels compared to 18,268,000 bushels last year. Potatoes—The potato market is generally light; carlot shipments decreased nearly 30 per cent, averaging little more than 300 cars per day from all producing sections. With limited supplies and good demand the Chicago carlot market advanced about 30 per cent, reaching 10c. No 100-pounder bulk and sacked northern round whites, while eastern markets showed gains of 5c to 10c.

Butter—Butter market has arrived and further shipments expected. Consumptive demand has been good at prevailing prices. Fresh and storage butter moving freely. More foreign butter has arrived and further shipments expected.

Eggs—Receipts of eggs at the four principal markets show an increase for the week. Stocks in storage, January, 1,274,016 cases, compared to 867,397 cases last year. Local price 40c.

Poultry—Receipts of dressed poultry at the four principal markets were 15,283,124 pounds this week compared to 9,557,023 last week and 11,875,000 the week before. Hens, four pounds and over, 15c; under four pounds 14c; Lehigh, 14c; ducks, 15c; turkeys, 15c; geese, 13c.

over which farmers themselves must exercise control. There has been gratifying growth in farmers' cooperative marketing associations, and more of them are being organized on a sound business basis.

Aside from the help which has been given by legislation and by administration activities, strong economic forces are at work to restore a more normal relation between agriculture and other industries.

The people in the agricultural depression are more keenly realized by other groups than ever before, and on every hand a sincere desire is being expressed to what can be done safely to help the farmer better his condition.

Everything considered, we have reason to believe that better things for agriculture in the year 1923.

Shall We Move Backward?

Norfolk News: The convention of the Teachers' league which has been in session at Hastings has developed several proposed attacks upon public expenditures.

The league proposes to eliminate federal aid for public roads. A delegate asked his colleagues if they were ready to go back to the old highway act of ten days. This was a pertinent question. If we are not ready to accept the standards of olden days; if we still demand that our roads shall be improved, how are we to save taxes by throwing the whole burden of road building upon the state?

Several other proposals of the league would, if put into effect, lower the standards of our high schools and normal colleges. Before we go to this extreme we should frankly ask ourselves whether Nebraska is financially able to give its young people the same educational advantages that the young people of other states are privileged to enjoy.

What the delegates fail to take into consideration is that our schools are furnishing our children with the very best educational facilities at a cost much lower than would be possible if private schools, with their taxes as high they are not so high as would be the expense of educating our children under any other system.

The convention's demand for a 15 per cent reduction of expense is going to the problem in the wrong way. It is a good idea to do it, but the services we are willing to give up, just where we are willing to accept lower standards, and then make the error of elimination.

There is just this trouble. Specific recommendations are met with a storm of disapproval. Which is just good evidence that the public is just about getting its money's worth.

Agriculture Recovering.

Washington, Dec. 21.—American agriculture in eighteen months has effected one of the most sensational economic recoveries in history. Eugene Meyer, Jr., managing director of the war finance corporation, today declared in his annual report to President Harding.

The farmer and stock man are not yet completely out of the woods, but in spite of local difficulties here and there and unsatisfactory marketing conditions, the general position on the whole has been greatly strengthened, Meyer said. "They are still suffering from a burden of debt, the aftermath of the crisis, and some thousands of banking institutions in the country districts are in an overextended condition. But probably at no time in our history has there been so rapid and extensive an improvement in our economic position as during the past eighteen months."

Meyer described the agriculture situation a year ago when the corporation commenced to aid agriculture, as a "desperate plight" and declared that the "stability of our whole agriculture—and banking—structure was seriously threatened."

The war finance corporation immediately sought out the weakest spots in the situation, Meyer said, and set to work to remedy them. The needed credit. Its presence in the field was immediately reflected by a renewed confidence among agriculturalists.

"The growth of cooperative marketing associations," Meyer declared, "is one of the most encouraging developments in the marketing of agricultural products in recent years, for it promises to bring about definite and far-reaching improvements in the marketing of the most important commodities. They have established methods which will facilitate the gradual, orderly marketing of many of our staple commodities."

acres were sown this fall, or eighty per cent of last year's planted acreage. According to revised estimates, a total of 4,149,000 acres were sown a year ago of which 3,842,000 acres were left for harvest. The acreage sown last autumn as well as the acreage harvested this year are the highest on record.

Each particular step in the general performance raises questions and arouses interests all its own. An omnipotent Creator, capable of making the universe in six days and testing on the seventh, might put through in a ninety day legislative session the creative performances with which Mr. Bryan surrounded his campaign.

The needs of the time are too serious to permit of smiles over the connection with which the government election must be regarding the payment in sound performance of obligations so blithely entered into as a card game. Even the legislature is not entitled to meriment. The obligation is now a straight path through the confronting wilderness is upon it also.

Winter Wheat. A reduction of 820,000 acres in winter wheat sown this autumn, and one of the lowest conditions on record are announced in the December report of the division of crop and live stock estimates and the Nebraska department of agriculture. Farm labor wages are also reduced. Farm labor wages average about the same as the previous year.

It is estimated that 3,219,000 acres were sown this fall, or eighty per cent of last year's planted acreage. According to revised estimates, a total of 4,149,000 acres were sown a year ago of which 3,842,000 acres were left for harvest.

The reduction in acreage of rye is also estimated at 80 per cent as in the case of wheat, the dry, unfavorable autumn is responsible for the marked decrease in rye acreage. Farm labor wages during the past year were practically the same as those of the previous year.

Encourages Hope For the New Year

Following is the New Year's statement of agricultural conditions and prospects from Secretary of Agriculture Wallace:

Twelve months ago most of the six million farmers of the United States were starting on the long hard climb out of the valley of economic depression. They have not yet attained the heights which are bathed in the grateful sunshine of prosperity. Some, indeed, have fallen by the way. Others are still in the valley.

A year ago, when speaking of the prospects for farming in 1922, I said that while there was no reason to expect boom times for the farmer in the near future, there was promise of better times, both for the farmer and for those whose business is largely dependent upon him. The year has brought fulfillment of that promise. Speaking generally, times are better, much better, than a year ago, both for agriculture and for industry.

Crops have been good, on the whole. Prices of the major crops are mostly considerably higher. While there has been a corresponding advance in the prices of the things the farmer must buy, the total sum which farmers will receive for the crops of this year is greater by a billion and half dollars or more than that which they received for the crops of last year. This will certainly mean better times on the farm, and farm folk will be able to ease up a little on the grinding economy they were forced to practice the preceding year.

The labor cost of producing the crops of 1922 was still further reduced. There were some substantial increases in freight rates, which helpful legislation has now enacted and more will be this winter. Interest rates are lower and the credit situation has been eased. This has made it possible for many farmers who were rather heavily involved to refund their obligations and get themselves in condition to win the year.

There are still some dark spots. In some sections weather conditions were unfavorable and crops were short and farmers in these sections are having a very hard time of it. Freight rates are still too high, especially for those who must pay for a long haul to market.

Taxes are high, but this is largely due to the increase in local taxes.

Building Operations in Wayne and Vicinity for 1922

To Men Who are Thinking of Building

A walk or ride in almost any part of town or country will show that the season of 1922 has made some very fine improvements. All indications point that the season of 1923 will be one of the most active building years. Building increases as the year progresses, reaching its height in the summer and fall.

When, as is probable this year, the volume is great, the shipment of building supplies, coupled with the movement of crops, coal and fall merchandise, produces a congestion of railroad facilities. The result is a shortage of building materials at the points of use. Often there is also a scarcity of skilled labor. Delays are always disappointing and sometimes expensive. For your own protection we urge the earliest possible start of your building in order that you may get the full benefit of the labor and materials now available.

We are at your service in connection with any point on which you wish suggestions.

Looking to the New Year

This lumber yard is fully prepared to handle the increased building promised for 1923. No building plan is too large and none is too small for us to give the most thoughtful advice and most careful attention. The resourcefulness and responsibility of this business organization are unqualified back of every building agreement entered into. Our advice is given with a view to fully maintaining our reputation for service, and it costs nothing. If you have an idea of making improvements, come to us and let us help you work out details and quote prices that will serve your best advantage.

We appreciate the volume of business we have had during the past year, and have reason to look forward with confidence in our ability to serve better than ever during the coming year.

Signal us for cooperation in any building enterprise, big or little, and we will respond promptly, exercising utmost consideration and care.

The Prospect

Gratified over our business relations with the public during 1922, and feeling that conditions are steadily growing better, we look to the New Year with confidence. As in the past, we shall bend our energies during 1923 to build bigger and better on a foundation of service and economy. Let us serve you during 1923 and see if our efforts will not prove of mutual advantage and benefit.

UNCLE WALT
The Poet Philosopher

Avoiding Trouble.
Along the line of best resistance I take my calm and cheerful way, and so keep trouble in the distance and have a picnic every day. Some kind of mine are always getting they hunt up evils to reform, up some hard road forever panting, a weary and bedraggled swarm. They hope to mend the world and make of it a whiter spot, but it all ends in smoke and thunder, and there's a disillusioned lot. I hold it that every error will some day shrivel up and fall, but if I were a holy terror, I couldn't hasten things all. So off I've seen the ardent martyr go forth to be a saint doing good in the end he hired a cart to haul his weapons back to town. I've certain rights that should be cherished, men say my rights should be kept; but if some-timbers rights have perished, I let them slide, and lose no sleep. I've noticed that the people jealous of all their rights are short of friends, and they are ones who like to tell us a narrative that never ends. Let dauntless souls go forth to battle with wickedness at Chinaman dire; in peace sit and daily rattle a stream of discords from my lyre.

Service.
When first I bought a chignonette—'twas in the misty long ago—the dealer made an ardent spiel of service that he would bestow; and so I grasped the steering wheel and pushed the tumblers to red top. Those dark days our motor cars were needing service all the time; the wheels were full of squeaks and jags and every piston was a crime, and I would break some rods or bars whenever a hill I tried to climb. And Y. Z. Spink, the man who said he'd give me service good as what would start my motor when 'twas dead, and make its pulses strongly beat; he after left his downy curls and made my bus go up the street. The years have gone, and Y. Z. Spink does business at the ancient stand, and I have sent to him, I think, some of my coin in hand, who wished to buy cheap cars of zinc, or boats more sumptuous and grand. I say to them, "This deluge will promise service when you buy, and all he says is good and straight, like George, he cannot tell a lie." This makes a hit with every skate who has been fooled by some false guy. That merchant ornaments his town who makes his talk of service good; he gains a fine and high renown far outside his neighborhood; and there are diamonds in his crown that glitter as such jewels should.

The Greatest Boon.
"If I had health and fame nor wealth nor grandeur could allure me," said Hiram Hick, "that I am sick and all the good care I can get. A doctor told me taste like rancid paste is in my mouth forever; I'm growing worse, say doc and nurse, in spite of their endeavor. One thing alone is fit to own," sighed Hiram, heavy-hearted; "I speak of health; and now by stealth that blessing has departed." It's vain to be sick and to rest at taking in the plunder; by day and night he used to fight, and tramped his rivals under. In marcs of trade he was a minute; "I can't afford to rest," he roared, "there is no profit in it." And then one day his strength gave out, and he died. He was a man, and he was packed in ice, nerve wrecked, and rules of diet, bawled him. And now he's prone to talk and most about his agonies—abundant "Health is," he cries, "our noblest prize, the greatest of all wonders. Of what avail are heaps of kale if one has got bone spavin, if he must spend long hours on end at rubbing beeswax salve in? A cheap joint game is human fame if one has got gobs of money, and he drinks some pinks, and live on bran and sago. Good health's a graft at which I laughed when I was chasing riches; I wish I had some of that graft, and the sawbones sewed nine stitches."

German Money.
A million marks I took, and bought a stick of gum. "To stick a pass," I said, "gadzook, has this great nation come—Her coin was once as good as what, a single mark would buy as much of bread as one could eat, and eke a liver pie. But now if I would buy hardtack, three loaves of wealth weigh it, takes as much as I can stack upon a coal-man's dray." I see the Germans clean the till by a can of peas, and then I think of Kaiser Bill, who broke in gold. No luxury's to him denied, this first of cast-off kings; he lately took himself a bride, and brides are costly things. No griefs financial spoil his days or make his soul repine, he does not haul the coin in drays when he would buy a stein. If there is one who should endure the penalties of war, who should be hungry, sad and poor, it's this ex-emperor. But he's the only German skate who is fit to wear a crown. He's got a hundred-weight of marks for a cigar. His former subjects daily burst in tears and anguished groans; it takes, to buy a pound of worst, a ton of German bones. If they would buy a first of nails they must provide two trucks, and on them pile, in bales on bales, all kinds of German buxus.

Ancient History.
Theophilus P. Dickens embezzled fourteen chickens from Absalom G. Now 'twas long ago we lived together at Punkytown-in-the-Header, a long, long time ago. And now where we're abiding this Dickens gen' is right in the crest of fame, and I'm the only fellow who knows his record yellow, who knows his hen-roost game. Now he is walking straightly, and men admire his gait; he's honored in the town; for honesty unbending, for virtues never ending he has a wide renown. Yet I am fixed to shatter his prestige at one clatter, by telling of those fowls; the plaudits and the praises that now arise like blazes about him, shall change to "ribald howls" I'm but a human duffer and oftentimes I suffer to tell that ancient tale.

that yarn of Brother Dickens kidnapping fourteen chickens would make the town grow pale. But when I'm asked to tell it, I sternly quell it by my conscience is on deck; my conscience says severely, "Your duty looms up clearly, so follow it by hook or by crook." A bitter who would degrade the critter who's outgrown evil things, all past mistakes surviving, now diligently to do his duty, and who says, "I don't tell the story that might dishonor the glory Theophilus has won; the stately name of Dickens is free from the taint of chickens, it glitters in the sun."

Not Worth While.
It's vain to be sick and to rest at taking in the plunder; by day and night he used to fight, and tramped his rivals under. In marcs of trade he was a minute; "I can't afford to rest," he roared, "there is no profit in it." And then one day his strength gave out, and he died. He was a man, and he was packed in ice, nerve wrecked, and rules of diet, bawled him. And now he's prone to talk and most about his agonies—abundant "Health is," he cries, "our noblest prize, the greatest of all wonders. Of what avail are heaps of kale if one has got bone spavin, if he must spend long hours on end at rubbing beeswax salve in? A cheap joint game is human fame if one has got gobs of money, and he drinks some pinks, and live on bran and sago. Good health's a graft at which I laughed when I was chasing riches; I wish I had some of that graft, and the sawbones sewed nine stitches."

Railroads Lose Suit.
Omaha, Neb., Dec. 21.—Three Nebraska railroads, the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy, the Great Northern and the Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Omaha, lost their suit in federal court here today to restrain State Tax Commissioner W. H. Osborne and county treasurers of the state from collecting 1921 taxes on valuations which railroads claimed were discriminatory.

Senior Judge Robert E. Lewis of Denver, read the decision, in which he was joined in opinion by Judge E. C. Manger of Lincoln and Judge Woodrough of Omaha, dissented. Judge Lewis said in part: "I adhere to my tentative view stated early in this case that where the state statutes provide procedure for taxpayers for a correction of assessments, this procedure should be resorted to, and the state should resort to a court of equity. If these questions are open, taxpayers can go into a court of equity at any time, and remedy their grievances of that state. In this case, should the injunction be granted, it would leave several hundred thousand dollars in taxes unpaid for several of our institutions go uncollected. "The Nebraska statute provides that after the state board of equalization has acted, the assessor must serve a writ of error to the supreme court of the state and that if that court fails to make an adjustment then the case may be brought into the federal court. Such action was not taken and I hold this injunction denied. "Attempts for the railroads were unable to say today whether or not an appeal will be taken.

Poem
by UNCLE JOHN

If it wasn't for expenses which is certain to accrue, I wouldn't mind the problems of existence like I do. . . I alters favored incomes, an' have spoke in their defense, but you can't produce an argument in favor of expense!

EXPENSES
gasoline I've burnt,—I figger on a surplus to retain fer saltin' down, but she never lasts a minit, when I moosey off to town!

To jugulate expenses is the climax of my will, when I go against a blowout with a seven dollar bill,—but a double-header hits me whar the chicken got the axe, an' she sweeps away my surplus like a corporation tax!

I never knowed a failure that disbursements didn't cause, there's no such a thing in our economic laws—and I'll give the feller credit fer a wagon-load of sense, that invents a safety income, which is bigger than expense!

stockman do not have access to the same line of credit as other business men, not because they are not entitled to it but by reason of the seasonal character of the industry. Crops and live stock cannot be grown in thirty, sixty or ninety days and our whole federal reserve banking system is based on short-term notes, liquid assets, so that the discrimination against the agriculturist is just as real as if it were stated in so many words. There are very few farmers or stock growers who ask that the government or the banks should extend unusual credits to them. What they complain of is that under present conditions the banks cannot, according to the laws, extend to them an adequate line of credit although based upon the very best, and most liquid of collateral. If there is anything unreasonable in the request no one has yet joined it out. In the multitude of measures proposed for agricultural relief surely there is something that will remove this financial handicap under which producers have labored for years. Surely, it is right to have a bill in congress and in politics, this just complaint of farmers and stock growers will be appreciated.

Place the blame for the depression, the men who produce the greater part of the exportable wealth of the country, the men who with their families labor in season and out of season to create the real wealth of the country, on an equality in the matter of financial credits with other basic and indispensable industries and little more will be heard of the problem of agricultural relief.

Bell Obtains Injunction. Omaha, Neb., Dec. 21.—The state railway commission lost the first round of its battle with the North-western Bell Telephone company. The railway commission asked a writ of injunction to prevent the company from charging in the state for the immediate future. The federal court granted the request of the company for an injunction against the commission of which is to allow the surcharge of 10 per cent now in effect to remain in force. This means that the exchange rates will remain as they now are until further action by the court, but that the increase in toll and private branch exchange rates, which will add something like $130,000 a year to the company's income, will go into effect on the first of January.

The company will be required to put up a bond that if in the final hearing of the case, it cannot establish its right to the present exchange rates, it will refund the overcharge to patrons. This is the usual form in these cases, and it was urged by the commission that if its strong claims, that nobody would be damaged by the injunction if it gave the bond required by the court. The original order of the commission reduced exchange rates 10 per cent, increased toll rates about 17 per cent and materially added to private branch exchange costs. It was to have gone into effect Dec. 1, but because three federal judges were not available to try the injunction case, an injunction was granted possible without that number sitting, the commission changing the effective date to January 1.

The company wants a larger net return than it is now getting, claiming it is entitled to 8 per cent, and the suit, from now on, will be tried upon the issue of what rates shall be charged permanently. The company asks for a return that means a 25 per cent increase in exchange rates and a reworking of the exchanges, with the same rates applying to each group.

The right of the state railway commission to direct in the affairs of the company is also involved in the final trial. While the petition of the company calls for the making of a new schedule of rates, as an effect, its attorneys told the court that the company was asking no more at the present time than to rate branch exchange rates, and put in the increased toll and private branch exchange rates.

Increase of Cattle on Feed. Washington, Dec. 22.—Cattle on feed in the eleven corn belt states on Dec. 1, showed an apparent increase of 27 per cent over a year ago, while stock on feed for shipments for the eleven months ending Nov. 30 were very heavy, having been exceeded only twice in the history of the country, the department of agriculture announced today. On the cornbelt there were mixed increases and decreases. Approximately 20 per cent more sheep and lambs were on feed than a year ago, with the eleven cornbelt states showing 10 per cent more.

Shipments of stocker and feeder cattle and calves from sixty-seven public stockyards for the four months preceding Dec. 1 were the heaviest on record, being 2,282,000 head compared with 1,868,000 during the same period last year. Movement of sheep and lambs from all public stockyards for the four months on record, being 2,282,000 compared with 2,001,000 for the same period a year ago.

Let Europe Quit Quarrelling. San Francisco Chronicle: While the general attitude of the European people toward each other remains as it is no consideration whatever is due from us. Nevertheless, we are giving it. For one thing we are keeping a good many millions of farmers from starving to death and cleansing some millions more from the vermin which distribute typhus fever. Whenever there is any approach at reasonableness among the European peoples in dealing with each other they will find the American government and people as helpful as they could wish. We refuse to mix in their everlasting quarrels over what does not belong to any of them.

Agricultural Credit. Drivers Journal-Stockman: Congress is wrestling heroically with the problem of extending aid of some kind to agriculture. The president urged a measure of relief very strongly in his message and numerous bills are on an equality with other lines of business, the farmer would really be little better off than he was before if he produced more than this country needed and there was no market abroad for his surplus. One eastern financial writer calls attention to the fact that the farmers are an financial straits just now because of too much credit during the flush times following the war rather than too limited credit just at this particular time. "Farmers need less credits and more buyers for their products," the writer writes. "Too much credit is just as bad as too little credit or no credit at all. When our farmers can sell all the products they produce they need not need any credit other than the same class of credit that built up America's great agricultural industry. This may all be very true, but the fact remains that the farmer and MARY stopped milking the hired man she had found a real friend in her girl chum who has all the good things in life. "I used to think Mary was awful mean," said Mary, "but she's the kindest creature in the world. When she bought four diamond rings and had three others given to her it seemed to me she might have given one to me. We went to the red school together. But she learned not to give, and I learned to be envious. Then I went to school again among the daisies and along the hedge—was surrounded by my friends. My friend had let me see those rings and enjoy their beauty and that's all she got out of them herself. She kept from me the worry of guarding them.

Lady Astor Hits Nail on Head. Lincoln Journal: The conservative British brethren hooded Lady Astor when she questioned the ability of people who live in two houses to speak for the people who live in two rooms. Just the same, her way of speaking her honest mind, let the boogie fall where it may, constitutes a vast charm and usefulness in our distinguished countrywoman.

Poem by UNCLE JOHN

I wonder if the man's alive, that's got a perfect score, in plain! all the critics that his life is flashed before? It's true our dear Redeemer lived a short, though perfect span. . . . But critics pierced his lovin' heart, as brutal human can. . . . This land or our'n has shed its blood, that peoples might be free. We seized our swords and bayonets, and said "It's got to be!" We sent our dashing boys abroad, an' crushed the monster's might, and now, we bear the critics howl. "They never done it right!" Facts is—a lot of Dervishes, in editorial guise, that spends their time promotin' all the politician's lies. . . . They occupy a velvet seat, an' shake their loaded dice—they'd criticize the angels, if the devil had the price!

For every day
