Married in Wayne At Eichhoff Home

The marriage of Miss Elvora Eichhoff, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Eichhoff of southeast of Wayne, and Alfred Test, son of Mr. and Mrs. Gus Test of Wakefield, was solemnized last Thursday afternoon, Feb. 22, 2:30, at the home of the bride's uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Eichhoff in Wayne. Rev. H. Borneaman of the Lutheran church officiating. The ceremony was a double ring ceremony in the presence of relatives. Mr. and Mrs. Test will live on the Eichhoff farm. The bride and bridesmaids wore colors, were carried out in attractive decorations at the Eichhoff home. The corner of the room in which the marriage was performed was decorated in a canopy of pink and white and in white bails. Pink and white covering the dining table on which the wedding dinner was served in the evening. A large white cake with a white bell on the top of it, formed the centerpiece for the table. Miss Eichhoff wore a dress of white satin trimmed in beads. She had a tulle veil and carried a bouquet. Miss Elsie Eichhoff, the bride's sister, who was bridesmaid, wore a dress of pink. The bridegroom's brother, Louis Test, was best man. About fifty near relatives were present for the ceremony and for the dinner.

Increased Number of Motor Vehicles

In 1921 there were in Nebraska 288,794 automobiles and trucks which paid a road maintenance—of $2,742,222 as registration fees. In 1922 there were 286,577 autos and trucks for which the registration fees brought in $2,992,648. The increase in the number of automobiles and trucks for the year was 17,950 or an increase of 7 per cent. There are now more than 12,000,000 automobiles in the United States or one for every nine people. The increase during the past year has been 1,850,000 or an increase of about 18 per cent. In Nebraska there is now an automobile for every five people. Of the 117,000 farmers in the state, 94,000 now own automobiles.

Can an increase in the number of automobiles in Nebraska be expected, except such as may be due to increased population? This is a question which should be considered in discussing a reduction of automobile license fees. At the present time the fund raised by registration fees is the only one applied to highway maintenance. The road mileage is now maintained by the tax which is now considered greater than it was in 1921 while the number of vehicles registered has increased only 7 per cent. As a result of this biennium the roads to be maintained will be very nearly double what they were in 1922.

The automobiles of Nebraska travel about 1,250,000,000 miles in a year. If good roads will reduce the costs of driving one cent a mile, they will save to the automobile drivers annually about $12,500,000.

Excerpts from an address given before the road congress, by J. N. Mack, commissioner of roads, Baltimore, Md.:

"In the little state of Maryland when the late Governor Crothers in his message to the legislature recommended the licensing of motor vehicles and the charging of a fee therefor, he predicted that a considerable revenue would be obtained from this source, and that perhaps in time it would reach the sum of $100,000 per year. In the year, 1922, just fourteen years later, this 'probable $100,000' had actually reached the sum in excess of $2,800,000. When it was decided to charge a fee for motor vehicle registration, it was generally thought that they would produce considerable revenue, but certainly it would not have been thought that they would in a few years reach sufficient proportions to maintain all the improved roads within the state."

Install Accounting System.

F. G. Lockhart, an expert accountant from the Schreiber Star Accounting System company of Chicago, has been here for a week installing a new set of books at the Ahern store. It is a modern system of book accounting, designed to help merchants keep such account of their business operations as will enable them to hold their expense of doing business down to the lowest level.

Clients are furnished each month statements of comparative costs and business expenses. They are advised of stores that have this system of accounting. These figures serve to show how well conducted stores are, and regularly are recommended by expert advice on how to regulate stocks, buying, selling and otherwise the most efficient way.

Customers served by stores that are careful to conduct their business according to modern methods receive the greatest amount of merchandise and service for the money they spend.

Miss M. L. Johnston, an experienced bookkeeper, has been employed to keep these books for the Ahern store. 12221

Many Farmers Follow Careful Bookkeeping

Lincoln—About 500 Nebraska farmers kept a complete record of their farm business in 1922, according to the University of Nebraska agricultural college. The day of the "book" farmer or, at least, of the "bookkeeping farmer," seems to be here to stay.

"Guessing is a good game for children, but I cannot afford to guess about my business," is the way one farmer decided the question. "When times were good the only time I thought much about an account book was when I made out my income tax report. Now I am interested in knowing what crop is most apt to return an income."

In one Nebraska county the cost per bushel of producing corn varied from as low as 52 cents per bushel to as high as $1.03 per bushel. There was a difference in yield per acre, and also a difference in the efficiency of the use of labor. Upon one farm in this group, for example, the operator used eighteen hours of horse labor per acre before harvesting and on another farm where the yield was a little lower the horses worked forty-one hours per acre.

When a man has an opportunity of comparing his results with the results obtained by other men he naturally wishes to know just as efficiently as does the most efficient man.

Last year seventy-five farmers reported making changes in their farm operations because of keeping records. How many other changed without reporting to the college of agriculture is unknown. Six county extension agents reported farmers making changes because of records kept by their neighbors.

The monetary value of these changes cannot be estimated, according to the agricultural college, who says that it is safe to say that the average man in which the farmer or any other business man can make certain of what he is doing and which way he is headed is by keeping records.

Your Future.

To make the most money possible, a farmer should know his business, and to produce such things he markets. And, to know his production costs, the farmer should keep a good set of books. Business bookkeeping in agriculture, makes this point in a speech before the Institute of American Meat Packers.

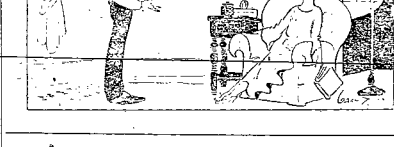

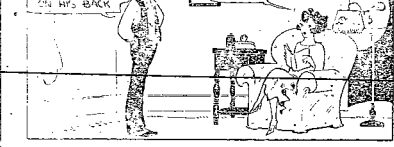

It is true of other books, "no matter what we do for a living." The average farmer, in common with nearly everybody else, works on his last of his money. He makes money on some of his products, loses on others. At some time of the year, generally when he meets his bank, he goes over his books to see whether it has been a profitable year or not, but has only a hazy notion of what lines have been profitable and which unprofitable.

Tells Experiences In Dakota Blizzard

Miss Elizabeth Mines who is enjoying the thrills of new experiences while teaching in Donnybrook, N. D., describes her impressions of the recent blizzard in northern part of the country experienced as follows:

When the topic of a North-Dakota winter was suggested as something of interest to Herald readers it seemed that such a discourse would be rather interesting or unusual but experience has proved to the contrary. We temporary residents in this town have been given to understand that we have seen a real blizzard and as reports of it have been in the Twin City papers probably Iowa and Nebraska dailies have given space to it. A personal review may be interesting to some.

The storm seemed to present throughout the northwest. Our immediate vicinity did not suffer as much as others to the east and south of us because there was less snow-fall here preceding the blizzard. Likewise there was no loss of life in this community but only minor disabilities from exposure to the cold.

The snow began to fall Monday afternoon and late in the evening it was being blown around in blizzard formation. The wind howled so all night that sleep was almost impossible. On arriving at school the next morning we found that only two of the busses had arrived and these were not many children in them as some parents feared the danger of the busses becoming lost on the open prairie with its poor trails and unfenced stretch of country. The attendance at school was only about half that of usual but all classes were held.

At noon the storm was in full swing but two of us teacher who wanted something to eat a little more than the others were willing to attempt the trip to the boarding house. In order to be out in the storm less time we took the path which leads around the side of the hills bordering the village. We started out with enthusiasm, our heads lowered, buffeting against the wind and snow. We had scarcely crossed the street before I was informed that my nose was frozen and advised to cover it up. I denied the fact, thinking that I would have first-hand knowledge, but a crushed raspberry formation on my nose, glyx proof of the fact that it really was a bit frosted. This is just an example of how freezing the North Dakota blizzard wind is.

After the first spin we found things not so easy. The remainder of the trip of three blocks was just a matter of struggling to push onward one step and then repeat the operation, often turning with our backs to the wind in order to get our breath and so avoid becoming exhausted. We stumbled into the house quite weakened and looking more like snowmen than human beings.

The return trip was easy as with the wind at our backs we were carried along, unable to stop our onward rush until we were fairly blown up against the school building. At the noon hour those in authority decided that the busses should not attempt the return trip and that the town people should keep the country children over night until the busses could travel safely.

At the close of school all the pupils were asked to go to the gymnasium as one of the busses was to make a series of trips around town in order that all should arrive safely at their homes. We teachers were to have a meeting but the two school board members who were managing things, advised us to go home in the last bus load. The bus drove up as close to the door as possible and we hurried in.

The winter school busses are built. The front of the bus has a small building with the door at the rear. The front of the bus has a small slit in it through which the horses reins go. There is also a small window above the door through which the driver looks. The two sides are built of wood up to a height of three feet and above this is a canvas covering which lets in sufficient air. On either side is fastened a plank so as to form a bench seat. A stove in the middle on one side warms the bus.

On this particular occasion the driver had difficulties which his experience recorded as the trip was not so much of a success. The window was so covered with frost that he continually wiped it clear with his hand. He did not know that the blowing snow obscured vision. The horses continually swerved in order to avoid facing the storm but the driver brought us safely to our home after what seemed a very long ride.

The next morning the wind had gone down some but we arrived at school only to find that there was to be no session on account of the poor attendance. One of our teachers returning to the house became exhausted and reached home with difficulty. Her impression was that she wouldn't care to come any nearer to freezing.

All the busses made trips on Thursday and the attendance was nearly normal. The snow fall had been slight so that the roads were not badly blocked. Several busses were late in arriving at school.

When a bus driver fails to arrive with his charges before the tardy bell rings, his month's pay is docked in proportion to his lateness. According to the bus system used here, a bus stops at each house in the district which has children who attend the school. Children, out side of the district, who wish to attend the Donnybrook school, must walk to the nearest bus line, and the parents pay the bus driver for taking the children to school.

Regular train service is just being resumed and it was a week ago yesterday that the storm began. From Monday evening until Saturday morning there were several passenger trains from the east and the through train from Minneapolis which should have arrived here early Tuesday morning didn't arrive until Saturday evening. The delay was due to the heavy drifts of snow in the eastern part of the state. Almost the entire stretch of track through North Dakota is protected by snow fences but in case of a bad blizzard these are not wholly effective.

This storm was the third and worst of the winter and it was the first time this year that the busses were unable to make the trips. At the time of the other storms the busses were late at school and school was dismissed early so they would complete the return trip before dark. At one of these times a high school girl, who lives in the country, said that for the last part of the homeward trip wind was blowing the snow so badly that the driver had to trust to the horses' instinct to stay on the trail. As Donnybrook is in the valley we cannot recall at any time how fierce the storm is on the prairie or "on top."

Coasting was very good the first few weeks after Christmas vacation and has been resumed again since the last storm. The most popular coast is that on the hill opposite the school since it can be used before school and at recess. The hill is just pasture land but it is rough and uneven and the slope has several dangerous curves in it. The longest coast is on what is known as Donnybrook hill, on the road which leads from the village east to "the top."

This coast is a series of curves about a mile long. The coasters when fortunate enough, attach their sleds to a horse-pulled bob in making the ascent. If obliged to walk the upward trip takes about fifteen minutes. The coast only consumes from three to five minutes depending on the kind of sled used. One slide of this same hill makes an excellent skiing place. Curling, an ice sport, is the favorite in this country but as Donnybrook has no suitable place for the game, I haven't yet seen a curling contest.

It has been remarked that if it wasn't for the lignite mines in this state it would be uninhabited country. There is no fire wood on the prairie, the only wood being that in the valley coalesces. The freight on coal from other states would make the price beyond the reach of all. Most of the coal consumers purchase their supply of lignite from men, whose business it is to haul it from the mines. The price ranges between $3 and $4 per ton. A man can spend most of his working hours making trips to a mine, loading coal and then unloading it at the home of the person to whom he is selling it. During the storm some families suffered from low coal supplies as trips to the mine couldn't be made and very few, if any, households lay in a full supply at the beginning of the winter. The farmers haul their own coal directly from the nearest mine.

As to the temperature in this part of the country, it can be said that it is from ten to fifteen degrees lower than that in Wayne at any time. This winter the thermometer has not registered below 32 degrees to my knowledge.

Foreign Advertising Representatives: THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

In the absence of sufficient clubs to encompass all, a cousins' club has been organized here and promises to develop as cousins are revealed and acquaintances are made which will tend to facilitate courting.

March has come in setting like a lion and spring movers are in the weather in which to travel and get settled in new homes. It will be all right with the public if the other end of the month has equally hot and disregards the old idea about going out like a lion.

At the late meeting of the Nebraska Press association, resolution was unanimously adopted expressing opposition to a proposed law granting ministers the privilege of accepting "business" cases. We doubt if many ministers are anxious for the concession. One feels better to pay his way, and know he is not an object of special favor on account of his profession or business.

In stressing the importance of courtesy, an article in a current magazine points out two business houses handling similar lines of goods. One was the scene of courtesy and service. The other felt that he could not get along without its merchandise and accordingly did not bother to be courteous. As a result, the latter floundered and failed, while the former gained strength steadily and reared a huge commercial success on a foundation of unvarying courtesy.

Representative Grant S. Means of this county, seems to be the center of a little storm in the legislature. Legislative Means who is an acknowledged leader of the house, was charged with trying to steal Governor Charley Bryan's pet bills. This foolish charge is a course he was promptly branded by Wayne's representative. Means was not elected to go down to Lincoln to dance to the bidding of the governor. He was elected to exercise his best judgment in representing Wayne county and supporting the best interests of the state, and that is what his friends believe he is doing. It is well to put a few hobbles on the Bryan administration, and it is likely people would endorse legislative restrictions now quite as much as they endorsed the Bryan candidacy in November.

The narrow partisan, like the uncompromising bigot, acts almost human until he begins to discuss politics. We like to take the most favorable view of a man, but when we have a mind picture of his many virtues all faded, including the reputation and that we see him has some partisan incongruity that would make a kindergarten ashamed of himself, we are disappointed and sickened. He has spoiled the picture. He has made himself quite intolerable. The average man appreciates the good in public leadership regardless of party, and in criticizing defects is consistently fair and charitable. On the contrary, the biased and contracted partisan goes a mile or more out of his way to detect and magnify faults, the while overlooking ground for approval. Fortunately narrow partisanship is on the wane, though some one occasionally rises to remind people that the hateful political prejudice of an earlier age is not entirely dead.

Nations are made up of individuals, and the quality of citizenship largely determines the quality of government. In a community or other group sometimes will do things that an individual would not do, however, so a government does not always reflect the character or disposition of its subjects. An individual often will meet an obligation or assume a responsibility that a government will try to evade or deny. Witness European nations' treatment of loans made to them by the United States. Witness the cold indifference with which American advice is considered! It is hoped individual subjects would not do what European countries want help, but they don't want any advice or meddling. Very much like many individuals, governments have been extended far material aid, but they don't want to be advised how to use such aid or how to map out a constructive course that would avoid multiplicity of requests for aid in the future.

F. S. Berry Elected to Office. F. S. Berry of Wayne was elected president of the Bar association of the Ninth Judicial District which was organized in Norfolk last week

Fire Destroys Much Property in Stanton

Stanton, Neb., Feb. 23.—Stanton was recently visited with a fire that night. A fire that destroyed the Methodist church with a loss estimated at $12,000, which is partly covered by insurance. Fighting the flames in temperature near zero and with a north-east wind blowing, the firemen only by strenuous work prevented the blaze from spreading to other parts of the town. When it seemed apparent that it would be impossible to keep the fire from spreading, a rush call was sent for the Norfolk fire fighters, who arrived here in record time and assisted materially in preventing further loss in the city.

Five Homes on Fire.

At one time five houses were on fire. The furnishings, which were only thirty feet from the church, was ablaze numerous times and the dwelling house of Dr. O. C. Hopper, on the other side of the church was also on fire several times. It was with great difficulty that these two buildings were saved.

Parsonage Badly Damaged

The roof on the parsonage was badly burned and the building badly scorched on one side, necessitating expensive repairs. The origin of the fire is undetermined, but it is believed that it started from the furnace. There had been choir practice held in the church in the evening, for which a fire had been built in the furnace. The flames were discovered about 10:45 by William Egan, who was on his way home from a motion picture show. He immediately turned in an alarm, but the fire by that time had gained such headway that it was found useless to try to save the burning building. All efforts were then directed toward saving adjoining property.

The Church, a Frame Building, about twenty-five years old, was extremely dry and burned almost like cotton wool and burning embers flying over the city.

Chimney is Dynamited

Only the brick chimney, about thirty feet high, was left standing and as this was considered very dangerous, it was immediately wrecked by dynamiting. Cold and numb and with their clothes frozen to them, the weary fire-fighters were able to return to their homes late this morning.

Refuses Norfolk Money

Stanton's first appreciation of the readiness of Norfolk firemen and others to assist in putting out last night's blaze was shown when a score of Norfolk people crowded the C. W. Casteel cafe. The Norfolkers hungry and cold from their fast drive called for service in the cafe. Casteel was alone on the job when the hungry crowd entered his cafe. Orders for hot sandwiches of all descriptions were shot at Casteel. He called for reinforcements and the hungry visitors doubled their orders. Some of them had consumed three sandwiches and their coffee. When the hunger was appeased and the Norfolkers trooped to take the money, Casteel insisted. Casteel stubbornly refused to receive Norfolk money. Here is what he said:

"You boys came down here to Stanton with the hope of giving us help when we needed it. We might need that help again some time. We of Stanton want to let you all know in some way that we appreciate that neighborly spirit in time of need. Your money is no good here tonight and I won't accept it."

Casteel and his little force worked for a long time cooking food for the hungry visitors who ate nearly the entire supply of provisions of the cafe before their hunger was appeased.

Many To From Norfolk
A score of Norfolk firemen and others went to the aid of Stanton when the fire whistled was blown about midnight. Automobiles were rushed to the fire station where chemical tanks, hose and nozzles were loaded up and rushed to Stanton. Upon reaching Stanton, however, the Norfolkers found that the fire fighters there had the blaze under control. Local fire fighters gave high praise to the Stanton volunteers for their heroic work. It is stated here that no fire could have been fought more effectively. The Stanton firemen fought under great odds. Only desperate work of men who were well disciplined by their chiefs could have kept the fire from spreading. Norfolk firemen say.

Horse Raising Is Important Industry

Lincoln.—Horse raising in Nebraska, an important industry and horse breeders have always been able to supply enough horses for all home needs and at the same time have a surplus for shipment to other states, says W. W. Derrick, instructor in animal husbandry at the University of Nebraska. He states, however, that horse and mule raising is more of a side line. "There are a few breeders who produce pure bred horses," he says, "but most farmers keep several mares on the place for general farm work and in addition, raise a few colts each year. Usually a market can be found for all surplus among neighbors who do not practice producing colts."

Animals Show Increase
The report of the board of agriculture showed 806,220 horses and 111,107 mules in the state in 1922. These figures show a decrease in the number of horses, an increase in the number of mules. However, as compared with the figures for 1910 and previous years, there is today an increase in the horse population. Each year there are many range horses shipped in to the state for use on farms. In the western part of the state, according to Mr. Derrick, where cattle ranching is the principal industry, many horses are used for riding and hay making. The ranches that used to make a practice of raising a number of horses for commercial purposes have, in most all cases, set their horse breeding operations down to a point where only their own needs are supplied, Mr. Derrick says.

"The number of horses on farms shows an increase over the three or four years previous," he says. "Though motor power has gone into general use in the state, and much of the plowing, harvesting and hauling is done with machinery, there remain a number of places where horses are more dependable. It will be many years before horses are discarded from Nebraska farms because they are better suited than tractors and trucks on many farms located on many kinds of soils."

Two Large Markets.
There are a number of small markets and two large general horse markets in Nebraska. The large markets are at South Omaha and Grand Island. Horses are received at these markets, graded and sold for the stall, but most generally from the ring on a regular auction day. The principal grades are pony, southern, farm chunk, draft and heavy draft.

Horse feeding is not practiced on as extensive a scale as it was a few years ago. Grand Island is the largest horse fattening center in the state. Farmers who have a few head to raise each year usually break and fatten these animals on their farm and then dispose of them privately.

Spring Number

*Advent of the New Spring Styles in Wearing Apparel for Men, Women & Children
New Developments for the Home-Beautiful*

With the coming of spring what woman does not feel a longing for exquisitely lovely colors after the somber winter ones? The softening air and the first sunny days suggest the glorious colorings of summer. So now Dame Fashion, ever capricious and inconstant, selects new shades for her favorites. And one of the first of these is green—Lumin green. Even the name has an enchanting sound. The color is that soft, delicate green like fresh, unopened grass. How exquisitely refreshing it will be on the hot days to come. Green glowing, as it does, fresh green things and the soft shadows of trees makes you feel and look deliciously cool. And still another favorite is Madame Green—It is an old saying that a woman in green longs for a rose-colored gown and fresh violets. Perhaps instinctively she knows how flattering is this delicately warm shade. But this summer when a riot of color is all the rage, all the light, bright shades are quite in vogue.

But these colors, instead of being in the flat even, are being patterned for so many months, are found in the most intricate and unusual designs on a neutral background. In fact this pattern for the summer design is the most distinctive characteristic of the season. Almost every fabric used is printed, knitted or embroidered over every seemingly available inch of its surface.

Long Lines Nearest
The gracefully becoming, long lines are still the newest—they are not the same, for the subtle way we seem to grow cleverer in our ability to drape them with more artistic simplicity. Oftentimes the new frocks are caught into an elaborate buckle on the left hip—buckles of strangely wrought gold or clear, gleaming crystal or richly colored stones. At other times they are caught into knots of the material, forming a little draping on that side.

Simplicity in Frocks.
An ancient frock of approved Greek simplicity which is most becoming to the slender figure has a deep V-neck in the front and back. The hands are tucked into both the back and front are draped into a huge pearl ornament on the left hip. From this ornament hang long strands of pearls which lie on the ground. Underneath this ornament the skirt opens to show the gleaming silver of an underskirt. It is in clever ways like these that the long, straight-lines are made possible for dancing or walking without the grass, musing step of the too tight skirt.

Modes of Afternoon Frocks.
It is on the glorious sunny days of spring when one wishes the sunlight sparkling on the waves and the yellow sands or spends a deliciously a lazy afternoon in the cool shadows of the country club porch that the season shows her loveliest interpretations of the mode for afternoon frocks. It is on just such an occasion that one will be tempted to see a beautiful littleorgette frock, made quite simply with a light blouse and a little draping at the side, where the material falls in a point just below the hem line. But it will owe its smartness to the myriad beads which gleam and glisten on its soft, dull surface. Perhaps in fashion if its wearer hangs to the fashion of a little short, tight sleeve or one of those wing-like extensions which have recently been revived.
Silk Crepe Frocks Shown.
If one wanders further on such a day, one is certain to meet one of those dainty little frocks of silk crepe. It is in these frocks that the mode fully expresses its present love of color in strange interwoven designs. These allow patterns of a white or neutral background, but the brightest, gaudiest colors lend their obtrusive touch to the intricate traceries of the design.

Voice for Sultry Weather
The cool freshness of voice, is so alluring on sultry days, so if you choose you can express the mode charmingly in a frock of voice quite as brilliantly figured as the silk ones. Other dainty little frocks achieve this same effect by having the figures embroidered.

It is not in the least surprising that the coat frock is a very great favorite again, for it would be difficult to conceive of anything either more stunning or more practical. However, they have certain marked differences from the coat frocks we wore last year. Now and again one sees a slender little mink with a graceful circular skirt, but more often the skirt is straight with first a circular flare introduced into it. One charming coat frock of serge has a circular flare of crepe set in at the closing of the frock. This is not only smart, but extremely practical as it gives freedom for walking without destroying the straight one-piece effect. The wide rever which covers almost the entire front of the waist is of the same crepe.

Unusual and Varied Sleeve
But doubtless the most cleverly varied and unusual part of the afternoon frock is its sleeve. The long, tight sleeve is the greatest favorite of the coat frock. But it must never be a plain, tight sleeve. Far from it.

Over some long, slender hand will fall a circular cuff reaching to the knuckles. Or in a gay cavalier fashion this circular cuff will be turned back forming a gauntlet. Then another tight sleeve admiring this gauntlet fashion will assume three gauntlets, whose combined effects almost reach the elbow. Or a favored way is to have three circular flares turned down, the top one a few inches below the elbow and the lowest one falling over the hand. The sleeve of the satin or chiffon frock may start out to be long and tight, but at the elbow it is very apt to change its mind and end by being full and flowing, quite as fashionably, however, it may be a full flowing sleeve straight from the shoulder.

The three-piece suit is still in high favor for spring. It is such a convenient and becoming costume, particularly for afternoon, when one dreads to a restaurant for tea or goes calling. The lovely blouses which peep forth as one opens the jacket make really a very dressy costume, appropriate for almost any and every function of the afternoon.

ferred your fancy when you are choosing the blouse for one of these suits. If your taste inclines to the Oriental, a Persian patterned silk will suit the mode as well as your personality. Of course, it will be long-waisted, cut to fit snugly about the hips, and gathered into a tightly fitted band.

Now and again a button cleverly placed will hold the jacket so snugly about the hips that it has a tendency toward a slight blouse or perhaps it will be quite frankly a little bloused and gathered into a tight band at the hips. With these jackets the line of the skirt is straight. There may be a little draping at one side, but not a circular flare.

Variations in These Suits
As often as not the three-piece suit consists of a dress instead of a skirt and a costume blouse.

Whether you rest or whether you motor or whether you are just an interested spectator on the sidelines of sports, of course, you are wearing sports clothes. For the sports costume which year by year has been becoming more and more popular, has reached the topmarch of fashion and is just the thing to be worn almost every hour of the day. It may be because we are more keen for sports, it may be the effect of the ever-present country club, but surely one great reason is its youthful dash and smartness. It is so unusually becoming to every age and type.

Jacquette, a Sport Favorite.
The Jacquette or overblouse which was worn so much last season is here in a new form for sports. Fashioned of various novelty cotton materials, all vividly figured, or of colorful ratine, they bid fair to be in high favor for a morning on the links.

Among the newest sweaters, for the women actively engaged in sports are rather mannish ones. Many of these are checked in a tiny diamond-shape pattern with a plain border or sometimes with plain stripes also.

Of course, the high round neck sweater is still very good. And even more daringly original are the strange designs which encircle it. In addition to the American Indian designs there are now and even more gorgeously elaborate figures. The ship-sweaters also show the all-over diamond-shape checks. But whatever kind of a sweater you choose, one thing is certain—if you are slim it must be beltless.

Finely Pleated Kasha Cloth.
There is a little grace about finely pleated Kasha cloth, which makes it particularly suitable for our more active hours. In white, gray or a soft tan, worn with the vividly patterned blouses or sweaters, it makes a costume which will be seen frequently at the most fashionable country clubs. And as beautifully lined as the rainbow are the figured silk crepe skirts, fashion's latest creation. Of course, these are particularly lovely with the single tone blouses. The new wool or silk-and-wool skirts are severely distinguished by unusual button hole loops and pockets, and now and then drawn work.

Handkerchief Completes Wardrobe
But no mention of the sports costume is even half begun until one has heard all about the handkerchief for in all verity it has seized the most important place in our wardrobe. The more gaudily colored these silk bandanas—for that is the handkerchief's newest form—the smarter they are. Some are tied loosely about the neck in true country fashion with the knot in front or on the shoulder. Others daintily knotted about the hips form a fascinating giraffe for a long-waisted frock.

That All-Important Touch

As the coiffure follows the fashion of the frock and shows more and more artful simplicity, the bandeaus become more elaborate. Just as many gowns seem but a gracefully flowing background to the chains, bracelets, buckles and earrings which are the strikingly vivid notes of the smart costume, so the simple coiffure allows the bandeau to display its full splendor.

Particularly new are the broad gold or silver bands, many of them intricately woven and rising to a becoming little peak over the forehead. Others are gorgeously trimmed with pearls or flowers which vend their fascinating way across the head and fall in two clusters over the ears. Less extreme, but quite as lovely, are the narrow bandeaus of silver leaves or tiny ostrich strand flowers in delicate shades to match the frock. For the woman who is a little older, the constructive bandeau of jet gives a most becoming dignity.

Fashionable Types of Earrings.

And almost as necessary to the complete costume are the earrings. In fact, unless the bandeau has clusters over the ears, earrings are usually seen with them. And impossible as it may sound, they are growing longer and more elaborate than ever. Some of these are magnificent—color and with a strange barbaric charm about them vie with onyx and the clear beauty of opal for greatest popularity. And fashioned of gold are some Baccante-like clusters of grapes. Those countless little fine gold chains, sometimes set with pearls, which are often seen dangling from the ear of the woman of fashion, have grown so long that

To Top the Mode with Smartness

(By Muriel Mertens.)

It is often said—and quite truly—that you can always tell when a woman is wearing a new hat by her gratified, pleased expression on her face. Somehow, with a becoming new hat she feels well dressed, no matter how old and shabby her frock or her coat may be. And a smart, well-dressed woman, with a becoming new hat she feels well dressed, no matter how old and shabby her frock or her coat may be. And a smart, well-dressed woman, with a becoming new hat she feels well dressed, no matter how old and shabby her frock or her coat may be.

of the hat. The crowns of these hats are no generally rounded and are shaped that a square crown is quickly noticeable, though they do make their appearance now and then. A lovely little hat worn at a very fashionable tea recently had a small turn-down brim, and an uncurled ostrich plume which started at the middle of the back of the crown and falling over the right ear curved gracefully under the charming wearer's chin. Almost every feather used tends to follow this same general line. Frequently one will see an ostrich feather plucked so that the feathery part is just a little pompon at the end.

any wardrobe. Or a small hat may allow its veil to hang straight down in the back, but be draped up a little under the chin. This slight draping is held in place by pins placed close to the edge of the veil. Where these veils are worn the hat is very plain and without any other trimming. The veil itself is very elaborate. It may be beautifully figured at the edge or of some delicate light color.

Strange unheard of birds, if they have long, curving feathery tails, are also quite at the height of the mode. Modes of the Large Hat. When the large hat is worn it is usually very large, sometimes with the brim much wider in back than in front. And where a woman finds a large hat more becoming she may quite properly select one. One large black hat was trimmed with a band of white ribbons which were thrown over the right ear. Many a gracefully draped veil is used in this same manner.

they actually sweep her shoulder. As for the new necklaces, many of which are worn with matching earrings, every color and every stone ever heard of are to be found in them in daring and unusual combinations. In reality it is in her chains and necklaces, this season that a woman expresses her individuality. They give a dash of color and a charming sophistication to the simplicity of the frock. Jade is as smart as ever, but crystal and onyx are the newest fad of Paris.

Unless one keeps strict rein on one's self, one is apt to see some charming little hat in a shop window whose great appeal lies in the fact that it is wholly different from the things we have and of which we are terribly tired. If, in addition to this, it is becoming and the sales talk is clever—we are lost and buy it without further thought. But this really is not necessary, for never before have we been offered such countless varieties and variations of the millinery mode.

For smart Street Wear. The little felt cloche is still quite the smartest. Generally the crown of the cloche is high and is either rounded or conical. But in the brim and in the trimming the variation is infinite. One smart little model has a narrow brim turned down on the right side and in front that it resembles a boater and in the back it goes to the other extreme and turns up so abruptly that it is flat to the crown of the hat. It is trimmed with a fuzzy little pompon far back on the right side. This tendency is seen on countless smart hats. The trimming is way back on the right side and now-and-then-even-moving-right to the back.

Bracelets are the Vogue. Naturally, this year when jewelry and novelty jewelry is all-important, bracelets are quite the vogue. The upper arm bracelet has always been beautiful, but it is particularly becoming with sleeveless frocks. Some of them are of wide carved cork.

Another smart cloche has a narrow brim turned up on the left side and abruptly down on the right. Flat against the crown, pointing down to the right shoulder is a quill. Frequently one will see a little ribbon cockade sewed flat to the crown of the hat.

Evening Hat to Return. It is rumored that evening hats, which has been absent so long, is returning to high favor. It is really quite a natural development when one stops to think about it. Ban-Deaux have been growing wider and more elaborate than ever. So some clever milliner just put a tulle top on a wide bandeau and the evening hat was in vogue. And after it had gone that far naturally little tulle brims were added. This does not mean that the hat is rolling out. Just the opposite. For the wider and more elaborate the bandeaux that is worn with a formal frock, the smarter the costume. It just shows our tendency to wear some sort of head covering at every possible moment. This desire for headgear is certain to last as long as the bolted heads are growing out, for it solves many a problem of hair dressing. And the person to whom the simple smooth style of coiffure is unbecoming—and unfortunately there are many such—is sure to follow this fashion with enthusiasm.

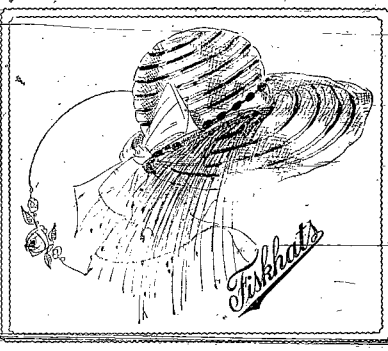

Stiff Felts in Vogue. A very unusual combination has recently come—the great vogue—these stiff felt hats. A narrow banding of silver or gold on the edge of the brim and sometimes a band of silver cloth around the crown. The felt hats of any of the many shades of gray are trimmed with silver cloth, while those of brown have gold. In those little hats dark blue and black are conspicuous by their absence.

Veil, Winning Favor. The veil is enjoying high favor this season and quite deservedly. On a windy, blustery day of early spring how trimly smart and dashing is the wearer of a veil. And how great is her composure when she knows that her hair is not straggling about her face but is just as it was when she last peered into a mirror. The graceful folds of the draped lace veil seem so often in the afternoon are very flattering too. And countless are the ways in which such a veil may be draped. A gold veil covering the crown of a brown hat and falling in loops close to the face would surely be a prized addition to

For sports wear this felt mode is quite the most popular. The shape is just the same as the street hat, but the trimming is much more simple. The ever favored silk bandana is drawn tightly across the turned-down brim of many a smart little hat which will take its way around the golf course some sunny morning. And the wearer of a felt cloche with a flat ribbon cockade is certain to be seen that very same day, so popular is this style. Even silver cloth made its appearance for sport wear when the hat was of a beautiful white.

With the soft dainty summer dresses the hat is usually softer. Though there may be a little stiffening in the brim. It is a very charming fashion, too, to keep our stiffer hats for our more tailored costumes. And a soft creased little model is so lovely with a dainty dress.

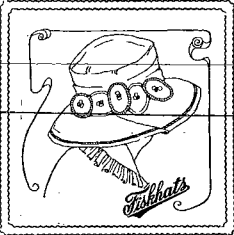

Hats for Afternoon Wear. With the hat to be worn with an afternoon frock feathers are in high favor, but invariably they are turned down and reach far below the brim which, to accentuate the white loveliness of an arm while others are of many strands of lustrous pearls. And about the wrist are many bracelets of single slender strands, perhaps of pearls, lapis, onyx, amethyst—or any becoming, colorful stone. Sometimes on a slim wrist you will see a narrow black cord ending in pendants which match the earrings.

But whichever way your particular fancy may lead you, one thing is certain—novelty jewelry of some sort must add its piquant touch to your costume.

Men "Blossom out in new Spring Styles

Simplification seems to rule the men's clothing industry simplification in style, in fabric and in pattern. Conservatism, with few variations, appears to have the call this spring and summer.

The jazz models, which made such a havoc last year, and which went strong in some sections of the country, but were rejected in other parts, apparently passed the height of popularity and now are on the down grade. While a few makers, who were successful in putting out the jazz output, will continue along these lines, the better manufacturers have turned down these styles almost completely.

There will however, be shown a variety of these frockish styles, but the production is so small that it is almost insignificant. No doubt the death knell has been rung.

Three Variations Noted

Two distinct variations—possibly three—will be noted in the new styles for young men. The ultra dresser will wear very fitted models. High waist, high gorge, that is, a short collar, high lapel, high chest effect, slim waist, long vent and long appearing skirts are the principal features. The effect of the longer skirts makes the coat appear longer, which is not the case, as the length is about the average.

Rope shoulders will also be a noteworthy characteristic on clothes of this type. Some coats are made with a high outside cash pocket. There will be both notch and peak lapels, but the lapels will be shorter, much shorter than in past seasons. Two and three buttons will be used.

College Type of Clothes

Next comes the college type of clothes, which will be of softer construction than heretofore, with low collars, short lapels, single breasted, rounding fronts, three and four-button coats, worn buttoned. The three-button coat seems to have the call.

This coat is of the same dimensions as the four, except that the buttons are spaced wider. Vests are cut straighter across the bottom and the trousers also are cut straight, that is, the same size at both knee and bottom and worn with cuff.

The third style idea, concerns that group known as "regular" young men's models. The coats are semi-fitted, with two and three buttons, both single and double breasted. The rope shoulders will be a prominent feature of these clothes. The vest to these suits will also show a tendency to be cut a little lower at the opening and straighter at the bottom.

Trousers Cut Straight

Such suits will also display trousers cut straight. Some, however—those from the best makers—are regular in shape, but there is an outlet on both inside and outside seams, permitting alteration in the event the customer wants them wide from the knee down.

The sport styles, which came in stronger than ever last year, promise to continue in favor with good dressers, particularly the four-piece suits. Such suits are adaptable for both business and sports wear. The business man may wear the suit with the long trousers in going to the office and can change to knickerats at the golf club, if he so desires.

Belts and Pleats Again

Half and three-quarter belts are winning the greatest vote, while spring pleats, like those worn in regular golf suits, also are favored by a certain clientele. There are many variations of the sport styles and all of them have a following.

Patch pockets and plain pockets will be seen on the majority of the suits, while the crescent pocket, which had quite a play several years ago is regarded as a back number.

In patterns, stripes have become almost as staple as the Chesterfield is in the overcoat family. Stripes in shades of blue, olive and gray will be more noticeable than ever. That fact that most of the fabrics in which stripes appear are light in weight makes clothes made of such fabrics wearable almost twelve months of the year, and hence there is an added reason for their success.

Checks to Have Following

Checks which came into vogue several years ago with a rush, will have a large following and many of these patterns will be found among the sport suits, as well as among the more conservative styles. Shepherd plaids, herringbones in blue, brown and gray stripes, Glen Urquhart, Tartan checks and overplaids will command a large following.

Despite the fact that diamond weaves were shown more than ever last season, makers are coming forth with another selection of them this year—in the hope of forcing popularity. It is rather questionable whether men will see such patterns as the thing for spring.

Palm Beach in Lead

Palm Beach promises to lead the procession in midsummer fabrics, as in other years. The cheapness of such material, together with improved styles has helped put this fabric across with greater force than ever. For a time, Palm Beach cloth was on the wane, but better makers secured this fabric, put their skilled journeymen to work and turned out unusually fine clothes.

The increasing vogue of discarding the heavier woolen suits for something light and airy has also helped other cool-weather fabrics. Among them are mohairs, homespuns, lightweight flannels, crashees, rich songees, shantung, together with a long list of fabrics possessing specially coined names.

The topcoat for spring will show a leaning toward the box of full drape, with set-in sleeves. Then, too, the topcoat with the raglan shoulders, forty-four inches long, with belt all around will also win great favor. The first coat mentioned will be shown in both button through and fly front. The third group consists of the always present Chesterfield. In raincoats the popular gabardine leads the field, in plain or belted models.

HABERDASHERY ON THE CALENDAR FOR SPRING

by OTTO ENGEL

While there is a tendency to slightly higher prices for men's haberdashery this spring, the advance is partially offset by better quality merchandise. Prices have reached the point of stabilization and the weird fluctuations of war days and post-war days are a thing of the past.

During the halcyon days the cost of men's accessories was just about twice that of today. The $25 shirt, for example, may be purchased for $12 at $13. Neckwear marked at $1 is now down to $1.50 and the range of prices is correspondingly lowered throughout.

White Silk Shirts Popular
While the silk shirt has been making desperate efforts to regain its war-day popularity, the march of progress has been quite slow in the last two years. The white silk shirts will lead the field, of course, but there is a tendency for plain colored silks to come back in some of the more durable weaves. Among them are baby broadcloths and jerseys. Pleated effects also promise to have a large call.

Good Selection of Fiber Silks
There will always be a demand for the better fiber silk shirts, largely due to the fact that they offer a selection that good dressers like—prices do not tax one's income. The collar-attached shirt which reached the height of popularity last year will go ahead with greater advancement than ever, if the prediction of makers is correct. In this special line there is a greater variety than ever, giving the customer a wider scope of selection. And one of the pleasing features is the fact that the workmanship has improved wonderfully—truly making this a gentleman's shirt.

Geysers in Neckwear
In neckwear the subdued color effects of sombre winter will give way to the vari-colored selection that usually blossoms forth in the spring. Silks from foreign fields—England, France, Switzerland and the far eastern countries—have flooded the markets, but they are made up in the American styles and fashions. Among some of the shapes are the narrow cravats, adapted for the smaller collar which have become the popular vogue for warmer weather wear.

Because of their serviceability and durability, grenadines and knitted ties will be worn with greater frequency than ever. Many interesting and novel effects have been produced giving the wearer a variety in selection which has never been offered before.

Matching some of the suit patterns will be tweed effects, which promises to "go across" with great demand. Foreign foulards also will come to the front stronger than ever.

Few Changes in Hosiery
Because of the limitations, hosiery will undergo few changes this year. Good silks, with clocks and other novel designs, particularly the full-faltered selection, will be as popular as ever. For early spring cassimers, camel's hair and imported worsteds will get the big play. Naturally there will be a good selection of silk accordions and embroidered effects, but the showing promises to be only normal. As for colors the shades and tones of each will be about the same as last season.

Same Story for Gloves
There have been very few changes made in glove styles and colors in the last few years and nothing novel is expected to be displayed this season. Cape, Arabian mocha, suede, buck and chamois in standard or off shades will furnish the greatest selection. Spear or embroidered backs are about the only ornaments that will appear. The pearl button, however, is replacing the old time clasp. The success of middy pajamas, otherwise known as the bachelor or buttonless pajamas, has been unusually tremendous. The ease with which men can slip into and out of such wearing apparel is one excellent reason. While colored effects and stripes had the vail in past seasons, the tendency is toward plain colors of white. In silk pajamas the color scheme is prevalent, with frogs of contrasting tones.

Plain or pattern effects of madras, percales, crepes, chambrays, seersuckers and fiber silk will be among the fabrics in vogue.

Soft Collar is Favored
The non-wrinklable collar, now made by a number of concerns, has won the fancy of many a good dresser and will blossom forth much greater than ever this spring. The loosely hard collar, with a slight roll, will be the chief competitor for popularity.

In other men's accessories, such as underwear, belts, jewelry, handkerchiefs, walking sticks, etc., there have been no decided changes.

For a Trim Ankle

The bewildering array of countless styles which are placed before us in such profusion nowadays make it possible or a woman to use so much more artistic imagination in expressing her personality as well as her taste. And of these greatly varied offerings, hosiery is far from being the least.

The plain black silk stocking which was worn for so long by the smartly dressed woman is scarcely ever seen nowadays. Chiffon with its fine, sheer beauty is seen whenever a plain stocking is worn, and strange as it may sound if you wish black do not buy black. The clever woman chooses gunmetal. This shade looks black when it is worn, but it makes the hose seem much more expensively fine. And with a black frock and shoes, the effect is wholly charming. But black is the only frock with which black hose are worn. If your frock be any shade of gray or tan, the stockings should match it even when they are worn with black shoes. If your shoes are of colored suede or have suede insets of course the hose must match the shoes. With a very dark dress it is far better to have the hose of a lighter shade than the frock. And the colored hose are quite correct with a black street frock. For the ideal of the mode is still the fawn colored stocking. For dressier wear the knee clock is quite the thing in chiffon, though the plain chiffon hose are appropriate at all times.

For Sport Wear
For sports-wear the silk have given way to the imported English silk and wool stockings. They are much more practical for summer than the all wool and being much softer, many women find them far more comfortable. And in such fascinating colors can these hose be found, that our ankles are going to be more charmingly clad than ever. These colors offer ample opportunity to have our hose match either our sweaters or our sport frocks. For the fad for the matching of hose is carried into the world of sports. But if you do not choose to wear these gay colors, you will look perfectly stunning if you pick out those with large diagonal checks of all shades of gray or tan. At times these silk and wool hose are stocked or else they have drop-stitch stripes. Seldom are they perfectly plain. Of course, with the silk sports frock of sports skirts the silk hose must be worn either in white, light gray or fawn, with matching shoes. But on the golf links or tennis court, wool is the thing.

LOOKIT! SPRING STYLES IN BOYS' CLOTHES

(By Raymond S. Schultz)

"Ma, get me a suit like the one Jerry got, will yuh? I don't want any of that kid stuff, because I'm getting too old, now."

The young fellow, looking at the scaming, husky boy, will not have to say this to his mother this year because the suits, clothers are offering this spring exactly make the young fellow look like a man. And rightly, too, because he's beginning to take on a serious atmosphere in his school life and his social relations.

Every boy has his father before him as the ideal of manhood and so he wants to be like him, and to accommodate him, father has even compromised and let his styles come down to such a place that models are very, very similar.

Tendency to Plainer Styles.
For the first Edward and manufacturers have prepared some stunning and sensible clothes. The "freak" styles will, of course, be worn by the young fellow who wants to be electric and out-of-the-ordinary, but the suits offered this spring have such beautiful lines and are fashioned so perfectly that there will be no desire for these models with frills and odd little trimmings.

When the young man steps into those first trousers he wants to lose all the specialties of the short pants suits he wants to look like Dad, so he looks for the plain fashioned garments. These he will find in beautiful stripes, which will be the popular vogue this spring, and a varied selection of tweeds—which will run a good second to the stripes.

Juveniles Demand Style.
Even the little fellows of knicker age are becoming fussy about their styles and they, too, have come in for a share of the manufacturer's cunning. The clothes this spring will certainly make the younger boys feel like a million dollars.

They have all the fineness that the garment maker puts into the men's clothes, the rugged wearing qualities—which, of course, mother looks for—just enough style, classness and dressiness to make, not only the little wearer feel proud, but to make Dad look at his boy with thoughts of "I wish I had clothes like that when I was a kid."

Norfolk will naturally be the prevailing model for the boys, but they'll come in many, many attractive varieties. However, they will all have one thing in common, the ever prevailing belts, yoke backs, panes, box and knife pleats as well as plain or patch pockets.

For the Little Fellow
Wash middies get the call this year for the little fellow. Garment makers all over the country and in every town are realizing the great value of putting practicality into their products. They have never been so lavish with it as they are this year in the wearing apparel for the little ones.

Fabrics of the strongest material have been used for the wash suits and middies, in every attractive color and design—just the thing for the sturdy boy who romps and plays—and would just as leave tear a lace suit as well as any other.

The Oliver Twist and Tommy Tucker suits are being shown in many models as well as many one-piece suits with washable saten waists and black and dark colored straight pants.

Little Change in Headwear
There is little change in the style of headwear for the juveniles this year, although hats to match the suits of wash fabrics are becoming predominant. These are all in fast colors and washable too—again illustrating the practical thoughts of the manufacturer.

For the older boys caps of fine woolen fabrics in the light spring colors will be the vogue. Caps of tweed material are also very evident, due to the demand for sport clothes of tweed material. The one-piece, large tip cap seems to be the thing.

Halovernsbery has undergone but slight changes, with a trend to the silk ties, plain and pin striped shirts—with collar attached—and a slightly higher collar. The greatest change seems to be in shirts with a heavy predominance for the collar attached shirt in all mid colors. Silks are due to be worn more, but the day of the wide stripe is gone and manufacturers are turning to the conservatively colored, pin striped or white silk fronts.

Low Shoes Popular
There is a steady trend in shoe fashions—in the sweaters—as well as the older folks, to the oxford. Low shoes of strong wearing quality seem to rule the field this spring. For the little fellow there are many models in plain oxfords in black and tan.

Heavy shoes for rough use are, of course, on the market, and with greater workmanship put into them and long lasting leather. For the young fellow there is a turn to the lighter weight shoe without the fancy trimming of the brogue. A certain smartness is presented in the oxfords of this season that set off the young fellow with a spry atmosphere.

When Straw Meets Felt

(By A. Mecon Haim)

Men's hats for spring showing have undergone but slight changes from the styles shown and worn last spring, although there is an evident tendency toward the conservative type.

The hat problem is a very perplexing one to the woman, because of the rapid and almost overnight change in modes worn, which added to the regular seasonal variations keep them in constant tread to the milliner. Men on the contrary find but little variation in hats with the exception of the seasonal changes which conspicing hats. There was a strong tendency in that direction last year, but not until this year has the superb light weight hats been so evident and the manufacturer's thoughts been so practical.

Hats of Extreme Light Weight
The manufacturers have taken the customer into deep concern this spring, and are offering hats of an extreme light weight. This characteristic will prevail in the straws for summer wear as well as in the Light colors will again lead the field among hats. Pastels will dominate with peary grays and light greens following closely. Bands to correspond will be the prevailing mode.

The shapes are virtually the same as those in vogue last year. The Federa and Alpine shapes are being shown extensively in the older men's hats, while the young fellows will turn to the diamond-shaped and dented-in styles—all these, however, in very light weights. Few odd shapes are being shown, the majority having a medium crown and brim.

Straws More Conservative
Straws for summer wearing are following in the footsteps of all other men's wearing apparel—holding fast to the conservative and less freakish type of a few years ago.

The light sailor is again slated for a big run. These will come in pure whites, light browns and tans. The rough straws and loose weaves in very light weights are being shown very much. For the most part plain light bands or bands to contrast with the color of the hat will be worn with a sprinkling of the colored bands in stripes and dots.

No Changes in Panama.
Lephoras and panamas will be worn, of course, and they, too, will come in light weights in all the new Panama shapes. An Bangkok too, will be worn by the man who likes the real light weight summer straw. The conservative vogue of the straw hats is very prominent in these styles of headwear.

The derby is always in good taste and is liked by the young man who wants to look a little aristocratic. The styles this year are splendid in that the odd shapes—small brim, large crown and vice versa—are not in good form and in place we have the conformity to the conservative characteristic of the season.

The Romantic Interior

by Marjorie Howe Dixon

You know the bleak cold look of a collector of furniture in a store window, where the arrangement is to suggest an interior, and in an effort to heighten the effect, flowers, curtains and cushions are added. What is it that is lacking that makes the whole effect repellent instead of homelike? Well, it just hasn't that atmosphere of being lived in, those individual personal touches that give a really comfortable look to a room. For one thing, there is only an occasional window decoration—why not date setter books around—it does take a little courage. He certainly could come a little nearer his desired effect if he would remember books or magazines.

The home of the neweloved sometimes has that department store furniture section look. This bride has not yet dared to depart from the conventional and somewhat hard arrangement of all her new things. And things obviously new are hard to arrange, when it comes to that. Their glossy newness has to rub a little before they can be assimilated and a homely atmosphere produced.

Question in Furniture
It is sometimes asked, why do people keep going back to periods in selecting furnishings—why not the ultra-modern? The answer seems to lie in that question of romance, of charm, that quality to which we all respond, that seems to inhere in period furniture rightly used. Of course, one doesn't have to buy antiques—for some of us they are quite out of the question. But there are so many good reproductions that no one need be denied these interesting old patterns.

In this question of using the periods rightly lies a great part of the difficulty. It has been said of some decorators that they create stage settings for their clients, that have no more relation to the owners than the proscenium arch to actors. For Americans the study of the use of periods must necessarily involve the study of the impulses of the time creating them. Entirely foreign to our ideals and modes of living are some of the court periods. The style of certain periods were evolved from extravagant, over-decorated, and luxurious court life. These periods have been followed by reactions toward severity, which bring out simpler lines and patterns in furniture and are much more in keeping with our natural point of view.

Blending of Periods.

In passing let us speak of the Directoire. The qualities of simplicity and sincerity found in much of the furniture of that time find a quick response in our native instincts. Pieces from the Directoire will blend well with our American colonial period, and the two will create a subtle charm—that indefinable air of romance.

Another point to be considered is the modern demand for soft deeply cushioned chairs, with their luxurious comfort. It takes little skill to fit these pieces into our romantic interior but it can be done. It might be mentioned here that downfilled cushions and spring cushions are in demand for these pieces. Tapestries in colorful embroidery are fitting, or spots of lovely needle point decorate these inviting lounging spots.

The Dining Room

When it comes to cases, color is a vital point in our romantic interior. A dining room that rejoices the eye and the aesthetic sense as well, comes to mind. At first one saw the very interesting glass curtains, not thin nor pale in tint, but full of color, of striped taffeta, in lavenders and greens. Chintz edged with black made the long drapes and the valance.

Then one became conscious of the dull walnut furniture—chairs with cane backs and seats, a long low buffet with a separate unframed mirror above it and a high silver chest. The floor was most unusual, a black and oyster gray checkerboard linoleum. Ivory paneled walls made a quiet background.

For the little touches in the dining room, long green mats of coarse linen were spread on the table and the buffet, while Spanish pottery set the table.

Speaking of the relation of china to the color scheme brings to mind a rather dignified and formal effect produced in another dining room. Here dull walnut was the wood chosen, and the chairs were covered with a dull red tapestry with great star shaped nail heads on their edges. A window with a long, low window seat was hung with dull red. Then as a last point of emphasis, a service of red glass, goblets, plates and so on with flat centerpieces of artificial fruit and berries, decorated the table.

A Romantic Sun Parlor.
For living purposes the sun parlor is a room of great attraction these days and more and more originality is being shown in its furnishings. Isn't there the least touch of romance in the India wicker chairs, those great roundly spread backs, reminding one of a peacock's tail? Wicker is only a detail now for overstuffed divans and lounging chairs covered with gilded chintz are a comfortable possibility.

Then in one corner of one sun parlor, one may find a tiny green ten table with two low chairs placed tete-a-tete. And all around, of course, in hangings, in cushions and in table mats one finds splashes of a brilliant costume in cerise, black and purple on a cream ground.

From the sun porch to the breakfast room is perhaps just a step. Here painted furniture has its own place, perhaps finding its charm in cream and blue Windsor chairs, set about a similarly decorated table. Blue burlap was used for heavy drapes with a valance of chintz, in this particular room and the dull lavender of pottery from France with bands of blue, set the pretty table and the sideboard.

Beautiful Bedrooms.
Can you imagine a Georgian bedroom with lavender and emerald green taffeta drapes. You can undoubtedly. A most interesting canopy arranged itself at the head of the bed. It was draped flat against the wall, depending from a gold tassel, and spread out below, finally ending in long drapes to the floor. Heavy looped drapes of the same material hung at the windows. The bed spreads were of changeable lavender taffeta. Another pretty conceit was the hanging of separate mirrors over both the bureau and the dressing table.

And so it comes about that romance in our homes is leading to charming of medieval times, who rode forth to conquest leaving languishing maidens at home embroidering curious designs for their shields. The conquest of romance is still on and the laurel crown and special homage awaits the victor!

For Your Inner Gratification by Muriel Mertens

It is a fact well known to every woman, that no matter how carefully or how modestly you may be dressed, you never feel quite at ease unless you have that inner consolation that your lingerie is just the most exquisitely dainty and feminine that can be found. Self-possession is very charming. Self-knowledge in the background of her mind, she may forget her clothes entirely and devote all her energies to being entertaining or entertained.

Some women will always have the fresh distinctness of linings of cotton or linen, no matter how beautiful the silk models may be. And when one sees the sheer distinctness of undergarments of handkerchief, linen exquisite with hemstitching and real flit one is certainly tempted to agree with them. Particularly for summer there is something so fresh and clean about them. Trilby voile which wears like iron looks as soft as chiffon is another great favorite both for undergarments and night gowns. And what entrancing colors it comes in! Delicate greens or a soft, pale yellow, lavender and countless shades which are quite as lovely. These colored undergarments are usually very simply made. Batiste with its lovely silky sheen is also recently seen.

Undergarments of Silk
But the woman who loves the soft luxury of silk will find just as many exquisite models to uphold her in her preference. The silk night gowns and undergarments are beautiful in white or pink as well as the more unusual shades. Sometimes they are trimmed with wide laces or embroidered in contrasting shades. The vest-chimise and the stop-in drawers are beginning to usurp the place of great popularity which was held for so long by the envelope. Sometimes the knicker is worn with the vest-chimise.

The cut of the newest night gowns has been greatly influenced by our present mode in frocks. Many have a baby neck—lower, of course, than a baby necked frock. The front and back of the neck are straight, but the lowness is achieved by having them connected over the shoulder by four or five inches of ribbon or lace strap across the shoulder. The armhole is made by an opening cut straight down under the arm for five or six inches.

Chiffon daintily hued or black is still used to make some of the most exquisite of our lingerie.

Lounging Pajamas New
The lounging pajama is the very latest creation for our more luxurious hours. It is not only beautiful, but an ideally comfortable garment in which to spend a few hours of relaxation. There are such gorgeous advocates of this fashion! Black is quite a favorite for these pajamas, though the lighter colors are by no means put in the background. Black-velvet, magnificently embroidered in color or black velvet trousers with the gayest of silk jackets. The Oriental influence is clearly seen in one model with orange velvet trousers and a Persian patterned silk jacket. Exquisite silks and lustrous satins fashion much charming models.

For the woman who does not care for the pajama mode, there are many daintily feminine negligees. Silk covered with chiffon and with long trailing chiffon sleeves and a wide placed grille is a charming fashion.

With the negligee or pajama a wide matching bandeau is appropriate and so becoming.

The Buckled Foot of Fashion

Nowadays one of the first dictates of fashion is becomingness, so it is sometimes hard to lay down any hard and fast rule about what "they" will wear and what "they" will not wear. The wise woman adapts the style to her type and gives little individual variations which make our costumes so much more interesting.

So if one should say that every slipper must have a buckle, the next day one might see the smartest of slippers quite unadorned. However, if any rule could be laid down with absolute finality, it would be that slippers must be buckled.

We dress so much more artistically nowadays—particularly in regard to our footwear. A smart rock is never really charming unless everything else really goes with it. So in the clever choosing of our footwear we change a gown into a complete costume.

For Evening Wear
The most elaborate and striking ly beautiful silk brocades are the newest materials for the evening slipper. And the effect of these various colored, rich looking slippers below a simply cut frock is really unusually beautiful. Many shades are to be seen ranging in each slipper, but the predominating tone matches or, at any rate, harmonizes with the frock. Gold or silver kid frequently tones the heels and the trimmings of these slippers, but as often as not the slipper is entirely of the brocade.

However popular these slippers may be, gold or silver chit, either plain or brocaded is still seen to fashion the slippers for many of the smartest.

As for the cut of the evening slipper, your choice is practically unlimited. Some have tiny straps which seem to almost wind themselves about the ankle while the plain slipper is very new.

Buckles of Beauty
The most slipper relies entirely upon an elaborate crystal buckle for its adornment. And so magnificent and so large are these buckles that it needs no more. And large as they are, the newest thought is to have them made even larger by putting behind them a fluted or ruffled tongue of the material. One slipper even had such a tongue composed of tiny colored feathers.

The buckle for the strap slipper is much smaller and set on the strap just at the top of the instep. Another way is to have the buckle placed at the fastening. But one thing is certain, whatever style the slipper may be, the heel is sure to be very high.

Afternoon Slippers

The smartest afternoon slippers are made of some of the softest patent leather. After that countless variations of style are offered them. They may be all of patent leather. But probably they will have inserts of some colored suede—usually some shade of tan or gray. When these colors are chosen to harmonize with the frock, the result is an extremely smart costume. The cut steel buckle is the one which is used with these and, in fact, all afternoon slippers.

The all-suede slipper, while not the newest, is still in very good style. Sometimes they yield to the vogue of patent leather by having a patent leather heel and lining next to the sole. Or perhaps the patent leather will be found as a saddle strap.

For Street Wear
For walking and for wear with a street frock, the low heeled strap slipper of a combination of suede and black leather helps to make a smart costume. One model which is very good is of suede with black leather toes and heels and a black leather strap holds close to the foot a large tongue of leather. Of course, if you choose a low heeled walking oxford you will make no mistake—particularly if that oxford be of a suede and leather combination.

For the softly shimmering frock of some lazy summer afternoon, the dainty white slipper of kid, buckskin or linen is the appropriate finish. With these afternoon slippers have straps they are piped now and then in some bright colored kid. With the sports costume the buckskin oxford with a leather saddle strap will be most frequently seen.

Conspicuous Discrimination.

only materials that are thoroughly tested for uniformity and high quality are used. The finished tires prove that they will give satisfaction before they are sold to you.

The Miller policy of building uniform tires does not vary. Any time or place you buy a Miller tire you can feel absolutely certain that you are getting a tire that will give you the lowest mileage cost.

Buy a Miller tire and put it on your car opposite any tire you like. Miller tires will save you money and trouble by their long service.

Miller uniform inner tubes help increase the mileage in any tire—but in Miller tires they make a combination that can't be beaten.

Obituary. Mrs. M. L. Halpin passed away at her home in Winside on Wednesday, Feb. 21, after a lingering illness. She was 67 years of age, was born at Neligh, Neb., February 24, 1875, moving in infancy with her parents to Stanton where she lived until her marriage, June 19, 1901, to M. L. Halpin.

To this union were born four children, Meredith, Elinor, Hyacinth and Edith. Edith died in childhood. Mrs. Halpin was an ardent member of the church and no person ever came into anything like intimate association with her but was profoundly impressed with her absolute trust in the will of her Maker. She loved her Lord and her constant purpose was to live among folks as a testimony of His having grace.

For many years she has lived with her family in Winside and the circle of her friendship was only limited by the circle of her acquaintances. To be known was to be her friend. She had been in failing health for a number of years, but with sublime courage she had battled against weakness until recent attack of influenza undermined her failing strength, and Wednesday morning of last week she slipped into unconsciousness and all day lingered, as loved ones and friends hovered over her, trying to woo back the tired spirit, but as the day faded the messenger came and her spirit slipped out into that other country where there is no pain nor suffering, there to await the time of glad reunion. She is survived by her husband, two sisters, her husband, and son and two daughters. Funeral services were held at the Methodist church, Friday afternoon at 2 o'clock, and were conducted by Rev. J. Bruce Wylie and Rev. E. N. Littrell. Interment was in the Winside cemetery.
