They have borne their task with fine courage, and they merit and receive the sustaining prayers and good words of the church.

Ide-gossip is not restricted to either sex. And men have just as active and tireless imaginations as women, as we have observed.

The code over which both houses and the governor have been trying to travel in different directions has kept the legislature in session this week.

The rains the past week have enlivened nature and started all kinds of vegetation to shoot up and out. The smiling verdure of the fields and warm sunshine, and usually it can be depended on in this favored locality.

It is noted with much satisfaction that the meeting of Women's clubs at Albion recently found the Wayne committee, the only one in the Third congressional district that had acquired and fully paid for a community house. The Wayne women hasten to feel proud of their accomplishment.

Opposition to the president's "Pernicious" court of international justice" seems based not so much on whimsies it would be affronted in carrying out its purpose as whether it is a good political and help of hinder party success. Too much political fence-building draws away from earnest and comprehensive consideration of the problems that give too much attention to possibilities for party success and too little attention to sound and constructive public policy.

"Meat from Contented Animals" is used as a headline in an advertisement. It is good politics and help of hinder party success. Too much political fence-building draws away from earnest and comprehensive consideration of the problems that give too much attention to possibilities for party success and too little attention to sound and constructive public policy.

Mothers' day will be Sunday, May 13. The day has come to be observed generally as the time to pay extra tribute to mothers. The greatest love in the world. It makes no difference whether a mother is rich or poor, intelligent or a university graduate, she is held in highest esteem and veneration by her children, and she is justly and stoutly defended against any suggestion of neglect. What a mother does for her normal mother, she will go any length to assure the comfort of her children, and if they are normal they will remember her with respect affection as long as they live.

We have renounced reason to be proud of this communal and applied the way people's hearts were touched and their pocketbooks were opened in assuaging the oppression of industry and the helplessness of the poor and his faithful wife struggling under a succession of burdens. With unflinching valor they attack to the teeth the invaders. What a mother does for her normal mother, she will go any length to assure the comfort of her children, and if they are normal they will remember her with respect affection as long as they live.

May is the month of high school commencement, and preliminary exercises are given deserved attention these days. As thoughts turn to the closing days of school, people are led to consider the value and utility of school training. Most of us have discovered that sound judgment is an essential concomitant to useful education. The one who has attained this high goal of a fullness that his life is a good deal of a failure. He works like an engine with out a governing belt. His education does not function. He understands the Einstein theory of relativity, but he is unable to analyze people's motives. He is unable to judge the feasibility of propositions submitted. He devotes the major portion of his time and energy to lifting his feet out of one morass of misdirection after another. He would be a greater success, filling a more important niche in the world and proving more of an ornament to society. His schooling had been supplemented by training in the use of judgment. It is a very desirable accomplishment not to include into a mass and make it lie down and feed out of your hand, but it is quite as necessary to be able to recognize the necessity of considering life's practical problems. Just as one-sided as the educated Don Quixote is the individual who has built himself up on a basis of self judgment, but who is unable to search the hearts of men and correctly and justly evaluate fine and noble considerations. Book knowledge and academic attainments, and traveling companions to insure a well rounded life. The matter of determining values and passing judgment has become more and more an essential in school and college courses in order to fix a foundation that will stand up under the fire of all the vicissitudes of experience, insuring unbiased judgment, practical understanding and large achievement. Thus, we would suggest to all school men that in the course of their intellectual evolutions they draw, ever and anon, as liberally as possible from the fount of common horse sense.

The Tailoring Situation

What It Means to You

Cheap, flimsy fabrics are flooding the market to meet a desire for lower prices.

But the desire does not lower cost of production—that's what governs price.

Wages have doubled and trebled in the past ten years—you know that.

But you may NOT know that the advance ratio has been far greater on cheap, flimsy fabrics than on the good, smart, reliable woens offered exclusively in our

Voted Bronze Medal.

Norfolk Daily News: A. Reynolds, non-functional manager of the Northwestern Bell telephone company at Pilger, Neb., has been awarded the bronze medal of the company's Vail Medal committee, according to a story printed in the May issue of the Northwestern Bell, a monthly magazine issued by and for telephone employees.

Reynolds who lived in Norfolk in 1919 when he was employed on telephone construction crews, rescued a boy who was caught in the current of the Elkhorn river at Neligh on July 21, 1920. Reynolds was working on the banks of the river when he heard a boy crying for help from the river which at the time was at flood stage.

While trying to the shore, Reynolds saw the boy swimmer had been swept into the current and was clinging to some driftwood far out in the stream. Shouting to the boy to hold, he dived himself of his shoes and overalls, swam out past the riff-ruff, directed the thoroughly frightened child to catch him by the shoulders, and brought him safely to shore.

The trustees of the Theodore N. Vail Memorial fund, which provides for awards each year to the employee who performs outstanding services, announced that opportunity was given this year for a final review of awards which are given since the plan became effective, Jan. 1, 1920. It was under the provisions of this announcement that Mr. Reynolds' performance was reviewed.

On July 21, 1920, was reported and considered for an award.

Development and Health

This means much to the hog industry—it really means the profits of the undertaking. The farmer produces corn which has a feeding value of 23 per cent. The adding of will increase the feeding value of your corn to 46 per cent or even more. Semi-Solid will develop pigs in flesh, bone and muscle in a shorter period. Hog raisers are becoming more and more converted to this economic manner of feeding.

For health protection, Semi-Solid as a tonic food builds up a body resistance which will minimize your losses by disease. 80 per cent of our sales are farmers who used Semi-Solid last year. Honestly, doesn't this speak well for the product?

The idea that Semi-Solid is an expense is fast being eliminated by the fact every barrel you purchase will double or treble its cost in extra profits. Semi-Solid costs $3.85. A barrel will dilute to 2,500 gallons. For chicks, feed straight from the barrel. For the chicken industry it shows wonderful results.

Mrs. Antone Schmidt Stops Chic Loss with Semi-Solid and Conkey's Starting Food

Mrs. Schmidt, with 145 small chicks lost twenty by bowel trouble. After changing the food to Semi-Solid Buttermilk and Conkey's Starting Food, has not lost a chick. This is only one of the many reports we are receiving. Stop your loss. We can feed your chicks for the next four weeks for less per chick than any other method. Put us to the test, let us prove it.

Butter Production Average is High One

Lincoln, Neb., April 30.—Verity Dairy, an ultra, purchased Holstein cow owned by the Agricultural college of the University of Nebraska, has a production record of 1,161 pounds of butter in one year, according to authorities at the college. This is slightly more than three pounds a day, it is pointed out. It is a record for a cow in a year. The cow was bred to supply fifteen families of five persons each with their annual butter supply. Sultana's record as a senior 4-year-old was 25,461 pounds of milk-42.8 pounds butter and 1,161 pounds of butter. If taken as milk it equals 23,630 pints or 11,840 quarts. This is equal to thirty-two and one-half quarts of milk for each day of the year. In Nebraska the average cow produces 4,258 pounds of milk in a year, other authorities state. Sultana's production, therefore, is equal to ten average cows. A statement given out by the college says, "Such a cow is not a happenstance, but the result of years of constructive breeding. Sultana's sire and dam were bred at the agricultural college and she was developed here. As a 2-year-old she produced 19,555.8 pounds of milk, 635.50 pounds butter, and 1,161 quarts of milk for each day of the year. In Nebraska she set a butterfat record for junior 2-year-olds. She has therefore been a consistent record breaker. It is of interest to know that her last son was loaned to the Ingleside State hospital at Hastings as a part of the effort to build up better herds at the state institutions."

Tells Experiences As A Carnival Manager

"A showman of today must give the people more than their money's worth, must treat the public on the square and must advertise to beat the band" asserted Walter Savidge, who has gained an enviable reputation as a show manager, when asked what is expected of the carnival managers nowadays. He attributes a large measure of his success to his advertising, his constantly keeping his name before the people. This, coupled with his fairness to everyone, his good business judgment, his offering the people a good clean show, his giving the people more than they expect, have made the Walter Savidge Amusement company grow from a small dramatic organization employing fifteen people to the most up-to-date carnival employing 150 people, in the period of seventeen years.

Mr. Savidge has been interested in shows all of his life. He has had about twenty-five years experience in his chosen work and has been alone in the business for seventeen years. The ability and interest in show work have, it would seem, been hereditary in the Savidge family. Mr. Savidge tells of his father and his uncle entertaining people on the streets of Germany, France and Lithuania in order to make sufficient money to get them to Liverpool, England. Once there they gained passage to the United States by offering to work in the coal mines of Pennsylvania. After a time they heard of the advantages in Nebraska and came here about 60 years ago. They lived at Central City when that city was called Lone Tree because at that place was the only tree in the south Platte Valley. Walter Savidge's father was always interested in all sports and shows, though he himself did not follow this work as his profession. He was one of the men who helped build the first Union Pacific railroad from Columbus to Spaulding and to Norfolk.

It was when the family lived in show world. He did not want to "humbly" the people as many thought but he wanted to and did give them the best in the line of entertainment. This policy Mr. Savidge thinks wins success in the show business. It is an ambition to give the best and a willingness to improve weaknesses that lead to this.

One hard proposition that the carnival and all other traveling shows have to meet is the public distrust. Many have the idea that a show is fundamentally bad and that the proprietors are trying to "cheat" as possible. This is not true and especially not so in the Savidge company traveling out of Wayne. However, all this opposition has to be overcome each time the show plays in a town. Because of the uniformly high class entertainment in this company, however, this problem is becoming of less importance. The company is known for its high standards and those who are acquainted with Mr. Savidge are assured that they can always trust the same will be true.

Steer Calf Industry Reported Profitable

Lincoln, Neb., April 30.—Calf steers bring the greatest profit over a long period of feeding, and the profit increases as the age of the animal increases, almost in direct ratio, it was shown in the report of Prof. H. J. Gramlich of the University of Nebraska college of agriculture, made public here today.

In three successive trials conducted at the experiment station here the results were the same, according to Prof. Gramlich, and showed that in the 176 days of the trial calves matured 100 pounds of beef at a cost of $7.50 compared with a cost of $23.29 for 3-year-olds, $12.04 for 2-year-olds, and $10.42 for yearlings.

All of the animals fed in the trials were raised on the Young ranch near Valentine, Neb., and all are grade Herefords. They were fed on shelled corn and alfalfa hay. This same ration fed to lots of sixteen calves each proved most efficient as a beef producing ration over a period of 150 days. Both the corn and alfalfa are staple farm products in Nebraska.

Trade Demands Light Beef.
"The most recent report of the United States calls for light beef carcasses," said Prof. Gramlich. "Small cuts are the most popular sellers in the markets and calves and yearlings, especially calves, furnish these much more satisfactorily than the older animals. Calves are the most economical source of beef, as well as being most popular with the trade, therefore, feeding of the calves should be encouraged."

In the experiment it was shown that for each bushel of corn fed to the animals calves produced 11.5 pounds of beef, yearlings produced 8.4 pounds, 2-year-olds produced 7.3 pounds, and 3-year-olds produced 6.7 pounds. With each bushel of corn the animals in groups consumed twenty-four pounds of alfalfa.

Upon an initial investment of $22 a head the calves showed a profit of $2.00 each at the end of 150 days. Upon an investment of $55 a head the yearlings returned a profit of $1.26. Upon an investment of $73.30 each the 2-year-olds returned a profit of $1 cents. And upon an investment of $84 each the 3-year-olds returned a loss of $25.

Short Feed for Big Ones.
"Big cattle should be marketed following a short feed to show a profit," the professor declared. "At the end of 100 days feeding the 3-year-olds would have brought a profit of $18 a head. They had gained 344 pounds a day up to that time since that time they have gained only 1.67 pounds a day and now will be marketed at a loss."

"Calves will gain efficiently over a long period. The calves in this experiment gained at the same rate, per day during the periods of the trial, namely 2.5 pounds a day. As a result their gains were quite reasonable. The 3-year-olds gained less than that at a rapid rate during the second period as during the first."

In the second experiment, the one in which the six lots of sixteen calves each were fed for 150 days, the alfalfa produced the cheapest beef and resulted in the greatest profit per head. In this experiment 100 pounds of corn and 200 pounds of alfalfa produced 100 pounds of beef at a cost of $6.73, resulting in a profit of $5.74 per calf.

A ration of two-thirds corn and one-third oats, with alfalfa for roughness, gave the highest gain of 2.5 pounds a day. This cost $7.02 per 100 pounds gain, and resulted in a profit of $4.87 per calf. Had oats been included at $3 cents a bushel the profit would have been the same in both lots, the professor said.

Ground Corn Not so Good.
"During recent years," the speaker said, grinding of ear corn has been extensively resorted to. Two groups of calves in the experiment were fed upon this feed and neither group showed as large a profit as those fed upon shelled corn. These calves also were appraised at 25 cents per 100 pounds less than the others.

"Heifer calves failed to gain as well as steer calves fed upon the same ration of corn and alfalfa. The steers gained 2.74 pounds a day, while the heifer calves gained only 2.50 pounds a day. The cost was $7.33 for a gain of 100 pounds on the heifers, and $6.73 per 100 pounds for the steers. The heifers cost $1 per 100 pounds less than the steers at the start, and are valued at 75 cents per 100 pounds below the steers now, making the profit per heifer calf $1.00, and the profit per steer calf $5.74.

Predict Weather for Month In Advance

While no sound scientific basis is known at present for so-called long-range weather forecasting, there does not appear to be any sound reason why science in the future may not progress far enough to make the successful prediction of weather for a month or more in advance a general possibility, and the experts at the weather bureau are more or less constantly studying problems of this character. A system for constructing curves based on observed data, from which predictions may be made, has been worked out by F. G. Tingle, chief of the weather bureau, United States department of agriculture, who read a paper on the subject at the semi-annual meeting of the American Meteorological society, April 16.

Some trials in making temperature and rainfall forecasts for various places have given 75 per cent efficiency for future periods of a month or less. Separate curves are made for every month. The data used are based on two-year averages for the same month. With the series of "smoothed" curves thus obtained for each month of the year is combined a series of additional curves showing the weather of the month preceding and that following the one under consideration. By consistently projecting these various related curves into the future general forecasts can be made for a month or more in advance.

The method has so far been used experimentally in making forecasts of weather for a month as a whole, as to whether it will be relatively warm or cool, or wet or dry. The relation between the weather of certain months and that of others several months afterwards has been noted. If it holds true in many cases it will make possible a forecast as to general conditions for several months in advance.

The Chicken Industry

In deciding on the size of the backyard poultry flock, says the United States department of agriculture, two things must be taken into consideration—the space available and the quantity of table scraps available. It is not often that the flock will consist of more than 20 or 25 hens, and for a flock of this size there should be a yard space not less than 25 by 30 feet. On the average there should be 20 to 30 square feet for each bird.

About the only way table scraps can be made use of in return is the small town or suburb is through the medium of a flock of hens. Each hen in her pullet year, says the United States bureau of agriculture, should produce at least five dozen eggs, or on the average an egg every three days. Thus a flock of ten laying hens would yield 150 dozen worth, at a conservative estimate, $40. It is also worth something to have eggs containing which there can be no doubt, and to have a supply of potent fertilizer for the garden.

The man who wishes to keep hens on a city or town site, says the United States department of agriculture, should purchase pullets in the fall or buy day-old chicks or hatching eggs in the spring. Well-

U. S. Government and Saving

Saving and thrift are qualities which need not be extolled.—Their value has been proved in all times of strife. It is the thrifty parent and the saving families that succeed. In fact it has been demonstrated again and again that the road to success is reached by saving.

The United States government has taken hold of saving—in a practical way—and has provided a plan which makes it easy for people to save in small sums and to make their small savings increase until a fair competence is acquired. The manner in which this can be done is told in a booklet on saving issued by the United States Government Savings System. Not only are the lessons of thrift told in clear and concise language, but the facts about treasury savings certificates, the gilt edged government savings security, a citizen in such a form as any reader can readily understand it. This little booklet is sent free to anyone who will write to the Government Savings System in the treasury department at Washington.

How Herrick Refrigerator Super-premacy is Achieved

It is the invisible features of the Herrick, no less than its visible values, that aid in winning for the Herrick Refrigerator its acknowledged pre-eminence. As much as fifty thousand dollars could be saved annually in the manufacturing cost of Herrick Refrigerators without detracting at all from appearances.

But these extra hidden values form the basis of the Herrick reputation. They are the result of much experiment and effort to achieve perfection in every detail affecting refrigeration. They represent refinements and developments that are the result of twenty-nine years of honest effort to build the best refrigerators that money can buy.

is forced, by the cold air above it, over to the other side and up into the ice chamber again. Here it is cooled and then drops again, continuing the circuit indefinitely.

As the air passes upward in the food chamber it carries with it all free odors until it reaches the ice. Here the odors are absorbed by the ice in the process of condensation and carried off through the draining system.

This dry air circulation prevents formation of moisture. The walls of a Herrick are always dry. There is no interchange of flavors.

The Circulation Test

There are several ways to prove that the air in a Herrick is always dry. Put salt in any ice Herrick. It will remain perfectly dry indefinitely, though the slightest dampness would pack salt and leave it moist. Matches left in a Herrick as long as you like will light as readily as if kept in a dry pantry.

Another test is to hang a wet cloth in the food chamber. In a short time it will be perfectly dry. So, too, place butter, fruit or other food in an iced Herrick. It will keep perfectly without mold or decay as long as there is enough ice in the refrigerator to keep the air in circulation.

This is why quality, in the Herrick, is not confined to any one part of the refrigerator. It is apparent in every part.

Cold Dry Air Circulation

Dry air circulation prevents moisture, mold, taint and decay.

The Herrick system of forced purified dry air circulation is based on the fundamental law of nature, that cold air is heavy and always descends. The Herrick Refrigerator is so built that cold air drops from the ice chamber to the bottom of the refrigerator, becoming slightly warmer all the time. From there it

W. L. Gaston Writes of California Home

W. T. Gaston of Reedley, Calif., formerly pastor of the Baptist church in Wayne, writes the following concerning the products of the valley in which he lives:

Dear Herald: Almost thirty years ago I rode a slow train the full length of the San Joaquin valley, massive proportions of which can be seen in eight hours, stretching away in every direction as far as the eye could reach. Yellow wheat fields cover a territory larger than the eastern half of Nebraska. All was wheat. These fields were everywhere, fields compared with which "Zane Grey's Wilderness of Wheat" in eastern Washington, is only a garden patch. Combined harvesters and threshers went at work all along the way. An occasional ranch house surrounded by a flock of barns, afforded the only exhibition of human habitation. Land was worth $20 per acre in small holdings, but wasn't worth anything if one had too much.

Today all is changed. The vision of wheat is gone. An Edenlike panorama of orchard and vineyards has taken its place. Peaches and grapes, nut—it is impossible to comprehend the unlimited acres of the exhaustless valley, which is now called the "Garden of the Sun." The vast holdings are cut up into ten and twenty acre lots and nearly every one is adorned with a little home over which roses creep and around which the roses bloom. Fruit has changed the value of the land and the price will average nearly a $1,000 per acre. More than a million people live in the valley and fruit performs the triple service of feeding them, clothing them and contributing to their wealth.

Here the fig has received a new development and reached a new perfection. In all parts of the valley great big houses have been established to care for the crop and to give to the world the old, old fruit in a new form. Figs cured and pressed, figs pickled, figs preserved, figs candied into confections and figs canned fresh are now provided in quantities that all may eat. Few crops, if any, are more remunerative than this. Here in Reedley we have two large fig establishments. One of them is putting out a new product known as "Beckwith Preserved Fig" which is figs cooked in a very rich syrup and sealed in glass containers. This is destined to become a luxury that will find its way onto the tables of the great mass of humanity. For the preserving purposes the Kadota fig is the one most used. It has a thick and rather tough skin which enables it to go through the cooking process and be packed in the containers without breaking, showing the fig whole and intact. This new process adds very materially to the profits of fig culture.

Peaches are grown extensively in the valley, and great canning houses are operating in almost every town in the "Garden of the Sun." Here in Reedley we have six or seven great houses and the output of canned and dried peaches is enormous. We went through one establishment the other day and dried peaches are bought, graded, cleaned and packed for shipment. Great bins of every variety are still on hand. The manager told me that there were 1,600 tons of dried peaches in the house at the present time.

The major crop of the San Joaquin, however, is grapes. Table grapes packed fresh from the vines and shipped to eastern markets, and tons and tons of them cured and packed. Fresno county, in which Reedley is located, produces one-half of the raisins of the world. In the last few years the raisin association, which is a cooperative organization of producers, has been advertising raising in all parts of the world and calling attention to their great food waste.

Unimproved raisin land is worth $600 per acre or $700 per acre while an acre of growing vines is worth from $900 to $1200. The production of table grapes is very profitable. There is a twenty-acre tract of Malaga adjoining the town site of Reedley, that produced $25,000 worth of grapes last year and in the last five years the owner has received over $85,000 for the grapes he marketed. Malagas are the leading table grapes while Thompsons and Thompsons are the raisin grapes and produce a raisin that is very much in demand. This year the crop of raisins is estimated at 265,000 tons. Each year the consumption of table grapes increases and each year their production is becoming more and more profitable.

The chamber of commerce advertises Reedley as the Gateway to General Grant National park and the heart of the fruiting valley. Each of the hundreds of towns in the valley, however, lays claim to being the heart of the fruit industry. From the few figures submitted here it will be noticed that Reedley is, to say the least, in a fruit country.

Regretting that we do not have figures for 1922 we submit the 1921 shipments from the town of Reedley alone: Peaches, canned, dried and fresh, 20,702,140 pounds; grapes and raisins 70,170,968 pounds.

In addition to the peaches and grapes there were large shipments of apricots, currents, olives, melons, oranges, plums and prunes. From this will be noted the diversified products of the valley.

The great resources of the San Joaquin are yet untapped. New people are coming every day and in twenty years from now the great garden will be supporting twice the population that it does today.

Sincerely, W. L. Gaston.

Wayne Kiwanians at Norfolk Banquet

Sixteen Wayne people represented the Wayne Kiwanis club at the meeting bestowing the charter on the newly organized club at Norfolk Thursday night.

The program which was carried out included speeches from two Wayne men, A. R. Davis and F. S. Berry, in which they reported the National Kiwanis meeting and the following references to the Wayne speakers:

A. R. Davis, representing the Wayne club and visitors, followed on the toast list giving an eloquent address on the subject of organized bodies of men. He detailed the life of the human being from the cradle to old age bringing out the ideals of humanity in a very comprehensive manner.

F. S. Berry of Wayne, was the "fun baker" of the evening giving an address filled with jests in which many of the visitors were the subjects. ### Wholesome Training in Military Camps

—Omaha, Nebraska, May 2, 1923—

John W. Weis, the national secretary of war, in a recent communication, announces that it is the purpose of the war department, to give each young man in the citizen's military training camps this summer an opportunity to attend divine worship conducted by a minister or priest of his own denomination. "By moral and religious instruction afforded is an important feature of the training which aims to return each man to his home improved not only physically and mentally, but also strengthened in his spirit of loyalty to his government and reverence for its religious beliefs. Pastors and members of churches adjacent to camps have been most helpful in assisting with the work. They have helped to make the young men realize that, though absent from home, they were among loyal American citizens, who shared in common with them the common sense and home associates, a firm belief in all things which are just, honorable and righteous.

Mr. Weis says: "At this time when there are among us disloyal elements which would weaken the institution of our government through the disregard of our national constitution, a disobedience of law, disbelief in Divine Power and disrespect for the constitution upon which our nation is founded, it is a matter of paramount importance that training in our military camps, and throughout the country should be such as to strengthen in every citizen the ideals of moral character, respect for law, reverence for God and devotion to the institutions of liberty which have been made possible by our national existence. It is only upon such foundations that we can build a stable American homeland, ready and able to defend our country in times of need."

More than one thousand young men are expected to attend the camps for South Dakota, Nebraska and Kansas. The government pays all expenses.

For full information regarding the citizen's military training camps apply to the nearest representative of the military training camps association, or the commanding officer, 8th division army building, Omaha, Nebraska.

Crankcase Service

The idea of changing your oil every 400 or 500 miles has more and more imbedded itself in the average car owner's mind that it is really the economical way to buy oil.

Adding one quart of good oil to the old oil in your crankcase increases the amount of oil to be splashed or pumped as the case may be, but has very little to do with aiding the already wornout mixture to produce efficient lubrication.

We have been draining cars three years and are fully equipped to drain your car in a hurry, add new oil and end your oil worries for 400 or 500 miles and the cost will be less than the add-a-quart method.

FARMER MAKES 15-LBS. FEELS FINE

Long Standing Stomach Troubles Entirely Overcome by Tanlac, He States.

"Tanlac measured up to my expectations, my troubles have vanished, and I feel fine all over," declared Henry Schickau, Iowa farmer, station B, route 1, Omaha, Neb.

"For over a year I suffered terribly with stomach trouble and run-down condition. I was carrying a rural mail route, and sometimes got caught in snow drifts, or muddy roads made the route a real job, and with my system so out of whack it was no soft snap. I was in misery with indigestion and heartburn after eating, my head ached like to burst, and there was a sharp, constant pain in my back. I was nervous, couldn't sleep, and kept losing weight.

But the Tanlac treatment smoothed out everything and I gained fifteen pounds. My truck business gets me up bright and early, but I cover my route regularly and never tire out. I am certainly grateful to Tanlac, and always telling about it."

Tanlac is not a habit-forming drug. It is a natural stomach tonic. Accept no substitute. Over 37 million bottles sold.

Last week a cyclone swept over Cedar county, doing no damage.

John Lawrence until lately a resident of this place, has gone to Wayne where he is running a dray and making money.

To-day it begins to look as though the approaching sun raising come was bringing us ice instead of fire. If we should have frost as a wind up to this inclement weather, it would kick the gardens higher than gullery's kite.

Geo. Boardman has removed his billiard tables to Wayne where he will open the hall which was lately built in that town by Mr. Boyd.

Nelson Featula, Jr., of St. Helena, was in town yesterday. He says that St. Helena is rapidly improving this spring and many new buildings are being built.

Dayton Ward of this place has, as will be noticed by the advertisement in this paper, entered into partnership with Mr. William Part in the business of buying and selling land, paying taxes, etc., with their office at Wausa.

The Courier last week gave its final and expiring kick, and will go hence to Wayne, where, amid the wailing and wailing of the booming town, it will put on new life, and again bud and blossom.

The Courier office was brought to Ponca about six years ago. It comprised a good newspaper press, a splendid job press, and a large and excellent assortment of type. The paper was commenced here by the Smith Brothers. After a few months, their establishment was sold to Porter and Wigton who afterwards sold to Wood and Wigton, by whom, about two years ago, it was sold to T. J. Welty. Last summer Mr. Welty disposed of the office to Stewart Mann, of whom last winter it was purchased by J. D. Smith, one of the original proprietors. Under the different owners, the Courier has much of the time been well edited and managed. But there being not business enough to support two papers in the county, it is not surprising that Mr. Smith should conclude that it would be better to remove to a more open field. In his new venture, he has our best wishes for his prosperity.
