Oil Train Derailed Near Winside Sunday

Two men were injured, thousands of gallons of gasoline lost, and traffic on the Rock Island was tied up for several hours Sunday morning.

The accident occurred about 10 o'clock when three of the cars on an east-bound oil train jumped the track. A spreading of the rails, due to the softening of the roadbed from the recent rain, was held to have been the cause of the wreck.

A wrecking crew was sent out from Emerson, accompanied by a flat car of fuel, to take the cars and transfer gasoline from the two cars, which had burst.

Passengers alight from the Sunday noon train were transferred across the impassable stretch of track to a waiting train from Norfolk, and one hour was required in a similar manner.

Ohio As Compared With Wayne County

Portage, Ohio, Aug. 6, 1923

Wayne county people would be interested in the differences between this section of Ohio and Northeast Nebraska. The country around Portage, which is twenty-three miles from Toledo, is typical of the state, we are told. The small amount of live stock, especially hogs, is noticeable. One sees a few cattle and sheep, but these are disappearing. Land is too scarce, they say, to raise others. Large fields of tomatoes and sugar beets are numerous. Corn and other grains are also raised but not in such quantities as in Nebraska. In Bowling Green, a town some larger than Wayne and Portage is located in Wood county, located on the Heinz canning factories. The tomatoes raised so numerously here, are sold to the factory $12 a ton. An acre produces about ten tons. The sugar beets are sold to the Toledo sugar factory for $6 a ton and they average about fifteen tons to the acre. "This week the Heinz canning season opens at the Heinz factory. Children pick the tomatoes for 5 cents a basket and often earn as much as $1.00 a day. The vegetables come in so fast at this time of the year that much of the picking is done now only partially completed in the fall. They are cooked and put into large containers until the process can be finished. Tomatoes often are piled as high as the buildings at this season.

The roads are all paved or gravelled throughout Wood county. They are more conveniently located than asphalt. A quarry here crushes the rock for all of these. The good roads and trolley lines make the small towns and cities. For this reason the small towns are not as sparsely and the country people are more conveniently located than here. Farms are small and with the homes built all along the pavement one hardly knows when he is out of town and into another. Dorothy Huse.

Portage, Ohio, Aug. 11, 1923—

Rice oil fields, improved roads, consolidated schools, beautiful scenery, numerous factories, easy transportation, historic relics and fertile land are among the factors that make Ohio a prosperous and beautiful state. Portage, a town about the size of Carroll, Neb., is about twenty-five miles from Toledo and we shall see it as an example of Ohio towns, for it is typical as well as being the home of Dr. and Mrs. E. W. Fisher whom Mrs. E. W. Huse and her daughter, Dorothy, visited the past week. There are, of course, many larger towns in the state and a great number of small ones. Cities of 40,000 are rather numerous and these, with the several very large cities and small towns, make the state thickly populated.

In number of automobile owners Ohio ranks third in the U. S. and it is interesting to note that the majority of cars are of the more expensive makes. The Dixie highway crosses the state from north to south and on this the cars travel at an average of about 250 an hour all week in one-half hour on Sunday 225 passed. This highway is a paved road from Michigan to Florida. All other roads are either paved or gravelled.

The large oil fields and pumping stations have also led to prosperity in this section of Ohio. When first oil was discovered towns sprang up over night, so to speak, and these still remain. Some are large cities and some are small ones. The prosperity due to the discovery of oil is shown in the highly improved condition of both town and country. The roads, the telephone, the electric lines are numerous, farms have all new facilities; roads are excellent; all schools are consolidated in towns with use of school buses; natural gas furnishes heat and light. Town and country are inseparable as far as advantages are concerned. Near Portage is located the largest oil pumping station in the world. This is a beautiful brick structure and here oil is pumped from all parts of the country. When we visited the plant oil from Oklahoma tanks was being pumped to New Jersey. Large underground pipes connect all of the oil fields and the places to which they send oil. The Oklahoma oil is, before it is refined, a brownish color. Ohio oil has a green tinge and eastern oil is light, resembling gasoline somewhat. Numerous wells are sunk about the fields in Ohio and from these oil is pumped into large steel tanks, each of which holds 95,000 barrels or about 7,000,000 gallons. About 1,000 of these tanks are located near Portage. At $2.50 a barrel this represents about $2,500,000 worth of oil. To protect the supply from fire mounds of earth are raised about each tank so that when a tank melts with heat of a fire the oil will stay within the mounds and burn without setting another tank on fire.

Wood county, in which Portage is located, has a population of about 60,000 and its area is about the same as Wayne county, Nebraska. This means about five times the population of Wayne county in proportion to the acreage.

The Heinz factory in Bowling Green, the county seat of Wood county, and a town about the size of Norfolk, is now opening. This is one of the Heinz industries and here catch-up is made. About 1,800 people are employed here during the busy canning season. This week the tomatoes are being picked and sent through the factory. Machinery does a big share of the work in the making process. Farmers often clear $100 an acre on tomatoes.

Sugar beets raised here are sent to a Toledo sugar factory and on these Ohio farmers clear about $30 or $70.

Corn and other grains are raised here about the same as in Nebraska, though not in such quantities. Ohio is not the stock raising state that Nebraska is. A good many chickens and turkeys are raised for market, but in hogs or cattle to speak of. Hickory nuts, walnuts and butternuts are commonly raised here. The shade trees are elms, maples and

Hills are almost a scarcity in northern Ohio. Towns have difficulty in finding hills for golf courses. Piquette, town of about 15,000 people, has a beautiful course of eighteen holes on the hills near the river. The grass is not so heavy as on the Wayne course, but it is easy for playing. The club house is a large modern home at which dinners are served the members and parties are entertained. The grounds are also an amusement park, merry-go-round, ferris wheel, boating and swimming being provided.

Saturday evening here resembles the same evening in Wayne's business section. Stores are crowded. Rail fences in this section are a curiosity to one who has never seen them. These are, however, disappearing. The fences are built of split trees placed zig-zag with ends interlocking. Years ago these were used so that the timber clearing off of the land might be utilized. Stone quarries are present in Ohio for making road material. Stone is found beneath the soil a few feet and when crushed and used with asphalt it makes best of road covering. Roads in Ohio, without this improvement, would be exceedingly muddy because of the kind of soil. It is said that before the roads were improved, people could scarcely have their towns when it was muddy for the mud would be so deep and impassable.—Dorothy Huse.

E. Strange and J. L. Coram of Centerville, S. D.

Henry Ford shies away from his presidential boom... He finally accepts the nomination, he will do it because of popular demand.

Fall in the price of gasoline puts it within easy reach of any one who owns a "fiver". Now if prices for meat and coal will tumble correspondingly, they will come within the reach of the average man who has to eat and who has to work.

A beauty contest between country and city girls is being staged in Illinois. If natural beauty is a genuine result, the country girls will be easy winners. But if the contest depends on the skin with which rouge is applied, the city girls will, on account of experience, be able to walk away with the prize.

In view of the growing popularity of the Johnsons in both branches of Congress, we would suggest that the few New Jersey Democrats be persuaded to run for congress next year. We have especially in mind our own—Mels-Johnson—of Wayne county.

Many Miles Minter, the serene, trust, doubtless lacks the capacity to understand that exposure of strained relations with her own mother does great violence to her popularity among the American people. There is something radically wrong with the soul of both mother and daughter who cannot catch up differences but who are disposed to carry them to the extremity reported in the Minter case.

"I have been over the world a good deal," said one man to another, "and I don't believe there is a better country anywhere than Wayne county." The listener happened to be one who keeps fully abreast of the latest news, and he said, "You are right, my dear fellow, and he naturally expressed surprise and doubt over such a statement. This chronic crepe hanger is a man who works at a funeral than at a circus."

Almost every locality is noted for being something that is unique. It is above every other place in the world—When Dorothy-of-the-Herald wrote us from Ohio she called it—Ohio—being insouciant, it is the greatest oil distributing point in the world. At Niagara Falls, she saw the greatest falls in the world. She also wrote us from the city of Detroit this week to interview headquarters of the greatest government in the world. And when she reports the great relation of the city, we expect to hear of the greatest collection of Dutch cousins in the world.

The threatened anthracite coal strike now occupies attention, and an effort is being made to settle the matter by arbitration. It is the mines. In any event, the national administration promises to see that people have an adequate supply of fuel. These facts and so on, whether the fault lies with respect to fuel production. We don't know whether the coal-burners are wholly or only partially to blame. The controversy between the operators and coal-miners is one that the consuming public has more than enough grievance than either side of the conflicting factions. Strike or no strike, the consumers are made to suffer an exorbitant price for coal. They are punished anyway. If any striking were justified, it would be on the part of consumers. They can quit eating or sleeping. When the weather whippers to them to buy fuel, they have to buy regardless of the price. But the national administration will do well to permit no industrial dispute to increase the burden on the consumer.

Reports that Dr. J. T. Hone proposed to duplicate the long horse said to have been made 100 years ago by Hugh Glass, immortalized in John Richard's poem, are exaggerated, of course. Dr. Hone said he had a model before him of the truth of the reported craft, and that Accordingly he had made the standard horse by the copy and prove its possibility. He did not mean that he was going to try it. It is reported that St. Simon, a well-known St. Louis subject, a mathematic of the fifth century, piloted on the top of a seventy-foot pillar, four feet square, for thirty years, in order to devote himself exclusively to prayer and meditation, and thus burnish and exalt his soul. We don't know whether that story is altogether true or not, and we do not care. We would accept it as the truth without proof to show the self-punishing people have inflicted on themselves in the name of an over-heated religious fervor. The familiar story that a certain whale—carcass—was so large that it was as high as a good one, and serves its purpose well, whether it is literally true as recorded or not. We would not have any one repeat the experience, if he could, in order to prove it. Whether Hugh Glass crawled 100 miles or thirty miles or walked part of the way, or if he was carried, would not seem to require proof to enhance the sublimity of the Richard's poem, according to our limited knowledge of the responsible party. And we don't believe Dr. Hone had any serious intention of duplicating Hugh Glass feat which had been suggested by him jocularly.

A STANDARD OF ETHICS. An editorial in the Star, President Harding had a code of newspaper ethics which is justly woven into eulogies of his character. The hardy editor has a sense of high idea of public service, and all appreciate the fine standard put into words by the late president. His eulogies are worth reading and remembering, follows:

"Remember there are two sides to every question. Get both. Be impartial. Get the facts. Mistakes are inevitable, but strive for accuracy. I would rather have one story exactly right than a hundred wrong. Be decent; be fair; be generous. Boast—don't brag. There's good in everybody. Bring out the good points of an enemy or a rival. Don't hurt the feelings of anybody. In reporting a political gathering, give the facts; let the story say for itself. Don't be a party man. Treat all parties alike. If there's any politics to be played, we will play it in our editorial columns. Treat all religious matters reverently. If it can possibly be avoided, bring 'gossip' to an innocent man or child in telling of the misdeeds or misfortune of a relative. Don't brag or wait to be asked, but do it without the asking. Never let a dirty word or suggestive story get into type. I want papers to be honest and to get into any way without destroying the innocence of any child."

FAIR RANKS HIGH. A certain town in Nebraska has the distinction of having the biggest and finest county fair in the state and has maintained that record for years. Its people take the keenest interest in it, and long before the opening dates—begin—laying—plans—begin—the fair comes to the town. The fair referred to as one of the chief assets of the town. In relation to its value to the community it is placed in the same class with the schools and churches.

We believe that the people in that community are not far wrong in so valuing the fair. It is the means of drawing the town and country closer together, giving them a common interest. To the townspeople it is a source of inspiration. To the farmer, the townspeople's interest in him stimulates him to greater efforts in producing a high class product as a source of inspiration. To the farmer, the townspeople's interest in him stimulates him to greater efforts in producing a high class product as a source of inspiration.

The town spoken of is no larger than Wayne and the country in which it is situated is not nearly so rich. These facts and so on, whether the fault lies with respect to fuel production. We don't know whether the coal-burners are wholly or only partially to blame. The controversy between the operators and coal-miners is one that the consuming public has more than enough grievance than either side of the conflicting factions. Strike or no strike, the consumers are made to suffer an exorbitant price for coal. They are punished anyway. If any striking were justified, it would be on the part of consumers. They can quit eating or sleeping. When the weather whippers to them to buy fuel, they have to buy regardless of the price. But the national administration will do well to permit no industrial dispute to increase the burden on the consumer.

Responsible for war and peace. Along earth's cosmic planes, Without electrons life would cease, And the things of the air would die. Their province is to broadcast joy, And quite as readily destroy.

Without electrons I insist. We should run that of cosmic mist. When all is done and said, And the things of the air sense Would cease to be of consequence. Too Many Profit Takers. Washington Star: Even at a dollar a bushel wheat might be made profitable if so many hands were made to dig the shovel before it got to the consumer.

Nebraska Editor's Observations' Broad

(By W. O. Jones, Editor Lincoln Journal.) London, July 15.—I have just mailed a letter to Edwin Jery at Stalham, England, hearing that he had arrived on this side, but I have no idea that it will reach him. The address is too brief. You can't find anybody or any place on this island without an address half a dozen lines long. You first find the town your man lives in, then the part of the town, then the street or road, then the name of the house, and finally in some cases the number of his apartment. If he lives out of town the procedure is about the same. Most of the houses and farms are named and are located on named streets or roads. In writing you put on the entire address and the letter will arrive with surprising promptness. Start out to call, and it is necessary to write down every detail of the journey. Then ask your way of every policeman and you may eventually reach your destination. Nobody knows how anything happened to be here, but I gather that the people originally built their huts along the animal trails and with genuine British stubbornness refused to move when the country became too small for them and then you find a straight piece of road and wonder what accident brought about such a departure from the rule of the thumb. It is a square farm in England we failed to run across it in an automobile journey of nearly a thousand miles. They never learned the number the farms until long after the land was occupied. In the same way the scheme of numbering streets came too late to be of any service to the town. Perhaps the English people would adopt our street jacket system of numbering streets. It would be like things just as they are included in little pockets, streets and alleys, their lack of signs, irregular and irresponsible system of numbering the buildings. The plan names are full of fascination to us. It may be that some of our settlers here two or three thousand years ago had no more imagination than the early pioneers of America, but when they met the "Red Indian" or "Sheep Folk" or "Dead Horse" they used the tongue of their own. The English developed the didn't translate the meaning of these places, but kept the original names, and made spelling as near as they could to the ancient pronunciation. A country that has had the ancient Britons, the Romans, the Angles and Saxons, and the Normans, and a lot of other people coming in at intervals, to say nothing of the Scotch, Welsh and Irish close enough to hear of the great Celtic contributions, naturally acquired names of bewildering variety. Every time a name became fastened to a street, town, house or farm, it seemed to have stuck. By this means England gathered in a large enough stock of names with punch and individuality to last for a good many centuries, farm and detached house, and sometimes even for the long rows that are so common in the cities and even in the villages.

The need of strongly individual names having become established in the minds of the people, and a person is living in a certain street or road in a definite part of the town, the "places" are provided with new names and the old great characteristic or event. They are also multiplied by using the same names in different sections of the town. London has the greatest collection of villages, will thus show a dozen streets of the same name, and this will be multiplied again by the suffixing or affixing of names, garden, terrace, row, place or something of that nature. Therefore the necessity of getting the address right and of adding the name of the district as well as the general division of the city.

It seems to be the ambition of every Briton to have a home in the country. When we arrived we were puzzled to know how the people reached their homes, which were ten or fifteen miles from a city and a mile or two from the nearest village. There are chief and omnibus lines to supplement the railroads, but not enough to enable every country dweller to be set down at his own door. It is not clear how they manage it—but perhaps the number of bicycles on the country roads may help explain the mystery. We also saw people walking everywhere. In certain parts of England the most common of all sights was a well set-up man striding along the highway, accompanied by his dog. He invariably carried a cane or an umbrella, and was often smoking a big pipe. How can a man attend to his own business and at the same time get to work when business is transacted? The answer is that he is perhaps retired. If he is still active, the English custom allows him plenty of time for getting to and from business.

The Boy Scout trip which had been planned for the latter part of this week was postponed on account of Wednesday's rain. The scouts may go to Crystal Lake some time next week.

John Jenik, left yesterday for Longview, Neb., where he will visit for two weeks. His father and mother have been spending the summer there helping with the crops on the farm land they own near that place.

The Wayne golf course was closed to players Sunday due to the softness of the grounds, so that several country club members went to Laurel to have the usual round of Sunday golf. Those who were on the course in the afternoon were the ladies of the country club, as a regular Sunday event.

Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Hixcox arrived home Friday evening from an interesting trip through Yellowstone Park and other places in the West. They visited Mrs. Hixcox's brother at Edville, Neb., and with relatives at McCook. From the latter place they were accompanied by a nephew, Mrs. Hixcox's sister, Mrs. Hixcox and Miss Mildred Wilkinson of Lincoln. From there the group went by way of Cheyenne, Wyo., and Holyoke, Wyo., to the mountains where they were delayed a whole day on account of the big flood. The water washed out three or four acres of timber, railroad tracks were destroyed and people were unable to leave the town. It was said that there were from between fifteen to twenty or more people on the account of the high water. The water was the highest that it had been in years for a number of years. After the bridges were repaired so that they were able to leave Shoshoni the party went by the way of Langier through the Jackson Hole country.

They saw scenery almost the equal of that in the park. They entered the south entrance, spending two days in Yellowstone park visiting all the places of scenic interest. The change in the route is of course through a part of Montana and Idaho, stopping at Ashton, Idaho Falls and Pocatello. They then crossed the Snake River and entered the Snake Lake City. Part of the trip was through a rich fruit valley. At Salt Lake City they visited the Mormon temple grounds and heard the pipe organ recital in the tabernacle. They spent some time at Salt Lake and at Salt Air. The return trip was made by almost the same route as the one taken going out. After they had left McCook, fourteen days were spent on the trip.

Retestation. To the Herald: The Herald reporter who wrote up the Bremer's kangaroo court in which I was falsely accused, was not adequately informed, and to have such a ridiculous and untrue representation. That I tried during a fire to hitch the nozzle of a hose to a post or to a cow's udder, and to have such a story of course screamingly false. I think some one else tried to do it, and then sought cover by trying to saddle the odium upon me. Any one who has ridden the surging Whirlpool Rapids and fought many a raging conflagration would not be likely to make the crazy mistake so flagrantly alluded to. I have always prided myself on a precise state of equilibrium—during any particular case in which I find large responsibility, and to have such a story violently assailed and upbraided with vituperated and besolden, fills me with hot indignation and resentment. The charge is as untrue as it is unjust. It is vicious twaddle and I am ready to defend my reputation for daring and boldness, under any and all circumstances. John E. Jones, Hydrant Man.

Cat Mothers a Rat. Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 15.—There have been stories about cats which have elected to act as mothers of everything from puppies to goats, but Lincoln is perhaps the first city in the world to be able to boast of the super-broad-minded cat which is able to put aside the dictates of its feline nature long enough to adopt a rat for a foster-child. J. L. Schaefer, who owns a grocery store in Lincoln, kept a cat to get rid of the rats in his store. The cat, in the course of even's work of the mother of six healthy kittens. These Schaefer disposed of so as not to interfere with Tabby's rat-slaughtering propensities.

Nov. Schaefer is in much the same quandary as the theater manager Joe Jefferson used to tell about, who, after buying a good sized rat, he kept to protect the scenery from rat depredations, decided that "if the cats catch the rats, wherefore the meat, and if they don't wherefore the cats."

"For when he opened the store the other morning he found Pussay caput, fully smugling a good sized rat in lieu of the absent kittens."

Poor Campaign Strategy. She and Leading Reporter: The fact that so many Ford drivers are running over prospective Ford voters may become a serious political problem.

Business. Sioux City Journal: The quiet business recorded by Dunt is traceable to a number of causes. One was the week of mourning in honor of the late President Harding. Various markets were prostrated as a result of his death. Stocks were affected somewhat as that kind generally. A shock of that type extends itself to all activities. Another cause of decreased business effort is entirely seasonal. Thousands of workers are on vacation. Summer resorts are crowded with wage workers and salaried employees. Midsummer is always a period when there is a let down in production, and business leaders invariably expect that result. Records of railroad shipments, however, do not reflect this falling off in business activity, and on that fact they must claim that industry is just as healthy as it was a month ago. Heavy shipments are being handled in all directions. Production may not be up to the standard on account of the seasonal inactivity, but the purchasing power of the people is still the same, and goods are still in demand and the turnover in the retail trade continues large and satisfying.

All this is merely temporary. There may be a quiet tone for some time yet. Business realizes that a new president has taken charge of the government, and it is almost the same as though another administration had been started. Governmental policies must be considered by capitalists in making its plans. What President Coolidge will do is the thing that interests industrialists most. Will this next excess profits tax be taxed more heavily to pay a soldier bonus has been made. President Coolidge is believed to be dead set against interfering with the pulse of industrial life. Reduction of the excess profits tax was an early achievement of the Harding administration because of the opinion that industrial expansion was necessary and that it could not come in another way. The proof of the pudding is in the eating everyone knows that vast amounts of money have been invested in the expansion of industry all along the line. Reconstruction has been aided for because capital for investment purposes was left unimpeded by excessive taxation. The Journal believes President Coolidge will inaugurate a new business confidence and that a direct result will be a resumption of reconstruction.

An interesting industrial development is that seen in the steel mills. This week the 12-hour day is to be abolished, the date set being Aug. 16. Labor will feel better over a new victory won and industry everywhere will accept the event as more nearly equalizing conditions. Another labor movement is noted in the meeting of chiefs of the railway brotherhoods at Cleveland to take up the wage question. The matter will be submitted to a vote of the 280,000 members of the brotherhoods interested, this being the last meeting on the wage question. What this may mean to the railroads which are facing a legislative barrage as soon as congress convenes in December, easily may be imagined. What it also may mean to the elements of the national life that are striving to influence freight rate reductions also can be seen. When operating costs continue to mount, it is difficult to have transportation rates lowered. With wage demands on one side and legislative attacks on the other, the railroads are in a position of anxiety and uncertainty. Another episode in industrial life is the threatened anthracite strike tentatively for Sept. 1. That demonstration, however, is considered in view of the widespread sentiment against it on the part of the public and the feeling that President Coolidge will take a hand if developments become more threatening.

The Poorest Man. Rochester Democrat and Chronicle: We don't pretend to know who the poorest man in the world may be, but we know what he would be. He would be a man who had lost the respect of all who knew him and on top of all that had lost his self-respect.

Wrongly Classified. Kansas City Star: Paganism is still regarded in some circles as a sport. It still holds a position on the sports page, in spite of the numerous protestations that it belongs nowadays on the financial page.

The Only Difference. Springfield Republican: The difference between a Chinese brigand and a Chinese regular seems to be that one has a regular job.

Hopeful. Omaha World-Herald: The rumor-makers working on the resignation of Ambassador Hays have resumed business with new confidence. Much the Same. Cedar Rapids Republican: It takes a practiced eye to tell the difference between a frugal man and a tightwad.

CHURCH ANNOUNCEMENTS

Elsie Gemmill will lead the meeting. A halo party furnished an evening's entertainment for the B. Y. P. U. Friday night. Refreshments were obtained by "begging" at certain houses for food. At one place the "nobes" were required to mow the lawn before they were given anything to eat. After the trip to the different house winners were roasted over a bonfire. The weekly meeting of the Ladies' Aid was held at the church on Tuesday afternoon. The ladies had another quilt for work. The girls club will meet in the school today at 2 o'clock this afternoon. Work on "Without Fault" quilt has been begun.

An Ohio Viewpoint. Ohio State Journal: Of course it's all right and reassuring and all that to say that the uprising in the northwest will settle down the way the Populist movement did and portends nothing especially revolutionary or subversive in the long run, but what we want is to know what's going on today and to the jobs.

Skeptical. Portland Oregonian: We do not agree with the prophet who says that now that they have peace every Turk will make a rush for the plow. What we want is to know something about plowing the country who have had less time to make trouble in the past.

Time for Bumpers. Omaha World-Herald: The corn crop is getting ready to put on its bumpers.

While returning from Wayne Sunday afternoon with friends, the driver of our car was stopped by a gentleman who was righteously indignant, and just cause he had, at a prank played on him by some boys four miles southwest of Wayne. The boys had run out of a corn field a few straw hats, tacks and other sharp pieces of iron into the road in front of the gentleman's car and when we met him he was running to the side as a result. We appreciated the warning he gave us and were on the watch, also before reaching the place he indicated. We did not repeat the trick and again were hid in the corn field before we could recognize them. Had we been fortunate enough to have had a man in our car, we would have at least given them a chase for their mischief, but we were unable to notify anybody on not being able to identify the boys. We hope it will never be repeated, but if it does that the boys receive their just punishment.

From the Wayne Herald August 20, 1903:

George Reese of Winside was in town.

Miss Monte Theobald visited with friends in Tekamah.

Prof. J. M. Pile went to Minden to assist in inmate work.

Miss Nettie Perry entertained a few of the young folks at whist.

Henry Gaertner from Randolph was in the city visiting his parents.

W. M. Wright from Duluth visited in the city and in company with his wife left for California for a visit.

Miss Rena and Miss Opal Olmstead were passengers for Colorado and will visit at Denver and Colorado Springs.

The usual crowd of Wayne people attended the harvest party at Dixon.

One of J. S. Lewis' horses won first money in the horse races.

E. R. Gurney has been elected to the presidency of the First National bank of Fremont and will remove from Winfield, Ia. to here.

Ed J. Tucker and Miss Anna Broad were married in Hastings August 12 by Rev. C. R. Welden. Mr. Tucker was formerly a resident of Orth's drug store, but has recently purchased a drug store at Pender.

Rain fell in torrents and was accompanied with water but slight damage is reported to crops.

B. M. Kinnee of Norfolk, a barber who formerly held a chair in Wayne, has been arrested on a kidnapping whisker clipper. He shaved a man in 17.2 seconds and laid the world's record in the shade by over five seconds. A $25 medal goes with the trip by car.

on or about the first of October, and will continue three days. There will be a large turn out and fine display. The managers have applied for a Patent band to furnish music during the fair, which the band has offered to do for $100. Their offer will probably be accepted, as the price is low considering the number of musicians and the time to be expended.

It is reported that the new town of Wayne, Wayne county, wants a newspaper. That is at present, no doubt, a fine field for some newspaper outfit to start in. At the same time, Wayne is in the remote future, be quite a town. When the town grows up and it gets the county seat and when the country becomes settled up, it will be well to start a paper there, provided the town gives a bonus of about $1000, and agrees to furnish a paying number of subscribers and to guarantee a newspaper is a glorious business, but glory alone will not feed or clothe the physical being, and for the paper and ink and labor in an office.

During the past week the news, from President Garfield has been gloomy. Long and low, from his release and sanguine hopes were entertained that he would weather the storm. The last few days of the week, however, have not been so favorable and his condition is now even worse than at this time last week. As we go to press the following dispatch is placed at our disposal by Telegraph Operator Stephens, which shows that the best informed have almost lost hope of the president's recovery:

Omaha, Aug. 24, 4 p. m.—The president passed a comfortable night, and today is resting easy and sleeping most of the time. His position among the best informed is that he will live but a few days.

Wayne Takes Three Golf Tourney Prizes

Wayne golfers at the Fremont invitation tournament captured three of the four prizes offered, and a Wayne contestant reached the semi-final stage of the tournament.

Pruf-W-C. Hunter proved the "dark horse" of the tournament and won the finals in the championship flight. C. M. Craven was winner in the President's consolation. F. S. Morgan was tournament medalist, making the lowest score in the semi-finals.

Excuses from the Fremont Tribune in regard to the closing of the tournament follow:

The first invitation golf tournament at the Country club saw many upsets, which aroused more than the usual amount of interest. Beginning with the defeat of F. S. Morgan by Pruf-W-C. Hunter, a number of other occurred, eliminating different players in the semi-finals were reached. In these Marx defeated W. R. Adams, a favorite, and Hunter defeated A. L. Bradstreet, Grand champion, central Nebraska champion and probably the big favorite of the moment.

As Hunter defeated Bradstreet he instantly sprang into the field of "the best" and his match with Marx, who is one of our best players at Fremont, was anticipated with interest. His defeat of the Fremont man, 5-3 was not expected by the gallery.

A Talk With a Wayne Man.

Mr. J. P. Gaertner tells his experience.

There is nothing like a talk with one of our own citizens for giving us a better understanding of our troubles. I suffer from the dread kidney disease. We therefore, give here an interview with a Wayne man:

"A cold settled in the muscles of my back and weakened my kidneys," says Mr. Gaertner. "My kidneys sated too frequently and my back was sore just over my kidneys. After reading the statements of others who had been helped by Doan's Kidney Pills, I decided to try them. In one hour, Doan's Pills were working a wonderful change for the better. My kidneys became normal and my back became strong. I believe Doan's Kidney Pills are the remedy to keep the kidneys strong and active for anyone who is getting along in years as I am."

"Price 60c, at all druggists. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Kidney Pills—the same that Mr. Gaertner had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y. 11611"

Some Sound Advice To American People

W. R. Boyd in the Cedar Rapids, Iowa-Republican: Last week Ding put out a cartoon which ought to be enlarged and made into a poster, and then hung in every room, in which say kind of farmers' organization meets, in every trades and labor assembly hall, in every lodge room, in every store, in every school room, and in every garage. It could with profit, be given a place on every billboard, in every waiting room, in those store windows—and I don't believe anyone placing it in the vestibule of a church would be in danger of being struck dead for sacrilege.

The title is "Where Want is Unknown and Poverty is Only the Foolishly Improvised." It pictures a stern faced, square-shouldered, and a miserable looking-yan, with a mouth like the Mammoth cave, and wide eyes, labeled "American Discontentment" is a banner on which is inscribed "Down With Everything." Out of the mouth of the stern faced Uncle Sam come "Say, you've got more, and more wages, luxuries than anybody in the world. What's eatin' you?" As Uncle Sam says this, he points to the other side of the road on which they stand, to peoples burdened with want, poverty, starvation—wages—bankruptcy, indebtedness, hunger, chills.

The picture is absolutely true. It is a pen and ink parable.

What is eating us anyway? Many things, no doubt—among them First, the lack of appreciation of things "handed to us." To those who remember the time when $40 an acre was considered an enormous price for land in eastern Iowa; a spring seat on a farm wagon luxury; and the possessor of a "top buggy" authority; and our country must get back to a general respect for law or we shall have anarchy. Let a man or woman get it into his or her head that there is no such thing as personal accountability, and why should we expect anything else than that their appetites and passions shall the rule of their lives, and suicide, in an ever ready way of escape from the consequences of evil doing.

Shame upon America, if we follow such a course! The words of Mr. Darling put into the mouth of Uncle Sam in the cartoon I have described are true. We are the most favored nation in all the world, and yet we should have something different, if we keep on fussing, we shall get it.

creased. It is a case of Haman over again. "All these things avail me nothing, so long as Mordecai, the Jew, sitteth in the king's gate."

Third, deeper than all else, perhaps, is the fact that we have in the very abundance of our blessings, lost our spiritual touch—the heavenly vision—and have enthroned materialism above our altars. Forevermore it will be true that man cannot live by bread alone. A physical appetite can never be satisfied. He who seeks only to gratify the senses will find himself in the condition of a man who relies upon a stimulant—the dose must be constantly increased to produce the desired effect, and while no dose is large enough, and a madhouse or the grave is the only refuge.

I would not have anyone think of me as being anything but a man of the world, who is himself not much of a church man, but I want to say that I don't believe any person, young or old, is safe, who does not feel some responsibility to a Higher Power. Thirty years ago I heard a great archbishop of the Catholic church address an audience of the sands of school teachers in St. Paul on the necessity of giving religious training to every child. Not many of the people in his audience were of his denomination. To begin with, it was a hostile audience, but he soon won its confidence. Among other things he said, "I am a Catholic to the finest fiber of my heart, but I say to you that I would rather have all the children of this land instructed in the fundamental truths of religion by Protestant teachers than that they should grow up ignorant of these fundamental truths." He went on to predict what would happen if religious training should be neglected. I think it has been neglected, and that not a few of the consequences he predicted are already upon us—general disrespect for authority—paternal authority, the authority of the teacher, even the authority of our parents. We must get back to a general respect for law or we shall have anarchy. Let a man or woman get it into his or her head that there is no such thing as personal accountability, and why should we expect anything else than that their appetites and passions shall the rule of their lives, and suicide, in an ever ready way of escape from the consequences of evil doing.

Shame upon America, if we follow such a course! The words of Mr. Darling put into the mouth of Uncle Sam in the cartoon I have described are true. We are the most favored nation in all the world, and yet we should have something different, if we keep on fussing, we shall get it.
