Dr. W. Z. Earl, who attended the girl, is quoted by the Journal as saying that the cause of death was a fracture of the skull. He said there were also two fractures of the right arm, a broken leg and mutilated face as contributory causes were held at 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon at West's funeral chapel in Sioux City, and were conducted by Rev. Earl Hoop, pastor of the First Methodist Episcopal church of that city. Burial took place in Graceland Park cemetery.

R. B. Judson Speaks To Kiwanis Club

R. B. Judson was the speaker at the Monday luncheon of the Kiwanis club Monday afternoon. He spoke on the criticisms that had been offered the Wayne business district. Mr. Judson took occasion to point out its advantages and the many opportunities it offered. He said the business group ranked high in capacity and determination to serve.

Judson gave favorable mention to different institutions and business lines and disclaimed any notion that prices were high here. He declared the limit to serve and please. The speaker said the town often was criticized for seeming apathy, but the reputation of fact no important enterprise was ever undertaken that did not receive united and determined support. He entered into a proposition of an commercial organization with a paid secretary and a budget system.

Urges Entertainment For Boys And Girls

Wayne, Neb., Nov. 20, 1923. Having been shut in for almost two weeks with a broken arm, I have had a wonderful opportunity to study from every viewpoint the proposition of a community hall for the entertainment of the young people. It is the community spirit of a number of women and men in Wayne have been working for in their endeavor to secure such a hall and we feel that if all understood the need it would not be long until such would be secured.

The administration is helping the young people in their meetings. They have been striving for the same purpose toward which a small group of women having been working for. It requires hard work and money and the women have held in mind that some day they would be out of debt and then they would build a large community hall for entertainment, lectures, etc., a rest room, a place for young people's socials and a swimming pool. Now that the winter is coming, colder than young folks should have a place to spend evenings in wholesome entertainment. The picture show provides a place but some children cannot afford to go there every evening and churches are not open every evening—so that there are a few days a week parents should plan for the entertainment. Mothers who are tired from their work would enjoy going with their children to a community hall to hear good music or a lecture or to watch games.

Wholesome entertainment that is interesting must be provided for children to make them happy and contented. Happiness is the first aim we should work for and comfort is next. Money cannot bring pleasure unless it is put to the right use. Children must be taught how to be happy. We can drive them to church and Sunday school but this method fails for they must be educated to enjoy them so they will want to go. They should have something to do and some place to go where they will have an active part and then they will be contented.

In regard to a swimming pool, we are looking forward to having one in the spring. It is not too early or out of season to think of this for such a large undertaking. A pool of this water is needed for the young folks for there is not a good swimming place within ten miles for the Wayne boys and girls. Mothers and fathers who are anxious that their children be healthy want them to have a swimming pool and this should be here at home where it can be supervised by the parents. Other towns are not nearly as large or enterprising as Wayne have them. The people of this town should show their interest in the welfare of their children by pushing a movement for a swimming pool now so that steps for this can be taken early in the spring. I have always hoped for the necessary acquisition of a swimming pool.

While I am here with you for I have always had a deep interest in Wayne and its boys and girls.

MRS. HENRY LEVY.

Sapiro Once a "Newbie"

Frederick William "Will" in the Washington Star: Aaron Sapiro, America's foremost authority on co-operative marketing, which may soon become a dominant political issue, was once a newb on the streets of San Francisco. Indeed, it was during his "newbie" career that Sapiro conceived and carried out his first important experiment in co-operative marketing. He and his "gang" who were little fellows, were regularly bullied, by bigger "newbies," so they decided, under Sapiro's leadership, to co-operate for their protection. Thereafter, when a bully came along, the "gang" jumped him co-operatively. Sapiro began his co-operative marketing career in 1913 as counsel for the California State Marketing Commission. The Pacific coast citrus fruit growers' co-operative, one of the most successful in the country, is his creation. Sapiro is still a Jewish man and the son of Russian Jewish immigrants.

A Practical Remedy

Nebraska Farmer: Here is a prescription for good health. It is given us by a subscriber. It requires no cash outlay and promises a definite income during the period that the remedy is being applied. He says: "I am a fat man and have been bothered with indigestion. I have taken medicine with indifferent results. This fall I have been compelled to husk corn, and I cannot tell you what a remarkable change it has made in my health. I advise all fat men and retired farmers, generally, to get a job of corn-husking and really learn what good health is. Also, how to enjoy life. I do not try to rush things and I do not get out very early nor work very late. I usually husk about 40 or 45 bushels a day. One of my weight and age (52 years) must start in slowly and go at a moderate pace, until he gets used to it. This kind of exercise is more beneficial than ten miles on the hoof a day."

Certainly, this is a practical remedy and if farmwives will with the requirements of the times. With money a little tight and corn-huskers scarce at prices that farmers can afford to pay, it would be a mighty good thing if men, who are situated as our correspondent indicates, would get out into the cornfields and, while improving their health, be of very substantial benefit to the farming community. Incidentally, we have in mind that this program would meet with the hearty approval of a lot of wives, for it is difficult to imagine a much more unhappy husband than one who has indigestion and nothing to do.

Senator Magnus Johnson, the Don Quixote of Minnesota, is becoming less and less popular with the people and his senseless legislative responsibility.

Notwithstanding eight cents per bushel for picking corn, the demand for corn pickers far exceeds the supply. This would indicate that there is no harrowing unemployment problem here.

People have too much leisure to devote to hunting and tag and tagging. They are too prone to accept slight proof of imperfections as conclusive. Too often they put on leather spectacles to view the ground, and then regard it doubtfully. There is plenty of good to be found if one is inclined to look for it.

Not long ago the attending surgeon in a metropolitan center was asked by a newspaper reporter to say the certain and definite replied that it was no one's business. We would say the surgeon was very much mistaken. It is society's business to know the cause of death, and one of the best safeguards of society is the newspaper whose reporters supply the public with all essential facts.

Lately there has been a local effort in behalf of a new modern home. The one is needed. We are in questions. How to raise the required cash is the big problem. It would seem that a new hotel structure, commensurate with the needs of the community, would be sufficiently remunerative. Capital seeking investment is heartily invited to investigate the practicability of the proposed improvement.

A fellow got mad over something and was thinking about it. As he was nursing and justifying his wrath, a friend came along and engaged his attention. The conversation ended, he could not for a considerable time recall the cause of his previous anger. He knew he had not said anything, but he could not get it back without vigorously disputing it. That was the sensible thing to do.

Senator Hiram Johnson of California has announced himself as a candidate for the republican presidential nomination next year, and he says his campaign will be carried into every state. He says ultra-conservatism which is in the saddle, invites ultra-radicalism, and that what we need is a line of progressive policies that steers clear of both ultra-conservation and ultra-radicalism. He admits that he represents the happy and desirable mean. He is against present republican leadership and is strongly in favor of taking the reins of government into his own hands.

The local ministers who have just closed a series of evangelistic services here, were rewarded with large salaries and republican leadership. They did not employ hammer-and-tongs methods nor tried to frighten people with the materialistic sophism of the masses. They proposed no rewards insured to Christian belief and practice, and endeavored to impress hearers with the supreme interest of the gospel. They argued by rights thinking. The ministers were largely successful, and they have good reason to congratulate themselves. Their effort augurs well for the future.

The world wants peace. The rank and file everywhere are tired of the incessant and violent means of settling disputes. Every class in America would substitute peaceful arbitration for savage force. The interest of the present permanent peace is manifested by the fact that over 245,000 Americans have responded to Edward Bok's silent peace movement. The numerous plans presented will be sifted by a competent committee, and the one chosen will be adopted in January. This will be submitted to a referendum of every organized body in America. People will watch progress of the movement with keen concern. Any feasible basis on which the world may get rid of the terrors of armed conflict, will be acclaimed with everlasting joy.

The passing of O. C. Lewis, Wayne county sheriff, emphasizes the value of good nature. The deceased was a man of great gentleness. Everybody liked him. In the discharge of his official duties, he was as considerate as the law would permit. He was kind and sympathetic. The little orphan boy he took to raise loved him. He was lured in the affections of every child who had the good fortune to know him. His radiant good cheer was an inspiration. People liked the way he seemed to brush aside trouble. They liked to hear him laugh. His happy opinion was a wonderful asset. His sunshine, penetrating hovering clouds, combined with his fairness and integrity, lifted him high in popular regard. We might all profit by his example of uniform good nature. In remembering the departed sheriff, let us seek to imitate the fine qualities which made him so generally esteemed.

SUGGESTED BY EDITORS.
 The editor of the Albion News brushes aside consideration of Gov. Bryan with this paragraph: "With such worthy democrats as Editor Creamb of Fairbury and Marie Weeks of Norfolk taking the joy out of the office of Governor Bryan and Representative Anton getting restless because of Brother Charley's delay in firing Col. Majors, it seems like this editor for a while should attempt to show up the governor and his failures."

The criminal carelessness of many automobile drivers grows in perplexity, as suggested by the Fairbury News. Most reckless drivers are going nowhere in particular and have nothing to do when they get there. But observes the News: "While the results of their criminal carelessness are appalling enough to call for a very severe penalty, yet the fact remains that very few of them have any criminal intent in their hearts. It is thought that the judges are careless that ends in tragedy. It is a long term to sentence a man to a prison term in the penitentiary for an offense which is not a crime. The parole of young Grainger in Lincoln who was responsible for the death of two of his friends, is a case in point. The judge is criticized for not dealing with him more harshly, and still who is there among his critics who would have a more reasonable possibility of sentencing young Grainger? The automobile has furnished a new phase of criminology that is going to require much consideration."

The Minden Courier calls its readers' attention to the encouraging position taken by the American people in the matter of safeguarding American institutions. An attempt to introduce a few trappings of bolshevism into the country has met with a resounding slap of indignation opposition. "The great body of organized laboring men," says the Courier, "promptly stepped into the breach and scolded that smacked so strongly of having been written by a Russian sympathizer, and one of the delegates even went so far as to declare that 'this is just a new country for the man who wants to work, for the boy who is ambitious, and we live in it.'"

The constructive vision of the York Republican sees the advisability of walking more and riding less. It says: "Some of our colleges are instituting walking classes and hiking contests. Another one of returning good sense. If the joy riders will take to some of the uses of their legs, and the pace of the nation is cut down accordingly we can expect to see a better sense coming over the people. It is not too far to go, trying to go far. Let's walk and get better acquainted with each other."

After calling attention to the way society is ripping along, indifferent to the rights of one another, the York Republican draws this conclusion: "Just when this system will pass no one can tell and no law can end it. But every good citizen can at least contract with himself that will be even more scrupulous in regard to the rights of others, knowing that finally the spectacle of a good example will bear fruit in the attention and reformation of the people who will not feel completely satisfied following the bent of their own pleasure without considering the rights or the pleasure of other folks."

F. D. Stone of the Hartington Herald used to be a minister of the gospel, and he holds his head high for it. We judge he was a stickler for creeds or doctrines, nor did he care a picayune whether people were sprinkled or immersed, high water or low water, if they were soaked. When he fell or rose into journalism, he did not let loose of the verities of his erstwhile profession or cease to minister to the needs of his readers last week, he gave expression to this truth: "Churches, creeds and judges may come and go—there will be only one great fact, eternal fact in the universe and that is the unchanging Christ. Pin your faith to Him, friends, for this life and all possible others. He is the only sure in a sea of unrest; if He fails, we have no other hope."

Medical Society Has Meeting At Randolph

Randolph, Neb., Nov. 21.—A meeting of the Cedar, Dixon, Dakota, Thurston and Wayne County Medical society was held yesterday in this city, at the Masonic hall. About twenty-five doctors were here.

Following is the program for the meeting as furnished by Dr. G. Dewey of Coleridge, secretary of the society:
 Paper on "Child Development" by Dr. M. O. Connelley of Lincoln "Medical" by Dr. John Bais; "Pneumonia Diagnosis and Treatment" by Dr. E. Bray. All of the above proved very interesting and instructive.

The annual election of officers was held and the following are the officers for the next year: Dr. A. E. Cook of Randolph, president; Dr. Hay of Laurel, vice president; Dr. Phillips of Dixon, secretary-treasurer.

Dr. Stark of Hartington was elected delegate to the state convention.

After the meeting a banquet was served the members at Hotel Roughan.

Becomes Crazy From Effects of Liquor

Randolph, Neb., Nov. 21.—James McDonough, 34, a laborer, became crazed with liquor at 8 o'clock Tuesday evening and ran amuck causing considerable excitement until he was put under by Marshal Carroll and after he had taken a severe whipping at the hands of his wife, McDonough became crazed in his home and, according to the police, he was hit by a fat iron by his wife. His little girl ran from the house to the house of her mother, Mrs. McDonough started running after the girl. He met Gibson at the front door of the Gibson home and the crowd that Gibson saw was doing glistening in McGonough's hand and started to run, but McDonough struck Gibson in the back of the head, so that he fell away.

Believing that McDonough was about to shoot, Gibson got away and ran down an alley—Marshal Carroll was nearby. He threatened to shoot the police, but the marshal rushed to the scene and McDonough seeing the officer, fled. He took McDonough away and ran to the home of his father-in-law, Frank Long, where he fell from exhaustion. Mrs. McDonough took charge of her husband and gave him some punishment. Marshal Carroll left McDonough in charge of his father-in-law and this morning he was placed under arrest. Although tired from exertion, McDonough shrieked loudly during the night and was apparently suffering from the liquor he had consumed. Gibson was not badly hurt, the blow he received having glanced off his neck.

It is not known where McDonough is being held. He will probably be taken to the county jail at Hartington.

Mr. Leu lived in Norfolk a number of years before coming to Wayne where he resided until about four years ago. His first wife died about eight years ago and a couple of years later he married again. After leaving his second wife in Lincoln for a while and the past year he and his wife had resided in Sioux City. Deceased had ten children but not one of them is living. Pony is Scared And Runs—Girl is Hurt

Newcastle, Neb., Nov. 20.—Grace Rain, 13-year-old daughter of A. G. Rain, a banker of this place, had her leg broken and received several bruises on the head and body, when boys threw clouds of mud at a young pony which caused it to run away. She and two other girls who were driving the pony were thrown in the air when the pony jumped, and the cart wheel ran over the Rain girl, as she fell forward and the other girls were hurled. The pony ran a mile before it was stopped.

Golden Anniversary Celebrated Saturday

Mr. and Mrs. Lesmann lived in Illinois for a few years after their marriage on Nov. 27, 1872. In 1882 they bought land in northeast of Wayne and moved here two years later, settling on the home farm where they now live. They lived here until four years ago, when they retired from active farming and built a modern bungalow on their home place where they still reside. In every progressive line for Wayne or Dixon county Mr. Lesmann has always been an enthusiastic booster. He and his wife toiled with untiring effort for their family and for their community. They were instrumental in organizing the Lutheran church of which they were faithful members. Mr. Lesmann had the first wagon, the first automobile and the first modern farm improvements in his vicinity. He was always a leader. Men thought that if Mr. Lesmann was willing to take a new step it must be right for they trusted his judgment. He interested his community in the first telephone line, the first mail route and has been a constant booster for the good road project. Mr. Lesmann, during the late war, sold $3,000 worth of war saving stamps and was active in Red Cross and other service work. The interest of his friends and his community has always been uppermost in his work and Mrs. Lesmann has been a helpful companion in doing her share throughout the time this county has grown from a prairie to a prosperous farming community.

Mr. and Mrs. Lesmann have nine children, thirty-two grandchildren and one great grandchild. All were present Saturday. The children are: Herbert Lesmann of Des Waukefield, Mrs. James Hank of Conwoies, Mrs. Henry Bartling of card, Harry Lesmann of Hartington, George Lesmann of Wayne, Mrs. Fred Luth, Charles Lesmann of northeast of Wayne, Paul Lesmann on the home farm and Mrs. Fred Pledge of near here. Husbands and wives of all helped celebrate the joyous anniversary. The grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Lesmann were: Paul Lesmann, Laurene Lesmann, Dale Lesmann, Dorothy Lesmann, Ethel Lesmann, Elnora Lesmann, Merlin Lesmann, Donald Lesmann, Harold Lesmann, Verba Lesmann, Alvin Lesmann, LeRoy Lesmann, Lavern Lesmann, Evelyn Lesmann, Edward Lesmann, Donald Lesmann, James Lesmann, Hazel Lesmann, Linda Hank, Eray Hank, Everett Hank, Irene Bartling, Clara Bartling, Rolie Bartling, Clarence Bartling, Lorence Bartling, Herb Bartling, Marvin Bartling, Luetta Bartling, Mrs. Ernest Echtenkamp, Mrs. Markus Holdorf, and Harvey Luth. The only great grandchild is Verdon Walter.

Mears and families; Mrs. Margaret Grier, Harvey Luth, Mrs. Weisenheiser and family, Mrs. Bramer and Fred Roebler.

Dreckschlag of Ithaca, Neb., Mrs. Dora Breyer of Cresco, Neb., Mr. and Mrs. Christ Denke of Millar, Neb., Mr. and Mrs. Harry McIntosh and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lesmann and daughter of Des Moines.

Salesmanship.
 Norfolk Daily News: Two grocery stores located in the same neighborhood were doing respectively a $7,000 and a $400 business a week. If the community couldn't support two grocery stores how did it happen to choose the one for the bulk of its patronage? An authority on trade relations answers the question.

"The first store was unimpeachable. Artistic display invited you. The goods were arranged so that brands were easy to see. The second store was wanting in all these points. It appears that even so-essential an article as food does not sell itself without any effort on the part of the merchant. The winning brand is by service, quality, satisfaction, courtesy and knowledge of the business are points of successful salesmen. It is of great importance as the presence of stock on the shelves.

SUGGESTED BY EDITORS.
The editor of the Albion News has made a commendable consideration of Gov. Bryan with this paragraph: "With such worthy poise as Editor Cream—of Democracy—and Maria Wood—of the Independent—have in the late Governor Bryan and Representative Auten getting restless because of Brother Charley's delay in firing Col. Hader, it seems like the worthy editor to attempt to show up the governor and his failures."

The criminal carelessness of many automobile drivers grows in perplexity, as suggested by the Fairbury News. Most reckless drivers are riding nowhere in particular and have

The Minden Courier calls attention to the uttering of a threatening position taken by the American Federation of Labor with reference to safeguarding American institutions. An attorney has produced a few trappings of bolshevism into resolutions was buried under an avalanche of indignant opposition. "The right to labor is for the working men," says the Courier, "promptly slipped its foot on the resolution that smacked so strongly of heavy handedness by a Russian sympathizer, and one of the delegates even went so far as to declare that 'there is just one country for the man who works for his bread, and that is his own; and that boy who is ambitious, and we live in it.'"

The constructive vision of the York Republican sees the advisability of walking more and riding less. It says: "Some of the colleges are instituting walking classes and are returning good sense. If the joy riders will take to cultivating the use of their legs and the pace of the nation is cut down accordingly we can expect to see a sane sense coming over the people. We have been riding too fast, and trying to go too far. Let's walk a little better acquainted with each other."

After calling attention to the way society is going wrong, indifferent to the rights of one another, the York Republican draws this conclusion: "Just when this spree will pass no one can tell and no one can stop. But every good citizen can at least contract with himself that he will be even more scrupulous in his regard for the rights of one another, than finally the spectacle of a good example will bear fruit in the attention and reformation of the people who you seem to see so complacently following the bent of their own pleasure without considering the rights or the pleasure of others."

F. D. Stone of the Hartington Herald used to be a minister of the gospel, and he must have been a good one. We judge he was not stickler for creeds or doctrines, nor did he care a fig whether people were saved or not. He was a man who listened or elaborately soaked. When he fell or rose into journalism, he did not let loose of the virtues of his apostle or cease to admonish erring mortals. To his readers last week, he gave expression to this truth: "Churches, creeds and dogmas may come and go—there is only one great fixed, eternal fact in the universe and that is the unchanging Christ. Pin your faith to Him; friends—follow Him as far as possible others. He is the only savior anchor in a sea of unrest; if He fails, we have no other hope."

home and, according to the police, he was hit by a flat iron by his wife. His little girl was taken from him by a neighbor, Jack Gibson, and McCounough started running after the girl. He met Gibson at the front door the Gibson had and threatened him. Gibson saw something glistening in McCounough's hand and started to run, but McCounough grabbed Gibson in the back of the head.

Believing that McCounough was about to shoot, Gibson got away and ran down the street. Marshal Carroll was warned that McCounough had threatened to shoot the police, but the marshal rushed to the scene and McCounough was seen carrying a officer threw his pistol away and ran to the home of his father-in-law, Frank Long, where he was taken into custody. Mr. McCounough took charge of her husband and gave him some punishment. Marshal Carroll left McCounough in the custody of his father-in-law and this morning he was placed under arrest. Although tired out from exertion, McCounough shrieked at the officers and was apparently suffering from the liquor he had consumed. Gibson was not badly hurt, the blow he received having done little damage to his head.

It is not known where McCounough got his liquor. He will probably be taken to the county jail at Hartington.

William Leu Dies At Advanced Age

William Leu, former Wayne resident, died in Sioux City at the age of 82 years. Mrs. Leu accompanied the body to Norfolk Monday where funeral service was conducted Tuesday at the Johnson & Theunus undertaking parlors. Interment was made in the Norfolk cemetery where Mr. Leu's first wife is buried. Mr. Leu lived in Norfolk a number of years before coming to Wayne where he resided until about four years ago. His first wife died about eight years ago and a couple of years later he married again. After leaving here Mr. Leu lived in Lincoln for a while and the past year he and his wife had resided in Sioux City. He leaves four children but not one of them is living. He has a son-in-law on a farm at Norfolk.

and friends brought gifts for which the honored couple were most grateful. Mr. and Mrs. Lessmann lived in Illinois for a few years after their marriage on Nov. 17, 1873. In 1882 they bought land northeast of Wayne and moved here two years later, settling on the home farm where their son, Paul, lives today. They lived here until four years ago when they retired from active farming and built a modern bungalow on their home place where they still reside. In every progressive step for Wayne or Dixon county Mr. Lessmann has always been an enthusiastic booster. He and his wife labored with untiring effort for their family and for their community. They were instrumental in organizing the Lutheran church, of which they are faithful members. Mr. Lessmann had the first wagon, the first automobile and the first modern farm improvements in his vicinity. He was always a leader. Men thought that if Mr. Lessmann was willing to take a new step it must be right for they to try it. His judgment: He interested his community in the first telephone line, the first mail route and has been a constant booster for the good roads project. Mr. Lessmann, during the late war, sold $3,000 worth of war saving stamps and was active in Red Cross and other patriotic work. The interest of his friends and his community has always been uppermost in his work and Mrs. Lessmann has been a helpful companion. During her share throughout the time this county has grown from a prairie to a prosperous farming community. Mr. and Mrs. Lessmann have nine children, thirty-two grandchildren and one great grandchild. All were present Saturday. The children were: Herbert, Mrs. Leu; Mrs. Dew Wakefield, Mrs. James Hank of Con-moies, Mrs. Henry Bartling of cord, Harry Lessmann of near Carroll, George Lessmann of Wayne, Mrs. Fred Luth, Charles Lessmann of northeast of Wayne, Paul Lessmann on the home farm and Fred Fred of near here. Husband and wives all helped celebrate the joyous anniversary. The grandchildren of Mr. and Mrs. Lessmann are: Franklin Lessmann, Laurence Lessmann, Dorothy, Dorothy Lessmann, Ethel Lessmann, Elmer Lessmann, Merlin Lessmann, Raymond Lessmann, Harold Lessmann, Vern Lessmann, Alvin Lessmann, LeRoy Lessmann, Levern Lessmann, Evelyn Lessmann, Edward Lessmann, Donald Lessmann, Irene Lessmann, Thazel Lessmann, Linda Hank, Hank, Everett Hank, James Bartling, Clara, Bartling, Rollie Bartling, Clarence Bartling, Loretta Bartling, Robert Bartling, Marvin Bartling, Arsetta Bartling, Mrs. Ernest Echtenkamp, Mrs. Markus Holdorf, and Harvey Luth. The only great grandchild is Verrell Wesley Holdorf.

Near relatives who attended the anniversary occasion were: Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lessmann; Mr. and Mrs. Simon Lessmann; Mr. and Mrs. William Lessmann and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Voigts and families. Friends who were guests were: Henry Meintsch, William Lill, Henry Moyers, John Saha, Peter Miller, Robert Roggenback, Anton Roggenback, Anton Plueger, Herbert Hinrichsen, Fred and Mrs. E. Gehring, Prof. E. G. Grefe, Ernest Rewinkel, Marcus Holdorf, Ernest Echtenkamp, C. Roggenback, Otto Saha, James Melchior, Grant Meers and families; Mrs. Margaret Grier, Harvey Luth, Mrs. Weisenheiser and family; Mrs. Branner and Fred Roeder.

Out-of-town guests who the following: Rev. and Mrs. Henry Weising of Alto, Iowa; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Niedeck and son of Ithaca, Neb.; Mr. and Mrs. D. Dreckow of Ithaca, Neb.; Mrs. Dora Breyer of Cresco, Neb. Mr. and Mrs. Christ Demick of Millar, Neb.; Mr. and Mrs. Harry McIntosh and Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Lessmann and daughter of Des Moines.

Salesmanship.
Norfolk Daily News: Two grocery stores located in the same neighborhood were fought respectively a $75,000 and a $400,000 business. If the community couldn't support two grocery stores how did it happen to choose the one for the bulk of the trade? An authority on trade relations answers the question. "The first store was immaculate. Artistic display invited you. The goods were arranged so that brands were easy to see." The second store was wanting in all these points. It appears that even a small article does not sell itself without any effort on the part of the merchant. Advertising backed by service, quality, satisfaction, courtesy and knowledge of the business are points of successful salesmanship of as great importance as the presence of stock on the shelves.

Magnus Johnson.
Omaha World-Herald: Did you ever see a person in a restaurant unable to decide what to select from the menu? Nothing seems to appeal to the appetite. The customer wants something to eat, but does not know exactly what.

Well, Senator Magnus Johnson is somewhat like that in regard to his political diet. Of course there is some issue that he is certain about. He is certain he does not want Senator Hiram Johnson for president. He is certain he is not for the world court or the league of nations. But he is "for" something so that we can understand him in regard to Europe and tell them over there that we want peace." He does not want any laws that will be unreasonable to the business of the nation. But he says he will give big business a square deal.

Theodore H. Price, passing through Chicago, said that "these western radicals have their tongue when you get close to them." If the people have formed an opinion that Magnus Johnson is a terrible radical, they may modify that opinion as time goes on. He shows a desire to do something, whether he knows what that something should be or not, and his specific opinions are less radical than it once was, perhaps

School Election is Ruled to Be Illegal

District Judge Guy T. Graves rendered a decision at Ponca last week that the election voting $100,000 bonds for the erection of a new school building in Wakefield was illegal and unlawful. The election was held last April, and was called for a vote on the bonds. Every legal voter was given a chance to vote regardless of whether he was a property holder or parent of children of school age. The election won by a majority of sixteen votes. After witnesses had been examined the court gave the election a majority of five against the bonds.

Immediately after the election in April, taxpayers questioned the legality of the vote. At a special session of court held in July Judge Graves ruled that none but property owners and parents of school children had the right to vote. He also ruled that voters could be compelled to tell how they voted in such cases. This was done and the court's final decision was given last week.

going. In the morning we talked about a little group of Jews, who had a mind to work. Fortunate indeed, are the people who have this kind of work. Work is the task of every man who would achieve unto greatness. Discoverers, pioneers, scientists, have worked to attain. Jesus paid his ransom of approval on all things. The Jews that build up the walls of Jerusalem did not work blindly, or aimlessly, but they had a vision; they had their plan; they had determination and put their plans into operation, carrying them through to a glorious completion. This is what we need to build up the walls of the new Jerusalem.

The Long Look Ahead

Nebraska Farmer: A disparity in exchange value between industrial and farm commodities, is generally accepted as the reason for the farmer's inability to make as rapid financial recovery as is exhibited in many lines of industry. But to attempt to trace this condition to any ulterior or arbitrary source is decidedly a different proposition. It is true that beginning with 1914 the prices of farm products gradually increased, as did also the prices of all other commodities. During 1914 and the greater part of 1915 the prices of farm products gradually rose and the advantage and through out 1916, other commodities were either higher in proportion, or about equal in exchange value with farm products. Beginning early in 1917 and until early in 1920, the exchange value of farm products was considerably greater than of all other commodities. There came a decline that resulted in a general depression and since the early months of 1920 until the present moment, the parity has been in favor of commodities other than farm products with the divergence at certain periods so distinct as to represent a very great disadvantage to the farmer.

This disadvantage to agriculture has existed particularly since early in 1921, but it is less now than it was at that time. The disparity in exchange value seems to be distinctly toward a closing up of the graphic lines which indicate the disparity in exchange value of farm products and all other commodities.

From 1914 to the present is exactly ten years. During approximately that period the exchange value of farm products had the advantage in exchange value, and during the balance of the time, the advantage was either in favor of other commodities or they were equal. Therefore, the farmer who managed his business conservatively and did not become overextended by paying and conducting his business as if prices should not have been violently affected by the radical changes that have taken place during this decade. The same should be true in other lines.

The trouble has been that few of us have been thoughtful enough or had sufficient foresight to see the situation in our affairs. If we were observant of the experiences of those who have gone before, this is the course that we would follow. Adverse conditions to be as bad as they have been painted, or as they actually have been, it is a fact that thousands upon thousands of farmers who have followed the narrow and narrow course of business economy have not suffered out of proportion to the losses and hardships that they have sustained. Today, with abundant crops and good prices for most of the farm products, these farmers are well-to-do and are still on the road to greater success. This is not said in criticism of those who did not take the long look ahead in time, for we have the utmost sympathy with those who have suffered almost irreparable losses. We only hope that the lessons that we have so recently learned will serve at least to guide the present generation to a more thoughtful course, and if it does, it may have been worth what it cost.

Gov. Walton's Removal

Sioux City Journal: The impeachment of Gov. Walton of Oklahoma has brought to the attention of the sensational developments of a few weeks ago, which, according to the ousted executive, resulted from the purpose of securing the kuklux Klan. It is a Klan fight, which some Oklahomans doubt, but the so-called invisible empire has

Gov. Walton won a signal victory. Gov. Walton has declared martial law that the legislature was composed mostly of klannemen. The verdict against him is not likely to affect his belief in that regard. In this connection, it is interesting to note that, during the impeachment hearing, evidence was brought out tending to show that Gov. Walton, himself, was a member of the kuklux Klan in good standing, having paid the initiation fee of $10 and subscribed to the oath. A witness, who was an officer of the Klan, admitted having received the fee and swore that he also had administered the oath. This was hotly denied by Gov. Walton, and, inasmuch as there was no corroboration of the testimony on either side, the truth is not known. That someone testified falsely is a forgone conclusion.

The impeachment vote is impressive, whatever the inside story of Klan activities may be. Forty-one members of the senate voted to remove Gov. Walton from office. There were no votes in his favor. This is a vote to influence the outside viewpoint against Gov. Walton. He never asserted that the senate, or the house, was wholly composed of members of the kuklux Klan. It would have been a logical development, provided the issue was one strictly between Gov. Walton and the Klan, for some legislators had been known to be members, perhaps, anti-klannemen, to vote against his impeachment. It has been generally admitted in Oklahoma that the Klan's aims, sympathies were klannemen, a great many had never joined the organization and were opposed to it. It looks as though Gov. Walton's removal would give everybody a square deal. Moreover, he most earnestly favors a third party through the medium of which all who are dissatisfied with the policies of the two great parties may give expression to their dissent. Senator Johnson is the type of a great law that works continually. He exemplifies that inexorable march of events that changes all nations, imperceptibly, perhaps, but nevertheless effectively. It will not do to regard him and those who hold with him as mere political freaks, nor are they to be disposed of by calling them cranks or any of the numerous epithets customarily applied to those who press forward with novel thoughts for consideration. Johnson is the embodiment of an idea that has found lodgment in the minds of many, and is not to be put entirely out of the program. However wrong he may be from the standpoint of certain accepted standards, he feels that some of these should be changed, that better things will be brought to pass. The best way to convince Magnus Johnson and the voters who agree with him is to show that the system they want to modify can produce the good of all, that it is not for the benefit of the few and that under it the many will be happy. Whatever may or may not be done, it is well to remember that the election of Magnus Johnson to the senate of the United States represents the aspirations of a major group of people in one state, and this is enough to entitle it to careful consideration.

Magnus Johnson

Omaha Bee: Magnus Johnson goes to Washington as the champion of an idea. He is of the opinion that certain privileged classes have prospered at the expense of others, and he will if he can make them disgorge. He can at least do what he says he will, and decline to support any measure he is convinced does not give everybody a square deal. Moreover, he most earnestly favors a third party through the medium of which all who are dissatisfied with

Dr. A. L. Bixby Tours The Western Coast

Dr. A. L. Bixby, post-philosopher of the Lincoln Journal, is writing that paper daily letters while touring the western coast. His communications are always refreshing. Here is the one that appeared in Sunday's Journal: Salt Lake City, Nov. 13.—Dear Journal: In this city and its environs a considerable number of Japanese live and move and have their being, are law abiding and industrious, and get along in peace with their neighbors. There are those of us who deny these people the "inalienable right of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness" unless they go to some other country to obtain it. That attitude is unfair, un-American, un-Christian and undefensible.

The larger part of the Japanese hereabouts are of the Christian faith. An educated native of Nippon is the shepherd of the flock. They need a house of worship, and the Presbyterian and Congregational bodies of this city have undertaken to give them the help they need. Methodists now propose to share the burden, which, for those who are able, should be accounted a privilege. Sunday night the Japanese preacher spoke briefly for the cause in the Methodist church. There was nothing in his delicate allusion to the heart-hunger of a people living in isolation in a populous environment whose throats were choked with silence and whose eyes were dimmed with coldly because misunderstood.

Armistice day was rather quietly observed at Provo, the home of Senator Reed Smoot last Sunday. C. Clarence Neelson, mayor of this city, made the principal address. He pleaded for law-enforcement, and for the swift suppression of those who spread communistic doctrine or speak disrespectfully of those in authority. As a loyal member of the waymen's club of the City of Lincoln, I am out of sympathy with his notion of restricting free speech and an unuzzled press. On the contrary, it is my opinion that any government established and maintained in righteousness, has nothing to fear from the mutterings of the ones who are disgruntled and discontent because of their own derelictions. The bolshevism of Russia was not the outgrowth of vocal propaganda, having for its object the realization and maintenance of an abstract right, but the despairing effort of a mighty race, long the victims of industrial warfare, fighting feverishly and blindly, for the overthrow of a concrete wrong.

Charley Bryan has long been my friend, as I am his. Betimes he has humiliated me at bottle-pool, but not always. The shout of victory has resounded within me every time the dining room above when I know it didn't sound good to him. We were then at what seemed a sound and consistent footing, were our boasted liberties, and what becomes of the Declaration of Independence? Free speech and freedom of the press.

I stand for these and nothing less. And when a fellow-worm distressed, Has something weighing on his chest, I say to him, "Without restraint Give utterance to your complaint. If I by any means can give Relief, 'Till do so, as I live for you."

But in event the song he sings is full of all-discoard things, No thought coherent or profound, Schemes ill-digested and untried, Then-day's call I can't dispute: 'Till strive to educate the brute. To such I say: "My dying friend, You say 'Till do so, as I live for you.' You have but little sense, old chap, (That's always been my handicap) And, like myself, beyond a doubt You're pretty damnear down and out; But there is still a fighting chance—Get up and smile, and dust your pants.

And if your smile is kind and true, The world will smile right back at you.

And here and there, friends will arise, Perhaps somewhat to your surprise; Of earth you'll have a better view; They'll sing again, 'Till you are free. And you will have no cause for kicks When work displaces worry." —BIX.

Eliminating Mere Newspaper Organs

Lincoln Journal: When Rev. John Steele bopped me for the moment off the track I was on a point of asking a question about that contracted extract of "How do the democrats like it to have a newspaper 'organ' in the county seat? Or, for that matter, in the county?"

A newspaper organ, I am told by way of reply, is a very expensive luxury. It is a charge upon the local politics and is based upon the local advertisers. The politicians, as a matter of fact, find they can get their case before the people more fully and less expensively through one local newspaper of general circulation which opens its columns to all interests than by maintaining a newspaper devoted to their interests but going only to one section of the public. So I was told at Geneva, and I understand that a repetition of this idea can be had out at Brown Bow where Senator Emerson Purcell lords it alone over the journalistic world.

There have been notable consolidations of newspapers of late at Stanton and at Tekamah. From one of the Tekamah editors I got the opinion: "The tendency all over the state is to eliminate the very small village newspapers. Some villages have the village editor, and some trade to the county seats that they used to and that county seats are losing more trade than they used to by the towns of 2000 population. This editor does not think the effort of the villages will succeed. He says: 'After the war there has been sided somewhat a number of the very small papers which had been squeezed out were reestablished, but they are beginning to fade out again. The villages have found that such papers are of no real importance to them and that it takes a good deal of money to sustain them with prices and wages as they are at present."

Editor Edgecombe has made it his boast to give the non-residents Fillmore county village at least as good a local news service as a newspaper of its own could give. He maintains paid correspondents in all parts of his territory. Some of these furnish editorial as well as news matter. With this intensive cultivation of the news field has gone the development of a strictly business basis for the business end of the newspaper. It is the Signal's boast that every copy that goes out of the Signal office is paid for. A fixed scale of commissions is paid local agents for sales of subscriptions and advertising space. The Signal is making itself a public utility for the furnishing of publicity. It is not an organ of anybody or anything. It is just a newspaper attempting to cover Fillmore county so thoroughly that nothing more in the way of a newspaper will be needed, demanded or welcomed there.

Thus we may size up Editor Edgecombe and his 11 in 1 newspaper. It is to be the rule in Nebraska rural journalism. Mr. Edgecombe thinks it is. "The economics of the times press in that direction. What will the political effect be? The newspaper which serves a whole community cannot well spend its space arguing the point of view of only a half of that community. The answer I get is that partisan spirit is now so low in most communities that partisan debate is not relished in any behalf. The political battles of the county, as they arise, will naturally be fought out on the stump, over the telephone, and to some extent through the advertising columns of the county newspaper. The political weekly is gone. Maybe so. Everything else is in a flux; why not the newspapers?

Iowa Corn Picker's Phenomenal Record

A. R. Davis of this city, received a copy of the Omaha Democrat containing the story of a wonderful corn picking record. His brother, Will Davis, is mentioned in the account which follows and which will be of interest here:

"F. M. Bred, better known as 'Slim the Corn Husker,' and who is by the way one of the prosperous, young farmers of Monona county, Ark. who is at the present time picking corn on the McNeill ranch led an average in picking corn last year of 181 1-6 bushels breaking his former high record by picking and cribbing on last Saturday 203 bushels.

"Mr. Bred who is every inch a hustler and a good farmer always finding something to do, if not on his own place on his neighbors' farm, came to Monona county 13 years ago and he first picked corn for Will Davis near Elmore. The next fall he picked for N. C. Taylor. He picked and cribbed 491 bushels in one day.

"Mr. Bred has picked corn for eleven seasons and has an average of 150 bushels for 260 days.

"After his big day of work on Saturday with a sure start, he was promised however on Monday he returned to the field to begin another week of record-breaking corn husking.

"It is perhaps the best record in the state so far, and best part of it is that Mr. Bred has figured and proved that the corn was a 'tually' shucked.

"The Democrat gladly gives to Mr. Bred the title of champion corn husker until figure and proof are shown up to convince a disbeliever."

Business Reported Not Discouraging

Lincoln Journal: The general business situation has not shown in the past month the pronounced change to greater activity that had been looked for in new quarters, and this has rather strengthened the sentiment that business is in a period of recession, the end of which is not yet in sight, says the monthly review of the National City bank of New York. Fall trade is expected to be under full headway in October, and if recovery to anything like spring's optimism was to take place before next spring, it should have appeared last month. As a matter of fact October was a disappointment to the optimists.

On the other hand, the influence of October upon individual opinion definitely varies from the general optimism that has been expected and what is one's standard of good promising times. The volume of business was large, consumption continued on a great scale, and although reports indicate that the labor situation is not strained, as it was at the opening of outdoor activities, still some loss of freedom, mention unemployment. The disappointment has been in fact that October did not give a new impetus to business and commerce. The disposition manifest since last May, for traders to confine purchases to immediate needs. This general disposition is a symptom of misgiving about the future, and it is infectious.

In nearly all discussions of the business cycle, economists have given prominence to the credit situation. The rising trend of activity and prices starts with an easy state of credit and culminates when the available supply is exhausted, then as prices begin to fall, the efforts of creditors to collect what is owing them and the frantic rush of debtors to raise something from their contracting margins drives prices still lower. We have never had a serious depression in this country which began in an easy money market. It is not conceivable that the conditions which creation a real crisis can develop without the pressure which results from a great hang-over of indebtedness from the boom period is true, and it is an oppressive influence, particularly upon the agricultural districts, but it does not make a critical situation in any general sense. There is plenty of liquid capital to handle the business of the country and no probability of the kind of pressure that forces goods for securities on the markets and causes widespread demoralization.

It would appear that the tangible factors of importance are in favor of the continuance of a high volume of production and trade. There is no question about there being an amount of construction work waiting to be done sufficient to keep the building trades busy. We have no reserve stock of goods, have a great population which wants to be continuously supplied, and have demonstrated the past year that we can be fairly prosperous under conditions which are not likely to grow worse. Our foreign trade is growing rather than declining. The credit situation is not a matter of concern.

On the other hand, we have the question whether the industrial situation has sufficient flexibility and freedom to make the cost adjustments that may be necessary to maintain the balance all round and keep the wage earning population employed. Can the adjustments as they prove to be necessary be made without this year's disturbance in industry? This is a problem of industrial relations, and while it is a serious problem it is by no means a new one. We have had it with us for a long time; every country has it; why should we throw up our hands about it now?

The conclusion while the policy of business for the individuals who know how to do business in the best way. The farmers in this country who are always falling off of corn bushels of wheat to the acre are having a hard time competing with the farmers of Canada who have produced this year according to the official estimate, an average of 20.75 bushels to the acre, and the same rule governs in all businesses. The always will be the difference between the efficient producers and the marginal producer, no matter how general costs may rise.

In conclusion, while the policy of caution now being generally followed undoubtedly is advisable, there is nothing to indicate any sudden depression of values falling off of consumption demands. The pessimistic views that are prevalent will affect business to the extent that they discourage enterprise, mainly in the line of construction work. If construction work falls off so that unemployment actually results, it is probable that the necessary readjustments will soon be made.

A. R. Davis of this city, received a copy of the Grava Farmer containing the story of a wonderful corn picking record. His brother, Will Davis, is mentioned in the account which follows and which will be of interest here.

"F. M. Breed, better known as 'Slim the Corn Husker,' and who is by the way one of the prosperous young farmers of Monona county, but who is at the present time picking corn on the McNeill ranch had an average in picking corn last week of 181 1/2 bushels, breaking his former high record by picking and cribbing on last Saturday 203 bushels."

"Mr. Breed who is every inch a soldier and a good farmer always, finding something to do, if not on his own place on his neighbors' farm, came to Monona county 13 years ago and he first picked corn for Will Davis near Blancher. The next fall while picking for N. C. Taylor he picked and cribbed 201 bushels in one day."

"Mr. Breed has picked corn for eleven seasons and has an average of 150 bushels for 260 days."

"After his big day's work on Saturday at which he was employed, he was sprained however on Monday he returned to the field to begin another week of record-breaking corn husking."

"This is perhaps the best record in the state so far, and best of all it is that Mr. Breed has figures and proof that the corn was actually shucked."

"The Democrat gladly gives to Mr. Breed the title of champion corn husker until figures and proof are shown us to convince us differently."

Business Reported Not Discouraging

Lincoln Journal: The general business situation has not shown in the past month the pronounced change to greater activity that had been looked for in some quarters, and this has rather strengthened the sentiment that business is in a period of recession, the end of which is not yet in sight, says the monthly review of the National City bank of New York. Fall trade is expected to be under full headway in October, and if recovery to anything like spring's optimism was to take place before next spring, it should have appeared last month. As a matter of fact October was a disappointment to the optimistic.

On the other hand, the influence of October upon individual opinion depends very much upon what has been expected of the coming year. The standard of good promising times. The volume of business was large, consumption continued on a great scale, and although reports indicate that the labor situation is not straggled, as it was at the opening of outdoor activities last spring they seldom mention unemployment. The disappointment was to be expected. Fact that October did not give a new impetus to business and overcome the disposition manifest since last May, for traders to come purchases to immediate needs. This general disposition is a symptom of misgiving about the future, and it is infectious. In nearly all discussions of the business cycle, economists have given first importance to the credit situation. The rising trend of activity and prices starts with an easy state of credit and culminates when the available supply is exhausted; then as prices begin to fall, the efforts of creditors to protect what is owing to them are the hectic rush of debtors to save something from their shrinking margins drives prices still lower. We have never had a serious depression in this country which began in an easy money market. It is not conceivable that the conditions which

An Exception.
We do not recall hearing of a grocer who begged people to buy his wares in order that he might make a success of his business and remain in the community. But here is a Nebraska editor who is begging business men to buy his advertising space in order that he may make a living. No doubt the business men of his constituency are under obligation to buy his advertising space, but we would hate to think that there were no better sales argument applicable to this business than "Please help the poor."

C. Durant, Jones, traveling newspaper agent.

Mr. Jones travels for a Lincoln daily paper and sends travel letters to a number of Nebraska weekly newspapers, excellent letters too. The above paragraph is taken from one of his letters. Mr. Jones ought to have stated in his paragraph that he felt the Nebraska newspapers that do what he charges one of them with doing are exceptions and not the rule. If most of them were doing it there would be nothing for Mr. Jones to write a news item about. It wouldn't have been news and Mr. Jones is clever not to know that.

A negative answer to those who do not make money is a handicap to his community. An unprofitable newspaper is about the worst thing that can be burdened on a community. It is the next worst thing away to a bank that is on the verge of breaking. A newspaper editor who is slowly starting to die because he hasn't enough sense to get a real job of some kind somewhere is not in a position to do anything for his community.—Geneva Signal.

Legislature May Hold Extra Session

Lincoln, Nov. 17.—An extra session of the legislature will be called to appropriate money for road contractors who claim are unsettled should members of the legislature so request, Governor Bryan declared tonight. His decision follows a finding today by the state supreme court that the contractors are not entitled to money appropriated to meet the expenses of the present biennium.

The funds of the biennium just concluded are exhausted. In a lengthy statement to the press the governor maintains the attempt to avert the present situation, but his efforts were unavailing. The unsettled claims approximate $420,000.

The governor hedged his statement with the proviso that he would only call the session if legislators, contractors or state officials responsible for the situation would meet the necessary expense incurred.

The supreme court today held in the suit of the Western Bridge and Construction company against Geo. Marsh, state auditor, and Charles Poole, secretary of state, that payment for road and bridge work can not be made from next year's appropriation. It was a test case and involves about $420,000 worth of work. The state refused payment because of appropriation for the 1921-22 biennium has been exhausted. The decision says payment cannot be made from the 1923 biennium until that money is available.

The court holds that such payment would be unconstitutional and that states in which the state is required to pay only with responsible dispatch.

Business.
Sioux City Journal: World trade generally has improved appreciably in spite of the popular impression that international relationships have been delaying progress in economic reconstruction. It has been considered right along that the political chaos in Europe would continue to retard the recovery of the world. That theory is correct enough, but an error seems to have been made in engaging the harmful influence of a negative factor out of the other. The economic situation would be vastly better than it is but for the continuance of the war. Europe would be recovering faster if forging ahead slowly and steadily in spite of the burden it is carrying. This is shown by the import and export figures given out by the United States government for October. The trade balance for that month is $99,000,000 in America's favor. Exports were $402,000,000 and imports 303,000,000. October exports were $20,000,000 greater than those of September, $83,000,000 in excess of the exports of October, 1922. Imports also increased appreciably. America bought heavily of foreign goods. The import for October this year was $50,000,000 greater than those of September, and exceeded those of October, 1922 by 27,000,000. Meanwhile, explains the commerce department, prices have changed but little so the figures given show a much greater volume of goods bought and sold.

The foreign trade thus recorded demonstrates that, after all, commerce is the compelling thing in international intercourse. Business is better as between this country and foreign countries. Much of the business, of course, was transacted with Europe generally regarded as unable either to buy or sell. But Europe is buying more heavily and also is increasing sales—the higher American export and import figures tell the story.

Of domestic interest in the progress of business is the approaching session of the sixty-eighth congress. Centered in legislation may be the nucleus of American business policy.

The administration is expected this time to the suggestions from various sources that tax revision be contemplated this winter. That interest, however, is because the revenue of the rates will be reduced. Secretary Mellon has shown how it could be done, and various members of congress have supported his recommendation. Others are not in favor of scaling the rates downward, and a struggle over the question is foreseen.

The administration is expected to be heard from on taxation. It is now believed that it is more or less in sympathy with the Mellon plan.

Two other domestic questions that may be settled by the next congress are those of the railroads and agriculture. They will not be answered quickly. There is a wide divergence of opinion as to what ought to be done about railroads rates and the manner of applying government control, and also as to whether a paternalistic anti-doping ought to be prescribed for the farmers. The belief that a determined effort will be made by the party in power to adjust these two questions to the best possible advantage persists because 1924 is a presidential year. The campaign no doubt will be fought out on domestic issues. Consequently, new arrangements may be expected. It safely can be said that the republican party faces a test of strength as to its ability to effect proper economic adjustments.

Loss of compression, seepage of oil, befouled spark plugs and clogged valves never pile up any speed records or contribute to motor efficiency. To eliminate these faults pistons and rings must fit the cylinder bores as snugly as the "ocean to the shore."

Automobiles, trucks, tractors, motor boats, airplanes, all operate so smoothly, generate more power and give more mileage per gallon after the cylinders have been reground and fitted with new pistons and rings.

In Two Counties

From the Wayne Herald for Dec. 3, 1903:

Prof. H. E. Mason of Stanton was here visiting his parents.

Walter Weber went to Omaha to buy sheep for his farm at Bloomfield.

The prevailing Christmas fad in Randolph is gifts of Indian bead work.

W. M. Wright was summoned to Monmouth, Ill., by the death of his mother.

Mrs. G. H. Culp of Paulina, Iowa, is visiting her sister, Mrs. C. A. Grothe.

Mrs. Ella K. Morrison came from Lincoln to see her daughter, Mrs. J. W. Jones.

Mrs. A. M. Neihard of Baneroff returned home after a visit at the George Culler home here.

Archibald Lanning who visited his uncle, Mac Miller, left for his home at New Chambers Town, Ohio.

Prof. Snodgrass has announced that the high school is contracting for three lecture course numbers for this year.

E. R. Williams, W. H. Williams and families and Mrs. A. S. Gale of Randolph were here on their way to California where they will spend the winter.

Gilbert E. French has bought a considerable interest in the Winside bank and will manage there soon.

E. R. Gurney retains his stock in the institution.

An ordinance was passed by the city of Lincoln, Missouri, in Henry, John Livingston and F. L. Neely to construct and maintain a telephone exchange system in Wayne.

Relatives of Mr. and Mrs. E. R. Chace came to their home to celebrate their fifty-second anniversary.

There were guests here from Stanton, North Sioux Falls, S. Dak., and other places.

Miss Bertha Armstrong, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. R. J. Armstrong of Wayne, and A. E. Forbes were married at St. Paul, Minn., Nov. 21, 1903. They will reside at Rhineland, Wyo.

The bride is a talented musician and has been in the theatre company for the past season.

The next season will contain 42 democrats, 22 republicans and 12 independent. Democratic majority over all 9.

We write these few words just to help fill up as it were, the emptying tickler of a great need determined to furnish a readable newspaper or bust.

It is said that Beecher seldom draws a full house now to hear him preach. The church which has the greatest run now is that of the sensationalist, Talmadge, who is now to Brooklyn, while Beecher was ten years ago.

Rumors of approaching marriages are floating about thick as leaves in yellow-brown. If interested parties only knew how desperately hard up for locals we are at present, we feel sure they'd speedily hurry up money.

A wedding would be a perfect god-send to us.

The indications multiply that Europe is soon to be the scene of an awful great war.

When the panic was at its height an evident intention of going back on the terms of the Berlin treaty, while England warns her that she will abide by them or fight.

France is also arming heavily, with her eyes fixed on Germany.

Dakota, through her delegate in congress, will make a desperate effort to transmit a message to the coming session of congress. But it is not probable that that body democratic as it is in both branches, will be so hasty.

There is one thing to be sure to increase the republican strength to the extent of two senators and a representative, and that is their votes to their column in the electoral college of 1880.

The Editorial Mined.

This bill was woven off in the district press association and comes home with a better opinion of his business. The newspaper people of Nebraska are growing in their management and that is the place where they have previously failed.

Once the newspaper business was in the hands of a few financiers, the undertakings now it has moved up toward the front rank, and we know a number of publishers of Nebraska who are in comfortable circumstances by reason of their publishing business. The first editor, A. E. Sheldon, of the state historical society, speaking at a meeting to organize a Nebraska authors' association, said the original Nebr. editor had a literary mind but the present day editor has a salesmanship mind. He spoke with a good deal of truth. But whereas that early newspaper opened with great promise and was closed by the sheriff, the present day newspapers are keeping pace with commercial development and the work of the editor is standing somewhere besides in the charitable affections of the newspaper subscribers. The editor today who is realizing the largest success from his newspaper is recognizing his business as having two sides, being both a profession and business and that one must be on guard against the other in the right proportion to make sure that both the ideals and the business success of the venture endure.—York Republican.

If memory serves, Mr. Sheldon, then a newspaper publisher himself and the editor of the Signal sat in a hotel at Fremont about January, 1892, during the annual meeting of the Nebraska Press association and disagreed pleasantly on a number of matters. It gives us pleasure to disagree with Mr. Sheldon on the present editorial mind upon his researches in newspaper files in the possession of the state historical society, but our disagreement is none the less firm and insistent.

When the Nebraska editors of the present are dead a number of them will be referred to as having possessed unusual literary ability. Everybody speaks well of the dead. Another cloud that probably prevents clarity of sight upon the part of Mr. Sheldon is the stark fact that Nebraska publishers are as prosperous as other business men. They have the best typesetting machine money can buy, good presses, buy their type in weight fonts, own a flock of typewriters and pay cash for their groceries. When Mr. Sheldon was a newspaper publisher under a condition would have been considered almost criminal probably and Mr. Sheldon must have been out of actual newspaper work so long that his literary mind has not been able to adjust itself to the present editorial prosperity, now quite common in nearly every state.

The three great agencies that have created American citizenship and which must be depended upon to continue its improvement, are the church, the school and the newspaper. Religious workers are still underpaid but they are receiving better recognition than formerly. The school teachers have had great financial advancement. The newspaper publishers have fared better than the religious workers and about in the same degree as the teachers. All of these departments of human endeavor improved service has been demanded in return for the additional compensation.

What we have been saying has been meant to refer to Nebraska weekly newspaper publishers, but the application could be made to the general. We have read most of the daily Nebraska newspapers most of the time for nearly forty years and we do not believe it is true that there is less literary merit in the editorial pages of the metropolitan dailies of Nebraska or the third city dailies, than there ever was in the past. The third city papers are generally improved in every way. Mr. Sheldon will have to show us. Real literary merit is really more essential than that it was for the past. A newspaper that is not well written cannot be sold. To that extent it is not a question of salesmanship at all. It is a question of the quality of what we have all come to recognize the fact that having a fine product of any kind doesn't help us much unless we sell the world and do it convincingly.—Genesia Signal.

Monkey Wrenches.

The Lincoln Journal: During the war the price of cattle reached unheard of heights in Argentina and throughout the world. When the panic arrived some of the lower grades could hardly be sold at all. Argentina is a long way from the world's markets but a small consuming market in that relation as compared with that of the United States. The collapse created a crisis on the ranches and also in political centers. The result was a price fixing law and a provision that cattle should be bought by live weight and not by estimated-dressed weight, the traditional practice.

Prices according to the law, are to be fixed by a committee of six besides the minister of agriculture. Two are to represent producers, two the government and the packers. The packing concerns elected to go without representation and the committee fixed as the minimum price for steers upon a year's advance during the year. The cattle were divided into three general classes and only one price was allowed within the class, regardless of variations in quality. One of the pillars in the bill is the failure to fix a price on cattle used for local consumption. The object was to make the foreigner to pay and to give the home people the benefit of competition. The packers refused to buy under the schedule imposed by the committee, claiming that they could not come out even. The result was the immediate collapse of the market. Cattle that had been salable at a price could not be moved at all, and the growers in a panic have turned and demanded some modification or a complete repeal of the law. The plan of course involves an impossible method of fixing the price of a commodity. If the Argentine government had considered it necessary to improve the market for cattle but one way would have been open—to take the stuff at a price, put it on the world market and carry for the deficit out of the national treasury. Price fixing by any other method is impossible.
