STOCKHOLDERS OF COUNTY FAIR MEET

Hold First Annual Meeting in Wayne on Saturday to Elect Officers and Hear Reports.

CONDITION IS ENCOURAGING

Stockholders Asked to Sell Balance of Stock to Meet Expenses Early Next Year.

The stockholders of the Wayne County Fair association held their first annual meeting at the city hall in Wayne Saturday afternoon, and reports of officers were encouraging and eminently satisfactory.

The reports showed an improvement of nearly $2,000 on indebtedness that had been made this year.

A statement of receipts and expenditures for the late fair showed a balance on hand of over $500. It is pointed out that this condition contrasts sharply with the experience of several county fairs the past year.

The Wayne County Fair association is incorporated for $25,000, with 500 shares of $50 each. Two hundred shares have been sold, and the balance now is held by the stockholders of the shares between now and March 1 in order to make an early start on necessary improvements for the coming fair.

SCHOOL MEN MEET TO TALK OVER PROBLEMS

Reducing Cost of Education is Main Discussion on Friday.

Sixty-seven school men of north Nebraska met in Wayne at the State Teachers College last Friday afternoon and evening to discuss subjects of importance to the school community.

Plans to make the conditions better for teachers, students, school authorities and all others concerned were taken up in detail.

On the advisability of cutting down the teaching force rather than reducing the salaries of teachers a considerable amount of time was spent.

The school men presented figures to show that while in 1910 the average salary of teachers was $1515 compared with $335 at present, the purchasing power of the $335 now is only 81 per cent of the purchasing power of $1515 in 1910.

That Well Known Christmas Spirit

MRS. HONEYWELL drew aside the hanging curtains to place the holy wreath with its red silk bow in the window. Suddenly her front door flew open with a whirl of snow and Edith stomped in, her arms filled with her Christmas bundles.

Edith, tall and rosy cheeked, elated in the "big store." She had been taken on as an extra for the holiday rush. The excitement, the crowding of insistent customers, the continuous demand for cheerful services had been her first business experience.

"Hello, Mother bunch?" cried Edith as she closed the door and dropped her bundles, her fur niece and her great coat.

"Are you tired, dear?" asked Mrs. Honeywell, for she knew that this was the last shopping day and she imagined a day of exasperation for her daughter in serving the numberless last minute folk.

"Not a bit," Edith promptly rejoined. Edith, "I do believe that people are following somewhat the muchly advocated saying of doing their Christmas shopping early. Of course there were a lot who had to get something for their cousin or a friend or a wife whom they had forgotten but the sensible and appreciative ones and were the nicest customers I ever had.

"You know, mother," she went on, "you sort of lose the idea of Christmas when you are in the center of so much buying and selling. But to day I met several customers who were the loveliest I have met."

Edith strolled on out into the kitchen with her mother and helped her with the preparations for supper. Mother and daughter had been "batching it" together for some years, living on the income from Mr. Honeywell's insurance which had provided for Edith's education as well as a fair living for both of them. Now, however, Edith felt she should make her own way at least. They needed pratty clothes; she and her mother liked the theatre and some day they were going to get "that car."

"I have a little surprise for you, Mother, or rather the surprise is for me," murmured Edith while she stirred the gravy.

"I thought so," answered her mother, "you've been looking quite mysterious. Look out, you're burning the gravy. I suppose you are going to tell me that Fred will be here tonight."

"Oh, Fred will be here all right. He'd be here day and night if I'd asked him. But that's not my special surprise," said Edith as she and Mrs. Honeywell sat down to their gate-legged table.

"I am going to be kept on at the store," Edith continued, "and it all came about on account of a certain Mrs. Worthington. She came into the china and glassware section and she seemed to be quite put out and annoyed and told me how she had purchased a nice tea set as a gift for her daughter and the set had been delivered broken and here it was the last day with no gift. I sympathized with her and helped her make a new selection and arranged with the floorman to have it delivered by a special messenger. It wasn't much for me to do, since it had happened before many time, especially this time of the year, but it seemed to impress Mrs. Worthington. I have since found out that she is one of the most important customers the store has. As soon as I finished with her she went to the buyer of the section and requested to him how I had handled the matter for her and told him that he ought to keep me after the rush. The buyer said he agreed with her and would arrange for me to be employed permanently and he notified me before I left this evening. So mother that settles the job question! And it must have been the Christmas spirit that got into Mrs. Worthington. The other girls told me she had never been known to have a kind word for any one."

"The door bell gave a sharp ring and Edith rose hastily with an eager look in her blue eyes. The next instant Mrs. Honeywell heard a soft murmur which she kept on at the store," Edith continued, "and it all came about on account of a certain Mrs. Worthington. She came into the china and glassware section and she seemed to be quite put out and annoyed and told me how she had

"Oh, Fred, how cold your nose is!" Whereupon Mrs. Honeywell demanded to know how Edith knew. There was a series of repressed giggles and Mrs. Honeywell entered and greeted a much loved mother-in-law-to-be.

Christmas Baskets from Good Fellows

CLARITY cannot be itself, is not puffed up." At Christmas one's thoughts turn toward giving and that generosity—not only to our dear ones but to those especially in need. There are many who at Christmas would mean a sad time—a time when Santa had apparently forgotten them.

Clarity has such an unpleasant sound. If it is translated into love and good fellowship it will work out the greatest happiness to all. One woman who for three years had charge of the Christmas baskets given by a woman's club said she had always regarded this work as a very great privilege.

"We fix up our baskets as if we were giving them to our friends," she said. "First we find families who are worthy and to whom baskets will be acceptable. There are always the 'proud poor' who would only feel hurt if offered gifts. Then if we know the age of the children in the family we supply stockings and mittens of the right size."

"A call for donations from the club members gives us varied supplies. Home-made preserves or canned goods, we always receive. In each basket has a chicken, there is in it candy and dates, or some special Christmas dainties. We try to see that each child receives a gift. As to packing the baskets," she continued, "we make a special effort to make them look attractive. The baskets are decorated with colorful paper, and tied with ribbons, in other words, just as we would send to our dearest friends. Each basket has its Christmas card with a merry rhyme. Our grocer kindly loaned their truck and delivered the baskets for us, this last year."

"Besides the work the club does for the individuals, we try to help the settlement house in which we are interested. For them we send out a call to our club members for soap, and for all sizes of stockings. These two articles seem to be the most needed. As to clothing, our effort has been to supply both before and after Christmas. If we know of some special need, we ask our members for the size and kind of garment, and it always forth coming."

Another branch of this club's Christmas fellowship work is done by a committee to work among the ex-soldiers in a near-by hospital. Different organizations take up the various needs, so as to not conflict with each other. One group gives handkerchiefs to each one of the soldiers, another group gives socks, and so on. This particular club gave each boy a Christmas box besides decorating trees for several different wards in the hospital.

In order that the boxes might be nearly uniform, club members were asked to buy their gifts, with the box, to amount to a dollar. Cigarettes, stamps, stationery, toilet soap, shaving soap, tooth paste, toilet water, decks of cards, were suggested as possible gifts.

At the meeting in which the gifts most acceptable were discussed, there was some amusement felt over the fact that the soldiers did really regard it as a luxury and were very fond of it—and at Christmas they surely ought to receive the things they like.

It was further suggested that a little note accompany each box, so that the recipient would feel it more of a personal present and so that if he wished, he might write and thank the giver. Not that the giver wants to be thanked—but the boy's respect has been considered. An incident is called to mind, of the days of the war. One Sunday afternoon, a young couple invited a stray sailor to their home for the afternoon. He seemed so appreciative of the effort to entertain him that he could hardly wait until he might "return the favor."

He invited them to visit his training station, and later when the young folks were able to accept the invitation, he took great pleasure in showing them around and explaining all he could. They, in turn were grateful to him for a pleasant afternoon in one of those enormous and marvelous schools the war developed.

A last little hint for 'Christmas fellowship, left over from war days, concerns the subject of mittens. One dear lady always carried four or five pairs of mittens with her when in the city. When ever she saw a new pair (for any other child) with a favor." He invited them to visit his training station, and later when the young folks were able to accept the invitation, he took great pleasure in showing them around and explaining all he could. They, in turn were grateful to him for a pleasant afternoon in one of those enormous and marvelous schools the war developed.

Republican Leaders Discuss Politics

Norfolk Daily News, Dec. 6. P. A. Barrows, former lieutenant governor and now associate editor of the Madison Star-Mail, was unanimously elected temporary chairman of Third congressional district republican committee at an enthusiastic meeting held in the Norfolk city hall Friday afternoon.

Mr. Barrows, succeeds William L. Dowling who has filed as candidate for the supreme bench.

Women Join in Discussion

More than half a hundred men and women, representatives of the republican party in all parts of the Third congressional district were present at the meeting. The women took as prominent part in the proceedings as the men and the music members appeared very much at ease in conferring over political matters with the feminine committee members.

Chairman Barrows predicted the election of a republican congressman in the Third district.

A. R. Davis of Wayne and Senator Benton of Oklahoma each delivered masterly addresses on republican principles, the former declaring that candidates next year will be either radicals with many ill to announce and many cures to suggest, or the higher type of conservative candidate with good sound program which can be made workable for the people. He declared that it will have to be a two-party campaign next year and that the voters must either be republicans or democrats.

Representative Grant Means of Wayne also had an interesting message of cheer to bring to the republican leaders.

The congressional committee met merely for the purpose of selecting a chairman and after that work was done, plans were laid for an early publicity campaign in order to inform the public regarding the accomplishments of the party. No candidates were discussed, although some rumors suggested a movement on foot for the candidacy for congress of Mr. Dohlan, an ex-service man of Fremont, who was present, and also, of Frank Williams of Abilon.

Alleged Violation of Anti-Lottery Law

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 6.—Following a protest by about twelve Stromburg merchants to the state-legal department today against alleged lottery schemes which business men at York are advertising "to draw trade to that city," Attorney General O. S. Spillman telephoned to County Attorney Benton Perry at York and asked him to make a report on what is being done or whether he is making any move to see that the state laws are not violated.

Printed handbills, alleged to have been circulated by York merchants and announcing prizes of $500 in gold to be given on these dates previous to Christmas to those holding certain coupons given with merchandise, were in the exhibit sent from Stromburg. The coupons had been filed in person by a group of Stromburg citizens who called upon the governor.

Ask Big Damages.

Lincoln, Neb., Dec. 7.—Two suits, alleging damages approximating $1,000,000, were filed in federal court here against W. R. Ferguson, of this city, by Mrs. M. M. Walker, and J. L. Walker, of Tarrant county, Texas, owners of the Walker Grain company, of Texas.

An Estray.

Drifting to Cities.

York Republican: It is said that two millions of people have left the rural districts and gone to the cities the past few years. We can believe it. There is even a marked exodus of people from agricultural cities and towns to the large cities and to other sections where farming is not the chief industry. It means that the returns from farming have been inadequate and that a large percentage of people are looking in other directions for their livelihood. One of the inevitable result will be an increased demand for farm products, and in time farming will again be the independent and profitable occupation it used to be.

Gifts for Children

You can make

Quite naturally the children will want to make gifts for each other. Undoubtedly there is more love and affection tucked into the made gift than any other. Among the gifts that a child can make are those done with "dyeing." This process comes from the Orient, where the bandana handkerchief first got its name.

A true bandana handkerchief was tied expertly by a Hindoo girl, who was called a Bandhani, and then dipped in red dye. When the string was untied a pattern in white and was found to have been wrought.

Squares of muslin or linen are the first requirement. If a child does not like to hem white handkerchiefs already hemmed may be used. Two or three colors of dyes should be made up, each a strong color. First wash jars will do to keep the dyes in. Dilute the dye in small bowls, a bowl for each color.

The process of tying the handkerchief may be done in one or two ways. Fold the square and pick up a portion in the fingers. Wind string tightly around this "point" of cloth, and the end cut the string. Several points can be tied in one square. Each time all four thicknesses are caught, that the little pattern thus formed will be repeated four times. After experimenting you will find out how to pick up the cloth so as to produce a square, a circle, or an oblong shape.

The other method suggested is to wind the point and, without tying and cutting the string, proceed to the next point. This is the method used in the Orient, the unwinding, when one comes to that, being greatly facilitated.

For several of these characters an ordinary doli can be used, and properly costumed. Some young folks will enjoy crepe paper dollies, especially if they can be dressed and undressed.

And don't let's forget a Rabbit slumber dolly for the littles together. It is made of woolly scarf.

It is made of woolly scarf. Fold the scarf double, fringes together. At the other end pull out two long pieces for ears and tie with string. Make a nose of bread, and shoe buttons for eyes. Stuff the head with cotton, tie again for the neck. Short pieces for paws are tied next. Then the long sides are sewed up, stuffed with cotton and sewed up under the fringe. A gingham apron is a good dress for this rabbit. What could be nicer to cuddle, hug and sleep on?

High Spots in the Message. Washington, Dec. 6.—A legislative program touching almost every aspect of national life was presented by President Coolidge today in his first message to congress.

He endorsed President Harding's proposal for American membership with reservations in the world court; unqualifiedly approved Secretary Mellon's tax reduction plan, and announced opposition to enactment of soldier bonus legislation.

He also went on record as favoring stimulated consolidation of railroads, reorganization of the railroad freight structure as applied to farm products; and government assistance in the distribution of exportable wheat. He declared against price-fixing for farm products against repeal of the rate section of the transportation act; and against revision of the tariff law.

Making his first pronouncement on many public questions, the president prefaced a series of succinct recommendations without attempt at argument. He used exactly the same words in disposing of the bonus question. After urging adequate care for disabled former service men and generous aid in providing, he said: "I do not favor the granting of a bonus."

"The treatment of the world court and the Mellon tax plan were almost as brief. In approaching the court problem he noted that American foreign policy always had been guided by the principles of avoidance of permanent political alliances sacrificing independence and of peaceful settlement of international controversies. He called attention that the United States acting on these principles had for nearly twenty-five years been a member of the Hague Tribunal and added that the proposed world court was "a new and somewhat different plan."

"This is not a partisan question," he added. "It should not assume an artificial importance. As I wish to see a court established, and as the proposal presents the only practical plan on which many nations have ever agreed, though it may not meet every desire, I therefore commend it to the favorable consideration of the senate, with the proposed reservations clearly indicating our refusal to adhere to the league of nations."

The endorsement of the Mellon plan was presented in the course of a discussion of the physical condition of the nation, during which the president called attention that through the budget system and economy in expenditures, the necessities of the government, exclusive of the postoffice department, had been brought down to $8,000,000,000.

The president prefaced his message with a tribute to President Harding, declaring "the world knew his kindness and his humanity, his greatness and his character," and that "he has made justice more certain and peace more secure."

From this basis the president then launched upon his recommendations which, in addition to those relating to taxation, world court, transportation and soldier legislation included:

Government operation of the war-built merchant marine "until shipping conditions are such as to allow it to be disposed of advantageously. Strengthening of the coast guard to combat rum smuggling; rigid regulation of the major sources of liquor production; suppression of interstate traffic in liquor and promotion of respect for law.

Continuation of the policy of restrictive immigration. Strengthening rather than weakening of the army and navy, with additional aid for the army; more submarines for the navy, and increased defenses for the Panama Canal.

Action under private ownership of coal mines that will obtain greater continuity of production and greater public protection against "unbearably high prices."

Relief for the farmer through lower taxes and freight rates. Sale of Muscle Shoals together with a location for an auxiliary steam plant and rights of way for a power line so that the agriculture of

An Old-Fashioned

Christmas Dinner

"AN old-time Christmas" is an expression that can be used in a relatively new way, when speaking of the celebration of this holiday in the United States. It was not until the very late '50s that keeping Christmas as it is understood and today could be called a custom of the country. Among the influences that brought about this change were English and German novels, by this time being widely distributed, and the keeping of their old home holiday customs by newly arrived families from Great Britain and Germany. Puritan prejudice was compelled to yield in the matter of the celebration but refused to give up the place of honor at the Christmas feast to the foreign goose. Turkey, the king of Thanksgiving birds, became the Christmas bird as well.

Fancy plays joyfully with the thought of those bygone days, filling them at will with songs and laughter—the thin tinkle of sleigh bells, with the new green fragrance of pine and fir. There was leisure for the great gatherings of kind-folks and old friends, plenty of time for story telling, singing and dancing, and the playing of games, the very names of which we know no more.

These slow moving days had a flavor, an atmosphere, surely that shall no more return than the games or the odors of the Christmas feasts—such fancy loves best of all to linger.

It is to be led astray by story-book stuff to picture the days just before Christmas as the full of the hurry of coming to believe the Dutch girl laden with the scents of vinegar, nutmeg, spices. Such things belong to Thanksgiving times. Not a self-regarding housekeeper of 1860 or '68 but had her pound cake and her spice cake-packed away in tight boxes, her doughnuts mellowing in hush jars, her cranberry "jell" in moulds ready to serve. If a son home from college or a married daughter returned for the holiday wished to recall childhood's memories, he or she must visit the cool dusty cellar. Lift the stone covers from certain brown deep jars and inhale the perfume of mince meat packed away for winter's use. Odors of the East were there.

In an outer room, as the returned one well knew, where the air was like that of a refrigerator, were hanging shelves heavily laden with mince pies, baked and frozen, ready to be reheated for Christmas guests, and chance visitors. The shelves held besides perfect apples, polished until they shone, and baskets of the finest nuts selected from autumn stores.

The call for dinner comes at last and excited fancy dashes wildly about trying to paint the scene. Such huge tables as were set and such meals as were served! In those days they often spoke of their tables as "groaning boards." No wonder. That phrase did not grow out of "thin clear soup" and "crisp head lettuce" and "red grape fruit"—Ah, no. Such like make no boards groan.

Christmas tables in those days bore an atmosphere, surely that shall no more return than the games or the odors of the Christmas feasts—such fancy loves best of all to linger.

It is to be led astray by story-book stuff to picture the days just before Christmas as the full of the hurry of coming to believe the Dutch girl laden with the scents of vinegar, nutmeg, spices. Such things belong to Thanksgiving times. Not a self-regarding housekeeper of 1860 or '68 but had her pound cake and her spice cake-packed away in tight boxes, Gracious hostess sat behind grandmother's silver service and poured coffee and added cream and urged the merits of the chicken pie. Sons and daughters and cousins passed everything between while of their own eating. Thus they ate and ate, those incredible forerunners of ours, and they talked and laughed and laughed and planned other dinners and lived to eat them.

There at last came the pies—mince and pumpkin and apple and cherry—and the cakes—pound cake, cream cake, spice cake and the plum pudding and the doughnuts and finally the nuts and apples. There is documentary evidence otherwise no one would believe such dinners ever were.

Women then indulged in the practice not unknown today of exchanging favorite recipes. From a cook book of those days of old, quaint enough to satisfy the most exacting story-writer and full of written-in recipes in idiosyncratic ink, is taken the appended brief but hair-raising formula that the modern cook may try.

"Mrs. Ferris' Sponge Cake."
4 cups of flour,
4 cups of sugar,
9 eggs,
2 tablespoons of vinegar."

The Message.

Lincoln Journal: There are only about 7,000 words in the president's message. In words, as a message reveals, the president can be as thrifty as he is said to be in the more costly materials of life. At a guess, we should say his sentences average shorter than any previous message of equal length by any president. His opening paragraph of 176 words averages sixteen words to the sentence. The president has been able, through this economy in language, to traverse the field of American public interest within such space that even hurrying America can afford the time to read the message through.

Having read it, one knows pretty definitely how Coolidge stands on the issues lying before us. On most of them he is "flat footed—okay, say so to the other. This is true, the one on foreign affairs including Russia and the allied debts. He puts himself behind his secretary of the treasury or his tax and fiscal policy. No one can misunderstand him on prohibition enforcement. He is not so specific on railroads and coal, but these are complicated open questions. He takes definite ground on the agricultural problem, on Muscle Shoals, on war, on child labor, on the civil service. At a time when public men are generally side-stepping the matter by one device or another, Coolidge makes a final, nice word definition on the bureau.

It would take a peculiarly submissive mind to agree with every position taken by the president. There are plenty of points which should feel obliged to debate with him. But what the country asks of this message is an answer to the questions such as these: Has the president a good grasp of the national questions relating to his job? Has he the courage and the toughness of mind to get at these questions straight-forwardly and with force? What general attitude of mind does it reveal—open or shut, backward or forward, reactionary or radical, conservative or liberal?

Every person has the opportunity to read the message in full and judge for himself. The judgments will vary with the temperament and the prejudices of the reader. But we believe that few, of whatever bias, will deny that the president has made a careful, intelligent, and courageous review of the state and needs of his country. The president has shown himself on the whole neither radical nor reactionary, but a careful stepper, while even the radical generally becomes when placed under such responsibilities as a president bears.

The Arlington velvet bean developed by the United States department of agriculture is a new early variety which matures fully in the vicinity of Washington, D. C. It makes excellent growth and gives careful vigor to corn when grown with that crop. The development of the variety should bring velvet beans into general use at least as far north as the latitude of Washington, Cincinnati and Kansas City.

San Francisco Chronicle: It seems strange that from getting down to give us a touching ballad entitled: "I didn't raise my boy to be a taxpayer."

Victory! Nebraska Farmer: Probably the first issue of our readers knew to late John M. Siddall. He was editor of the American Magazine. A friend asked him one day: "What is your editorial policy?" "It is to spend a few weeks before beginning housekeeping at Thurston."

Ministers of Boone county met at Albion last week and organized an association. Rev. W. A. Rominger of St. Edward is president.

Albert Shafer, 17-year-old son of Ed. Shafer of near Albion, suffered a fractured neck when he was thrown from a horse while he was out on a wolf hunt with other boys of the neighborhood. He died soon afterwards.

This was not true of John Siddall. On April 17, 1923, he received the final verdict that he had only a few more months to live. He went directly from the physician's office to his home and told the truth to his wife, and she told no one else.

"Now," he said calmly, "you and I will face this together, and we will begin today to set everything in its right. Life has dealt me some mighty good hands and I have had fun, and satisfaction in playing them the best I know how. Now that this one has been dealt to me, I am not going to whimper."

Addresses Bible Circles.
Miss Rose Munde of Glenwood, Iowa, who has been connected with missionary work in the city of Yokohama, Japan, for fifteen years as rescue worker for the W. C. T. U. and later in a mission of her own with the help of competent natives on Theatre street where literally hundreds of social ladies became Christians, addressed the Young People's Bible circle meeting at the E. B. Young home last Friday evening. She told of the recent disaster which suddenly swept away 224,000 lives.

Miss Mintie is tall and dark complexioned, her hair being well sprinkled with grey. She has an air of gentle refinement and is an attractive speaker. She told of how she is obligated to seek higher altitudes during the month of August and it was for this reason that she had gathered on the mountains for a season of prayer when the earthquake disaster came. Business interests called Miss Mintie to her home in Chicago days earlier than the other missionaries and she was thus one of those in the earthquake region. Just at noon on Sept. 1, Miss Mintie came and in six minutes the cities of Tokio and Yokohama were a mass of ruins. Gas and water were broken by the terrific upheaval and the place soon became a sheet of flames. Her mission and her home for the destruction of the city.

Thousands of frenzied sufferers wandered about for three days while quakes and fire continued. People died with thirst for wells were nearly all destroyed.

In one place Miss Mintie saw 40,000 people gathered together for safety when she passed them. She again none were left. One pitiful sight she described was a mother and her family of nine children pinned under the burning rafters of their home. Miss Mintie's protection was miraculous as she just escaped her home in time to avoid the destruction and she carried away a piece of bread on which she lived for three days. When nearly fainting with thirst Miss Mintie found a little water which gave her strength to continue her search for more. The great bible house and book society, stated Miss Mintie, "were entirely wiped out."

Miss Mintie also addressed the women of the Bible Study circle at the home of Mrs. E. A. Armstrong and here she related her experiences. The circle meets next Tuesday with Mrs. P. H. Benshoof.

Miss Mintie went to the city Monday Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. E. B. Young to speak at meetings.

At the young people's session Friday a large delegation of the church of town was present and T. F. Bracken brought a car of young folks here from Emerson for the evening.

Power To Resist Driving.
Lincoln Evening Journal: The automobile is showing men up in another light. It is an excellent example of a man's will power. He knows that walking down town to his business is the thing for him to do in a physical sense. He realizes that there in the garage is a car that he owns, that it is well filled with gasoline, that he can easily afford to Bad Advice.

Lincoln Evening News: One of the numerous foolish ideas that Nietzsche had was that no man lived a worth while life unless he engaged in adventurous enterprises. The expert in precision he used, if we recall it correctly, was "leaving dangerously in the car." Has he a strong will or the noblest thing in the world, if not? Count the number of cars that "Build your cities beside Vesuvius!" all day dot the streets outside the restricted parking district.

To the Patrons of Wayne Postoffices:

Just a few suggestions in regard to the Christmas mails:
Mail early; parcels may be marked "Do not open until Christmas" or with a similar direction. By mailing early you aid materially in avoiding congestion and insure your parcels reaching their destination by Christmas day.

Wrap securely with heavy paper and tie with strong twine. Fragile articles should be packed in excelsior or other suitable packing material and inclosed in heavy corrugated or wooden boxes.

Address plainly giving complete address including street number. Place your return in upper left hand corner of your parcels. Do not place Christmas seals or stickers on the face of the parcel; place them on the back.

Do not seal your parcels unless you use the regulation printed label required for sealed parcels. These labels must be printed and in the following manner: "Fourth-class mail. Postmaster may open for inspection if necessary."

Do not inclose writing in your parcels other than Christmas greetings, such as "Merry Christmas." You are permitted to inclose name of sender, the name of addressee and appropriate greetings. Any additional writing will subject your parcels to the first class (letter) postage rate.

Send perishable articles by special delivery mail and insure valuable articles.

Printed greeting cards may be inclosed in envelopes and sent unsealed for one cent. You are permitted to place the name of sender and the name of addressee on these cards in writing. Mail them early.

Your cooperation is solicited and will be greatly appreciated. Any information desired will be cheerfully given.

Wishing you all a very Merry Christmas and a Prosperous New Year, Sincerely, Glad Mears, Acting Postmaster.

CHRISTMAS

By Marjorie

Oh, thousands of calls come to Santa
In his generous heart there is place.

For wee ones, and young ones and old ones.

It is writ in his jolly old face.

He listens to each, though he's busy
A-packing the toys he will take
All over the world to the children
Over mountain and valley and lake.

The telephone rings. "Oh, Santa,
This is Jimmy that lives by the Mill.

I've four little brothers and sisters
There are five of our stockings to fill;

"Say Santa, you fill all their stockings,
And mine—well, I really don't care
Just so they get each what they've wanted

If you miss me, I'll still call it square."

Say "Merry Christmas" with Flowers

Present your friends and relatives with cut flowers or potted plants. True sentiment is connected with such a gift.

"Good bye, Sir" and Santa is sighing
For brave little Jimmy-boy's sake
I think he will make a great effort
And something to Jimmy will take.

Ting-a-ling—again the phone's ringing
They call and they call and they call!
If he weren't so darling and patient
He never could answer them all.

At last he must start on his journey
Ting-a-ling—it's the bells on his sleigh
Oh, hurry! the reindeer are waiting
It's time to be off and away!

When Santa arrives with his presents
He is chuckling,—the fun he will give!
And his jolly old heart is glowing
Spreading joy wherever folks live.

Helen Davis Dies In Carroll, Dec. 5

Helen Davis, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Davis of Carroll, passed away Wednesday, Dec. 5, after a week's illness from pneumonia. Funeral services was conducted Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Methodist church by Rev. W. F. Hull, assisted by Rev. W. O. Jones of the Welsh Presbyterian church and Rev. F. M. Drulliner of the Newman Grove Methodist church. Interment was made in the Carroll cemetery.

Following is the obituary written by her pastor:

Since Thanksgiving day the one name on everyone's lips has been that of Helen Davis, for on that day she was taken ill with a severe and sudden attack of pneumonia. Following was a siege of flu from which she was apparently recovering. Although the best of care and skill were procured from the physician and nurse, complications setting in made the case a critical one from the first. Those baffled every effort to prolong the young girl's life.

Helen was the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Davis and was born in Carroll, Neb., April 27, 1911. She died Dec. 5, in the home of her grandmother, Mrs. Sarah E. Wood, to whom she had been a constant companion from early childhood, her parents living in an adjoining house. She has one brother, David Everett, 4 years old, who survives her. Another brother died in infancy. Her great-grandmother, Mrs. Sarah E. Wood, lives in Black Fork, Ohio, and deceased has numerous other relatives and friends who live in this vicinity and who were in attendance at the funeral.

Helen was recorded on the cradle roll of the First Methodist church, Oct. 16, 1911, and the pastor of that church, Rev. Mr. Schacklock and she was received into the church by Rev. F. E. Sala, May 28, 1920. During her brief years of Christian activity Helen was a prominent figure in the work of the Queen Esther and Junior League organizations of the church, holding important offices and doing the work as one much more mature in years. She was a leading character in her school as was indicated by the following from last week's Wayne Herald: "Helen-Davis-project-in-stock raising in Nebraska was selected as the best of those written by the eighth grade boys of the Carroll school and was sent to Lincoln to be judged in competition with those from other schools of the state, the best project winning a Victoria for his or her school." Deceased was a promising child and one who had a way of making herself a favorite and friend to all who knew her, both old and young alike. While she will be greatly missed, after all it is only the ties of life that can be broken which really make life worth living and which will endear memories for all time.

Those who were here for the funeral from a distance were: Mr. and Mrs. George H. Cooper of Red Oak, Iowa, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Wood of Emerson, Iowa, and Miss Eva Griffin of Pilger.

Box Stall Desirable.
Cows kept in box stalls produce more milk and slightly more butter fat than those kept in stanchions according to the United States department of agriculture, but the slight increase in production does not balance the added expense for space, bedding and labor. Box stalls are recommended only when maximum production is desired regardless of expense, as in testing cows for records.

An American Colonial Christmas

If you must have the whole truth, there really was no Christmas in the very early colonial days—at least among the Puritans. And when you go back to the history of those days and of those exceedingly brave old fellows that built the town of Plymouth, you can understand how there would be a strong feeling against Christmas.

Time was then reckoned according to the old style so that January 2nd was December 25th to the Colonists. That particular day found them busy constructing their first buildings and having to guard against Indians, as well.

Bradford's note in his famous "Log Book" records the first Christmas day as follows: "The day call'd Christmas Day, ye Gov^t put'them out to worke (as was used) but ye mooste of this new company excusd themselves, and saide they went against their consciences to worke on ye Day so ye Gov^t told them that if they made it a matter of conscience he could spare them till they were better informed. So he led away the rest, and left them; but when they came home at noon, from their work he found them in ye street at play openly, some pitching ye bar, and some at ball and such like sports. So he went to them and took away their implements and told them it was against his conscience that they should play and other worke." (Stool ball was a game where balls are driven from stool to stool.)

There is another brief note concerning the first Christmas among the Puritans. Twenty men were left on shore as guard and the rest returned to the ship—the celebrated Mayflower. Jones the captain, had his mind on the return voyage and the necessary supplies for it. That very morning he had refused to give out beer, but the supply should not last. Beer took the place of tea, coffee, milk or chocolate to the Puritans and meant much to them. However, the captain, returned at night and as Bradford and his men were "talking about the fire in the cabin he gave out beer in abundance, in remembrance of that festivities at home. The poor Pilgrims were still confined to the ships provisions, and so continued until summer, when their crops came in.

A year later when seven houses and four public buildings stood in the little town of Plymouth, their crops were in, furs and lumber were stored for export to England, a peace treaty had been signed with the Indians, there came a season of great rejoicing. It was then that Thanksgiving was instituted. For two centuries its celebration was confined to New England, then later the day became general, to be observed by our entire country.

The Pilgrims felt that the observance of Christmas was anti-Christ—the day having been selected by the pope. In addition in England there was on that day much license and excess which was another reason for opposing the celebration of that special day. For at least fifty years the Pilgrims used to display great simplicity on that day to show their complete disregard for it.

In 1659 Massachusetts Bay made a law forbidding the celebration of Christmas under penalty of five shillings. Plymouth however never had such a law. Gradually the prejudice melted away and Christmas came to be celebrated everywhere.

In old New York, New Amsterdam then, the celebration of New Year's day was similar to our present celebration of Christmas. Since the time of Stuyvesant, the Dutch and English observed New Year's day by exchanging presents, receiving calls and with much noise, somewhat like our old notes "Fourth of July." The young men went from house to house firing guns as salutes, until a crowd had collected at some outlying house or farm and all would fire at a mark. This noisy activity was prohibited by statute later on, on account of the damage done.

Stage coaches (with four or six horses) all piled full of people visited gaily from house to house. Substantial food was served—with wine, hoxk of milk punch, pieces of agnony. Cakes, special New Year's cakes were baked and delivered by the baker's apprentice singing a carol.

Washington Irving gives us a faint idea of an old Dutch tea party, such as might have happened at New Year's in his "History of New York." The company assembled at three and went away at six. The tea table was crowned with a huge earthen dish well stored with slices of fat pork, fried brown, cut up into morsels and swimming in gravy. Sometimes the table was graced with immense apple pies—but it was always sure to boast an immense dish of balls of sweetened dough, fried in hog's fat and called dough nuts, or oly kocks.

"The tea was served out of a majestic Delft tea pot, ornamented with paintings of fat little Dutch shepherds and shepherdesses tending pigs. To sweeten the beverage a lump of sugar was laid beside the cup and company alternately nibbled and sipped with great decorum until an improvement was introduced by a shrewd and economic old lady which was to suspend a large lump directly over the tea table, by a string from the ceiling so that it could be swung from mouth to mouth, an ingenious expedient which is still kept up by some families in Albany."

We think Mr. Irving grew a bit satirical toward the end, but then he was apt to do that.

The general observance of New Year's day was celebrated in endless realms of poetry printed in the newspapers and delivered by carrier. The following sample continued on indefinitely and may well conclude our story:

"The day devoted is to Mirth
And now around the social hearth
Friendship unlocks her penial springs
And Harmony her lyre now strings
While Plenty spreads her copious
And piled and crowns the festive board."

Washington Back to Normalcy. Frederic William Wile in the Washington Star Washington in it is self again. Congress is in session. Capitol hill, in eclipse since March 4, 1923, once more has the center of the stage. The annual season of business, stateisms and spunk gives every indication of liveliness. Not within the memory of the living generation has congress been opened under such thrilling conditions. The political fate of a president and the party is at stake. The republicans hold power by the slenderest of margins. A battling congress is in session. A balance of strength that can play incalculable havoc. The democratic party, seeing national election in 1924, will watch for openings with an eagle-eye vigilance. As for the country, clamoring for relief in a host of directions, it hopes for the best and waits for the worst.

Building for Tomorrow's Telephone Needs

Many people become new telephone subscribers each month of the year.

Wherever practical, we aim to have the necessary wires in place, switchboards equipped, telephones on hand and other mechanism ready when service is requested.

In order to do this economically, our engineers must estimate several years in advance the number of telephone users there will be, where they will live and how much telephone equipment they will need.

Planning today for tomorrow's telephone needs, is one of the many things we are doing to furnish reliable service at the lowest possible cost to the public.

Your interests and ours are the same.

Getting the Delegates.

New York Times: Some politicians and "veteran political observers" continue to be most perturbed by Mr. Coolidge's alleged indifference about 1924. Why doesn't he go out and get the delegates? He will go out and get them. He won't go out and get them. And so on. The best way for a president to get delegates is to execute his office for the public good. That was Mr. Coolidge's habit as governor. It is his habit as president.

Decorating the House and Gifts

ONE grows tired of the sameness of Christmas decorations. Holy wreaths tied with red sashes grow to be a sacred tradition from which we dare not depart. Of course, there's a special Christmas flavor to the decorations of red and green and the fragrance of pine branches. For older folks, vague memories of childhood boys are awakened by the associations of accents and the Christmas festival is hallowed by old happiness.

Wouldn't it be a pleasant change to decorate an entire room in one color scheme and the next room in a different scheme, keeping in mind the old favorites, red and green and white and adding tinsel as a fourth, to the possible combination?

A red and white living room will be friendly and gay. An old white made will make a wonderful center as the hearth is over the center of the home. White cotton snow covering the mantle shelf with a pair of green tall thin red candles flanking both sides of a miniature tree in the middle, is suggested as an attractive setting. The green of the tree would be subordinate, making red the principal part of the story. Red and white decorations hanging from chandeliers, or wall brackets, and placed over picture frames will add to the effect. Beaded fringes, made of cranberries and popcorn will add wonderfully to one of the big white globes usually in the center of the room.

Green and white will be cool and quiet for the library, or for the dining room. In the latter one might want special note of emphasis in four tall red candles on the table. In the library the soft green of bayberry candles will seem fitting.

Tinsel can be combined effectively with either red or green. The use of long lines of tinsel or of tinsel ornaments will give an unusual touch to your decorations. You know it doesn't have to be used exclusively for the Christmas tree.

Tinsel can be used for tying Christmas gifts, combined with red or green ribbon, or tied into the bow knot on the package. Brilliant colors for tying make attractive all sorts of gifts, and the combination can be chosen from colors that clash slightly. Bright blue, and green tied together will attract attention as will red and white, like cherry and crimson for instance. Little flat paper flowers of gay colors can be cut out by the children and with a little paste can be used as seals. These will be effective on a background of white tissue paper.

Table decorations give one abundant opportunity for the use of the imagination. A large snow ball containing tiny wrapped gifts each with a ribbon attached is not an entirely new idea but it can be decorated in a new way by having each string lead to a place card, on which resides a gum drop man with clove eyes.

Gum drops can be used in so many ways for decorations. Christmas trees, eight inches high, can be constructed of them. Four of these set on the table with fat gum drop men on sleds here and there will make a quaint and unusual table treatment.

In all our decorations either for the home, our gifts or our table, joyous gaiety is the keynote for Christmas. With the proper spirit and care the familiar rooms and objects of our everyday living can be suddenly transformed from the humdrum to the romantic, from dullness to sparkling adding zest and buoyancy not only to our friends and relatives but to ourselves making the close of the old year and the entrance of the new a happiness to be long cherished.

Neligh High School Defeats Hartington

Norfolk Daily News: The north Nebraska high school football championship for 1923 was won by the Neligh team from the 1st Hartington eleven Monday afternoon on the Norfolk municipal athletic field by a score of 7 to 0. It was one of the finest and hardest fought games in the history of North Nebraska high school football and it brought out the greatest crowd of fans seen here at a game in many years.

Neligh and Hartington closed their schools and the fans, both young and old, came to Norfolk to see the contest on neutral grounds and held under the auspices of the Norfolk Chamber of commerce.

Norfolk schools, too, were affected by the interest which prevailed over this game and the senior high school was dismissed before the game started. Business men left their places of business and saw the two high school elevens battle for the championship honors. Bands from Neligh and Hartington furnished music, and a "rush" band from Hartington caused considerable merriment at the grounds where it was estimated about 1,300 people gathered.

Representative business and school men from Neligh and Hartington attended the game and took part in the rooting which prevailed during the contest. The Neligh organization took charge of the west bleachers and the Hartington fans had the entire east section to themselves.

Norfolk fans who were neutral before the game were drawn into the spirit of the battle and some of them were found yelling for Neligh and some for Hartington.

Neligh fans and high school officials declared the game with Hartington was the hardest one they had played this year. Hartington fans showed disappointment at failing to score in the final quarter when a fatal fumble gave the ball to Neligh just before the whistle ended the contest.

Wayne County Boy In First Grid Team

Norfolk Daily News: Lloyd Rohrke of Hoskins, Neb., once a player on the Norfolk high school eleven, and now on the Chicago university team, is picked by Walter Ekersall for the all-western and all-conference elevens. Rohrke's picture takes a prominent position among some of the greatest football players in the country on the sporting-page of the Chicago Tribune.

The honor of being picked by a great football expert as a member of the all-conference and all-western football eleven is one that Hartington very few athletes is and it is the first time such an honor has come to a former player on the Norfolk high school team.

Rohrke's parents live in Hoskins where his father, R. G. Rohrke, is a banker. In order to give his children advantage of the better school facilities here, Mr. Rohrke moved his family to Norfolk and Lloyd attended the Norfolk high school. He was on the high school eleven, but he did not attract unusual attention. When he came to Chicago during his first year he was picked as one of the leading athletes there and attracted immediate attention.

On the regular team Rohrke was continually the hero of the hour and his consistent playing attracted the attention of football experts. Ekersall in selecting this former Norfolk boy as all western and all-conference right guard says: "Rohrke of Chicago is given right guard position in the all-conference team. Like Captain McMullen of Illinois who gets first choice, Rohrke has played consistently all season and it rightfully entitles to the honor."

Hastings Grand Island Row.
Grand Island, Neb., Dec. 11.—No action was taken as a result of the conference sought by the Hastings Chamber of Commerce, with the board of governors of the Grand Island chamber and held here today.

The disposition of the Hastings citizens to limit the football controversy as much as possible was heartily seconded, however, by individual members of the Grand Island board.

For two hours various phases of the Hastings charges and the attending publicity were discussed. Secretary Lloyd Thomas of the Hastings chamber, addressing himself to the criticism he had heard of the publicity given the affair, stated that he did not believe any unusual or improper lines had been followed either at Hastings or at Grand Island and Superintendent Gettinger of the local school declared that the report of the charges as appearing in the state press was substantially correct. He was in receipt this morning of a certified copy of the charges but was not permitted by the state board to make them public. He believed that Grand Island would be ready to answer the charges by Dec. 20. The conference was a friendly one throughout. Accompanying the charges is the demand that Grand Island should sue from the state high school conference.

Court Dismisses Jury.
Platteville, Mo., Dec. 12.—Trial of C. D. Quinton, deposed sheriff of Cass county, on indictments charging malfeasance in office, was summarily halted by the court. The verdict of the jury by Judge James T. Begley.

The state attorneys had learned early in the day, they said, that one, or more of the jurors hearing the case intended to hold out for Quinton's release, regardless of evidence. An investigation started which resulted in the jury being ordered by the jury by which the trial was automatically postponed until the next term of court.

Elgin, Neb., Dec. 11.—Trustees of the Elgin public schools were prevented by an injunction, granted by the district court, from obtaining more property on which to build public schools. Last July, the local board voted bonds of $70,000 which would construct a new school. This work will be prohibited at least temporarily.

He was 68 years old. He leaves his wife and daughter and a son.

Marion Fuller and Miss Ella Foush Wakefield were married the same day here.

Norfolk is considering a proposition made by the Catholics for establishment there of a modern hospital. The plan is to build an institution that costs $50,000 if the city will furnish half the money.

Oliver Bird went to Fremont and from there will accompany his parents on a trip to California. During the two months he is away Charles Beebe will take his place at the Harrington clothing store.

From Ponca Journal Dec. 4, 1878: Mr. West on his return from his hunt in the Logan Valley for deer, reports that they are very plentiful indeed. He killed one very fine one.

There was a slight sprinkle of snow on Thanksgiving day. But it has all gone, and, as a general thing, pleasant weather has since prevailed.

The overwhelming increase in deer about the Logan is a cause which by the prairie shawls is being, having been burned, and the deer in consequence driven into the Logan valley.

The Ponca coal company has secured the services of an experienced miner, who arrived Tuesday evening from Chicago, and will commence operations without delay. We understand he proposes to drill to a depth of at least 800 feet, unless he strikes a paying vein of coal at less distance.

If the aphorism be true that "as are the first three days of December" we will be the three months of winter, "we are booked for a pleasant winter."

Whether the C. C. & B. H. R. R. is to go up South Cross to Hartsville or up the Iowa Valley by Newcastle, seems to be a mysterious matter as yet. So far as Ponca is concerned, it matters but little.

Something is certain, however, that the railroad under the new owners, will within a year, double the price of every acre of land in the county.

Our esteemed poet laureate, Mr. Rockwell, has not wrung out a hymn or psalm, or other poetical effusion for this paper, for some time.

Therefore we hope that he will soon again rattle with the divine muse, and if need be, with the whole entire nine muses, and then give us the appropriate song or ditty in existence, for the entertainment of our numerous readers.

The new town or city of Pomroy is situated a few feet back from the line of the nearly defunct town of Covington, on the bank of the lake.

—A most pleasant and romantic situation. If Covington succumbs and peters out before the relentless march of the river, then Pomroy, high and dry, and safe from water's inroads, will be the gate city of Northern Nebraska.

In the northwestern part of Iowa a vein or layer of good coal has been known, but no truck has a depth of 887 feet, the vein being two feet and eight inches in thickness. The same layer of coal ought to be found here at a depth of not to exceed 500 feet.

The Ponca coal company may confidently expect to find within that distance a profitable layer of coal. However, the coal has not yet been discovered in their enterprise, and that next week under skillful hands, they will start to investigate this thing from the circumference towards the center.

Exhibition in England of department of agriculture movies depicting the production and marketing of American cotton elicited much favorable comment from the cotton growers, reports the American Vice Consul James Monroe Hill. Many of the leading trade journals at Manchester and Liverpool commend the department for its educational work through the medium of the silver sheet. One newspaper said: "Extremely well produced."

It has an eye for the essential point to the exclusion of trivial detail, the films proved really attractive."
