Methodist Preacher On Child Labor

Rev. John Grant Shieck preached last Sunday morning on the subject of "Child Labor" and presented petitions to congress asking early and favorable action on the bills before both houses seeking an amendment to the federal constitution giving the states complete control over the employment of their own children.

The pastor called attention to the fact of child labor, showing that in the United States more than 1,000,000 children between the ages of 10 and 15 were employed in some form of manual labor; that only thirteen states measure up in all respects to the conservative standards of the League for Child Labor; that the federal government has no law prohibiting children under fourteen years of age from working in fact; and that only thirteen states permit their children to go to work without a common school education; that eighteen states have no law to prevent children from working in dangerous occupations. He showed further that the 1,000,000 engaged in gainful work in this country is a sum of $1,000,000,000, the amount of juvenile delinquency confined in the United States as citizens of the world is 400,000,000, and Europe and Asia have their problem.

The United States can help herself and provide for the employment of commercialized grade.

Mr. Shieck emphasized his sermon words by an abstract examination of the shortsightedness of child labor. He used the quotation "They are Grinding the Seed Corn," showing that the child laborer today is being fed hungry mouths. Child labor mortgages the future and injures posterity. Illustrating the perversion of the child labor law, he used the remark often heard, "Work Never Hurt a Kid," and showed that the results of too early and arduous labor are physical, mental and morally.

In speaking of the injustice of child labor he used the striking quotation from Sir Charles Lyell who writes: "The golf-links lie so near the mill that almost every day the working men can look out and see a man at play."

The leisure of many a man has been bought with the labor and tears of women and children. In certain factories in China, financed by western capital, forty per cent of the workers are women and forty per cent are children. In the iron mines of Ohio, the women and children, organized in 1916 with a capital of $300,000, has three times produced the output of 1915. In the year more than the original capital.

JURY PRONOUNCES TWO MEN GUILTY

Following Conviction in County Court, Joe Baker and Reinhard Peters Take Appeal.

LIQUOR FOUND IN GARAGE

Earl Allen, Under Arrest for Liquor Violations, Testifies Against the Defendants.

The county court has been the scene of one of the best trials ever held here charged with transgressing the law. Joe Baker of this place, and Reinhard Peters of near Randolph, who were charged with violating the liquor law, were tried before a jury in the county court Monday afternoon. Both defendants were pronounced guilty and Baker was fined $100 and costs and Peters was fined $200 and costs and his automobile was ordered confiscated. This case was appealed to the district court.

In the trial of the action, F. S. Berry, county attorney, was assisted in the prosecution by James E. Brittain, Attorney at Law, of Wayne, and R. J. Millard of Hartington, appeared for the defendants. The following men served on the jury: George Black, James Baird, George Berres, D. Hall, S. E. Auker and W. H. Buetow.

Peters was charged with possession and transportation of 11 quor, and Baker was charged with possession and sale of liquor. W. A. Stewart, city marshal, testified that he had examined the garage of Joe Baker and found concealed in a barrel an earthen jug and a glass bottle believed to contain whisky. James Baird corroborated the testimony of A. E. Gierleske, sheriff. Earl Allen who has been in jail, charged with violation of the liquor law, testified that he bought liquor from Peters, that he had procured liquor at the Peters place northeast of Sholes, that he had bought beer from Baker and brought it to the Baker garage.

Witnesses called for the defendants testified as to finding the whisky in the garage open and the footprints, the evidence being offered to show that some one had put the liquor in the garage unknown to the defendants. Witnesses were called by the defense in an effort to discredit Earl Allen's reputation for truth. Both Baker and Peters were called to the stand and denied that they had ever engaged in the booze business.

Other Charges. Geo. Hoguewood is charged with violation of the liquor law and will give a trial in the county court tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock. He and Earl Cox are charged with maintaining a gambling house, and will be heard in court tomorrow. The following men who were charged with gambling, waived a preliminary hearing: Victor R. Baker and Earl to the district court with bonds fixed at $300 each: Van Bradford, John Gunther, Robert Jensen, Jay Jensen, Jack L. Henson, Pete Pundsen, Louis Roebert, George Roberts, Will Spick, Grant Simmons, Guy Williams and Earl Cox.

The hearing on the Hoguewood case goes to the district court for final determination because they are classed as felonies.

The Years Between By O. Lawrence Hawthorne. Too soon they come, too soon are gone, The years that lie between So swiftly twilight follows dawn That life's resplendent scene is shadowed by approaching night; Youth finds short time for play, And few men win ambition's fight. Before the close of day, A babe for just a little while, Then childhood too is done; Oh, very soon is every mile Of life's brief journey run! The golden years that lie between The cradle and the grave; Their candid record must be seen To reckon loss or gain. Lord, teach me how to utilize Each precious fleeting hour; Nor let me waste my days as prize. As youth! I have no fear Of moments when I am old If I have done my best. For even when I will be old Contentment, peace and rest.

Kiwanis club of Wayne functions so perfectly. He is the president. "And no banquet could be a failure when it has a toastmaster like D. B. Bowen, and a fun-loving song and stunt leader like Prof. Leon Beery. But with all due respect to these gentlemen, popular, gentlemen, my banquet in Wayne would be a success without them, provided the charming members of the city were hostesses and their equally charming daughters were serving the viands. There are several "middle-aged" professional hosts who might possibly blossom out into pretty good post prandial orators if always they could have an inspirational incentive like into that provided to the N. E. N. P. A.

"By adroit angling, one of those middle-aged brethren managed to secure an opportunity to talk to the students at Wayne teachers college at some time in the near future. By far the greatest number of these students are schoolmasters, present or potential. He hopes that he will be able to hold a majority of that audience closely.

"The management of Wayne's hotel leaves nothing to be desired, but the building itself does. Some of these fine days Wayne's Kiwanis club will expectorate on its collective hands and correct this situation. A new and up-to-date hotel building under the same management at the present one, would come pretty near being the ideal situation.

"A new state song is soon to come out of Wayne. The words are by Grace Welsh Lutgen, music by Prof. Leon Beery. It has sentiment as well as rhythmic beauty, and the music is fairly sings itself. A lot of editorial brethren who didn't know they could sing a note found themselves in a quandary when they were afforded an opportunity to sing Mrs. Lutgen's words as set to Mr. Beery's music.

"A wonderfully pleasant evening, all too short, spent with such a kindly people—and so long suffering during the closing moments of the banquet—and then an hour in the hotel office talking shop with the gang. One day ended perfectly, and that ending ended beautifully in a perfect beginning of another day. One newspaper worker has his time table properly marked, so he can locate a train to Wayne on the shortest possible notice. W. M. M."

Foreign Advertising Representatives THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

J. H. O'Purney, secretary-treasurer of the Northeast Nebraska Editor's association, explained to the late business session that he had prepared a report because he did not want to know how many of the receipts from his pocket in excess of receipts from members. Manifestly, the association should pay its own way. It is not a deficit that appears from time to time, all sharing the burden equally. Members of the association should know their own receipts and expenditures exactly, and then dig into their respective pockets to make up any deficiency. That is the only way to do business.

Under a recent ruling of Postmaster General New newspapers are to be accorded the same treatment as the mails as letters and other first class matter. It has been the practice of the postal system to hurry conveyance of letters and to give them priority over newspapers. But the fact has been recognized that people who subscribe for newspapers are quite as anxious to get them as fast as the mail. The post office department has decided to speed up the handling of newspapers under a new ruling which will give both the city and rural population in closer and quicker touch with their several fields of activities.

Someone has written a book on the "Conquest of Fear." While it may be said that a reasonable degree of fear prevents injury, most people are fearful far beyond good judgment. They make themselves miserable by encouraging groundless fears. They were often foolishly taught that there were things to be afraid of every storm and of every disease. They regard the devil with fear and trembling. Their nervousness has been increased by the fact that they should put the brakes on fear, suspicion and hate, and encourage greater confidence, tolerance and love.

A Washington correspondent says democratic politicians were busy on an issue which was called Done oil scandal came to the front. The vigor with which President Coolidge is handling this scandal may prove it to be a turning point in his candidacy before the campaign has proceeded far. Between rival groups of politicians who seem only to be out for their own interests, those who earnestly seek obedience to the constitution and laws, and who are steadfastly at work in behalf of sound and constructive public policies. People who are not afraid of the constitution and laws, and who are steadfastly at work in behalf of sound and constructive public policies. A fairy tale once told of an individual who left home in search of a pot of gold, but who, after looking everywhere, came back to find that the pot of gold was in his pocket. He had been so busy looking for it that he had not noticed it. He had been so busy looking for it that he had not noticed it. He had been so busy looking for it that he had not noticed it.

Since our part on the program at Friday night's banquet for the editors was very minor, impromptu and involuntary, we will be permitted to comment on the meeting and the participants performed. The spirit of the crowd was pitched high and was as responsive as the delicate figures of the dancing. The ladies of the Methodist church showed the same of skill in supplying the feast and in handling the service. The most of the dancing was done by the ladies of the Methodist church. York Republican: The Republican is firm in the conviction that the farmers of the nation as a whole do not ask or want any special legislation in their behalf. They want inequalities done away and a fair chance with every other group of American citizens. But no special favors. They realize that farming must rest upon basic laws and when these laws operate without obstruction or deflection the lot of the farmer will be equal to that of any other group of producers. There are of course some who in extremity fly to legislation for aid. But such aid would only be temporary, if potent at all, and in the end would surround farming with unnatural conditions. The farmers of the nation, if they were to express their judgment, would say to congress: "Enact only such legislation as will give every citizen the perfect operation of the law of supply and demand, and we will work out our salvation through the patronage of no one." The American farmer has been hard hit but they are not crying for charity. They only want a fair chance and clear legislation for aid. But such aid would only be temporary, if potent at all, and in the end would surround farming with unnatural conditions.

Don't Ignore a Cold. The child who has a cold in the head should be kept at home until well. A child who coughs is not well and by going to school he spreads infection. It is the duty of every mother to see that her children are well before sending them to school. We shall never stop the suffering of children from needless communicable diseases as long as we could check the spread of measles if parents would observe the symptoms of the attack. The principal signs are: Coughing, sneezing, running nose, sore throat, watery eyes, vomiting, headache and itchy feeling. Any one of these signs should be watched carefully that our children may be made safe places for the children. Whooping cough is most infectious when the child begins to cough, though he does not know it. Let us develop a community conscience and be loyal to our associates.

the viewpoint of a lawyer. Mr. Kewen to the group of talks Mr. Gowing remarked that "briefs" did not in this case mean a lawyer's brief; Mr. Gowing was referring to the fact that the country newspaper serves to preserve the ideals of the past for the future. The personal touch of the country newspaper is an expression of the community life and preserves the traditions of the group. What we have stood for in the past we should stand for in the future by the press," was Mr. Davis' statement.

J. C. Nuss, Mr. Bowen introduced as a lawyer in evolution. He stated that when Mr. Nuss came to this country he went to Boston, New York and then Wayne, this proving that he believes in evolution. Regarding the question of money being sprung from monkeys or not, Mr. Bowen asserted that "our ancestors were educated in the higher branches of Mr. Nuss' general business and that the advertiser's standpoint, explained that advertising is an investment, not an expense. The increase in volume of business is not by advertising, more than pays the cost. And, he stated, the newspaper which carries news to the large mass of readers is the most valuable to the business people. Business men and farmers will some day, he thinks, fill the newspapers with ads and will find that the investment is well repaid of increasing returns. Mr. Nuss said he was favorably impressed with the visiting editors, they not being burdened with the weight of what he had imagined from local examples.

C. E. Carhart, representing the business man's view of the newspaper, was introduced by the toastmaster as the man "who builds houses sells coal in the winter and cares for the sick in the summer." Carhart explained the newspaper is either keeping us warm or getting honey from our flowers all year." As Mr. Nuss had given the results of his visiting Mr. Carhart explained the newspaper, stating that business men of the town are judged by the impressions a paper gives of them and that the newspaper is a business success by the influence of the press, depending on the attitude of the paper. He stated that by co-operation of business men and editor are alike benefited.

Pres. U. S. Conn, who represented the state's attitude toward the press, was introduced by the toastmaster as the big man who is to handle a big subject. The latter also said he often played golf with Mr. Conn but never lost to him in the state of England. A superior officer, Mr. Conn expressed his belief that the newspapers are great factors in building up the state and that the newspaper has been promoted more by news papers of northeast Nebraska than by other agencies. They have boosted the state and the newspaper is no longer one of getting more students but one of caring for those who come.

Mr. S. A. Lutgen who represented the woman's standpoint of judging the newspapers, was introduced by Mr. Bowen as one who "writes the different from those of other people, it is for the publisher." He also stated that Mrs. Lutgen "has something to say and it is worth while." Mrs. Lutgen remarked that when she reads the newspapers she reads the newspapers and she therefore advertisements should be appealing to them. They get the news items and tell them to the publisher. They are interested in the editorials, the social items, local ads and the man who patented the Gillette safety razor and the one who really got much for advertising as for stock and his business grew to huge proportions, the ads having been published in the newspapers. Mrs. Lutgen read an original poem on Wayne, telling of the advantages of this city and the vicinity.

Mr. F. H. Price, president of the group of short talks was given by Miss Dorothy Huse of the Herald staff, whose viewpoint was that of one "on the marks dealer of a newspaper. Her remarks were in the nature of a newspaper English.

Ed A. Fryer of the Nebraska Tribune, president of the press association, Mark W. Murray of the Pender Times and P. A. Barrows, former lieutenant governor and first vice president of the State Teachers College, considered the newspaper from the layman's standpoint. He sought to show the need of full and impartial news reports and honest editorial comment. His effort was a scholarly analysis, and was given close attention.

state, he considers it the best to be found. Mr. Murray who is one of the early publishers in this part of the state, told of having come to Wayne for the third time to a press banquet each time having to respond to a toast. He is in favor, he says, of passing a law requiring those who speak at banquets to pass up a copy of the program to identify them for the position. He expressed appreciation of the way the editors were entertained in Wayne on occasion.

The quartet sang "Reflections" and responded to an encore. Will M. Maupin, who writes "Sun-der" for the Omaha Bee, was the principal speaker for the program. He expressed his pleasure at seeing the women attending the festivities and each time to the toastmaster being that there should be more such occasions which men and their wives attend together. He told of many amusing stories and then stated that the three of us who people need these days are tolerance, sympathy for fellowmen and honesty. He said that the people who are the most to be tolerated are the professors of religion today, the ministry, teaching, journalism and acting. Mr. Maupin said he would like to minister, therefore he is a newspaper man; he wants to be a teacher and therefore he is a newspaper man. He said that he had never attended. In an after remark he said that he felt twenty years ago when he had a newspaper to come back, he would come on the first train.

The orchestra furnished music for playing after the banquet and program of toasts. The occasion was pronounced by many as the most enjoyable they had ever attended. No effort was spared to make the occasion a success. The speakers expressed their appreciation of the cordial reception they received from the Kiwanians and especially mentioned the excellent department of copious and good feeling among the members.

Officers of the Kiwanis club are: President, D. E. Brainerd; vice president, J. C. Nuss; treasurer, G. Mines; secretary, Lester W. Vath; district trustees, C. E. Carhart; and lieutenant governor of Nebraska, J. H. Price. The board of directors includes: A. R. Davis, C. M. Craven, E. J. Hunter, F. S. Morgan, R. B. Judson, J. H. Price and G. Mines. The officers and directors and all other members of the club cooperated untiringly for the success of the function.

Day Sessions. The intensely cold weather of Friday cut down attendance at the mid-winter session of the Northeast Nebraska Editorial association in Wayne. Only about twenty visitors were present. Those who attended expressed their appreciation of the cordial reception they received from the Kiwanians and especially mentioned the excellent department of copious and good feeling among the members.

The matter of dealing with free publicity was discussed in each department, as an aim to education, contributes to the completeness of a most desirable state institution.

The meeting was called to order by F. H. Price, president. E. M. Von Seggern of the West Point Republic, presented the paper on "What Makes the Most of an Advertising Service," and the paper was informally discussed. All agreed that an advertiser's standpoint gives important advantage in taking care of the wants of advertisers. The matter of dealing with free publicity was discussed in each department, as an aim to education, contributes to the completeness of a most desirable state institution.

works and see the plan in operation. It is one of the biggest institutions of its kind in the state, and the editors were very much interested.

Resolutions. The Northeast Nebraska Press association, each time having to respond to a toast. He is in favor, he says, of passing a law requiring those who speak at banquets to pass up a copy of the program to identify them for the position. He expressed appreciation of the way the editors were entertained in Wayne on occasion.

"We are especially the reception and courtesies extended our association by the citizens of Wayne, the officers of the Wayne Normal College, and especially the Kiwanians for the splendid banquet and entertainment made complimentary to this organization, it being second to none ever enjoyed by the Kiwanians. We are also mindful of the part taken in the success of our meeting by the editors of the Wayne Herald and Wayne Democrat, and especially thank the former for the beautiful and artistic banquet programs for this occasion.

"We are especially to endorse for president of our state press association the candidacy of Mrs. Marie Weeks of the Norfolk Press. She is a former president of this organization and with her exceptional executive ability and progressive spirit will prove a valuable official. "Since it is the province of a newspaper to publish unbiased news, and facts pertaining thereto, and since so called propaganda or free publicity which is naturally the prime interest of an individual or organization and thus is of itself biased and unfair to be fostered upon the minds of our readers, the members of the Northeast Nebraska Press association are against the use of such matter in our newspapers unless as paid advertisements, or in marked, thus retaining our news columns free of biased propaganda which is not universal in its strict news value.

"We are opposed to any change in the postal zones as now constituted or in the present second class postage rate, believing the rate is fair to all publications as well as the government.

"We approve the appointment of paid representative of the National Editorial association, and the editor's jurisdiction in so far as he represents the interests of the country newspapers as here expressed.

"We are mindful of the work and efforts of the present officers of this association and extend to them our appreciation and thanks."

Webster on Fundamentalism. New York Times: The following extract from an extemporaneous speech made by Daniel Webster in New York nearly seventy-five years ago at a Pilgrims festival could not be read more appropriately and profitably than in all the pulpits of New York City today.

The Pilgrims had been great sufferers from intolerance; it was not unnatural that their own faith and practice, as a consequence, should have been somewhat narrow. This is the common infirmity of human nature. Man retallates on man. It is to be hoped, however, that the greater spread of the honest, unselfish principles of the divine charity of Christianity, has to some extent, improved the sentiments which prevailed in the world at that time.

Late Senator Allen's Story of Long Speech

When James E. Brittain of Wayne was practicing law in Madison a number of years ago, he secured from the late Senator W. P. Allen the latter's own story of his memorable fourteen-hour speech. The account which quotes Senator Allen, will be of local and general interest, and follows:

"The word had gone out to the senators through President Cleveland's friends that he wished the repeal of the Sherman silver purchasing act that night. The date was October 12, 1893. Senator Collier of Colorado came to me and wanted me to speak for an hour or so in opposition to the repeal. I said that there must be older heads in the senate than I had only been there about three months. He said, 'Let me tell you young fellow, if you want to do anything here, you want to get right into the collar. If you sit around waiting for someone to call on you to make a speech, you will be here all day long.' So I consented to speak. I started in at 8 o'clock at night. I only intended to speak about an hour when I started, but the longer I talked the warmer I became. To think that the president should ask a deliberative body to repeal such an important measure over night!"

"The opposition found themselves under the necessity of maintaining a gurnam. As soon as the gurnam failed the senate would stand adjourned. Our fellows, most of them, went home. Whenever the other fellows had retired to the cloak room one had gotten nicely to sleep, some one of our men would rise to the question of a gurnam, the bells would ring and these fellows would have to come out to answer to the roll call. In the morning at 8 o'clock I was still there."

"One of the senators in passing said to me that Martin of Kansas had a speech that was already printed in the Morning Post and being sold on the streets at that time, and he wanted the floor to read the speech. So I said, Mr. President, I note that the gentleman from Kansas is desirous of speaking, and I will surrender the floor to him. Voorhees, who was a smooth dealer in money matters, said, 'The gentleman can't turn out the floor of this senate to whoever he pleases.'"

"I said, 'Well, perhaps I can't farm it out, but I have got it and I can hold it all day and all night too, I said, throwing up my hands, 'Give your choice of leaving me surrender the floor to Mr. Martin, or listening to me the rest of the day.' And they all said, throwing up their hands, 'Give us the senator from Kansas.'"

In reply to a question, whether he took any intermission at all during the fourteen hours, Mr. Allen said:

"I only took one intermission to get some nourishment. I had the dinner sent an excerpt from a work on economics and while he was reading, I slipped out to the restaurant and back before he had finished. I also had rests on roll-calls on quorum."

"We kept up the fight for five days, but finally one-side had to surrender and the other fellows repeated the act."

From Ponca Journal Feb. 8, 1879: "Good weather and good roads are what Dixon county now has."

Mr. Rowlock, the most laudate, has furnished us with a fine poem on the Black Hills, which we shall publish next week.

"The population of Nebraska in 1855, was 4,494; in 1860, 28,841; in 1870, 122,993; and in 1878, 318,748."

A petition has been presented to Congress for the creation of a new territory out of the northern half of Dakota.

In a State Senate on the 25th was presented a remonstrance from the citizens of Dixon county against the passage of a herd law for that county. The remonstrance was referred to a committee.

An extensively signed petition has been presented to the Legislature asking that a law be passed giving women the right to vote.

The first two bills which were passed by the Legislature were signed by the Governor on the 28th ult. One was to provide salaries for senators and representatives, and the other was to provide for the incidental expenses of the Legislature. It would seem from this that the members deem looking out for No. 1, a paramount duty.

A bill before the Legislature for the relief of Judge Griffey and Judge Valentine, provides that Judge Griffey be paid for the time he served as judge of this district, and also proposes to pay Judge Valentine a salary during the same period, about ten months. Under the circumstances, this is a most honorable way to settle the matter.

The prohibitory liquor law will probably pass in the House, but will be defeated in the Senate.

In the senate a bill has been introduced fixing the rates of passengers on railroads in this state at three cents per mile.

To Oppose Natives. Omaha, Neb., Jan. 29.—Editor: For some time there has been under discussion the organization of a society to be known as "The Native Born Sons and Daughters of Nebraska Territory—1860 or Prior," or a similar name, to distinguish it from other native-born sons and daughters organizations of a later date.

It has been thought by restricting the membership to a date as far back as 1860, the membership would be unavailing, that should be stored in the archives of the State Historical society in Lincoln, Iowa, for the preservation of future generations, it seems plain that the men and women who were born here as early as 1860 should be able to supply the necessary history for the new fact that the memory of many children runs back to very tender years.

In 1860 Nebraska Territory had only 28,841 inhabitants, and it is claimed that many adults enrolled as citizens were merely passing through in prairies, schooners, or on the prairie.

The government census for 1920 places the population of Nebraska at 1,298,372. The 28,841 population of Nebraska Territory in 1860—a mere handful in comparison with the number living in the state now—would indicate that there were but few white children born here prior and up to 1860. It is from these children of territorial days that valuable and new history of Nebraska doubtless may be obtained, believe those interested in the proposed new organization.

Being eligible to membership, I have been asked to make the statement of the object of the proposed organization and to request all those eligible to send me their names and addresses. If a sufficient number are interested it is planned to perfect the organization during the coming spring at some agreed point, probably Lincoln or Omaha.

Heroism of Pilger Man is Recognized

Pilger, Neb., Jan. 25.—For saving the life of a small boy who was drowning in the Elkhorn river at Neligh on July 27, J. A. Reynolds, manager of the Northwestern Bell Telephone Company here, was today presented a Vail bronze medal. While working at Neligh near the bank of the Elkhorn, Mr. Reynolds was attracted by cries of help. Rushing to the river bank, he found a boy of twelve struggling to save himself from being sucked down by the swift current by clinging to branches of a dead tree fifty feet from the bank. Ridding himself of overalls and shoes, Reynolds swam through the swift and dangerous current, directed the boy to cling to his shoulders and brought him safely to shore. The boy scampered home as fast as he could and his name was never learned.

Although this heroic incident happened over three years ago, the name of the boy who owes his life to Mr. Reynolds has never been learned. W. K. Johnson and Mr. Pinbow, members of the same telephone crew as Reynolds, witnessed the hazardous rescue. The case was later reported by Reynolds' companions to a committee of telephone company employees who made the award.

Reynolds has been a telephone man for fifteen years, making his start at Hamburg, Iowa. He is also an ex-serviceman. R. H. Fair of Omaha, general superintendent of plant for the telephone company, presented the medal to Mr. Reynolds after commending him for his efforts. Many telephone employees from Pilger and surrounding towns, and officials from Omaha and Norfolk attended the presentation.

Vail medal awards are made from a fund established as a memorial to Theodore N. Vail, late president of the American Telephone and Telegraph Company. It was explained by W. J. Beall, superintendent of plant for the Nebraska division of the Northwestern company. The most outstanding examples of noteworthy service are recognized by the award committee.

Business

Sioux City.—Journal: What the government can do, and is willing to do, in making readjustments in the financial conditions of the northwest, which have created an uneasy economic situation, is interesting to business over a wide area. It no longer can be overlooked that an unfavorable situation in a given section works to the detriment of other sections adjacent thereto. The prosperity of the whole depends upon the stability of conditions of the units of which it is composed. Germany today, because of the impoverishment of her finances and industries, is a drag on the progress of Europe. The same thing is true of states and sections of the northwest where losses have been suffered in the conduct of the business. The influence of an unstable condition in one state easily extends itself into another. Reports from the eastern financial districts show that stocks and bonds are moving at prices that mean profits, that money is easier, that business on the whole is good. There is not a skilled worker idle in New York city. In New England the textile mills are running at or near capacity. In the steel districts the plants are on an 80 per cent footing with prices somewhat advanced and orders running along at a normal rate. The mercantile business generally is good. Colder weather has moved immense stocks of men's and women's apparel. Capital seems confident, and is planning expansions for the spring season. All that shows that one part of the country is prosperous, is doing well, is going ahead, is safe and sound and happy. The same story cannot be told, however, of all sections. There is an inequality, a difference between the eastern manufacturing centers and the middle-western and northwestern farming communities. That inequality should be ironed out, is expected to undertake the task.

President Coolidge, already committed to a movement for the betterment of conditions in the northwest and willing to employ government agencies in the work, obviously considers that the moral side of the question is quite as important as its legal feature. He applies that not only to the government but to business generally. He thinks there should be a coordinated movement of government agencies and prosperous commercial organizations and institutions to seek the solution of the northwest's problem. His decision to call a conference of the various interests affected by the acute economic situation in the northwest is based on that conception of both duty and opportunity.

No community is able to prosper unless its production is on a stable basis and unless its finances are sound. As to the means for adjusting the situation in South Dakota and other states affected is almost insignificant. It easily could be done. On the other hand, the distress situation is capable of creating if left without adjustment, is enormous. The bad situation could become worse. The answer is plain enough. Find the remedy.

Nationally, business is as good as the most optimistic analysts could expect in midwinter. The usual mid-winter slump that follows the holidays is not as noticeable as in former years. Trade is somewhat irregular, of course, in some lines, but on the whole it is good. The outlook for spring is promising. It will be a busy season if present plans are carried out, and there is nothing now to create the doubt that they will be executed as presented at this time.

an Ever to Handle Your Live Stock

With the new addition to the already large and commodious double deck hog house, Sioux City now has the distinction of possessing one of the most up-to-date and efficient facilities for marketing hogs in the United States.

The big feature in this territory as stressed by local commission men is that the distance from the shipping point to Sioux City is shorter than to any other yard.

One not familiar with the stock yards industry possibly wonders what advantage this is to a market. Here is the answer.

The greatest problem to the farmer is his shrinkage in weight when shipping stock. He has been putting weight on his cattle or hogs as the case might be, for weeks. During the journey from the farm to the market, every extra exertion to which the animals are put, takes off weight. It would be surprising to know just how many hundreds of pounds are lost to the farmer in this manner. Every pound so lost, cuts down the shipper's profit.

The shortness of the distance from the cars to the market building is one of the big arguments why the farmer should send his hogs to Sioux City rather than some other market point. This shortness lessens the chances of a fat porker going down behind through some accident and at the same time cuts short his exertion so that lighter shrinkage is noticed when he reaches the market point.
