Poverty and Success.

Thrift Magazine: Somewhere in the obituary of almost every successful American you will find this sentence: "He began life a poor boy." Our great men seem to have had a positive genius for picking out poor parents. Although poverty at birth is looked upon as an asset rather than a liability, most successful Americans, notwithstanding the tremendous advantages poverty gave them, began to hustle for riches at an early age. Being born poor may be an asset, but it becomes a liability if you stay that way. When you are a pink, snub-nosed baby being carried around on a pillow and exhibited to the neighbors, you are fortunate if poor. But you are a great deal more unfortunate if you remain so.

But a Dullard May Prosper.

E. W. Howe's Monthly: I am often impressed with the great numbers of dull people who are getting wealthy. The dullest man I know is a good citizen, a good husband and father, and a useful man. He isn't able to write or make a speech, but he is able to behave, and work, and save, and be honest and polite; and these are the essentials. Hundreds of brighter men laugh at him, none of whom get along as well as he does. It is easy to behave, and work, and be honest, and make a living, however hard it may be to paint a great picture, write a great book, or become great in statesmanship.

The Coolidge Character.

Boston Herald: Secretary Hughes said at the New York republican convention that the Coolidge character was a very plain platform. Shining diamonds, he has some Magnetism, as it is commonly understood, he lacks. He has not a personality ## which makes men yell themselves hoarse and throw up their hats.

But character, the character of which the qualities cited by one of the newspapers referred to are merely the outward symbols, the people feel he has. They read a great deal into that swearing-in ceremony at Plymouth. There has been nothing since then to shake the faith of the people in the belief that into that old-fashioned setting stepped a man of old-fashioned strength of character and that he stepped out of it with a character confirmed, strengthened and dedicated to the people.

HERRICK REFRIGERATOR

Choice of Sanitary Linings

There is no metal in any one of the three Herrick linings—nothing to corrode or rust and taint foods. Not even the ice chamber is an exception. There the same material is used as in the food compartments: Sweet, white, odorless spruce; beautiful white enamel; or sparkling, white, opal plate glass.

These three styles of lining have been selected after years of experiments and tests. They have been found the most sanitary and easiest to clean. This is a feature that should appeal to every housewife, for a refrigerator should be kept clean. The Herrick is unusual in this respect, too. Not only are the linings easy to clean, but the shelving, drain tubes, etc., are all removable and all parts accessible.

Solid Construction

Many Herricks have been in continuous satisfactory use for more than twenty-five years. And today's models are better built than those of the early days. Every Herrick is built to give a lifetime of service. It is not made merely to sell.

Only the finest kiln dried solid oak is used. There are no veneered or pressed panels to come apart. The frames are mortised and tenoned, a type of construction which makes them most substantial and durable, regardless of weather changes or climatic conditions.

All cases are carefully filled, rubbed and varnished with an exceptional high grade coach varnish, making the Herrick equal in appearance to almost any parlor furniture. In fact, it has often been called the "Kitchen Grand," in comparison with the high grade grand piano.

Mrs. Cecilia Robinson directed the production and Miss Glennie Bacon is sponsor of the class. The money will be used for the commencement expenses.

In the story, Magee, a young author, played by Melvin Olson, makes a wager that he can write a novel in twenty-four hours and he goes to Baldpate Inn, a deserted summer resort, where Elijah Quimby and his wife, played by Willis Ickler and Thelma Peterson, are caretakers. The novelist, in possession of the inn for one day and he writes the story which is enacted in the scenes that follow. John Hland, taken by Norman Wilson, places $200,000 in the safe at the inn and this is to bribe the mayor of the city, Lyric Mabbott. A reporter from the daily paper, Dorothy Felber, and her chaplain, Francis Erlange, hearing of the bet, come to write a story. A professional blackmailer, Helen Hland, tries to get the money but is shot and killed by the mayor's man Friday, played by Russell Bartels. Peters, the hero of Baldpate, returns Kroger, is active in discovering the truth of the incident. Thomas Hayden, the president of the suburban railroad, is the story, Magee, a young author, who appears has what he thinks is the only key to the inn but there prove to be seven such keys. Ted Mithras, chief of police, assisted by Ray Finn and George Hartshorn, finds out the plot of double crossing going on and is about to arrest all the group when the mayor's man, Allan Stamm, appears and explains why Magee is at Baldpate. The epilogue tells that the young author wins his wager for $1000 and has written the novel in the time allowed.

and flexibility—an L-head engine designed and built by Studebaker; noted for its quiet and smooth operation; free from vibration because its crankshaft and connecting rods are machined on all surfaces, an exclusive Studebaker feature on cars at this price.

Remember, Studebaker is the world's largest quality car builder and thus is in position to give you the utmost for the least.

The Care of the Finish of Your Car

Read over the following "don'ts" and put them into practice. Your doing so may greatly lengthen the life of the finish on your car.

Don't allow your car to stand out in the hot sun any more than is necessary. Park in the shade, if possible, and, when at home, run it into the garage instead of letting it stand along the curb. The sun not only damages the finish, but melts the grease in the grease cups, allowing it to run out over the finished parts.

Don't expose your car to rain or severe weather conditions any oftener than necessary.

Don't slam the doors. The sudden jar has a tendency to cause the finish around the doors to crack and check. Keep your hand on the door until the lock fastens.

Don't drive through shrubbery or weeds or close enough to trees to allow their limbs to rub the finish. All of these are sure to cause fine scratches.

Don't allow mud to dry hard on the finish.

Don't use or permit the use of wax, polish, or renovators on your car.

Don't forget that an occasional coat of top or seat dressing will keep these parts looking new.

Don't neglect to have your car repainted just as soon as it needs it. The services of the automobile painter are just as important to the proper upkeep of your car as are those of the garage or service station.

The strain of headshaking, Washington Star: If the president of the United States had nothing more to do than to clasp hands with the people he might well sacrifice the size and strength necessary to undergo the ordeal. And he could be occupied thereby constantly. But other matters demand his attention and call upon his strength. He must spend several hours daily at his desk in what may be described as routine work in the last degree, in the requirement of concentration and attention to detail. He must confer with people of official position. He must meet certain social obligations. Wayne Tribune, the first number of which appeared last week. It is a very creditable paper and is published by R. M. Goshorn. We take pleasure in extending the hand of fellowship.
Although it is, or pretends to be, warm weather and rather out of season for hogs, yet large numbers of them are being brought in for sale. As a sample, on Monday 13 hogs were sold in town. Everyday there are loads enough to keep rural buyers on the streets and consequently good prices. The prices paid here for hogs will beat the prices in any town within fifty miles.
The success which Dixon county had in fighting and defeating in the supreme new election, the railroad bonds has aroused up the citizens of Dakota county. That county as will be recalled, instead of contesting the bonds in the courts, settled the claims of the bond holders by giving new bonds at a less rate of interest. It is these new bonds which Dakota county now seeks to have declared void. They claim that if the first bonds were invalid, as was shown by the case of Dixon county, the new bonds based on no consideration, are also void. Hence efforts are being made to rescue that county from the load of debt under which it will otherwise have to struggle. We hope Dakota county will succeed in its efforts.

From Other Editors

Hamilton County Register: A young writer says: "Motor cars, railroads and good roads give variety and spice of life. Without them we would be dull as oxen." The writer can recall the days prior to motors and good roads, but to scenery and life were pretty scarce. There were then many brighter minds than that of the pen who penned that dogmatic declaration, "as we do not recall that life was duller or more uneventful than at present. There is no such sleighing, hunting, rutting or horseshack riding there are no buffalo, or wild Indians, and educational and literary advantages are not appreciated and do not give the pleasure of former days. There is more wealth and less enjoyment; more knowledge and less wisdom; more speed and less heart than in the days of long ago. In some ways our youngsters have us beat for a frazzle, but it is not wholly a one-sided proposition."
York Republican: The trend to fewer and better newspapers is again shown at Beatrice where the Sun has absorbed the Express. No one of sound business judgment could believe that two daily newspapers could both prosper at Beatrice. One, well managed, will do the trick. The Express has a long career and has been the grave of many a high newspaper hope. Clark Perkins, in more recent times, gave his name to a weekly paper in an editorial, business and political success. His strength proved an unequal match for the mental and physical effort required in his position. Mr. Perkins' death the paper has declined in prestige as well as in financial standing. The consolidation of the two newspapers, under the direction of M. M. Martin, ought to prove a good solution of the situation for the community and the profession.

Albion News: It is astonishing that in a Christian nation, supposedly Christian at least, such as the United States, that such ignorance of the bible should obtain as was evidenced by a recent test applied to high school and college students of Missouri. Out of two thousand high school students, sixteen per cent could not tell what disciples enjoyed the larger confidence of Jesus. Sixty per cent had no idea what Jesus said about loving one's neighbor. Twelve per cent could not quote the first clause of the Lord's Prayer. Forty per cent said that Paul was a book of the Bible. Twenty-five per cent thought Pilate one of the Bible authors. A like per cent thought that it was missionary work that Jesus came to earth for. One per cent said that a Century was a century. The average score, on a basis of one hundred, made by high school students was thirty-five. Students who had attended Sunday school irregularly for less than five years scored an average of 65.2. Students who had not attended Sunday school for more than five years graded 88.7. These facts are valuable in that they point out a weakness in our national structure and at the same time point to one of the remedies. We cannot expect a strong, virile, Christian nation unless we have a strong, virile Christian people, and ignorance of the scriptures is not conducive to either of these.

Business.
St. Louis City Journal. April business did not satisfy. There was a general decline in lines, nearly all lines throughout the country being affected. Steel and iron, building material and general merchandise all were less. Measurables were many more failures than for months. Another feature of the decline, but one natural as the demand for goods diminished, was an appreciable increase in unemployment. That phase of the situation, however, is by no means alarming for the reason that employment has not been a shortage at that there was an actual shortage in some industries.

A decline in prices has followed the decreased demand for commodities. There was a reduction in wages, especially in the textile industry in New England and other eastern sections. Reduced production, made necessary by the lessened business activity, would be bound to have an effect on both wages and prices. Just how far this reduction in wages and prices is not foreseen. That will depend upon the business showing in the next few months.

Trade is not irregular. Rather is it regular, but the pendulum simply is swinging more slowly. Some attribute the condition to the fact of it being a worldwide depression. Others feel that it is the result of political uncertainties having to do with legislation, especially with reference to taxes. Opponents of the latter, however, are likely to insist that business could have been stimulated to better general advantage if taxes had been reduced in line with the Mellon plan. That would have meant an addition to the tax reduction amount of more than $100,000,000 a year, which undeniably would have been appreciable under any circumstances.

It could not be established in the theory that business would have been any better today if there had been a tax reduction in the largest amount possible was urged in the interest of expanding business. This had reference mainly to heavy reductions in the higher brackets, which were expected to encourage expansion on the part of capital. How sound that theory is is a question. It is well known that industry in the last two or three years, has gone to great lengths to speed up production. To say there is a logical decrease in production—not on account of smaller tax reduction but for the reason that the buying power of the public has declined. It is not likely that consumers of goods are affected by the fact that individually they must carry a heavier burden of taxation because of the bonus of about $1 a head. That realization would not frighten anyone away from manufacturing. There must be something else behind the general decline.

It appears this is what has occurred. Industry's speed up production and finally got too far ahead of demand. And then the old familiar law began to work. The moment it was seen that industry was slowing down, the public began to hope for lower prices. Consumers are as eager for concessions from producers as are producers when they go into the market for raw material and labor. It is entirely possible that an extensive readjustment, having to do with the prices of commodities in general, with wages scales, with freight rates if possible, and with everything that goes into the production, the sale and the delivery of articles of commerce, would strengthen the buying power of the people. After all, turnover is one of the greatest necessities in any life. Business might make up in volume under a different plan what it would lose on profits from individual transactions.

The State Platforms.
Lincoln Journal: The Nebraska state campaign will turn almost altogether upon the personalities of the leading candidates. Only when a real fight is on over some interesting matter of policy do platforms come into their own.

The Lincoln and Omaha platforms of this week contain little material for later reference. Neither contains a word on the subject of the tariff, which is the only matter that can rage. Both platforms try, in accordance with the usual rule, to be pleasant to a wide range of classes.

On national issues the national platforms will, of course, prevail. A few points of difference on state issues may have some bearing on the campaign.

There is our old friend bogy, the code. The democrats would repeal it. The republicans pledge elimination of duplication in administrative function but leave to the legislature the details. The democrats connect the code with the tariff, the work power, plank and include in their labor plank, otherwise similar in substance to the republican plank, George's plan of collective bargaining and a mediation system to prevent strikes.

Instances of direct conflict between the platforms are few. The agreements are more notable than the disagreements, as when both ratify the primary and both signify their desire to repeal the fire insurance law, another bug-a-boo. Probably the republican proposal of a gasoline tax will play more part in the campaign discussion than any other.

The democratic platform does not mention the subject, but Governor Bryan is committed to the opposition.

We should be thankful for the margin—though often—that permits one to roam safely at large rather than become the subject of critical study in a lecture in an institute for feebleminded.

Both the republican and democratic candidates for governor in the primary system, acting diametrically counter to each other, have expressed themselves in favor of rechartering and curtailing the law.

After suffering and surviving painful quarantines, a young man, returning from the south-west, said he could not understand how disease germs which are caused by such travel, and which are everywhere, that is a cruel truth at a country whose climate is its chief asset.

The "usual Johnson landslide" did not happen in California's state-wide primary this week. President Coolidge has secured the support of a large majority by his already ample column of supporters. Notwithstanding the efforts of opposing and aspiring politicians, the present situation in the confidence of a majority of the people who believe in his high purpose and in his ability to make good.

The republican platform's endorsement of a gasoline tax will remind people that former Governor McCallum, in his last year in office, the practicability of such a law and asked the legislature to adopt it. At that time, he explained that a gasoline tax used for road purposes would be contributed by those who use the roads, including armies of non-residents who cross the state. The idea did not seem sufficiently sound at the time to inspire passage of the proposed law. Since then it has become evident that the former governor was right.

In his sermon—Sunday morning—Rev. Fenton C. Jones, of the Presbytery, first trained his heaviest guns on those who overlook beams in their own eyes while trying to find faults in the other fellow's eyes. He is apt to speak to the wild biblicist who shoots with careless indifference to facts or sound reason. He pointed out the inconsistency of highlighting the grays and not the blacks of creating unwarranted suspicion, and dealing out ugly invective while one is suffering for loyal fellowship and loving benevolence. The minister was at his best, warmed to a high pitch of earnestness, and no one could misunderstand what he meant.

By hard work and self-denial, parents get ahead sufficiently in worldly stores to give their children advantages which they themselves do not have. Good fathers and mothers look back over lives of hardship and vow that their children shall not suffer such lack of education as they themselves did. But often parents yield to another extreme that is dangerous. They weaken their character by giving them too much relief from work and responsibility.

Better Homes Week Begins Next Sunday Out of California Omaha World-Herald, May 3: "The foot and mouth disease quarantine zone are being told in Omaha by tourists recently arrived from California and Arizona. Stories of having their clothing sprayed with cresols, their pets and vegetables disinfected, and of having their car used for road purposes were related by practically everyone coming from the zone where the disease has spread.

Home Brooks, a New York Times man, who is traveling from California to his home, arrived in Omaha Friday morning, accompanied by his wife and son. "Never in all my life have I had such a trip as this last week or two," said Brooks. "We have come through hell. This is the only way you can express it. We have been dipped and sprayed and tagged, and we have detoured hundreds of miles to get out of the zone of quarantine, where tourists are not allowed to pass. On one of these detours we slept in the car on a mountain slope, three feet above sea level. It was so hot that we had to huddle together in the car, covered by the tent, blankets, and everything we had. It's a wonder we didn't die. I froze my nose as it was.

Mr. Brooks told of the disinfecting process in use by every county in California and Arizona where the foot and mouth disease has been discovered. "They have vats, just like sheep dips," he said. "The vats are filled with a solution of carbolic acid about two feet deep, and you have to drive the car through them. Then they search your car for pets, and if you have a dog, they will take it and show you to ship it back or they will kill it. They took all our potatoes and apples and even some fruit we were carrying in jars and in gunnysack we had in a duster.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank W. James and two children, en route from Glendale, Cal., to Detroit, related similar stories. "We ran into our first 'sheep dip' at St. Bernardine," said James. "The cars got to St. Bernardine in the center of the road and all cars had to run through it. We ran through three of these in about 150 miles. It was a hell of a thing. The Nevada state line, they got after us in earnest. They sprayed our car all over with 'sheep wash,' spread out our clothes and sprayed them and then made us dip our feet in the stuff."

A tourist, in front of him, according to Mr. James, had two children and a dog in the back of the car. He got through all of the stations until he reached Needles, and here they killed both the children and the dog and dumped the car. "The officials at Needles and Yuma, he declared, have threatened to shoot anyone at-department of applied education, general federation of women's clubs, states that: "The greatest defense of any nation lies in the homes of that nation. There was never a great land yet, in any period of history or in any quarter of the world where its homes were not of high strength." Dr. John M. Gries, chief division of building and housing, department of commerce, asserts that "a nation's progress can be measured by the improvement it makes in its homes. For the homes are the visible and enduring product of the efforts of its people, and from them come the men and women who make the nation. Hence the better the home the better should be our future citizens. 'Better homes' do not mean merely better built houses, but it means better design, better equipment, better light and air, and more comfort—a place where the family has every opportunity for developing its best qualities. We all want better homes, but some do not know how to make them, and others think they cannot afford them. The better homes movement helps communities to find out and to demonstrate what constitutes a good home, and how a commonplace house can be made into a better home at a minimum of expense. John Fisher, manager, civic development department of U. S. Chamber of Commerce, says: "Home building is man's essential activity, for the home shelters the family upon which depend our present security and order and our hopes for the future. Even as a savage, man began to turn his attention to home building. This increasing success is one of the best measures of his advance in civilization. Home building is both the justification for and the beneficiary of his efforts, for it is through the home that the present generation adds most of its quota to what it has received from past generations. It is fitting, then that home building should be, in an economic sense, the basic industry, that building—equipping, furnishing our homes should be foundation stones of our material prosperity. Consequently it is not only a duty but also the part of worldly wisdom for us to set high our standards for our homes."

An Encouraging Report. Christian Science Monitor. That the people of the United States saved during 1923 more than they earned during 1920 constitutes a remarkable index to the general prosperity of the country, and that the nation as a whole is at the present time putting aside one-sixth of its income to invest for heavy gratulation. These two facts are brought to light by the Mechanics and Metals National bank of New York in its monthly review, and show clearly that the American public has learned well the great lessons of thrift and economy so abundantly preached in late years. If only some method could be worked out, however, to safeguard these savings from the army of fraudulent

Coolidge Continues Lead Over Johnson

San Francisco, May 7.—President Calvin Coolidge early today seemed to have administered defeat to Senator Hiram Johnson, in Johnson's home state primary elections. It was the first time in Johnson's political career that he has done other than literally "sweep the state." A "Johnson landslide" had almost become a term in describing California elections. William McAdoo, opposed by an unpurged ticket of delegates supported by the Hearst newspapers, won the democratic nomination better than 5 to 1. President Coolidge led Senator Johnson by over 20,000 votes with the count about 90 per cent complete. Returns from 4,758 precincts out of approximately 6,600 in the state gave: Coolidge ..... 219,393 Johnson ..... 196,139 Coolidge's majority 23,794 It was predicted that Mr. Coolidge would carry the state by nearly 30,000.

G. McAdoo of Pasadena, Calif., was the overwhelming favorite. The count early today stood: McAdoo ..... 73,599 Unpurged ..... 14,323 McAdoo's majority, 59,276 The precincts remaining to be heard from are scattered but do not have a heavy vote. Most of them are in mountain counties. Johnson's seeming defeat was a distinct surprise. He carried northern California but not by the terrific margins under which he has swamped opponents to years ago by. In southern California Coolidge piled up large margins, in every county. Johnson carried San Francisco by less than ten thousand and Coolidge carried Los Angeles by nearly 25,000. Johnson lost Oakland but beat Coolidge in Sacramento 2 to 1. Coolidge carried nearly all southern California counties by big majorities. Johnson won Fresno county. McAdoo carried every county in the state, the returns indicate. In no section did the anti-McAdoo or unpurged ticket show any major strength. Johnson Swamped in Indiana. Indianapolis, Ind., May 7.—President Coolidge made a run-away race from Senator Hiram Johnson in the Indiana primaries yesterday. It was indicated early in returns from nearly half of the precincts. Coolidge is leading by about seven to one. The vote in 1,850 out of 3,409 precincts was: Coolidge ..... 149,605 Johnson ..... 28,998 The Ku Klux Klan chucked up a victory through the nomination of Ed. Jackson, secretary of state, as the republican candidate for governor. Jackson is holding a good majority over the other five republican candidates. Mayor Shaak of Indianapolis, anti-klan candidate, was running a poor second. In the democratic gubernatorial race more than one-third of the precincts gave Dr. Carleton McCulloch a substantial lead, but it appeared doubtful whether he would obtain a majority for the nomination. McCulloch took a neutral stand on the klan issue, but the effect of the struggle over the klan in the democratic party was shown when Maxon Durgan, anti-Lafayette, forged up to second place as an anti-klan candidate. Durgan's strength was entirely unexpected and attributed to his stand against the klan.
