Lesman Loader Is Coming to The Front

It will be gratifying to the many friends of Herbert E. Lesman who moved from here to Des Moines a few years ago to establish a factory for the manufacture of a loader which he invented, to know his industry has developed successfully and has gained a widespread reputation. Mr. Lesman recently visited Detroit and found friendly cooperation with the Ford factory with whose tractor the loader is used to advantage.

In a late issue, the Des Moines Register contained this reference to the Lesman product:

Lesman Loader Manufacturing company, one of Des Moines' newer industries whose plant is located at East Twentieth and Essex boulevard, has received numerous orders and inquiries from foreign countries recently, following an exhibition of its loaders at the international exposition at Gothenburg, Sweden, and the publication of a special feature article in the New York Tribune on February 24.

Fifty-one uses have been established for their equipment for Ford tractors, embracing farm work, grading and excavating, coal handling, industrial conveyors and snow plows. The Lesman equipment was used the past winter by the street cleaning department of New York City.

Radio Fans to Hear Convention Dinings

Radio fans who wish to follow the republican national convention at Cleveland by way of their receiving sets will have matters simplified for them by tuning in on WZAM, the Willard Storage Battery Co. and on WJAX, the Union Trust Co.

Both of these stations, located in Cleveland, broadcast on 390 meters and receiving sets everywhere should get them on the same or nearly the same spot on the tuning dial.

This fact will make it possible for broadcast listeners to follow the convention from beginning to end through one or the other of these powerful stations without "fading" for any of the other stations that will be covering the meeting.

WTAM and WJAX, working side by side, will divide the broadcasting evenly between them, one picking up the thread of events where the other leaves off so that those tuned to 390 meters will not miss a thing from the moment the big hall opens till it closes.

Coolidge's Courage (Once More). Christian Science Monitor: The prompt repudiation by President Coolidge of the evasive and dilatory plan for a third court received with widespread gratification.

At a very important moment the president has given an impressive illustration of his characteristic capacity to cut through the veil of plausible excuses with which politicians surround a delusive proposition, and to expose its true character to the public gaze.

It was to have been expected that the president would defend the plan which his predecessor initiated, and which he himself reiterated, and which the secretary of state has steadily maintained.

Yet there had been some apprehension that the delusive idea of Senator Pepper that the scheme outlined by him would ally the antagonism of the irreconcilables, while not in fact materially changing the character of the court, might on the eve of a national election affect the clearness of the presidential vision.

This apprehension proves to have been unfounded. The courage of Coolidge reasserts itself.

"The president declares, without a shadow of evasion, that he stands absolutely by the original proposition that the senate should authorize the adherence to the protocol of the permanent court, with judicial justice, with certain conditions. He holds that nothing can be accomplished by taking a doubtful or ambiguous position."

"While there are those who think we would be exposed to perjury by adhering to this court, I am unable to attach great weight to their arguments."

"Whatever differences, whatever party exist for us in the world will come anyway, whether we oppose or support the court.

"I am one of those who believe we would be safer and that we would be meeting our duties better by supporting it and making every possible use of it."

"I feel confident that such action would make a greater America; that it would be productive of a higher and finer national spirit and of a more complete national life."

The next step, if one is to be taken, must be taken by the United States senate. That body has already expressed its antagonism to the president by passing over his veto the bonus bill and by refusing to moderate the tone of the immigration bill, in accordance with his expressed desire.

Will the senators, particularly those of Mr. Coolidge's own party, be ready to go before the nation in the presidential campaign with a further record of opposition to the policy, not only of the present president, but of his predecessor, on this measure which so vitally concerns the peace of the world?

The hollow sham of the Pepper substitute was apparent at the moment it was proffered but the president has given official expression to the very general feeling that it was intended wholly to befog the issue and to deceive the nation.

He has made it clear that the senate must either pass a measure which will procure the adhesion of the United States to the permanent court of international justice, in accordance with the views laid down by the chief executive, or else stand in position of either open or covert antagonism to any civilized method of international action for averting war.

The president himself can much better afford to go before the country on this issue than can any of the individual senators who this year are coming up for reelection.

On this issue than can any of the individual senators who this year are coming up for reelection.

We are glad the Kiwanis club proposes to lead the movement for community singing. Songs inspire even those who can't sing.

Congress promises to adjourn next Saturday when its members will return to their homes to mingle with constituents and explain why they should be reelected.

An over supply of teachers prompts a local educator to suggest a movement to raise educational standards. He thinks teachers must be better equipped to meet higher demands.

We do not want to offend the rest of the state by bragging about Wayne county, but it can come as near qualifying as an El Dorado as any county we know of. People have a basis of rich and untapped agricultural resources, and they have usually mixed enough conservatism with enterprise to make progress safely and soundly.

Hanging crepe should be carefully restricted to funerals. When a fellow who wants it distinctly understood that he is public-spirited and is running a business with millions of kindly and generous comprehensions of other people's interests, slides up to you and whispers that a neighbor is in financial distress, he expresses his sympathy by seriously militating against the popular welfare.

Society has been shocked and horrified by the utter profligacy of the two Chicago young men who kidnaped and foully murdered a young school boy without remotest suggestion of reason. The murderers are well known to the authorities. They are also evidently human perverts of the worst type. Their fathers are millionaires, and so they did not need the money demanded in the shape of ransom. They had a brutal instinct to kill, and were obsessed with the idea that their parents' millions should permit them to do as they pleased without considering the law of the land or the rights of other people. They figured that there was no law of heaven or earth that they could not trample under foot with impunity. Their degeneracy may be attributed to too much money—to the train of evils apt to follow big wealth lavished on children. The murdered boy was also the child of a millionaire father, and it remains to be seen whether the millions on one side can prevent the millions on the other from exacting due justice.

Damage to freight in transit adds very materially to the operating cost of railroad companies. This week we saw a new elevator that had an ugly hole dug into the enameled door while shipping. Also the enameled paint was damaged beyond repair and stove shells for $225, and the railroad company must have to replace injured parts. This instance of damage in shipping is but one among many. The railroad suffers constantly from losses due to carelessness on the part of its employees, and the increased cost is necessarily reflected in increased cost to shippers. We understand, railroad companies have been using their wits and energies for years in an effort to eliminate unnecessary

Man Wanted
A national known organization is in a position to place an ambitious man in a well paying position. Must have a car. We train you and stay with you until you are thoroughly capable. You also have a chance to earn money while you learn. We never turn a man loose to founder around alone, but see that they are able to hit the ball before leaving hand. breakage. They have sought to fix responsibility and impress on the mind of employees the importance of care. The conscientious employe has entrenched himself in the confidence of his employer, while often the inefficient employe has been relieved of his job. But notwithstanding efforts for reform, damages pile up and operating costs continue higher than they otherwise would be, merely because some employes have little or no regard for the welfare of property intrusted to them.

We were out reviewing H. J. Miner's herd of fine cattle the first of the week. The most distinguished animal on the place is a young bull that weighs over a ton. We saw a cow for which $450 had been offered a few years ago. Mr. Miner showed us two calves that will be sold soon for $150 apiece. Mr. Miner's farm is enriched by lots of pure bred hogs and chickens as well as cattle. We recalled the time from 1893 to 1896 when milk cows sold from $17 to $20, hogs around $2 per hundred and chickens were not worth taking to market. Of course, they were not pure breeds at such prices in those days, and of course everything was cheap in proportion. But people were not living so high thirty years ago. Tastes were more easily gratified. We have learned to demand more luxury, more costly leisure, more violent excitement and fewer working hours. Extravagant desires accentuate pinching times. The days of manufactured products promises to proceed until the desired parity with farm products has been reached. Concurrently, people should moderate their demands. Wage earners should share in the deflation consistently. Automobiles have become indispensable to all lines of endeavor, but also they have caused the loss of a great deal of wasted time and wasted money. Modification of the "joy riding spirit" would help. As between work and play, we should deal more liberally with the former. After all what is needed is not so much the raising of farm values as the leveling of other values in harmony, and the tempering of our habits of thinking and living.

Death of M. E. Bishop In Omaha Tuesday

Omaha, June 3.—Bishop Homer C. Stuntz, 66, of the Methodist Episcopal church, died here this morning after a lingering illness of several months.

Bishop Stuntz was retired by the Methodist general conference at Springfield, Mass., as head of the Omaha area, at his own request because of ill health. He suffered a paralytic stroke at Miami, Fla., last winter from which he never recovered.

When Bishop Stuntz completed his eight-year term as bishop of the Omaha area a few weeks ago, he was too ill to accept reappointment and Bishop Fred J. Keney, formerly of Foo Chow, China, was appointed and his successor by the general conference.

Bishop Stuntz was stricken with paralysis at Miami, Fla., Feb. 12. He was brought to Omaha on a stretcher a few weeks later. His ministry covered a period of forty years, beginning with a local pastorate in Iowa. He later served as a missionary in India, the Philippine Islands and South America. Twelve years ago he was elected bishop for the South American area and eight years ago was transferred to Omaha.

He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Stella Stuntz, and two sons, both missionaries. One, Clyde B. Stuntz of India, is in this country and at present is driving a bus from the east. The other, Hugh, is in South America.

Native of Pennsylvania
Bishop Homer C. Stuntz was born Jan. 29, 1858, at Albion, Pa. He received his early education at the state normal college at Edinboro, where he graduated in 1878. In 1882 he completed a law course at Iowa.

Bishop Stuntz completed work in Garrett Biblical Institute, Chicago, in 1884 with a degree of S. T. B., and received a master's degree from Upper Iowa university five years later.

In 1896 the bishop received the degree of doctor of divinity from Wesleyan university, Middletown, Conn. The degree of LL. D. was conferred on him by Cornell, Ia., college, in 1911.

Bishop Stuntz was elected to the ministry of the Methodist Episcopal church in the Upper Iowa conference in 1884. In the following year he was elected a missionary to India where he remained until 1895.

While serving as superintendent of the Philippine mission at Manila in 1896 he was instrumental in securing the signature of President Howard Taft, then governor of the Philippines, to a bill providing religious freedom for the islands. In 1907 he was named as field secretary of foreign missions and later was elected secretary of the board of foreign missions.

Made Bishop in 1912
In 1912 he was elected bishop of the church in an assembly held in American area. He was transferred to the Iowa-Nebraska area in 1916 and served this area until his retirement at the recent quadrennial conference of the church at Springfield, Mass.

Bishop Stuntz suffered his first paralytic stroke while serving in the Philippines in 1905. He was immediately brought back to this country and warned by physicians against further service in foreign fields.

In 1895 he married Estelle Clark, an Iowa girl, and has two sons serving in church work in foreign fields. Clyde is a missionary in India, Hugh is Sunday school superintendent of a Methodist church in Buenos Aires.

Attention, Ex-Servicemen.

As you know, the compensation bill is passed. The American Legion is pledged to help all ex-service men who are eligible to apply for bonus. The first step will be the holding of registration cards by every non-Legion man who wishes to make application. The American Legion will have the blanks for registration. Following are the questions which must be answered: Name, address, place of enlistment and date, place of discharge and date, number of days served in America, number of days in foreign service, army serial number, rank, last organization served in. When application blanks arrive one will be mailed to each man who has registered with us. "If you are a Legion man we will get you a bonus without any further trouble on your part. If you are not a Legion man, register with us at once." Dr. H. C. Johnson and A. L. Swan.

Quit Whining.

J. E. Perkins in the Council Bluffs Nonpareil: The mental condition of many Iowa towns and cities is bad. Has Iowa lost its spirit? Has it lost the type of men and women who made it possible? It has not, even though many of them have gone to Hollywood, or some other place like it.

In all the years I have lived in Iowa—and I am a Misourian—I have not known the mental horizon to be so limited to pessimism. I think the fault is with the business man more than with the laborer, and the day laborer has cause for a bit of dark thinking if his man has.

Work is not plentiful, but men are at work; people are not buying as they did during the year, but they are still purchasing. Life must go on and will go on. Anyhow, if life doesn't go on it will end, and we had just as well be philosophic about it.
I want to repeat that our standards of living are too high; we get desire, to continue the silk shirt epoch of war times; we want none of the luxuries of that period denied us.
Then, too, we are pessimistic about the government. A few rogues in positions of trust do not indict the nation as a whole any more than a sickly Christian indicts the church or a weak fraternal brother indicts the lodge. We are greater than the low level to which some of our national servants have fallen. There are thousands of men in public office who have had the chance to be rogues and who never considered dishonesty for one moment. They constitute the real bulwark against which occasional dishonesty and public betrayals beat in vain.

I have not lost my own faith in my fellows; in my state; nor in the high purposes of my government. I haven't lost faith in God and in His moral purpose with behalf He created. After bad dreams come awakenings, and we sit up and see the sunlight on the hills and realize that a bad dream can not shadow the whole day of one free from persistence. So the bad dream of the hour is just before dawn. Fundamentally, we are not a crooked generation, not more so than other generations—we just have more ability to advertise our faults.
It would be a blame good thing if press, pulpit, bew, business man and day laborer, sowers and reapers would get off the cracker box, quit whittling and whining and go to whistling and working; start to believing in one another, believing in the morality of the universe; believing in the ascent of the good over the evil and the beautiful over the ugly.

I believe in Iowa—I believe in its soil that nothing but a calamity in nature can hurt—I believe in its cities that have risen in response to man's great social need—I believe in the men and the women of Iowa whose lives are too close to the pioneers not to possess something of their strength and sincerity of purpose—and I believe in other states and in other peoples dwelling therein, whose own high purposes, linked to ours, will steadily work to a higher destiny than our fathers dreamed. Count your blessings, not your bunions!

Indigestion Tortured Mrs. Long For Years

Omaha Woman Was in Wretched Condition Until She Took Tanlac.

"The excellent health and strength I enjoy is every bit due to Tanlac. For four years, my general condition has been my faithful standby," is the high praise accorded the famous remedy by Mrs. C. H. Long, 2804 Ellison Ave., Omaha, Neb.

"For years, I suffered torture from indigestion, nervousness and sleeplessness. I never enjoyed a meal or had any appetite for anything and when I first took Tanlac in 1919, these dreadful troubles had pulled my weight down 25 pounds and had taken away nearly all my strength."

"Tanlac certainly saved the day for me. It ended the indigestion, quieted my nerves, brought back my lost weight, strength and color and all my friends spoke about the wonderful change in me. Since then, I am again as healthy and as strong as good results, after the grip and flu, and I prize it above everything."

From Other Editors

York Republican: Now the land is full of boys and girls, dismissed from their school tasks, and craving something for their idle brains and hands to do. We venture the belief that in a not far distant time education will not be dealt out to children in the present, less and faming manner. But school seasons will be more continuous over the year and boys and girls of tender years especially will be afforded the year-round some schooling that will keep them reasonably busy. We believe the present plan of nine months school and three vacation months is too much lost motion and that a plan to utilize all the year has elements of benefit in it that call for discriminating judgment.

Albion News: There is a growing feeling that nothing very worth while will be expected from the present congress and that an early adjournment might be the best thing for the country. While the republicans have a majority on paper, the actual majority obtains in either house except by union of one or the other of the major parties with the little insurgent group which now holds the outcome of all important legislation in its hands. The country was offered a tax-reduction plan which gave promise of bringing actual tax relief to the masses, but because it emanated from an eminent successful-business man it was looked upon with suspicion and discarded, a compromise measure being offered in its place. The service men were given a makeshift compensation measure for political purposes. And perhaps the saddest thing of all is the failure to date of all former legislation. It is really too bad that the president does not possess the power to discharge congress and call for the election of a new congress that might be a little more responsive to the needs of the country, and a little less given to political bickerings. Given a congress with a responsible majority the country would obtain needed legislation, but cannot be expected from any body made up of a conglomeration of interests and of divided responsibility.

will not down. It is talked about. It keeps cropping up in legislatures. Societies pass resolutions about it. Organizations hold debates about it. The newspapers print speeches about it.

Why? Because of a growing unbelief that the "eye for an eye" doctrine gives good twentieth century morals.

It is argued "but, murder needs capital punishment as a deterrent." If it were true, everyone would be in favor of capital punishment. It isn't true. It is the office of the law that is to be judged and decreed that a certain real estate mortgage executed on September 11, 1914, by William M. In England and Wales during the same period, there were 2,668 homicides, 103 sentences to supreme penalty and 125 executions. In four years France had 5,719 homicides, 154 supreme sentences and forty-eight sentences to supreme penalty, 117 executions. The same uncertainty everywhere prevails; and statistics show that it prevailed to the same degree fifty years ago.

That is the record; if capital punishment really prohibits murder by terrifying would-be murderers, why isn't it always used as a real deterrent? But if, as is here contended, capital punishment serves but to show the inability of society to do anything with its uneducated, morose but kill them, and yet is so loath to do so, that, in but a small proportion of cases where capital punishment is legal it is used, why continue it on the books?

The doctor says, "while there is life there is hope." While there is life there is hope of a reformer, of a new vision, a making over. To kill those who kill is, after all, but a confession of weakness; a saying "we don't know what else to do, and it's cheaper to kill them than to try to cure them!"

A hundred years hence, the chair and the rope will be such antique curiosities as are the rack and the thumbcrew today.

If then, why not now?

From Ponca Journal, May 28, 1885:

Memorial Day.

Last Sunday the Grand Army post of this town held memorial services at the Methodist church, Rev. J. B. Best, pastor of the church, preaching the sermon. Our Grand Army boys, in holding memorial services for the union dead, are but acting in unison with all the posts throughout the country. On Sunday, in every village, town and city of the north, wherever a grand army post has been organized, funeral services were held.

The funeral services were held in the morning at the residence of the man who died twenty years ago in defence of the government. Once every year for several years past the memorial service has been held in this town. It is meet and proper that such should be the case, that the noble deeds of the defenders of the country should be commemorated by before the observation of those who in a later age occupy the land and enjoy the privileges presented and secured by the valor men who risked their lives and in thousands of instances gave their lives, to perpetuate those blessings to those who come after them.

There is nothing of a gloomy nature attendant upon the funeral services of the patriot dead. They were rather a glorification, past made glorious by their grand achievements. There is no sentiment of gloom connected with the patriot's grave. The monument that marks it, the grass that covers it, the trees that wave over it and all that surround it, partake of the heroic character of the sleep beneath them. Whoever associates gloom with the tomb of Washington or Garfield, or at the spot where the great Lincoln lies buried, these spots are the oases of the moral world. They stand as monuments of the time that tried men's souls; and unite the heroic past with the actual present, and are like the Bunker Hill monument, "a memento of the past and a monitor to the present and all succeeding generations."

business generally continues dull, and no one wonders now why this condition prevails. It is no longer an economic riddle. Observation of various contributing circumstances easily explains the lethargy that has fallen. The most influential factor of the present business condition is the long continued unreasonable weather. People are not buying because they are not inspired to buy. Spring offerings still lie on shelves and in warehouses because there has been no encouraging impulse felt by potential purchasers. The weather has been unusual throughout the country, except in isolated sections. Temperatures far below normal have resulted in sales being under the usual figure. When the purchasing power of scores of millions of people is curtailed in this way, it means that business suffers. Another ill effect of the unreasonable weather is the present bad condition of crops that are having a difficult time getting started. Spring planting has been unsuccessful because there has not been enough warmth, moisture and sunshine to germinate seeds. A cold drouth in the late spring is about the worst thing that can happen to an agricultural section. Unless the condition changes soon, crop production is bound to be affected, especially since, for the smaller grains, there has been an appreciable reduction in acreage. And, while this would mean higher prices after the harvest, some producers would be better off if they had bumper crops. It is seen that there has been a bulge upward in cotton prices because of the poor condition of the crop in the south. There is still plenty of time for normal amounts of warmth, moisture and straight to mature good crops of wheat and corn, but the freakish weather cannot extend far into June if that is to be the condition.

Agriculture is still without legislative relief, which is another damping factor in middle west business conditions. The farmers, discouraged by crop weakness, and uncertain as to what their position is going to be in the fall, are not disposed to be very chipper in the market places. They are buying necessities only and are waiting to see what is going to happen.

Industry is feeling the depression, which The Journal believes would yield within several weeks if general conditions improved sufficiently to give business a chance. Demand, of course, is still the controlling agency. That has been lowered with the result that step by step from the retailer back to the wholesaler, the jobber and the manufacturer, the reaction is reaching production. Unemployment has increased somewhat but not alarmingly as yet.

You, and each of you, are hereby notified that on the 5th day of April, 1924, Evan W. Jones, as plaintiff, filed his petition in and commenced an action in the district court of Wayne county, Nebraska, against you, the said John W. Jones, the said W. A. White, and the said Federal Reserve Bank, of Kansas City, Missouri, implored with Thomas J. Thomas and other defendants in said action, the object and prayer of which is to foreclose a certain mortgage executed by Thomas J. Thomas and Sarah Thomas to Evan W. Said mortgage was given to secure the payment of a certain promissory note executed by said Thomas J. Thomas and Sarah Thomas to said Evan W. Hartington Herald
Editor in Arizona

Frank D. Stone, editor and proprietor of the Hartington Herald, who spent the winter in Arizona for the benefit of his health, returning home recently, has been compelled to go back to the southwest on account of the malarial climate here. He writes each week interestingly for his newspaper and in addition he contributes to the editorial page of a malarial magazine, Arizona Health.

The following from his pen appeared in last week's Hartington Herald, and it will be read with interest here:

Phoenix, Arizona, Monday, May 19. To the Hartington Herald, Hartington, Neb.: Weather still hot in Arizona and growing hotter here. Mercury is mounting higher every day. Registered over one hundred degrees for several days during the past week. Some hot winds, also, right out of the desert. Makes one think of county fair time in Nebraska. The hottest winds in this country come from the south and the wind blows from the west the weather is cooler, while in Nebraska the hottest winds are from the south and the winds from the north are cooler. Still, while the weather is undeniably very hot in Arizona in the summer time, people seem to succeed in keeping fairly comfortable, and it is said that heat prostration is a thing unknown. There are several reasons for this. In the first place, it is naturally dry in this climate—no humidity to speak of at all—and then, the second reason is that the inhabitants are prepared for hot weather. The houses which seem inadequate in the winter time, they are well adapted to withstand extreme and prolonged heat, and the most of them are amply supplied with shade. Awnings are generally used and the more fortunate homes are surrounded by vines, rose bushes and shrubs. All this the fact that the people of these localities wear a minimum of clothes and those of the thinnest and lightest material, and that a large percentage of the population spends considerable time in the water—either in the swimming pools or in the canals and rivers—has to do with it and why it is that the inhabitants of a hot state like Arizona are able to endure the summers with so much patience.

One of the things which the gardeners of this neighborhood have to contend with is the water hyacinth, called Johnson grass. It seems that there was a man by the name of John who once upon a time introduced a certain kind of grass into the valley which, while it is good for grazing purposes, is a great pest to the gardener and it requires constant fighting to eradicate it. It grows very readily and is very tough and persistent, and, the gardener must keep up an everlasting warfare against it or else it will take over his garden and chase out all his vegetables. There is one family in this neighborhood—a man and his wife and several children—who have had a very hard time of it, being in their large garden in the effort to kill the pernicious grass. When it is rooted out in one place, it takes eternal vigilance and a continual use of the hoe to keep a garden even relatively free from it. As far as I am concerned, I have never seen it, but I have heard of it as a terrible pest and a most troublesome foe, and the only possible benefit it could be to him would be the moral one of teaching him perseverance. If he needed such a lesson, which is doubtful, Johnson can scarcely be considered a public benefactor in bringing it here. It is a real nuisance, and while it is good food for cattle, it is one of the worst obstacles that the truck gardener has to contend with. That class has been fighting it tooth and nail for years, but they make little headway against it. It is one of the most hardy and persistent grasses known and there seems to be little prospect of ever driving it entirely from the country.

No human parent would admit that he or she would knowingly torture a baby, but they do something that is tantamount to torture. There is a baby in this vicinity that has screamed day and night lately, and we supposed it was sick, but on inquiry we were advised that it was suffering from splinters in its little body which it had picked up while crawling around on the rug or over the floor. We know how painful one splinter in any part of the body is, and just imagine what agonies this little soft body must have suffered when it was stuck full of sharp, cruel splinters from which it could find no relief! It would certainly be a terrible torture, and the mother, who is really a very human, kind hearted sort of a person, took it as a matter of course. She was not the least excited about it, but she told the cause of the child's incessant crying in a very matter of fact way; and yet she never even so much as thought of laying down the rug or the floor for the child to play on. It was not cruelty or inhumanity—just thoughtlessness; but how many a needless pain that poor baby is suffering because of it. One would presume that ordinary instinct or common sense would teach a parent better than that.

Reminds me of another case of tormenting a child I saw once in a barber shop. A young couple came into the shop with their first born to have his hair cut. They were intelligent, affectionate young parents, but they didn't have any sense at all. The baby was scared to death—it seemed to me as if he had been through the clippers and all the rest of the barber's tools were instruments of torture, and, naturally, cried and screamed in terror. Then, the parents, instead of trying to soothe the baby, made a jest of his fright and set up such a commotion with their jokes and laughter that the expense that the child became more panic stricken than ever and almost cried himself into convulsions. And these young parents were not inhumanly far from it. They were kind and affectionate, but they were misguided. They did not understand the baby's point of view at all and what was a tragedy to the child was only comedy to them. To the child—the barber shop was a torture chamber—and, terrified at all the strange things it saw there; but the foolish parents, who would not have willingly hurt their baby's feelings, and the barber, who could not understand this. It was simply another instance of a lack of common sense and good judgment on the part of well meaning parents.

Two little birds, which were too young to fly, tumbled down out of their nest the other day on the grass in front of the postoffice. They hopped confidently about without fear of men and showed no alarm when a boy picked them up and played with them. The mother bird, who was in a tree, however, was on the lookout, and did not leave them alone very long. She soon came flying down and fed them, and she showed the most sincere concern in her two babies by fluttering about and chirping in an anxious manner. And when she saw the three birds there on the postoffice square, I could not help but reflect on two things; first, that the mother instinct is universal, that same everywhere; and second, that the fear which birds and animals have of man is largely acquired. This was very evident in the case of the two young birds which I have mentioned. They had no fear of man; I doubt that even their traditional enemy, a cat, would have frightened them if it had passed by. The mother bird had learned caution from experience, but the baby birds did not know the meaning of it—they viewed the youth with the utmost confidence and had no fear of anybody or anything. So it seems to be a reasonable inference that fear on the part of the bird and animal comes from experience rather than an instinctive characteristic. Sincerely yours, FRANK D. STONE.

"A Sweet Relief"

We have in mind right now two or three college graduate friends who know the rules of grammar, and in written composition they never make a mistake. But when they begin to talk, particularly when they get a little excited and talk fast, the old bad habits of speech in which they were brought up come creeping back upon them through the thin veneer of college training and they go gaily forward leaving behind them a trail of misapprehensions, misunderstandings and misused pronouns to make the shade of Lindley Murray weep.—Iola Righeimer.

And why not? Some men take their release from the prodding restrictions of an iron world—in red rebellion honza. Oh, for the pole to be broken, the circumference that hores and drabs their lives.

Others fly to the ladies adown the theory, primary path, when life lid monotony maddens them. Anything that spells rebellion, that gives the sense of sweet relief from the tedious regularity of life, is over the waste places of existence.

And some of us who are too timid to swear, too proud to drink, too poor to gamble and too timid to up and fly to flirt, have to do something. So at times and in excitement by way of diversion we drop into the vernacular; drop hard, drop drastic, drop with ecstacy!

And we "have sav" to our souls' insouciance, split infinitives wamptoo' and poke words of thorny soliloquisms into the viscera of the late Lindley Murray, a stick that soothes our spirit like a tragedy.

Memorial Service Is Held on Friday

Prof. O. E. Bowen of Wynne, spoke at the Memorial service Friday in the Methodist church. He told of the obligations owed veterans and also stressed the affects of past history on the present generation. In the past this country has fought for ideals rather than for selfish ends. For these ideals the veterans stood and it is fitting to honor them. These ideals and the examples of these heroes should lead others to follow the same path. Everyone hopes for a time when there is no war, Mr. Bowen stated, but we are the principles of peace are attacked. The principles of peace for ideals must not be overthrown.

The quartet consisting of Mrs. Darwin Jones, Miss Wilma Francis, Homer and Hugh Linn, sang and Miss Mildred Marshall gave a reading, "Why Do We Call Them Buddies" for the program Friday. Rev. H. Harris offered prayer. G. A. E. members, T. P. Great and Thomas DeLong, service men and Auxiliary members attended in a group. Following the service at the church service was conducted at the cemetery over the grave of the late Joel Hancock. Miss Ruth Bartels and six young women decorated the graves of the departed veterans.
