She suffered a fatal stroke last Friday. Funeral service was conducted Tuesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the St. Paul Lutheran church with Rev. F. W. Kaul in charge. Burial was made in the Carroll cemetery.

Margaretha Wilhelmine Reithwick was born July 24, 1863, in Germany. She came to this country in 1881 and located at Omaha. She was united in marriage with Henry C. Paulsen Sept. 28, 1886, at Fort Calhoun, Neb., and the family stayed there until 1892 when they moved to Carroll. They lived on a farm near here for twenty-four years, retiring to make their home in Carroll in 1916.

Besides her husband deceased leaves one daughter, Mrs. George Hansen, and one son, Gus Paulsen, and six grandchildren, all of Carroll. She is also survived by two brothers and two sisters as follows: Henry Reithwick and Adolph Reithwick of Carroll, Mrs. Henry Schlang of Oregon City, Ore., and Mrs. Christ Rohrer of Lincoln. Mrs. Rohrer was here a few days before Mrs. Paulsen passed away.

Large of Anchor, the cousin of Mrs. Paulsen, and Miss Lillie Marxsen of Omaha, niece of the deceased, were also here.

Mrs. Paulsen was a charter member of the St. Paul Lutheran church in Carroll and she was active in church work as well as in the Ladies' Aid societies. She was a faithful Christian woman and her family and many friends will always cherish her memory.

Only Ten Minutes

When nature goes on the rampage, whether in form of lightning, cyclone, flood or hail, the damage is done in a mighty short time—a hail storm, for instance, can demolish hundreds of acres of standing grain in less than ten minutes.

It may take you five months to bring your good crops to maturity—it will take only ten minutes for its destruction by hail. And remember that no section of any state is immune!

The only safe way to protect your fields is by insuring them. A policy in one of our old line companies is an absolute guarantee that every valid claim will be paid in full upon adjustment. The cost is only $40.00 per $1,000.

The fact that moisture was considerably below normal during the previous six months should not be taken as a reason for expecting a rather excessive rainfall crowded into June.

It is understood the officers of the Wayne County Fair association will soon start the ball rolling for the annual fair, and it would seem high time to do so if the event is to be made to measure up to expectations.

The position the churches of the country have taken with respect to war is wholesome and consistent. They recognize the barbarity and futility of armed conflict, and they are properly marshaling their forces in behalf of permanent peace.

Every worthy and industrious citizen is helpful to every other citizen. He is an asset that should be regarded with favor. Any success is stimulated, and it should be considered an achievement to be encouraged rather than a barrier to be knocked.

To reduce possibility of automobile accidents it might be advisable to bond users of cars and increase their responsibility. The careful driver, wholly within his rights, is menaced by the reckless speed demon who is indifferent to the rules of the road. To safeguard the lives and property of people against the unthinking motorist who risks along without considering consequences, it may be necessary to employ drastic restrictions.

A little investigating will show that Wayne county occupies a most encouraging position among sections of the middle west. Farmers who have been handicapped by reason of shrunken values, have accepted losses philosophically, settling down to a life of quietude on well established foundations. Many others who were more conservative, have been able to stand the deflation without any major wealth, is sustained more prosperously than most other county seats.

Many people who have good jobs do not sense their good fortune. They become indifferent and neglectful. They render as little service as they can and get by. They are parties to their own ruin. They are a little ahead of time. An individual of that sort feels that he has a soft berth and a sure thing. Jared loses in time of large unemployment, and he finds himself up to his neck in woe.

terms of despair, and still clinging. Then he resolves to change his course, but he finds it hard to establish a new reputation. In whatever one engages he is secure only if he does his utmost to make full return for the gift he receives.

The next big political show will be staged in New York City next week when the democrats will nominate candidates for president and vice president. The two conspicuous candidates at this time are Governor Al Smith of New York and William G. McAdoo, secretary of treasury under President Wilson, and son-in-law of the late president. Governor Smith is pronounced "wet" and the "wet" element will rally to his support—His nomination would alienate democrats who are in favor of making a sharp prohibition amendment as it is, while he would draw to his side members of other parties who favor modification of the law. Sharp contests are expected in the convention, and proceedings will be watched with lively interest.

General Charles C. Dawes, republican vice presidential candidate, made a stimulating speech to his neighbors who had gathered at his home in the afternoon. He did not talk partisan politics, but he took occasion to denounce the prevalent demagoguery in all parties. He said European countries were finally returning to sanity and common sense after having been driven to the brink of ruin. In the forthcoming campaign, he said he would give no quarter to demagogues in any party, and he would expect none in return. He pointed out as an important need of the time: re-education of the masses as a reason, rather than an appeal to passion and prejudice. Gen. Dawes is proving an attractive figure in American politics, and the masses have a powerful force for higher political standards. He promises to take the skin off the cunning political chameleon and hang it where it may be seen. He is refreshingly rough in dealing with false pretense, and is wholesomely honest in placing popular welfare above partisan advantage.

Now comes a story that an Iowa boy ended his life by taking poison because his parents bought him a new car. The boy was a young man, too-cheap. Such a weaking, vain beyond control, should have had no automobile until he could pay for it with his own earnings. Evidently he had been petted and pampered. Doubtless his parents had worked hard and saved much, and decided, of their own free will, to give him the relief of the hardship and self-denial which they endured. Perhaps the lad boasted of the kind of an automobile he would own, and indulged and enervated by indulgence, thought more of the opinion of his soap-bubble companions than of the respect due his parents. Anyway, the boy was a spoiled nut, and it may have been made an ornament to his family tree if he had been set to work and if he had learned to control himself as well as receive. But his parents will now know where to find him, and as they plant flowers on his grave, and otherwise beautifully it may be, they will not think of words of tongue or pen, the saddest are these: it might have been."

Free Falls and Evidently Wisner Automobile

Wisner, Neb., June 14.—When a tree suddenly and without warning falls across the street, it is a calamity. The Frank Ebel family of this place were riding, Mr. Ebel suffered a broken arm and severe cuts-and-bruises, and his wife, Mrs. Ebel, and their two children escaped without scratch. They were all pinned helplessly in the wreck. This accident occurred near the Jacob Meade farm. Mrs. Meade fears her cries for help, called several of the neighbors and they all pitched in to help extricate the family from their precarious position. However, this proved to be a difficult job. The tree had to be sawed into several pieces before the Ebel's could be released. Their position was made still more precarious through danger of the automobile's catching fire while they were pinned in it. The engine continued to run and had become so hot that all of the insulation had burned from the wires and Mr. Ebel escaped at any moment to see if his family were all right. He and his family were pinned under the tree. There was no severe wind blowing when the accident occurred, and a shower of rain had come up. As they were passing a grove of trees along the road, a sudden light gust of wind uprooted a large cottonwood tree, the tree broke off about eighty feet from the ground and plunged down on the passing automobile. However, their position was made still more precarious through danger of the automobile's catching fire while they were pinned in it. The engine continued to run and had become so hot that all of the insulation had burned from the wires and Mr. Ebel escaped at any moment to see if his family were all right. He and his family were pinned under the tree.

Next week's meeting of the church on Wednesday evening. The resolution adopted by the Northern Baptist convention at Milwaukee includes the following: "Whereas, the Christian conscience of the world is coming to recognize that war is never justifiable or necessary; that it is contrary to the teaching of Christ, that it is the most colossal and ruinous social sin that underlies human civilization; that under modern conditions war can never come not only futile but suicidal; and that the recognition of this fact is necessary to civilization, therefore be it:

"Resolved that the Northern Baptist convention again declare its conviction that war is a wrong method of settling international disputes, and that because it is wrong the church must not only condemn war but the things which lead to it, but must take an active part in discovering and promoting the things which bring for peace.

"Be it further resolved, that the Northern Baptist convention request the government of the United States to unite with other nations in the present court of international relationships, and to cooperate with such other agencies as promise to reduce the likelihood of war and to create a rational system of settling international disputes in order that we may keep safe the youth of our country who served in the World War which they believed would end war."

It was further resolved that the convention join with other religious bodies in calling a world conference to consider what could be done to promote more friendly relations among nations, to create a conscience against war and to bring the power of a united Christian world to bear against the continuance of the war system. Copies of this resolution were sent to the president, Secretary Hughes and members of congress.

The Carroll organization is typical of its community patriotism, and will join in making the celebration at Wayne a success. In the meantime and afterwards, the live wires here represented will serve your needs.

Everything Grew Out of a Need

Two years ago Carroll was greatly in need of an up-to-date general merchandise store. The selling of the Williamson stock at that time gave us the opportunity to make our appearance, and so the Carroll Mercantile was founded.

The Carroll Mercantile Co. skipped infancy and adolescence; it was a mature institution at its birth, sparing no efforts to give Carroll a real store, in quality, variety, price and service.

The people of Carroll appreciated our efforts and showed it by their loyal patronage and support, and thus their cooperation made our success possible.

As we are entering into the third year of successful merchandising we can think of nothing more fitting to say than this:

The people of Carroll and vicinity have helped make and build our store. It is not only our store but also theirs. The store and the public are linked; everyone has a share in it. And with the growth of Carroll and general improvement of conditions this store will continue doing its share for a greater Carroll which also means the growth of this institution.

Nebraska Homes Are Struck by Tornado

Wood Lake, Neb., June 13.—Out-bullings were destroyed and homes damaged by a tornado Wednesday evening that swept a territory half a mile wide and twenty miles long south of here.

The storm passed over the Paul Hoefs ranch fourteen miles south of Wood Lake and completely destroyed a large modern barn and tore away about one-half of the house.

All corals, fences and small buildings were also destroyed. Debris was scattered over three miles away. One horse and several head of sheeps and hogs were killed at the ranch. Mr. Hoefs was in town at the time with a shipment of hogs. Insurance was carried on the buildings.

The storm also hit the Lena Shal ranch and tore down a shed and windmill. Proceeding eastward, the tornado turned the house part way around on the old Butterfield ranch now occupied by Charles O'Connor.

Details as to the exact damage at that place are lacking, as it is impossible to reach the ranch by telephone. There may be other buildings damaged but reports have been coming in on account of the damage to the wires in that vicinity.

It is not known as yet if the storm has caused injury to any of the residents in its path. The roar was plainly heard in Wood Lake, a distance of fourteen miles.

Another tornado passed northeast of here about a week Wednesday afternoon and several cars of tourists on the road here from Ainsworth stopped about a mile east of town and watched the funnel-shaped clouds from a distance. It appeared to them to be about thirty to forty miles away. No report has been received here from that direction as to what damage, if any, this cloud caused.

After the storm swept by a heavy rain fell, estimated to be about two inches.

Damage Near Ainsworth.
Ainsworth, Neb., June 13.—Considerable damage was done in this vicinity Wednesday afternoon when a tornado passed over a strip of territory seven miles north of Ainsworth.

The first damage was done when the storm struck the electric transmission line that connects this city with its power plant on Plum creek. Five poles were blown down, causing a stoppage to without lights or electric power for twenty-four hours.

The cloud lifted but came down two miles farther east, striking a large granary on the Abe Moe farm and demolishing a hay rack.

Two miles farther east the Charles Meyers farm was struck, the storm doing considerable damage to the foundation, sweeping the furniture from the house and scattering it over the fields.

A mile east of the Meyers farm, every building on the Lee Sheldon farm was either destroyed or left in a ruinous condition to be worked on. It was at this place that the greatest force of the storm was manifested.

Large trees were uprooted and others were broken off. The cloud kept passing to have lifted here without doing any further damage.

Beyond the Milky Way
The Summer Time
(A. L. Wiley in Lincoln Journal.)
In winter time is fair to see,
With me it makes no hit;
The summer season does me proud;
I'll say that much for it.
Nebraska then is fair to see,
And I am glad as I can be.
They say there is a distant clime,
Beyond the Milky Way,
Where, it is summer all the time,
And one eternal day.
The picture doesn't seem appeal
To me, because it seems unreal.

Wahoo Wasp: Editor E. W. Huse of the Wayne Herald was a very interesting caller at the Wasp office Friday morning. Editor Huse was enroute to Lincoln to be present at the graduation of his daughter, Edith, from the state university.

This is the third daughter to complete a four-year course at the university and he still has a younger daughter at home. With so much inspiration at home it is no wonder that he works like a trooper and gets out a splendid paper.

From Ponca Journal June 26, 1885:

In Limegrove and vicinity, the Sunday night storm did a good deal of damage. The school house (district No. 29) was blown down, George Johnson's house was unroofed, and numerous barns and granaries wiped out. The evidences of damage done by the big storm, are disappearing very fast. In a few days things will look as they did, excepting where buildings were entirely ruined as was in the cases of the Methodist and Baptist church, and a few dwelling houses. It behoves the people of this place to assist as far as possible, those families who have been rendered homeless and homeless.

On Saturday a traveling thimble rigging expert, accompanied by two copper, interviewed this place for the purpose of making a raise out of the unvary. Before commencing operations, the chief of the gang took out a pedlar's license, but instead of going into the peddling business he believed "a game with three shells and a little ball. People were made to stare that the ball was under a certain shell. One man bet $5.00 that it was there. Behold, it was not there, as it fell from the shell was raised, and the man lost his money. "Now you see it and now you don't see it" is the motto which was applicable. Pretty soon the officers of the town saw what was going on, and drove the gang out. They were started on the road towards Elk Point.

By the efficient aid of Squire Barber, we have this week been digging up the ground, sawing boards, dovetailing timbers and pounding spikes, and otherwise doing what is needful to build a storm cave. The cave is now done, and is a model, not of size or beauty, but of such tremendous strength that it will laugh to scorn the combined assault of a brigade of stem-winders with thunder and lightning accompaniments, or even an earthquake. We advise everybody to do the same. Then, when a tornado makes an advance on your works, let the family procession immediately commence to form. The members thereof having been counted, so that none have got away, a march should be made to the cave with all convenient speed. With such celerity, in fact, ought the procession to move, that it will not occupy a very long space of time in passing to any given point. When snugly gathered in your retreat let the storm howl and the world wag as it will.

Alumni Gather For Homecoming Friday

About 250 alumni of the Wayne State Teachers College attended the annual homecoming day events here Friday, June 13. Plans included a chapel program at 11:15, luncheon at the new grandstand at noon, entertainment in the afternoon when the alumni were guests of the budget committee and banquet in the evening.

Superintendent and head of home of Wayne was president, Miss Gladys Kline of Dakota City was vice president, Richard Hall of Madison secretary, and Rollie W. Ley of Wayne, treasurer of the association the past year and had charge of the day's events.

Donald Snugg of Magnet, class of 1923, was elected new president of the alumni association. Glen Lawton of Ailen, graduate in 1921, was chosen vice president for the year. Harry B. Herring of Wayne, class of 1918, secretary, and Rollie W. Ley of Wayne, Nebraska Normal College, treasurer.

Superintendent presided Friday morning at the chapel program. Alumni of the school marched into the auditorium to the music of "Alma Mater, Stately Mother," and sang the school song as the first number of the exercises. Miss Frances Oman, accompanied at the piano by Miss Fernie Oman, sang "The Blue Pipes." Mrs. U. E. Conn then welcomed the graduates and expressed his pleasure in having the students return for homecoming.

Dr. J. P. Huse spoke on what the alumni association should mean. He advised that the graduates provide for an alumni council including officers of the association, other alumni and at least one faculty member, the work of the organization being to keep in touch with the needs of the school and to plan whereby the alumni might carry through some of these. The graduates now number about 1,000 and occupy positions of importance. They can now therefore help the school. A council such as suggested could keep in touch with school needs so that their voice would be kept active throughout the year.

Cafeteria luncheon was served alumni at noon in the new grandstand at the Normal. Paul Peterson was chairman of arrangements for the luncheon.

The budget committee entertained the alumni of the school at the play, "Androcles and the Lion," Friday afternoon in the auditorium. This was one of the lecture course numbers presented by the Coffey-Miller players.

The closing event of the day was the banquet served in the evening in the gymnasium. The room was made attractive with the school colors of orange and black. One table extended across the north end of the gymnasium and five others perpendicular to it. Orange and black crepe paper made panels lengthwise of the tables and on the panels were bouquets of marigolds and daisies. Smilax entwined the candlesticks and was used in the bouquets. Several other programs were given at the school colors. Around the upper part of the room was a panel of orange and black on which were silhouettes with orange candles. Following the steps in advancement of the institution.

James Brittain acted as toastmaster and first introduced Elmer Rogers who spoke on "Teachers and Things." He stated that the school men and women must mingle with the citizens of the town and become an influence in the group. They have to often held aloof he stated. Mr. Rogers is superintendent of the school. Albert Herring of Homingford, spoke on the "Need of Hard Work." He stressed the importance of teachers and pupils realizing the value of work. Miss Edith Huse spoke on "What Next" and expressed the idea that all who have advantage of an education, as alumni of such an institution as the State Normal have had, should take an active part in helping to solve the many problems at present confronting the world. Mrs. H. S. Conn presented the list of talks for the evening by explaining the needs of the school. He told that a new training school, two new dormitories, larger library and other improvements should be had. He stated that the auditorium which it was thought never would be filled with students a few years ago, is now packed and will soon not be adequate. The alumni number enough now so that they can be of help in aiding the school in these improvements.

Baby Conferences Finished in County
 The baby conferences conducted in Wayne county under the direction of the division of child hygiene, were well attended where the weather was favorable. A total of 142 children were examined by doctors and dentists who gave their services free of charge. A checking up on the physical condition of the young child is very important. Many defects corrected in childhood, may prevent serious complications later.

The mothers were very much interested in the advice given them by the doctors and dentists. It is the early care of the teeth that insures a good mouth and good health. Winslow had the best representation with 42 children, and Carroll a close second with 34. Wayne had 28, Hoskins-23 and Sholes-16. This closes my work in Wayne county, and I wish to take this opportunity to thank the people for their helpful interest, and especially the teachers for their splendid cooperation in the school work.

Charles G. Dawes for The Vice Presidency

The nomination of President Calvin Coolidge to succeed himself by the republican national convention at Cleveland last week was followed by the nomination of Charles G. Dawes for vice president.

The following story of the career of the vice presidential nominee was given out at Cleveland:

"Besides running a great metropolitan bank, piloting the nation's national banking system, keeping America's army in France fed and supplied, putting the government on a business basis with a budget, and settling Europe's financial ills at various times in his career, Dawes immortalized the saying 'Hell an' Maria'—and it is probable that this phrase, inextricably linked with his name will survive where his other accomplishments perish.

Is Native of Ohio
 "Born in Marietta, O., in 1865, the son of Union General Rufus R. Dawes, young Charlie led the usual boy's life of those days, finally entering Marietta College, from which he received an A. B. degree at the early age of 19.

"After an educational excursion of two years to the Cincinnati Law School, from which he received an L. L. B., he returned to Marietta for another year, finally receiving his master's degree, and there his 'schooling' ended.

Dawes was admitted to the Ohio bar after his Cincinnati study, but after his graduation from Marietta, he took his legal training west and entered practice at Lincoln, capital of Nebraska, where, for seven years he doted out law to citizens of that thriving western city. At this time he met young Lieut. Jack Pershing, who was in instructor at the University of Nebraska, a meeting that was to have an important sequel in years to come.

"The east-drove him back at the end of the period, however, and late in 1894 he abandoned law and went into the prosaic business of furnishing gas to the inhabitants of Evansville, Ill. Subsequently, he has, among other things done the same service to citizens of La Crosse, Wis., and Seattle, Wash.

A McKinley Boomer

"In Illinois he got his first firm foothold in politics in the preliminaries of the 1896 campaign when he hitched himself to the McKinley kite. He was an executive in the McKinley movement in that state, and after McKinley was nominated he became a member of the executive committee of the Republican National Committee during the campaign. It was in the latter stage of his career that his driving personal force, his dynamic personality and his keen business and financial acumen finally obtained recognition in his leadership and secured him from the law, to which he has never returned.

"The Republican organization and McKinley were grateful to the 30-year-old dynamo, and when McKinley was installed in the White House in 1897, Dawes went along as comptroller of the currency, an extreme but important post with the national banks expanding and the silver fight still hanging in the air.

"For three years, Dawes applied himself to his job, but in 1900, he quit to go into business again, this time as president of the Central National Bank of Chicago, a post he held for 15 spreading years. Thereafter he turned his home to Chicago. "When war broke out, Dawes entered the army, and was assigned to the engineering corps with the rank of major. In June, 1917, he was sent to France with the rank of Lieutenant-colonel with the railway engineers, but three months later he was returned to the administrative staff of General Pershing, as chairman of the general purchasing board and general purchasing agent of the American Expeditionary Forces.

Dawes and Red Tape

"His talent for organization, his impatience with red tape, his unerring thrust to the heart of a situation with a ready solution at hand, once again found full play, and he spent the remainder of the war in this position, a veritable 'buddy' of Pershing, who leaned on him heavily. He passed through the ranks of colonel to brigadier-general. When the war ended, he was appointed to the Liquidation Commission of the Allies and efficiently disposed of the vast surplus stores the army to willing purchasers in European countries. When that task was over, he resigned from the army and returned to Chicago, bringing with him the Distinguished Service Medal, the Order of Leopold from Belgium, and the cross of the Legion of Honor from France.

"At that time the Graham committee, however, was investigating war expenditures and there was a great load of over extravagance and waste. Dawes, an ex-purchasing agent, was called to give his testimony which, some of the more pertinent interests thought, might cast some reflections on the Democratic conduct of the war.

"'Hell an' Maria' shouted Dawes, as he passed up and down before the committee, answering some question about obvious waste, 'we were fighting German over there. Therefore it was 'Hell an' Maria' Dawes. "There are too many pinheads throwing mud," he continued. "If you men would spend more time trying to study the millions of ways going on under your noses, we would have a hell of a lot better government."

Headed New Budget System.

"He did not long remain a private citizen, however, for when President Harding was elected and Congress created the budget system, Dawes was drafted to be director of the budget. The position was difficult, for Congress, in creating the budget, did not put any teeth in the law with which departments (or congress itself) might be bitten if they strayed outside the budget's bounds.

"But with President Harding at his back, Dawes commanded respect from all executive branches of the government and kept them within the scheduled expenditures. Under his stewardship the finances grew healthily, the national debt was curtailed regularly and an anticipated deficit turned to a surplus. "Dawes lent the color to the 'business meetings' of the government, when all executives of departments were called together to talk about the conduct of their finances. On such occasions, 'Hell an' Maria' used to lash them with his fiery language, wave brooms or strands of rope whose duplicated purchase he was deploring, and thus drive home his point, to the delight of the audience.

On Debt Commission.

"A year of it was enough, however. The first budget was on its way and the system seemed to be on a firm basis, and Dawes quit and went back to Chicago. Two years' travel was rewarded by the Reparations Commission dragged him out again and made him chairman of the committees of experts to examine into Germany's capacity to pay reparations and recommend methods of stabilizing Germany's currency.

"With Owen D. Young, New York industrial chief, and Henry M. Robinson, Los Angeles banker, Dawes sailed into the task with customary energy and impatience with the tampering conversion of red tape and European diplomacies. Two months' work produced the results, and Europe faced a new financial era.

"Returning to the United States, Dawes found himself mentioned prominently as a vice-presidential running mate by President Coolidge. Neither he would accept, nor enough delegates to name him the nominee. He called at the White House to dissolve the committee of Americans he headed, but characterized by what he was not in politics and did not intend to be.
