Teachers Here In Annual Institute

Lectures Thursday by H. L. Miller and M. C. Laffer Prove to Be Most-Worthwhile

Is Voted a Success

Rural Teachers Visit Demonstration Room at the State Normal School Friday

"Guide Lines in Thinking" and "Educating Up to Capacity" were subjects of lectures given last Thursday by Prof. H. L. Miller of Madison, Wis., before teachers of Wayne county at the institute program held at the state normal school here. Mr. Miller took the place of Dr. M. V. O'Shea of Madison, who was unable to come because of illness. The former is principal of the university high school and a professor of education in Madison. In his first lecture Mr. Miller stated that there are four types of thinking: Revery or "dreamy thinking" that results in poetry, practical thinking which enables persons to run automobiles, etc., rational thinking which enables people to solve problems because some other person has done so, and creative thinking which teaches persons to produce and accomplish things. The latter is the kind that should be developed in the school room, stated the speaker. Every child has unlimited capacity and if he has the right guide lines he will be able to solve any problem and do some creative work. Great men differ only in degree from the ordinary men. The problem confronting teachers is to develop the individuality on a child's actions and provide the incentives that will make him develop his powers in the right way. No two children need the same problems too, the speaker asserted. Fitting work to the individual is necessary.

The growing popularity of the radio augurs well for home life. It encourages people to spend more time at home.

A political campaign arouses so much prejudice and causes so much exaggeration that it is not agreeable to people who wish to be guided by undistorted facts and sound sense. The thirst for political power prompts an amazing lot of political bunk.

The scheme submitted in a proposed constitutional amendment, to remove the party circle and compel voters to pick out men who do not bear party labels, would make selection more difficult and more doubtful. Party designation indicates in a measure what a man stands for. Party designation gives a sort of party endorsement, which implies more responsibility. A candidate is expected to be in harmony with his party principles. Remove party identification, and it would be doubly puzzling to determine the turn of mind of the candidate who asks for votes. But, to mislead voters seems to be the idea of the authors of the proposed constitutional amendment.

The modern woman with her household duties, club work and other public service, must be versatile and resourceful. She approaches every new day with her mind charged with images of things that must be done, and as she thrashes together the morning-mead, she contemplates the day's progress. Besides household work, she puts in the day discharging obligations to numerous organizations. The woman who is right up to date must be able to change from one duty to another without notice. She must be able to make an acceptable pie, sweep a floor, make and mend, or perform some other service with equal facility. And we think the modern woman is a wonder in endurance and powers of achievement.

We heard a young man with one leg say recently that if he lost the other leg would serve him as well as the loss of the first one, he would be glad to lose it. Often physical impairment arouses one to the need of concentrated effort to overcome the handicap. It causes one to better conserve and develop himself in view of the disadvantage, and therefore spurs him to greater achievement and success than he might otherwise attain. When one is young and healthy, in possession of all his arms, legs, eyes and other aids, he is likely to allow an exaggerated idea of strength or careless indifference to weaken resolution and defeat ambition. People should turn to proper work, and their natural possessions, making them serve due advantage, without reckless misuse. One should not have to lose a member to appreciate its value.

Personal warfare among weekly newspaper during a political campaign is rare in these days. Editors do not abuse one another, merely because they do not agree as to candidates or public policies. And unless a candidate is a gross pretender or is a menace to the popular welfare, no high-minded newspaper is disposed to attack him. Party differences are no longer considered justifiable grounds for bald denunciation on the one hand or extravagant praise on the other. A newspaper that seeks to give greatest service and that is injured by sense of justice does not dislike a candidate merely because of difference in political belief. Newspapers may state their convictions without resorting to unfair and offensive tactics in seeking unwarred injury to opposing candidates. Time was when weekly newspapers divided communities into bitter factions by advancing one candidate and exciting another, with party disagreement as the only prompting cause. But conditions have changed. A newspaper does not restrict its service to political parties nor is it supported merely on account of its party fealty.

With development of the Literary Digest's presidential poll, together with less apparent indications, the approaching election suggests a contest between Coolidge and LaFollette, with Davis unable to do more than cause a deadlock and pass decision to the house of representatives. The faction in the democratic party that favors Davis is not enthusiastic for Bryan, while Bryan supporters are not strong for Davis. The inharmonious combination will lose votes. Coolidge and LaFollette, many people who are dissatisfied, lean to LaFollette. The third party candidate's stand for government ownership of railroads wins the favor of many. An unfortunate attempt is being made to stir up race prejudice to gain support. These who believe that to give the supreme court should not be subject to the changing whims of congress, will be against LaFollette. But while Coolidge supporters are not loudly demonstrative, they show a majority in nearly every straw vote taken, and as the country reflects soberly on the things he stands for and the substantial honesty of his administration, has made in the task of reconstruction, it believed prevailing forecasts will be more than verified on election day.

New Books Received At the City Library

Among the new books accessioned at the city library and the following from Bur's home library of the world's best literature: "Queen of the Desert" by Sir Walter Scott; "Henry Esmond," by Wm. Thackeray; "Tommy's" poems; "Lay of the Last Minstrel," by Sir Walter Scott; "The Woman in White" by Wilkie Collins; "Last of the Mohicans" by J. E. Cooper; and "The Captives" by R. D. Woodson; by Walton A. Scott; "The Little Colonel's Holidays" by James Lane Allen; "The Little Colonel's House Party," "Anne of Green Gables" by L. M. Montgomery, is a book that always pleases young folks. "The Kentucky Cardinal," by James Lane Allen, is a favorite southern story.

In "The World Outside," by Harold MacGrath, Miss Bennett is found dead in his secret office with the note, "paid Kennedy in full" beside him. "The story is a mystery of New York's dark streets." "Captain Blood," by Rafael Sabatini, is another of this author's fine type of historical novels. In the story, Peter Blood, captain of the great ship, Arabella, the terror of the Spaniard, is condemned for high treason and he escapes. The details are full of glamour and beauty.

"The Tiger's Claw" by Albert Payson Terhune, is a mystery story. A young man finds his brother killed and he finds a round hole in his neck. Instead of proving to be a bullet's hole examination reveals that the brother has been the prey of animals.

"The Dark Chamber" by E. J. Rath, is a comedy based on a class distinction. In the story Kilbourne, a bright, the paradise for tramps, is described.

In "The Coming of Ames," by William L. Locke, an artist and a huge, mannerless fellow fall in love with the same princess. The rivalry makes an interesting story.

"The Dark Frigate," by Charles Boardman Hawes, describes vividly the quaint old times of the sea-faring people. "The Great Quest," another novel by the same author, tells of an adventure of stirring up trouble in a quiet New England village.

Two new Dennison books have been received. They are "The New Book" and "Christmas Book."

T. R. SUNDAHL

Democratic Nominee

For County Commissioner

Second District, Wayne County

I became a resident of the county in 1884, and except three years have since resided here, and therefore am conversant with the affairs of the county and its needs. I believe in economy, and that an official should use the same care to get full value for county money as for his own in purchasing. As township commissioner for three years in Tripp county, South Dakota, I acquired real knowledge of the needs of a community and the most economical way to supply them. On a platform of economy, your support will be appreciated.

BUY TRACTOR NOW!

Lighten and expedite your farm work by buying a tractor now. We have the famous McCormick-Deering tractor, and would earnestly invite a demonstration.

Every possible feature for the convenience, comfort and safety of the operator is provided on the McCormick-Deering 15-30. To drive a tractor in comfort insures steady going for a maximum number of hours without tiring the operator. The position of the operator high above the dust zone not only adds to his comfort but makes it possible for him to see ahead, behind, and watch all operations to the great advantage. A platform makes it possible for the driver to change his position should he desire to do so. All levers are within convenient reach, the belt pulley is properly located; nothing has been overlooked to make the McCormick-Deering 15-30 a farm tractor with maximum utility.

High-Grade Ball and Roller Bearings. There is a predominance of high-class roller and ball bearings used in the McCormick-Deering 15-30 tractor. Roller and ball bearings are much more durable than plain bearings. They are lubricated and long lived. As everyone knows, plain and roller bearings reduce friction which makes more power available at the drawbar and on the belt. These ball and roller bearings are to the tractor what the jewel bearings are to a watch. They reduce friction and insure proper working of the parts.

Special Tractor Warranty. The seller agrees to replace free the two-bearing crankshaft in any 10-20 or 15-30 McCormick-Deering tractor, should it break during the life of the tractor, provided the broken parts are promptly returned to the factory or one of its branch houses. Further, the seller agrees to replace free any crankshaft ball bearing in the 10-20 or 15-30 McCormick-Deering tractor, which may break, wear out or burn out during the life of the tractor, provided that the defective ball bearing is promptly returned to the factory or one of its branch houses.
