From Ponca Journal, Nov. 4, 1886:
 Halloween came last Sunday night. This is the one time of the year when spirits, good and bad, are permitted to revisit the earth and have a general social and picnic. It is on this occasion that the world expects that good natured, sociable spirits would be more apt to appear and reveal to us in some manner those things which would like to know. It would not have come amiss if they on Sunday evening instructed this town as to the prospects of the hoped for railroad and railroad bridge and what Mr. Massey thought that land along the bluffs for. Whether he bought it for a railroad company, or for the production of coal or oil or gold, or goats, might have been profitable information if the spirits had vouchsafed to tell us. But nothing of the kind was done. Instead of instructing people on matters which are so mysterious and which rack the curiosity of society until every body is nearly sick, the spirits devoted their time on Sunday evening to a jamboree and bobbery in which they raised Cain generally. They changed signs for people; they took up a wagon and loaded it on top of a barn; they attached a string of bells to a dog's tail and sent him howling through the town; they built a pyramid of dry goods-bases-they started a picture gallery in a conspicuous place-in fact they did many things which they should not have done.
 However, they did no particular harm-which fact leads to the conclusion that what was done, was done more for fun than malice. Next year when this town is again visited by the Halloween fraternity, we expect they will see a much larger town. As our esteemed spiritual visitors may have noticed while they rested between the changing of signs, or after the arduous labor of boosting Mr. Dankleberg's wagon on the top of the barn, they may have no-iced, we say, that this town has grown nearly half since they were here last year. They doubtless saw with pleasure the immense brick blocks, and the elegant and costly residences that have been erected here during the year. And when a year hence, they come again, they will see that the present improvements and growth are but a small patching to what will be done in the year now to come, and they can have a street railway car to straddle across a barn's ridge poles instead of a common wagon.

More Business in Distribution
Nobles Farmen: It is rather interesting to hear Roger Babson, noted statistician and business economist, say that prosperity depends upon more efficient distribution. Only a few years ago Mr. Babson announced the anger of farm folks by declaring that it was the farmer's business to produce without any thought as to the marketing of his products. His recent admission that distribution costs are too high will receive more general endorsement among farmers as an accurate diagnosis of one of our most acute economic ills.

In a recent article in the daily press, Mr. Babson said the development of our next period of prosperity is almost entirely up to those who control distribution. To quote: "During the last forty years great progress has been made in production. The keenest minds have gone into manufacturing, men who naturally desired to create and produce have preferred the making of goods to jabbing or retailing. The result has been that with a few exceptions the least aggressive men have gone into the distribution end of business. This is especially true of the smaller retail trade where we find as a general thing individuals who are not particularly aggressive and economical. The result of all this has been the reduction of the cost of producing. We make practically everything today for less than it cost to make it twenty years ago. We do this in spite of higher wages. The cost of distribution meantime has climbed steadily until it has more than offset the savings on the production end of the business, and the retail price of practically all articles today is above what it was twenty years ago."

"The manufacturing capacity of our country is now highly developed and is far ahead of our ability to distribute effectively and economically. The problem of American business, then, is the problem of distribution; and I venture to say that during the next forty years the keener minds in our business world will be working on it. The great 'inventions' will be in connections with new methods of distribution rather than with new methods of manufacturing."

Fellow Legionnaires and Ex-Service Men:

Armistice Day! That never to be forgotten day, when the last gun was fired in the great war, has been chosen as the logical day, to fire the first gun of our drive for 1925 renewals and new members.

No armistice will be declared until every ex-service man is a legionnaire and no mercy shown until your 1925 dues are paid.

Yours for the biggest year in the history of this post.

Campaign Against War.
North Platte, Neb., Nov. 1.—The State Federation of Women's clubs will set aside Christmas day and the week of November 8-15 for furtherance of better international relations. Mrs. M. P. Seatt, of North Platte, chairman of the International relations department of the Nebraska federation, announced her today.

Her announcement follows: "The department of international relations is new to the general federation of women's clubs, but the subject of its creation, the doing away with war, is as old as civilization. For since then there has dwelt in the hearts of people the desire and hope that brutal warfare be replaced by humanitarian ways of settling disputes."

"Education is the program of the international relations department, for through it alone can sympathy, understanding and a desire for justice be created."

"We must study world conditions and affairs, study the people of other countries to get the viewpoint and thus do away with prejudices and hatred. We must learn the patriotism of peace."

"The women of the federation wish to inform themselves so that, as Mrs. Thomas G. Winters, general federation chairman for international relations says, 'Intelligent thinking upon these matters shall justify us in influencing the opinions and policies of our country.'"

"Arithmetic work is a very fitting time to further this educational and inspirational work."

"Many clubs over the state are uniting with other organizations in patriotic and community meetings."

Stolen Sacks Found.

North Platte, Neb., Oct. 31.—Four sacks of mail, believed to have been stolen during the robbery of the post-office at Nebraska City, Neb., late in September, were found near here today by Otto Swanson, a farmer.

Mr. Swanson was in his cornfield picking corn when he came upon the four packages in a good condition, except that the letters had been opened and any valuables that may have been in them removed. The farmer called the sheriff and the postmaster, who took charge of the sacks.

Due to the good weather of the past month the mail showed little effects of the elements. A slip still in the metal tag of one of the sacks showed that it was addressed to Nebraska City.

Man Hurt, Car Wrecked.

Ponca, Neb., Oct. 31.—Tom Shanahan escaped serious injury, but had two ribs broken, when a big cat ran into his car and crowded him around by the railing of a bridge near Mahon school house as he was returning here from Sioux City. His automobile was wrecked and he lost about $25 worth of goods which were water soaked in the creek. The driver of the car which bore an Iowa license number, sped away without stopping.

Unprepared Teachers.

Geneva Signal: More than 3,000,000 rural boys and girls in one-teacher schools are under teachers who have never completed their high school education. Thousands of them lack an elementary school education.—Scho'l Life.

The above statement is republished in the current bulletin of the United States bureau of education with evident approval, both as to fact and inference. The inference is that millions of our boys and girls are being taught by people who are wholly unprepared to teach, having very little education themselves.

The very foundation of all education in this country, since English is the common language is knowledge of how to spell and read and write the English language correctly. Even among high school graduates there are comparatively few who have much idea about the grammatical construction of sentences. How hopeless, therefore, must be the teaching of young people who have had little or no high school training. Probably most of the untrained teachers who are found in the southern states but even in Nebraska there are too many of that class.

For Violating Liquor Law.

David City, Neb., Nov. 2.—Isaac Seaman, Ballou, Neb., who was sentenced in county court for furnishing liquor to a minor, was sentenced to 30 days in jail. He was arraigned later in the district court for unlawful possession of still, malt and intoxicating liquor and was fined $1,000 and sentenced to 90 days in jail.
