Kid Ray Wins in Boxing at Norfolk

Kid Ray of Wayne, knocked out Hasey Cook of Lincoln, in the fourth round of the semi-finals of the boxing bout staged at Norfolk Tuesday night at the American Legion post. The fight was scheduled for eight seconds. The Norfolk News for Wednesday says: "Kid Ray completely outclassed Hasey Cook in the semi-final. His defense was excellent and his blows possessed plenty of driving that kept the opponent on the defense through the entire four rounds.

"Kid Ray is a coming lightweight. His shifty and his plenty of effective punches. He hopes to match a fight with Rusty Evans."

In the main event of the evening Rusty Evans of York fought But Strayer of Lincoln, former lightweight state champion, to a draw in the third round of the four-round match.

About 100 from Wayne attended the events in Norfolk. One section of spectators was reserved for the draw group.

An Old Settler Is Found Dead in Bed

Lucius Strivens, Living East of Wayne, Passes Away, Aged 82.

When Chas. Strivens of Wakefield, who is the farm home of the father, Lucius Strivens, six miles east of Wayne, Thursday afternoon, he found him dead in bed. Lucius Strivens was aged 82 years, 3 months and 8 days, was living alone, and was apparently in good health. On the day before his death, his son helped him to the corn, and he seemed as well as usual. An attack of heart trouble some time after he had retired for the night caused his sudden death. When Chas. Strivens went to the farm on Thursday afternoon at 2 o'clock to help his father, he found the horses and other live stock in the barn, but no sign of his father. Going to the house, he found the doors locked and the window blinds down. Through one window he was able to see his father lying in his bed. He was summoned, including a physician, and the lifeless body was found.

Funeral services were held in the Methodist church at Cedarburg, Sunday afternoon at 2 o'clock with interment in the cemetery at that place. Mr. Strivens was born in Livingston county, N. Y. He came west and located at Coleridge in 1879. His wife passed away twenty years ago. He was married to Mrs. M. E. Strivens in 1912. She died four years ago. He moved to Wayne county about fourteen years ago. He is survived by two sons, Chas. and Frank E. Strivens of Hartington.

Meet Laurel Here In Game on Friday

Play South Sioux City Thanksgiving—Other School Items.

The last home game of the season for the football team of the high school will be played Friday with Laurel. This promises to be a good game. The Wayne Kiwanis club has appointed a committee, F. S. Morgan, A. T. Cavanaugh and D. H. Cavanaugh, to work with Coach R. G. Brown in helping make successful the athletic program of the school. The Laurel team will be the last to play Thanksgiving day.

Though Wayne took the short end of the 7-0 score in the first game, Lyons Wednesday, Nov. 5, the visitors were shown some good team work on the part of the local men. A one-point comedy was scored and maintained strong defense. The score stood 0-0 at the close of the half. In the second half Lyons carried the ball over the line and kicked which went around the Wayne right end. O'Connor kicked goal for the try for point. Wayne then carried the ball over the line and kicked for a fumble. A Lyons punt was blocked and Kay carried the ball for Wayne's touchdown. The kick for point failed. The score then stood 6-0.

English classes of the high school presented a program Tuesday evening. A one-act comedy, musicals, orchestra, essays by one student from each class and a vocal solo by Ralph Gansko comprised the numbers. The play was "The Little Girl in the Big House" by Mrs. E. G. Brown. The play was presented in the kindergarten in honor of her fifth birthday anniversary.

Next week will be Education week. We all need more education along all lines, and especially in the direction of quickened understanding and appreciation of American history and current development and American institutions.

Another Christmas will soon be here. In the meantime alert dealers will tell the world what they have to offer to make bestowal of gifts appropriate and joyous. And early shopping will inspire sense of ease during the final rush.

It is distinctly to the credit of C. W. Reynolds, county clerk, and his organization that Wayne county was able to receive the first complete county returns from the late election. Wayne county was the first one broadcasted from the Norfolk Daily News station.

When a stranger comes to town, you show him the State Teachers college, and on the way you point out with a good deal of pride the home hospital. You tell him how the college brings a lot of desirable young people to town, how you suggest the advantage to health and safety in having a modern hospital within easy reach. Knowing the important place filled by a home hospital which ranks with the best city institutions, are we doing all we can or should to encourage and sustain it? If we would keep and add to desirable institutions, we should not merely point to them with pride, but do what we can to make them prosper and grow. Every worthy institution that builds up and brightens every other institution in the community.

A writer points out that habits of drinking and lying are formed early. First a child piffers small things, like fruits, and he is not properly impressed with the wrong in doing so. He learns to lie to cover up his little thefts. He escapes due parental restrictions early in life, and the practice of stealing and lying grows. He may reform, or he may land in the penitentiary. It is up to parents to look out for the habits of their children as soon as they are old enough to understand. Children should be taught early to spare thought of talking without permission something that belongs to some one else. Elders should be careful to show by example proper regard for the possessions of other people. Covetousness leads to dangerous habits, and it should be discouraged from the first.

President Coolidge proved that talking little is no disadvantage. As occasion demanded, he addressed himself to the people in a simple, concise and pointedly. He did not waste words nor parade himself flamboyantly. We know another successful candidate, in a campaign, who won a huge majority in the election, but who talks sparingly, and then discreetly. We refer to Judge A. A. Welch whose record always was a flood of votes without matching words with loquacious street-corner orators. Many people receive less credit than they deserve and fall far short of the goals they seek by talking too much. They misinterpret high blood pressure or a touch of gas-trick into wisdom that they ought to be released for the edification of those who will listen. Many well intentioned individuals who have much merit and who deserve success, write failure along their pathways because of an irrepressible impulse to open the valves of their brains and turn on the water without anything to say. It is too bad.

A feeble saphead at the pool of Bethesda in Jerusalem contained of Jesus that no one had helped him into the water to be cured, and so he was still sick. The weeping did not try to help himself. He was a weakling, and some one to exercise energy for himself should have employed for himself. Jesus shocked what few sensibilities he had by telling him to dig out his subject dependence and do something for himself. He took the hint or jolt, and straightaway he stimulated his soul and animated his weary flesh, and he became self-reliant, ambitious and useful. Often we find people who are dependent on the charity of opportunity, or lack of square deal. They sit down and finally lie down waiting for some one to pick them up and boost them up. They are a burden of unearned wealth and ease. They convince themselves that they have great ability, great resources for accomplishment, and they are devoid of superlative talents must remain dormant and unused because society fails to take notice, fails to give them the lift and support of the harnessing gifts. Jesus would tell such people to look to themselves, drive first their own faults, turn loose whatever talents they may possess, put steam and punch into their lives, and rely more on self and less on the attentions and contributions of the world.

Armistice day marked the passing of six years since the war ended. Since their wounds have been slowly healing, and reconstruction has been gradually taking place. It was too big an upheaval to restore order and normalcy in a brief time. Out of the wreck of the struggle came torn and discordant elements that did not yield to pre-war peace and quiet without effort and patience. Gratifying headway has been made the last year in stabilizing Europe, reestablishing its markets and enabling revival of industry and production. Likewise, conflicting groups in America have become more harmonious and more responsive to the need of unity in making wholesome and enduring progress. America has taken an important part in bettering conditions over the world, and its success as a helpful leader is reflected in improved conditions here. The future promises to see accelerated headway towards wholesome reconstruction, and we believe the next Armistice day will find world thought still more usefully and more peacefully inclined.

Results of the late election must not be interpreted by the east as a surrender to any public policy that would encourage consideration of western farming communities or that would discriminate against them. People have faith in the ability, integrity and good purpose of President Coolidge and General Daves, and believe that their influence will be exercised in behalf of sound and progressive measures with compromises that will confer equal benefits as nearly as possible on all sections and all classes. Progress towards revival of foreign markets and towards equality of values inspired confidence. It is up to the administration to discourage unwarranted price fluctuations in manufacturing and to the injury of producing groups. Wall street market quotations and industrial operations everywhere were reported materially stimulated by election results. Now let increased volume subside instead of swollen prices furnish adequate profits. People voted against La Follette as a protest against the possibility of final communism, and many democrats voted for Coolidge instead of Davis because of fear of passing a deadlock on to congress. The election was a contest of support for the president from both major parties was inspired by a firm determination to go forward and not to yield to a second, or a third, foundation, without yielding to uncertain experimentation. It is well not to boast of a big victory. Rather, it is important to justify popular confidence with results in all respects.

Market Report

(Furnished by Stinson, Gilmore & Walsh, Sioux City, Stock Yards.)

Nov. 12.—With the national election written into the history, the market flow of live stock expanded to normal proportions this week. The seven leading market total for the first day of the week brought 126,000 cattle, as against 83,818 the same day last week. Hog receipts increased to 154,000 at the week's opening, as compared to 93,700 at the opening day of election week. Sheep receipts jumped from 47,000 head last Monday to 68,000 this Monday. Obviously the fact that was reflected in seller's hands by the sudden election curtailment was wrenched out of their grasp. Packers again asserted control, and with a regularity. They hammered hogs, dealt bovine prices a severe blow and clamped the lid still tighter on short fed cattle. The latest amount of discount was 25 cents and more, and the decline the market continues draggy. Another factor in the stocker and feeder trade is the time it takes to get a standard of quality. The market price lists in market papers of late know that practically no choice for a lot of persons to buy. More Range clean-ups predominate in the runs, with just a moderately light showing of useful and fairly good stock.

In considering stocker and feeder purchases at this time the farmers have realized the truth of reports

Business. Sioux City Journal. American business has been given the greatest encouragement possible by a definite settlement of the political issues in the middle West.

The present election which is a general election will not throw to congress, which conservative opinion held from the first to be a most extravagant fancy, had wholly disappeared. A danger that never existed, save in the minds of nervous groups here and there, has passed.

The wholesome result is a definite understanding of the situation which may expect in government and of what industrial policies for some years may be considered.

It is reminded that it never was anything but a psychological impingement—bad, despite the assurances of conservative heads—that the country has far reaching influence. The element of doubt permeated deeply into the status of things economic.

Business, however, always goes along with certainty. And business, by the same token, surely hesitates, when permitted by circumstances, in the selection of plans that at best are doubtful.

Positive rather than negative, however, is the situation that now may be considered. The country is analyzing that which might have been, it were better to study what is an actuality. The election of a president may not be an event, but business did not have to wait until the national legislators decided. Economic progress was not held in abeyance.

Either, the country is progressing, this is what the country now has before it. And the prospect is encouraging.

It definitely may be understood by business henceforth that the way is clear for any and all progress that can be made. Ahead is nothing but a new road. The market for farm products is better. It is not believed that it is as good as it will be.

Every argument indicates that the domestic conditions are improved generally. They will be improved more as world trade is augmented by Europe's recovery. The American farmer, today, are enjoying better returns. Those returns are to be greater against the harvesting of another crop.

Why then, is the world's development away from, instead of toward, normal. Europe is struggling back, but it is not believed that it is as good as it will be. Every argument indicates that the domestic conditions are improved generally.

Why then, is the world's development away from, instead of toward, normal. Europe is struggling back, but it is not believed that it is as good as it will be. Every argument indicates that the domestic conditions are improved generally.

That is because new credits and new hopes in Europe have strengthened the old world's buying power. As is said of contracts, is the essence of the favorable condition that is to come. These months have seen improvement in international business should be decidedly marked.

The comparisons ought to be more impressive. A year, and prosperly should be fact recognized everywhere. Business is bound to get better for the simple reason that, under the circumstances, it cannot do anything else.

Expresses View of Modern Teaching An article in the Omaha Herald for Saturday, Nov. 8, will be of interest to many here. It is as follows: "Miss Charlotte M. White, Wayne, Neb., 79-year-old educator, was a guest in Omaha this week at the home of Mr. and Mrs. M. O. Cunningham. Miss White, who in 1882 was teaching school back in Mercer county, Pa., believes that the modern school teacher has an easy time. "It amuses me when I hear young teachers today being criticized for having to teach forty or fifty pupils," said Miss White. "There was a period in my school teaching career when I taught twenty-eight pupils in one class. I know one young normal graduate who gave up her school teaching because she had twenty pupils in one class. "The pupils I taught back in Pennsylvania were children of miners and represented all nationalities, but I think the best thing I learned in my life was teaching school back in Mercer county, Pa.," Miss White declares.

"Miss White does not believe that children are being as well educated in the general schools as she believes she and she lays the blame largely upon the type of grade teacher. "I recently attended a teachers' institute in Texas and a member of the state teachers' association declared that grade teachers were demanding for more money for the same kind of a chattering effort than those radicals who, 'never courageous enough to lead, were still weak enough to follow the light which is breaking in upon them. So-called progressives probably will lose some of their aggressiveness in behalf of radicalism. Conservatism is the only safe policy."

President Coolidge is to be congratulated on the political complexion of the next congress. With an actual working majority in the senate and in the house, the administration, bolstered in addition by the vote of confidence given it by the people, ought to look forward to a period of the light which is breaking in upon them. So-called progressives probably will lose some of their aggressiveness in behalf of radicalism. Conservatism is the only safe policy."

Mrs. T. B. Lord of Superior, Wis., and the week-end party, to interview several residents in view of organizing a literary society. Such a society would be a benefit to our town, especially in the winter months. The only objection seems to be that Winside is already burdened with clubs, lodges and societies.

The Royal Neighbors lodge met Friday night in the I. O. O. F. hall with twelve members present. After the regular business meeting the charter was drafted for Mrs. Ethnie Miller Shaw who was a charter member of the local camp and who retained her membership here. The ladies whose birthdays were celebrated in November are planning an entertainment for the next meeting, November 21.

The Royal Highlanders lodge met Thursday night in the Masonic hall with twelve members present. After the regular business meeting the members enjoyed a social hour, which was served by Mrs. Alice Gaebler and M. L. Halpin. The luncheon committee for next meeting will be Mrs. Charles Unger and Mrs. Chris Nelson, jr.

Born, Wednesday, November 5, to Mr. and Mrs. Frank Louse a son, Neola Lound of Omaha spent the week-end at the home of his grandmother, Mrs. Fannie Lound.

H. S. Moses, Art Auker, Will, John, Ralph and Ivor Prince attended a stock sale in Norfolk Monday.

Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Prince came Saturday from McCusky, North Dakota. They will spend the winter here.

Mrs. Henry Brune and children and Mrs. Henry Wacker and daughter, Loretta, were Wayne visitors Friday.

Mrs. Bert Lewis and daughters, Mabel, Wilma and Katherine, Mrs. H. S. Moses and daughter, Mildred, were shopping in Wayne Friday.

Mrs. Mary Reed left Thursday for Omaha to join her daughter, Miss Ruby Reed, who attended the teachers' convention there. From there they went to Outlook to attend the Armistice day program.

The O. E. S. chapter held their regular meeting Monday night in the Masonic hall. After the regular business, the members enjoyed a social hour. Mrs. Will Missett, Mrs. C. E. Needham and Mrs. Harold Neely entertained the members at luncheon at the Winside Luncheonette.

Willard Fletcher and children, Frances, Mildred and Gilbert, who visited Mr. Fletcher's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Will Fletcher, at Fairfax, South Dakota, returned home Friday. They visited Mr. and Mrs. George Baird at O'Neals on their way home. Mrs. Baird is a sister of Mr. Fletcher.

Miss Marie Pryor and Miss Eleanor Holpin planned a surprise party for Miss Twila Neely and Albert Koplin whose birthdays occurred Wednesday. The celebrating of these two birthdays was postponed one day and the party given Thursday night at the Jewel theatre. A large crowd of young people enjoyed a social evening. The hostesses served luncheon.

The Social Circle was entertained last Wednesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Will Missett. Twenty members responded to roll call by naming an old author. The study of American literature, a continuation of last meeting, was discussed by Mrs. George Lewis and Mrs. Harold Quinn. Guests besides club members were Mrs. Henry Brune and Miss Bess Leary. The hostess served a two-course luncheon. The next meeting will be with Mrs. Frank Mellok.

Mrs. Pete Christensen, assisted by Rosella Bauermeister, Marguerite Kopp and Fred Iverson, entertained about thirty guests at a Halloween party. The guests were led up a ladder and then asked to crawl through an upstairs window. From there they went downstairs into the basement through a "Chamber of Horrors" which finally led them outside. From the outside they made a passage which finally led them to the front door, and into the house. The rest of the evening was spent in telling fortunes and playing appropriate Halloween games. A vote was cast to determine how those present were going to vote election day. The long side was by a comfortable margin. The party at a party in the near future. Luncheon was served at midnight.

Albion Man Gets Judgment.
Albion, Neb., Nov. 8.—In district court the case of James Thompson against the City of Albion for $21,000 damages was tried and a verdict returned giving him $7,000. Thompson was a volunteer fireman and two years ago when going to a fire the door of the fire house crushed his foot. The wound became infected and it was necessary to amputate his foot. The claim of the plaintiff was that the city had been negligent in not keeping the door in good condition. The city has already paid Thompson over $5,000 for doctors, nursing, hospital expenses, etc.

Gun is Discharged and Man is Killed

Craigton, Neb., Nov. 8.—Curtis Ward was instantly killed yesterday near his home two miles west of town when the shotgun he was carrying discharged, apparently as he slipped off the road grade and the load struck him in the back of the head.
The body was found by neighbors about ten minutes after Ward had left his home, presumably to go hunting. He had gone only a few rods from the house when the accident occurred.
He was the son of C. L. Ward and was about 30 years old and unmarried. Arrangements for the funeral had not been made this morning.

Coban Condemns Stage-Filth.

Lincoln Journal: George M. Coban, perhaps the most brilliant theatrical producer and playwright in our day, has turned his guns on this week at the William Pieperstock and William Kugler homes.
"After all's been said and done," Mr. Coban concludes, "a mind gutter conversation is a mud gutter conversation. Call it life, call it art, call it dramatic dialogue, or any other odd name you care to give it, it's still a mud gutter conversation, plus an eye to business." There you have it. An eye to business. Not having the brains to produce-worthily plays the money changers in a mud gutter with filth, nudity and blasphemy and defend it in the name of art. It is a sweeping block of fresh air to have the legitimate stage speak for itself through so eloquent a tongue as that of George M. Coban.

A Husband's Nerve.

"I get so farded and at the husband of mine," a West Side matron complained to the Concordia, Kan., Blade Empire. "He's always harrung on how he would improve me, and I'm sure to check up all the grocery bills and not to leave the flour drafts open and to turn off all the lights in not using the gas in the minute. Then last night he smoked a cigaret in the living room, laid the stub down on the piano bench and turned that, built up a big fire in the furnace because he said it was cold in the house, and he left the drafts wide open all night, sleeping up and down all night. I forgot to switch off the sitting room lights, got himself a drink and went off to bed leaving the faucet running. Then this morning he had the cold nerve to tell me to cut down on the meat orders so we were spending too much money around the place already."

Pool the Eggs and Poultry.

Nebraska Farmer: The plan for the co-operative marketing of eggs and poultry products, which has been worked out and recommended by a committee appointed by the Nebraska Farm Bureau, is to be given a practical test in several counties of the state this fall. This plan, which provides for the pooling of poultry shipments through a marketing contract, permits and encourages the formation of local or county marketing associations for the grading and shipping of poultry products, these to be federated into one central state association when sufficient members and volume of product are assured to warrant such a procedure.
Lancaster county poultry producers met in Lancaster, October 23, and made plans for a membership drive and county organization. Fifteen producers signed the marketing contract at the meeting and membership campaign will be pushed throughout the county. In the meantime, the fifteen original signers are shipping eggs co-operatively to the eastern markets with good results. One of their number who is an experienced egg man is looking after the grading and shipping. Dawson county had previously organized several egg shipping circles and more will spring up in other parts of the state.

We are glad to see these definite steps taken to perfect a poultry marketing association in Nebraska and we believe the result will be all that is hoped and expected. A year ago The Nebraska Farmer published a series of poultry marketing articles pointing out what had been done in other states and suggesting the desirability for Nebraska to get started at once on a similar move. We received hearty encouragement from readers and had many letters from them giving their pledge to enter a poultry marketing organization when started on the right plan. The opportunity to do so is now afforded them through the plan referred to. Instead of waiting until a large organization is built up they may start locally and until sufficient local membership and volume of product are pledged to warrant an organization, they may do individual or joint shipping of eggs to eastern markets while the prices are high. The marketing contract does not become effective until a specified membership and volume are assured.
A specific example of the results that may be expected from shipping eggs to the eastern markets in the fall was given at the Lancaster county meeting. One of the men who is interested in encouraging such shipments and brought and shipped to New York a case of eggs, one-half white and one-half brown. The eggs graded No. 1 and sold in New York for 57 cents. After shipping expenses were deducted, the eggs netted a little less than 49 cents a dozen. At the time this shipment eggs were selling locally for about 40 cents a dozen. This man made another five-case shipment including two cases each of white and brown eggs and one case of poor quality eggs. A part of the good eggs sold for 70 cents a dozen while the poor quality eggs, which were included merely to emphasize the importance of quality, brought only 32 cents at New York.
These eggs were shipped by express at the highest shipping rate. Had there been sufficient volume to ship in carlots and to buy crates in large quantities the shipping expense would have been about one-half less. These shipments have encouraged the Lancaster people to continue with small eastern shipments until the association has enough members and eggs assured to warrant the carlot marketing.
In spite of all the sales out examples of the benefits of co-operative egg and poultry marketing, there is considerable hesitancy among producers in putting their name on the dotted line of a contract which pledges them to market their poultry products for a period of years through the association. All kinds of fears are conjectured in their minds as to what might happen.

We think these fears are groundless. The marketing contracts are the essence of any co-operative marketing plan on the pooling basis and poultry producers should have enough confidence in their own efforts to allay any fears that they will suffer from signing. Surely they will not get less for their products than under the old method and unless someone has the courage to start, how will any co-operative marketing association ever be built from the bottom by the producers?
The two biggest essentials right now for successful poultry marketing as we see it, are the courage to start and stick and the production of a quality product properly graded which merits the high prices being paid for it.

The Nervous Wreck

by E. J. Rath
©1924 - by NEA Service Inc.

Begin Here Today.
Dad Morgan stands leaning against the corral fence on his Bar-M ranch, watching the approach of two riders. They are his daughter, Sally, and an eccentric young easterner who is visiting the ranch to recuperate from a nervous breakdown. The visitor is known as the Nervous Wreck—"Wreck" for short—and is a hopeless tenderfoot.
Dad tells Sally that Bob Wells, her fiancé, will be unable to escort her to the train next morning. She is disappointed. Sally has been educated in the east and "knows the ways of places far beyond the range" as Dad puts it. Dad Morgan's ranch is a rather small one, and there is an air of idleness about it. "It is a ranch that's long and lonely more than the busy years are behind it."
Now Go on With the Story -
"I ain't got any kink," mused Dad. "I got a notion, anyhow. Let the rest of them hustle. They haven't come under their rheumatism yet. Only I'm sure sorry that Sally's gain't miss her train."
So was Sally. But 'tude to Dad's mental prediction, she to did say much about it, even to Bob Wells, who had ridden twenty miles to explain and would have to ride back again that night. Bob was the sheriff. He was the thing besides sheriff; things that were much more important in a material way. He had cattle of his own, and a couple of minding chimes "that promised, and he owned a general store at the county seat. Dad Morgan said there wasn't a more likely young hustler in all Montana than Bob Wells. And when Bob took to sailing on Sally, Dad felt that the future was working itself out in a proper and prosperous fashion.

As nearly as Dad could figure it out, in the absence of direct information, Sally was going East to see about things for her troussau. Anyhow, the sheriff seemed to be certain enough about it, and Sally made no denial. She had known Bob Wells since she first rode her own pony, as a little wild thing raised on the Bar-M, and she did not encounter any surprise in the idea of marrying him. "I reckon," said Dad, as he glanced up from his supper, "that Bob's got more to lose by your missin' that than maybe anybody else around these parts."
The sheriff winked as he reached for the coffee pot and helped himself to another cup. He was a large, healthy and well-planned young man, with a slightly boisterous air, even in moments of repose.
Ma Morgan nodded, but made no comment. Ma was never very talkative, ordinarily she contented herself with confirmatory nods, the opinions and conclusions of others usually being sufficient for her.
"If it wasn't for the fact that thea'd, he no way of getting the "Want me to drive you over in the machine?"

"Yes, please," said Sally, with a glance to her father.
"You're to put a driver over the way, eh? What are you figuring to do? Run her on two wheels?"
The Wreck made an irritable movement of his shoulders and groaned. He was still looking at Sally. "Isn't there a road," he asked, "isn't a road part of the way," said Sally. "A good part of the way. Yes, it is, Bob; you can drive a wagon over it."
"Kind what do you do when you come to his shoulders and groaned, the sheriff smiling. "Haven't noticed any road there yet."
"But it connects with some other road before you get that, say I'm certain of it," Sally was getting interested. "And the other road must go somewhere. There were some people on the north came through in a car only last spring."
"Well, it's a long, roundabout road, even if you locate it," said the sheriff. "I know the people you mean. They had a car."

Still the Wreck ignored him. "If it country like this around here," he demanded. "All open and plain sailing."
"There's plenty of open country," answered Sally, "but a faint smile."
The Wreck amused Sally. Just as he did the sheriff. But she found something more than amusement in him. "There we go turns when his assurance fairly started her. Besides she still liked the idea of making her train."
"Good part way and open country the rest of the way," observed the Wreck. "Anything the matter with that? You don't hear me yelling."
"I'll hear you yelling if you try to make it in a fever," remarked the sheriff, and he coupled another laugh with it.
Sally was musing over it, and found the idea slightly exciting.
"Bob, I don't see any reason why it can't be done," she said, slowly.
"And if we had to turn back, why there's no harm, anyhow."
"Turn back?" echoed the Wreck. "What for? You want to catch a train, don't you? Well, if I start catching trains, I catch 'em. Want to go?"
"Why, I—"
Sally looked at the sheriff. He shook his head authoritatively.
"Can't be done, Sally. I know well I'm talking about. And besides—"
He paused to observe the Wreck who had pushed his chair back from the table and risen. Sally nibbled at her lips. There were times when she wished Bob would not be so awfully authoritative.
"I'm my time tomorrow that you're ready," he read, said the Wreck, regarding her with a stare that was almost belligerent. "And anybody who tells you can't be done is interfering from arrested mental development."
He limped out of the room, but there was something about his aggressive in his gait. Dad Morgan eyed his back appreciatively and then looked at the sheriff.
"The sheriff said saddy-ore," he observed mildly, "but he certainly keeps chipper."
"He's a nut," said the sheriff. "He can't do it a million years."
"But he might," Bob. Sally had a look in her eye that boded a desire for discussion.
"What? In a fever?"
"I've heard," said Dad Morgan—"not that I've got personal experience—but I've heard that folks can go 'most anywhere in them things, except in society."
CHAPTER II
The Two-by-Nothing Prairie.
The ranch riding was five miles back of them, how many, Sally could not exactly tell, for there was no speedometer on the fiver, but they were fifteen miles from the ranch, at least, and the railroad was still more miles to the north. By the trail which wound high along the eastern flank of Black Top it was about twenty miles, as nearly as Sally could figure. They could not follow the high trail of course, some where a road branched, where they must take and Sally was intent on watching for the road.
It was an odd sensation, bumping over the trail on wheels; it helped her to forget that there had been words with the sheriff the night before, just as he was saddling to ride back to his high seat.
Once she remarked the fact to him that it was a pretty bad trail, after he had navigated a detour that carried them across a broken trail.
"Bad trail?" he echoed, almost sharply. "You don't call this bad, do you? I call it a boulevard."
Sally was absorbed with resolve to make the task so childishly simple that the sheriff would eat his words and be overwhelmed with mortification.
The Wreck's name was Henry Williams, and he belonged considerably farther east than Sally had ever been; as far as sitting in a chair. His coming to the Bar-M had been without specific premeditation; it was merely an incident. It appeared in a great plan. They first sighted him in the middle of a forenoon, two weeks back, coming furiously up the coulee, with a radiator that boiled like Old Faithful and a car that cracked that sounded like the crack of doom. He brought the thing to a stop in the doorway, introduced himself, asked for supper, and for lunch he took the car, stayed for supper, and then kept on staying.
