Home Talent Play Proves a Success

The Wayne Professional and Business club cleared $102 from the play, "Springtime," presented last Thursday and Friday evenings under the supervision of the John B. Rogers company of Chicago. Receipts amounted to somewhat over $300 and after expenses were paid, the club and the company each cleared $102. The local boys use the money in some beneficial way.

About 200 people took part in the play last week. The songs, dances and story appealed to the audiences. Miss Gertrude Schula of Wisner, representing the Rogers company, directed the musical comedy in a capable manner. She left Saturday afternoon for Mt. Pleasant, Iowa, where she began direction of "Springtime" Monday.

The local club may sponsor a play under the direction of the same company next year. Nothing definite has yet been decided as to this plan however. The women appreciate the willingness of those who helped and the interest of the public.

Dairying Increases in Wayne County

Wayne county's dairy cow population is increasing according to figures announced by the Blue Valley Crammery Institute. The statement embracing approximately one-eighth of the state in this section, and is believed to hold true for the county proper.
An 11.8 per cent gain in the number of dairy cows two years old and over is noted for the district over the preceding year, while the increase for the state as a whole was 8.8 per cent as compared with 1923. The entire United States shows an increase amounting to 6 per cent, government figures show.
The number of heifers 1 to 2 years old as compared to the total number of cows in this district seem to be above the average, indicating the intention to bring more young stock into milk in the near future.
In citing these figures the institute calls attention to the fact that the United States needs 320,000 more cows every year if production is to keep step with the normal growth of demand for dairy products. There are 1,412,000 more mouths to be fed in the United States with every passing year and with the increased consumption of dairy products, this added number to the nation's herd will barely suffice to meet the increased demand.

He Advertised.
Madison Star Mail: There is a little town about two-thirds as large as Madison out in the short grass country in western Nebraska, that has a merchant who started in business with a few hard earned dollars gained from working for wages. He has been in business for himself and has been so remarkably successful that his methods are discussed over the length and breadth of the country. He was not located in a choice farming country, but where every kind of poor land could be found mixed in with some that was good. Sand hill cranes, jack rabbits, cowboys and wheat growers mixed with the greatest abandon and homes were far apart. Yet after twenty years in that town he owns a department store and his last year's business was in excess of $200,000. He did it by advertising and using at least 5 per cent of his sales for newspaper use. Besides that he was careful to tell the truth and do as he agreed in advertising. Besides in all local public matters he disapproves of trotting around in a half bushel measure and being jealous of his home neighbors or his neighboring towns. His town is just about as large as Newman Grove but most country merchants would let their goods become old enough to vote before they would spend $15,000 a year to advertise selling time for them.

The proposal of the American Legion that every dollar as well as every man be drafted in case of war will win universal approval. This same policy worked in the statutes of other nations would go far towards guaranteeing peace.

The cry of a "subsidized" press has been heard ever since Gutenberg discovered printing, but, as a matter of fact, it has been based largely on feverish and willing imagination. Further, we don't believe that every man has his price. The one who could be bought, would not be worth buying, whereas the one who is worth buying, is above price.

We are altogether too solicitous and critical about the other fellow's shortcomings. We hunt out his frailties and drag them out on the stages, and enumerate and magnify them with outward depreciation, but inward satisfaction. The latter by concealing or expunging our own more defects. We often assume censorship of others' motives, impulses and delinquencies to camouflage our own imperfections. If we can make others appear to a disadvantage, if we can convince ourselves and others that neighbors are well spendthrifts or miserly, or that they are tight vapory blatherskites, or otherwise equally nutty and faulty, we may cover our own weaknesses, satisfy lingering fragments of conscience and divert attention. Fastening effective criticism on others serves as a sort of detour sign.

On account of our rather limited press facilities, only four pages of the Herald are printed Thursday morning. The other pages are printed earlier in the week, starting Monday. Therefore, it sometimes happens, as it has today, that live news and advertisements have to be curtailed or omitted entirely. If live news and advertising are lacking when the earlier pages are printed, so called fillers are inserted. Like the mutations of the seasons, there can be no postponement or delay in printing the papers. We must have advertising to keep up an appearance of prosperity, but we can't put a quart into a pint, and so when Thursday morning comes and an avalanche of business and red-blooded news seek admission, far exceeding capacity, we have to choke down material yearnings and let the cruel process of elimination go forward. This newspaper is issued Thursday morning, though all but four pages are printed before that day. Every man owes it to his business to advertise persistently, and he ought to give that essential the same prompt and thoughtful attention he gives to selling and delivering a piece of merchandise. We can find room for everything if we know in time, but procrastination simply means final congestion and painful sacrifice of desirable matter, both advertising and news. That has happened this morning.

From Ponca Journal Nov. 18, 1886:

Reports from the east, state that large amount of snow has already fallen in that benighted country. In some parts of Illinois, snow has fallen to the depth of eight inches.

Here in northern Nebraska, we have no snow yet—on the contrary, the weather is nearly as warm and pleasant as summer.

Later, we wrote the above on Monday. On Monday night the snow fell to the depth of ten inches. It stormed all night and during the next day and the snow was heaped up in drifts or sent skurrying on the wings of the wind throughout northern Nebraska.

No more railroad surveys nor explorations through the hills will be admissible from this time on. Care will be devoted in future to having a good pile of wood or coal. The foreteller of winter has, it appears, finally arrived.

It has been admiring around for several weeks in the eastern states, and we had begun to hope it would stay there entirely. However, snow purifies the air, braces the nerves, and gives a good appetite. Therefore let it come.

Latest and Last: The foregoing was written on Tuesday and before the storm had fully developed its intentions and wrath. As we go to press, surrounding circumstances require us to make the following additions and explanations.

People who have recently removed from the east to this favored country have, since coming here, oftentimes heard of, and puzzled their brains over the word "blizzard." Owing to the fact that it is a western word and pertains to a certain phenomenon to which we of the west have no cognate parallel, no definition of it is given in Webster's dictionary.

Had it been a Boston word, probably Mr. Webster would have recognized its existence, but the being so exclusive of the east would not allow that we of the bounding and boundless west ought to have a word entirely our own, and one which is a native of this soil as much as our big potatoes, mammoth corn and mastodon cattle and hogs.

Hence, we surmise that the new comer has not hitherto been able to gather into his understanding the full meaning of what is meant when he hears the word blizzard pronounced.

Perhaps he may have thought that it defines an easy going, sniggering and timid little zephyr, which blushing and apologetically brushes off his hat or gently fans his coat tails for him. Perhaps he may have believed it was some jocose and flippant jest which he really comes on the wings of the wind while the few flakes of snow in his face. Perhaps the new comer may have thus amicably thought of blizzards, up to, say, Tuesday noon.

He then commenced his education on this subject. He found a blizzard to be no weak armed zephyr that lifted his locks and playfully tickled his scalp. No spring chicken, it was, indeed, but a full grown, many lunged Boreas, driving before him a herd of big belted snow clouds and carrying down, blustering, overbearing, overpowering, and with the devil's own war-whoop. Such is our blizzard.

He soon came very near, but when he does come, he comes in all the panoply of war paint, and cussedness. This last experience has been the toughest seen in this country for years.

Five years ago we had a terribly stormy winter, but we had no such a blizzard as this. The visiting east settlers say this is by far the worst that has been experienced since the winter of 1897. It has not been very much like the gale which swept from the northwest and was full of snow as it could hold. It kept right on, without a moment's intermission, and it kept on for a full week.

From Tuesday until this morning. The snow which has fallen, would, if spread evenly over the ground, be a foot deep. It has been piled up in ten to twelve immense piles, and high hills appear where before was level ground. Here, in Ponca, nearly to the west, are the highest mountains of snow and drifts from five to fifteen feet high. Some are 75 to 100 feet long, and twenty to fifty feet wide.

They are completely blocking out the ceremony of depositing these drifts which bury streets and fences, and in some instances almost bury houses. The snow is so deep that it is impossible to approach. Such is its habit; it sets at defiance all weather cables, rules, regulations, and precautions. When it has no more wind to squander and no more snow on hand to stir through the meshes of the wind, it cuts off the street and the morning before sunrise, hostilities ceased. The clouds disappeared, and now the sun shines as though nothing had happened.

prepared, and now the sun shines as though nothing had happened. Yesterday business was almost entirely suspended in town, and the schools were closed. The train did not attempt to go to Sioux City during the day, but started out this morning well equipped with shovels and shovellers.

The last mail in from the interior was brought from Martinsburg on Tuesday by Carrier Gilmore. The mails from St. James and Hastings were due Tuesday evening, but have not yet arrived.

Here in town we believe there has been little suffering from this storm, and hope no loss or damage has occurred elsewhere. People here were generally prepared for winter, and with light-booms and good fires they could view the upper philosophically. But if any were caught out on the prairies during the storm they stood an even chance of never seeing home again.

No man could intelligently direct his course through such a storm which would blind, and then bewilder and lose. What loss or damage, if any, has occurred outside of town, we have not heard, for as yet, we are blockaded and cut off from the outer world.

The NERVOUS WRECK

by E. J. Rath
©1924 - by NEA Service Inc.

Begin Here Today.
Sally Morgan, daughter of the famous Bar-M ranch in Montana, has to go to a distance of 35 miles from the ranch to catch a train for the east, where she intends to buy a trousseau for her wedding to sheriff Bib Wells. Wells is unable to ride with her to the railroad station, so the "Nervous Wreck," a young easterner who is visiting at the ranch, offers to take her to the station in his little automobile.

The wreck's real name is Williams and his home is in Pittsburg. He drove up to the ranch one day in his racing car, stayed for supper, and then kept on staying.

New Go On With the Story...
"I'm a nervous wreck," he told Dad Morgan and the family. "I've got insomnia and things like that. I look healthy, but don't let it fool you. I'm a wreck."

He took his doctor, back in Pittsburg, diagnosed him, and he believed the doctor. He had been working too hard; he was on edge all the time. He was not very old, but the city was killing him. Anything that savored of excitement was in a fair way to put an end to him.

"What you need," said the doctor, "is a long trip somewhere, by yourself. Cut out the cities; dodge the towns. You yourself a fiver-and-a-half for the wild west, that's the only place where a man can lead a quiet life in these days."

Dad Morgan allowed that the doctor was right; but the wreck said no. He wanted to go to the west, and the doctor was a liar. The west had not been nearly so quiet as promised.

But it seemed that the wreck liked the west. He stayed in the country and appeared to think they ought to be grateful to have a paying boarder. Dad and Ma and Sally were, in fact, glad to have him, for, outside of the sheriff and a few other natives, visitors at the ranch came seldom.

Besides, the wreck was something of a curiosity, and when he did not talk about his nerves he could tell interesting tales of the east, which nobody but Sally believed. She had seen far as Chicago, that she had something to judge by.

And now the wreck was taking her to the train, mainly because he was tired, but Sally said it could not be done in a fiver.

The trail got worse, as most of them do. It wound and climbed in a tortuous way, but simple enough for a horse, but most of it never intended for a contraption with a 56-inch tread. Ordinarily, at the top of the pass, Sally was wont to check her horse long enough for a sweeping view of following range, bench-land and the stern figure of Black Top, Black Top was their nearest neighbor. He was so busy watching the trail that I didn't notice our bearings. It was stupid of me, but—well, it's done."

He nodded, then glanced ahead at the disappearing trail.

"If a horse can do it—" He was thinking of the sheriff.

"Oh, yes," said Sally emphatically, and shook her head. "It's useless to think of it. Why, there are some places it just goes along the edge, not more than three feet wide."

He was reluctant to abandon the idea and still stared at the trail with an appraising eye.

"We'll have to go back," explained Sally; "to the place where the road turns off. We passed it."

"I didn't see it," he remarked.

"Did you not see it?"

"Certainly not. If I had I'd have spoke about it. But it's there, of course. Don't you remember that we spoke about a road turning off, last night? That's what we had to watch for. It's not much of a road, I imagine; but a car came through last spring."

"How far back is it?" he demanded.

Sally could not even guess.

"It can't be far," she said.

The wreck stood for a moment in gloomy contemplation.

"It upsets my nerves to turn back," he announced. "I get jumpy and shaky. It irritates me. But—uh—blessed A. M. to show cause if any there be why the prayer of the petitioners should not be granted, and that notice of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof be given to all persons interested in said matter by publishing a copy of this order in the Wayne Herald, a weekly newspaper printed in said county, three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing."

"Get in," he commanded.

They were off on the back trail, leaping and careening. For ten gusty minutes they traveled the down grade, with Black Top casting a long shadow before them.

"Keep your eye peeled for that turn-off," admonished the wreck, as they plunged reeling into a little green cooee through which a tiny stream trickled.

"It's queer about that road, but I can't seem to find it," Sally confessed after awhile.

Sally glanced at the watch strapped to her wrist and caught her breath.

"Do you know that it's after six o'clock?" she cried.

He bent over to examine the watch, then produced his own, which he wore in a pocket.

"Ten after six," he confirmed. "I think we're both a few minutes fast."

"And do you know we're supposed to catch that train at seven?"

Sally's voice had a note of consternation.

"Don't get fussed," he advised. "We'll make it."

He was plunging forward again, but she checked him with a vigorous grip on his arm.

"We're headed in exactly the wrong direction. We're going south, and we ought to be going north."

"Well, we've got to go south until we get out of this what-you-may-call-it," retorted the wreck. "I can't turn around here."

"But—but—"

Sally was thinking about the east-bound express. She did not know, but she had a feeling that the railroad was still very far away. They had been on the road since noon, and she could not for her life tell how many miles they had wasted—but probably most of them.

"But what?" asked the wreck, impatiently.

"We'll just never make that train."

"Why not? Who says so? Certainly we will. If there's a railroad there with a train on it, we'll make it. Just as soon as we get to this road you spoke about—"

"But where is the road?"

The wreck removed his hands from the wheel, folded them in his lap and looked at her.

"You said it was over this way, didn't you?"

"I'm not sure. I said it was in a certain direction from a certain place. But I don't believe we've been going in that direction. At least, not all the time."

"We've been going as nearly in one direction as we could," he said coldly. "Don't blame me if the country is a horse-podger."

"I'm not blaming you."

"Look here; have you got the idea in your head that I'm lost?" he demanded.

"Please go ahead. It's getting later and later."

"Because if you have," added the wreck, "I'll raise you the I drove all the way from Pittsburg without getting lost. And if you think you can lose me in a little two-by-nothing prairie you'll have to guess some more."

"Oh, drive on!" exclaimed Sally. He did drive on, expertly and fearlessly. She cast a hopeless glance at the low ridges that seemed to have sprung up on all sides, and frowned anxiously. Perhaps the wreck was not lost, but Sally was quite certain that she was.

CONFIRMED PROOF.

Residents of Wayne Cannot Doubt What Has Been Twice Proved.

In gratitude for relief from aches and pains of bad backs—thousands have publicly recommended Doan's Pills. Residents of Wayne, who so testified, years ago, now say the results were permanent. This testimony doubly proves the worth of Doan's Pills to Wayne kidney sufferers.

W. H. Hogwood, Prop., Wayne Dray Line, Wayne, says: "My back was often so painful and lame, I could scarcely get up after sitting. My kidneys were in badly disordered condition. Doan's Pills had been used in our home and I decided to try them. Doan's relieved me almost immediately and in a short time I was cured. I have since been free from all traces of kidney disorder."

(Statement given August 4, 1913.)

On May 29, 1920, Mr. Hogwood added: "Doan's Pills gave me a lasting cure several years ago when I was in bad shape with my kidneys." 60c. at all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

They are mostly strap slippers in the latest fashion and SPANISH heel, made of satin, patent leather and SUEDE. Many of them sold at $7.00 and $8.75. At $4.85 they are splendid bargains.

THE ONLY MACHINE ON THE MARKET TO DO THIS KIND OF WORK

Lessmann Auto Dump Scraper

The above work was done with a Lessmann Auto Dump No. 22 exclusively. The new channel is 20 feet wide at the top, 6 feet wide at the bottom, 10 feet deep. The channel takes care of the entire flow of water. All dirt taken from new channel was used to dam the original channel of the creek. No ground was wasted, excepting that necessary for the new channel. The dam is not loose dirt, but it is packed by the tractor while running over same with each load. The only equipment used on this job was a Fordson Tractor equipped with a No. 22 Lessmann Auto Dump, and the work was done at an amazingly low cost. Cost figures may be had by writing to the factory at Des Moines, Iowa, also complete data. We have equipment and fellows who are capable of taking your job on contract if so desired. This is the most satisfactory manner in which the above work can possibly be done, and by far the cheaper, as by this method the old channel will gradually fill up on its own accord, and may be used for cultivation or pasture, as desired, in very short time. If desired the entire old channel may be cut at both ends, and dammed completely. There are some cases where a 150 foot cut will eliminate several thousand feet of unnecessary creek. You can readily see where this will make a tremendous difference in the value of your farm, providing you have a creek running through same. You can avoid practically two out of every three floods which spread over your farm now. The actual operation and depreciation cost of this equipment per day is very low.

The above cut was made at the Lessmann Loader Company's own cost meryer to determine facts and figures on such work. We have been informed that this work was being done through the eastern states in a number of places, but the company had never conducted an actual experience test, and for that reason this test was made. The reason it is made at or near Wayne was because the work there is as necessary as any place, and had been talked of. Through this test we have found that there is no machine on the market that can come within 50 per cent of doing the work that the Lessmann equipment will do it for. Not only that, but it is the only equipment that will do the job in the manner in which this was done. Considering the advantages of this little machine and the work done with it, it is far superior to the work done with a ten or twelve thousand machine.

Any information pertaining to this work can be had from the factory, and the cut may be seen near Wayne, Nebraska.

85% of Nebraska's Corn Crop Is Fed to Live Stock

While Nebraska is known far and wide as a great corn state, only 15 per cent of its average annual crop of 190,000,000 bushels of corn ever reaches the elevator.

Nebraska ranks third among the states of the Union both in acreage and production of corn.

Nebraska's farm industry is growing steadily and as it develops, more telephone service will be needed.

The constant growth of the industry requires vast sums of money from investors and already about half a million people have a financial interest in the business.
