If this joyous holiday season, as well as throughout the entire year, even the humblest American home enjoys convenient contact with the outside world over the nationwide telephone lines of the Bell System.

Our country has two-thirds of the earth's telephones and the most extensively used service in the world.

PEN-POINTERS

Radio fans agree it's equally as bad when there is static or static in the air.

Everybody has been talking about the cat's pajamas. Hope it gets a new pair for Christmas.

What do they mean, "Stop, Look and Listen"? It's really, stop, look and get hit by an "Auto."

In these days of divorce the saying ought to be, "Out goes the old ring and in comes the new."

After all the Christmas packages are delivered it will take a lot off the mailman's back as well as his mind.

A lot of girls will soon have four years to wait before another Leap Year arrives. And a lot of others will wish they had waited.

WISHES to express to its friends and patrons the warmest greetings of the Yuletide season. This bank has done its utmost to faithfully serve the public, and appreciation of its efforts is manifestly reflected in the steady and gratifying growth it has made.

Thirty-nine years as a National Bank! That is the life of the First National Bank of Wayne. Its history is that of a safe and progressive banking institution. Its tower of strength has been reared on a foundation of sound business judgment. Its policy of mutual helpfulness is firmly rooted in popular confidence. After thirty-nine years of healthy growth, it reviews the past with satisfaction and looks to the future with assurance.

As we approach another year, we are ready to take a new hold, and feel confident that 1925 will not prove disappointing. Earnest cooperation will be given to realization of the universal wish for improved and stable times.

Suggesting a happy Christmas thought, what would be more gratifying to your particular loved one—whether it be father, mother, brother or sister—than to be presented with a bank book showing the start to independence? You could rest assured that it would be accepted as a token of your utmost esteem.

We would like to inform the weather that it has acted benefit all through December, and that the only adequate amendments we can think of will be an early spring.

It used to be said that no snow on Christmas day meant a fat rick. Accordingly, with a thick blanket of snow covering our now good health should prevail.

In another week 1924 will be gone and 1925 will be ushered in. We will hang longer enough over the mistakes of the past to profit by them, and then we should look ahead, taking a renewed grip, with determination to render greater service and be more useful to society.

At this time of holiday greetings and bestowal of gifts, what appeals to us as the thing most desired goes always in the kindly regard of society. This may be won by finding and emphasizing the good in people and by minimizing their faults and by seeing it easy instead of hard to overcome their faults. Friendly attitudes may be won by saying and doing things that will make going easier and happier for individuals and the public. The self-sustaining person does not want material gifts. He wants to be supported by cordial feeling, and this may be won by expressing generous thoughts and doing helpful deeds.

There are people who try to use their church, lodge or political party membership to gain special favor. We are people who do not hesitate to offer people of relationship suggested as ground for selfish advantage. People so constituted and so disposed, are careful to render no service to others or to the purpose of the organization with which they are connected. Rather than employ association to improve society in a broad sense, they seek bragging or cunningly to use it in the hope of advancing personal interests. Of course they may have a perfected conscience, but in another thousand years of evolution, they may gain the correct idea.

J. F. Hanson of Fremont, spoke before the chamber of commerce at that place recently on the proposed amendment to the federal constitution prohibiting labor on the part of young people under 18 years of age. The amendment will be presented to the next Nebraska legislature for endorsement or disapproval. Mr. Hanson takes firm opposition to the amendment as a handicap to the public, especially to farmers, and as injurious to the youth of the land. He believes in work for the proper development of young people, and especially he believes the proposed restriction is unnecessary and objectionable in an agricultural state like Nebraska. It does seem odd to ask for a legal barrier to habits of industry on the part of either young or old. The tendency is too strong in that direction without any constitutional aid. Might as reasonably ask for a law or amendment to the constitution requiring people to sleep late every morning.

The disturbing statement is made that "eighty-two of every hundred parents are left dependent, with only members of the past for heirs of the future. The statement adds: "One parent easily and gladly cares for many children, but many children seldom care for one parent." It is therefore up to parents to save enough during productive years to insure comfort during the final period of inactivity. The parent who recklessly dishes out money to children to save them from work does all concerned an injury. In doing so, the parent forgets the needs of declining years, and smother's the fires of essential industry on the part of his children. But the most unfortunate thing parents can do and still keep out of an imbecile asylum is to retain control over their property on the promise that they will be taken care of during the rest of their lives. Parents must figure that while their children may be thoughtful and loving and generous, in-laws and grand-children, sufficiently removed in relationship to disclaim responsibility without the promise that they will be taken care of during the rest of their lives.

TRUE CHRISTMAS SPIRIT. Of the letter written by children to Santa Claus in Wayne the past week, the following is an example of itself: "CHRISTMAS spirit which all want to see. 'Good Old Santa Claus: I have tried to be a good boy, and I am glad when it is Christmas time because my presents are more than I can use of things. I don't want any presents, but I would be glad if you would give me some nice things to the boys and girls who have no mother or father to get presents for them. That would make us all happy. Merry Christmas to you and Mrs. Claus. Good-bye! Vincent Swanson.'"

We do not know this little boy, but we do know that his thought is deserving more respect than he takes. He respects to be made happy by the due remembrance and happiness of other children.

CHRISTMAS.

Very often people are up against hard luck through no serious fault of their own. They may have been thoughtless or they may have been too trustful of another's promises or of another's judgment.—When they come back, they find they have had sickness or other troubles added to already heavy burdens. Then their earthly stores vanished and their friends seemed less cordial even if they did not feel that way. When one hits bottom after drinking the bitter cup of disappointment and misfortune, the world seems cruel and unsympathetic whether it feels that way or not. It is then that the Christmas spirit of good will takes hold and lightens heavy hearts. It is then, receiving remembrance and an expression of good will from neighbors, and from neighbors; that one is inspired to bolster up courage and renew his grip. Little acts of unselfishness do much to put hope and new determination into faint hearts.

The great Nazarene who exemplified noblest sentiments, the highest ideals of fellowmen, has been most imperfectly followed for twenty centuries. Time has not dimmed the luster of his life nor weakened the power of his good example. And while the influence of his memory has been largely restricted to the hands and feet of the Christian, it is coming more and more to be regarded an important force every day of the year and in all walks of life and in all avenues of service.

STUCK TO HIS POST.

Word comes to the Herald that on New Year's day Editor C. E. Nevin will be making our next issue as publisher of the Laurel Advocate. Mr. Nevin has an army of warm friends in and around Laurel, and he has held his post stoutly in attention to his quarter-century goal and to his faith in the town from the time it was a struggling village. Our commendation goes to Mr. Nevin as a life-time of labor—in a single community.

Mr. Nevin located in Laurel when it had only 300 people, with a sparsely settled surrounding country. He has built up a number of years and a Washington hand press. The condition was not overly encouraging, but he stuck to his post, struggling up through the years, making improvements from time to time until now he has a modern plant, equipped with latest machinery, housed in his own building built for the purpose, and his business, firmly entrenched, keeps pace with the community and is deservedly prosperous.

The Advocate has consistently occupied a high plane of thought. It has supported high educational and moral standards, and has made its aided public improvements that would uplift and advance the best interests of its community. With all Mr. Nevin has accomplished, with all the good he will yet accomplish, the thing that stands out most to his credit and we are sure, his highest and his greatest asset, and we are sure, his most cherished possession.

Suppose We Tried Christ's Way. Collier's: Ten years ago, when the youth of Europe wallowed in mud and blood for the privilege of killing one another, Christmas Day called a truce so sudden as it was amazing. The war was only five months old, having had not yet become a habit of thought of the by common consent into their weapons with the Christmas birthday. No gun roars no bullet stumbling from their trench soldiers of the embattled east in No Man's Land and taking on the usual ancient cards and exchanged simple gifts.

It was only for twenty-four hours a bloody business was over. The killing began again the following morning—but the influence of that impulsive, naive little truce was felt far away. The fighting ended its old furry and relentless, and it was not until several weeks had passed that men put away the memory and regained the proper degree of insensate ferocity.

As a result, there was no cessation of hostilities on Christmas day, 1913. The supreme councils issued explicit orders against any use, and forbade fraternization under pain of severe penalties.

What the strategists had the shrewdness to see and realize was that hate is not a natural instinct, but a purely man-made creation that has to be watched, guarded, fanned and fed. It may not be exposed to friction, contact, discussion, friendly discussions, for its sole nourishment comes from misunderstanding, falsehood, misrepresentation, distortion and nurse resentment of all things that contact might remove. For fraternity is a natural instinct, no matter what the swordmen say, and given half a chance, the kindly impulses of human nature will sweep hate out of the heart, making room for those gentler feelings that are the one firm foundation on which the soul may build its ideals of love, justice, peace and brotherhood.

We have had our manufacturers have their way with the world from the beginning, raising barriers of suspicion and distrust between the peoples of each, screaming their rage of force incessantly, poisoning every well of understanding, and always the end has been war and the agony, loss and demoralization that war entails. We have watched them shrug Christ away as "impractical," penning him within church walls and doors that are unlocked on Sunday only.

Is it to be so always? Certainly Christianity cannot prove any more impractical than Hate.

Business.

Sioux City Journal: As the new year approaches, business conditions improve so consistently that there is nothing to discourage those who still have the belief that an era of prosperity is at hand. Everywhere the reports of the economic situation are good. The money market has been sufficiently to carry through the usually slack period of midwinter without any pessimistic impression being made. It has been observed for some years that, when seasonal comparisons were made, the slack period of midwinter gradually has crept in activity. Before the war a sharp falling off in business always came after the holidays. All lines were affected more or less. Transportation fell off and manufacturing was reduced below capacity even in the best of times.

Today a change for the better in this respect has come about. Business leaders for years have been working to the end that a more uniform rate of production and delivery might be had. What was sought was a more even spread in business activity with reference to the seasons. One of the most emphatic appeals was that made for the mining and delivery of coal before it actually was needed. Summer orders increased with the result that the railroads were given a chance to keep busy in a season ordinarily slow and to be prepared for the next winter. Better distribution of the entire burden of business has resulted from this new conception of production and delivery. Nowadays manufacturing does not fall off appreciably when the winter begins. Building formerly was confined to the more open seasons of spring, summer and fall, but now scores of millions of dollars are put into winter-building every month.

The holiday trade has been good but would have been better if milder weather had prevailed. Christmas shopping has been interrupted throughout the country by severe temperatures. Early buying saved the situation for the retailers who had expected heavier business than has developed. It is likely that post holiday inventories will show sizable stocks of Christmas goods on hand. Disposal of such goods need not be difficult, however, when the weather moderates. Sales will bring rural purchasers into the cities, and delayed holiday buying will pick up. It seems reasonable to expect in middle west territory a quicker movement of goods from post holiday sales than is usually experienced.

Farm products, both grain and live stock, are commanding good prices. The demand is so strong. Extreme winter weather when shipments are possible fails to slow down the demand for foodstuffs. Live stock prices advanced the latter part of the week with sources of supply contributing delayed shipments. Grain has commanded new-high prices, wheat going above $2 at Minneapolis. The top was $2.15 for cash grain. Corn is up a few points also, but has not moved as rapidly as the smaller grain. The farmers who doubted that prices would hold firm surely have dispensed with that doubt by this time. The law of supply and de-

The Wreck wiped the last dish, cleaned from the apron and glanced at his watch.
"Only nine o'clock," he said. "We've got all day to make that train."

"I'd clean 'em forgotten," declared Sally. "But we'll find out all about it from Charley McSwain."
Charley re-entered—the kitchen presently, tilted a chair against the wall and set down.
"We'll have a little talk," he announced. "Better sit down."
Sally drew a chair for herself, but the Wreck promptly himself against the table. He wanted to be ready for emergencies. Somebody might have spread an alarm.
"Do you believe in acts of Providence?" asked the foreman, after a moment of thought.

"Of course I can," said Sally. "But I couldn't wait for them this morning."
"I figured you could make 'em," nodded the foreman. "Can you cook meals? I don't mean plain fryin', but all kinds of ways?"
"I can do a number of ways," she smiled.
"I bet you can do tricks with eggs, like make 'em omelettes and scrambles and things like that?"
"I can do some tricks," she confessed.

"I don't thank your husband—quite it mean. He don't seem to quite lay hold of the situation. Here I am with the boss comin', and no cook. Somebody got to get some meals. I can't cook 'em. There ain't one of the boys can cook good enough. They can make things for themselves, but they don't know how to cook. I've got to have a cook."
Sally smoothed her apron and smiled again.
"You too bad!" she said. "I can see what a fix you're in. You're very kind to us. We've had a wonderful breakfast and we'd just love to oblige you. But we happen to be catching a train. We're going out. In fact we're really behind you this now. So I don't see how we can, Mr. McSwain, although otherwise we'd be glad to help you out. Wouldn't we, Henry?"

"The Wreck eyed her critically.
"It doesn't make any difference whether we would or not," he said. "The point is, we don't." The foreman drew at his pipe for half a minute and stared at the floor.
"I'm sure you're sure," he said, "but I'm mused. I sort of figured you were just honeymoonin' around, with nothin' particular to do, and you'd just been in the army. I'm good, understand. I'll pay you regular Chink wages. I ain't makin' any distinctions because you don't happen to be professional to the business."
"Can't be done," said the Wreck, with an impatient gesture and another look his wife. "I'm sure you're sure," he said. "The point is, we don't."

Larson & Larson's Store

Wishes everybody a Merry Christmas, with increased prosperity and plenty during the year that follows.

This store's largely increased trade during the past year, overcoming the barrier of slack times, shows that it fills a welcome place in the community and that it has had a part in bringing more people here from longer distances and thus permanently extending Wayne's trade territory.

Our greatly enlarged stock in all departments has been increasingly turned to advantage by the buying public, and our successful experience in pleasing customers with both goods and prices encourages and reassures our service in the future.

We shall be careful to preserve and develop the popularity of this store. We shall buy goods that people want and shall be prepared to sell them at prices they can afford to pay.

We are here to serve you and shall do our utmost to merit your confidence and support.

Market Report

(Furnished by Swanson, Gilchrist & Co., St. Louis, Mo.)

Sioux City Stock Yards, Dec. 23.—Practically all of the primary live stock markets of the country will close Christmas, but—succeeded on that day will receive the same attention as on a Sunday.

Hog and lamb tops reached a new peak for the season this week. Moreover demands for both classes of material are expected to keep right on growing with the advancing season and any reactionary spots will be strictly temporary.

Already the premature porker deluge coming to the leading markets of the country is showing the first signs of abatement. Increasing restlessness on the part of the big packers indicates that they also believe this to be true. Urgency seems to characterize every action of each buyer and the centers receiving the heaviest of the excessive runs afford the highest outlet for the simple reason that packers flock to the points giving the greatest promise of material.

With the hog peak on the river well over the $10 line, packers seem to be exerting pressure to keep the dole under control. Those in touch with the situation are of the opinion that the late season will see one of the dizziest pyrotechnical spurts in the history of the trade.

Fed lambs, have sold as high as $16.70, a new record for the season's trade. How much higher the price will climb is a matter of guesswork, but bets are still made it possible for packers to hand out some stiff figures for the live material and yet get counters at relatively cheap prices. Some of the best pelts from the biggest lambs are selling for $5 each. Hardly any eyes continue to top at over $9 on the river, although the same kinds are not worth more than $8 at Chicago.

Cattle opened at a 15 to 25 cent advance this week. The gain resulted from a shortage of material. As they handed out the extra concessions, buyers assured the sellers that and popcorn balls, etc., for the orphan's home in Fremont.

Miss Laura Haberman spent a few days at the Fritz Averman home near Wayne the past week. Wallace Ring returned on Sunday from Winner, S. D., where he purchased a load of hogs.

Mrs. Davies and Clover Busby came to the latter's home the first of the week to spend the two weeks' holiday vacation.

Miss Alice Hanson and pupils gave an excellent Christmas program Friday evening in connection with a box social. The proceeds from the sale of boxes, auctioned off by Francis Kimbell, and home-made candy and popcorn were about $25.

Marcel Ring entertained his school mates, his teacher, Miss Ruth Swanson, and a former teacher, Miss Ebba Erickson, and a few other friends at dinner Friday in honor of his birthday.

The table decorations carried out the Christmas idea with Santa Claus as a centerpiece. The birthday cake with seven lighted candles had a prominent place. The guests found their places by means of miniature sleds with their names on. The pupils returned to school in time for the afternoon session.

Carroll School Notes.
The high school students and members of the faculty were entertained Friday morning during convocation period by a group of songs given by the seventh and eighth grades under the direction of Miss Hazel Hammond.

The high school enjoyed a short trio, sung by John Francis, Paul Meyers and Elmer Otte, with Miss Hazel Hammond at the piano, Wednesday morning at convocation period.

The students of the seventh and eighth grades, under the supervision of Miss Hazel Hammond, spent the latter part of Friday afternoon stringing popcorn and cranberries for the Christmas decorations for their room.

The first semester examinations are being given in the seventh and eighth grades this week.

The pupils of the rooms taught by Miss Amanda Lundsahl and Miss Hazel Hammond enjoyed an afternoon of fun Tuesday. A short program consisting of songs and recitations was followed by a number of games. A Christmas tree and Santa Claus helped make the afternoon enjoyable.

The sale of Christmas seals by the school amounted to $28 of which fifty percent will be returned to the community for public health work. The cooperation of those who contributed to this work is appreciated.

The first and second grades decorated the Christmas tree.

The attendance in the four lower grades has been decreased because of the cold weather.

Hannah Miller has been absent because of illness.

The third and fourth grades made many pretty Christmas presents.

The little folks in the primary room and the pupils in the third and fourth grades, taught by Miss Harriet Jones and Miss Wilma Francis, respectively,

Merry Christmas and Happy New Year

TO our old friends, loyal and true, to valued new friends, and to those whose friendship we strive to serve, do we most heartily wish unmeasured success and good fortune throughout this year and the many years to come with grateful appreciation for all the favors received by us from them, and for that priceless though intangible asset, your good will, which we esteem beyond measure.

Hans Mumm Passes

Away Here Sunday

Hans Mumm was born in Schleswig, Germany, on July 27, 1848, and died at his home in Winside Sunday morning, December 21, 1924, aged 76 years, 4 months and 24 days. When a young man in his teens he came to America and for a time lived in California. From there he came to Fremont where he engaged in farming. While at Fremont he made a visit to Germany. He was united in marriage to Anna Katrina Kock on July 1, 1881, at Fremont and resided there for the first two years of his married life. He then moved to a farm near Fremont where they spent the next seven years. They then came to Wayne county, moving on a farm four and one-half miles west of Winside. Eighteen years ago they came to Winside where they have since resided. To this union were born four children, one son dying in infancy, and one daughter, Anna, dying about seven years ago. Two daughters, Mrs. John-Brown of Hudson and Mrs. Herman Kremke of Lynch, with the wife and seven grandchildren are left to mourn his going. Mr. Mumm had been ailing for seven or eight years but was never confined to his bed and until about six weeks ago he was able to walk down town and was about the house to within a few hours of his death. Yet he was never known to complain. He was baptized and confirmed in the Lutheran church in Germany but was not identified with any Lutheran church here. Mr. Mumm was one of the pioneers and saw great development in this section of the country since he came here thirty-four years ago. Funeral services were held Tuesday afternoon at the home, Rev. L. Kockler officiating. Interment in the Winside cemetery.

Methodist Church. The regular meeting of The Ladies Aid society will be held at the Methodist parsonage on Friday afternoon, Dec. 26. Meadames J. Bruce Wylie and L. E. Kockler will be hostesses. The Young People's meeting next Sunday evening at 6:45. Topic, "Jesus in Galilee." Mark 5 and 6. Topic leader, Robt. Wylie. Song leader, Anabel Hillier. "Who-wish-you-were-a-very-merry-Christmas-and-a-happy-New-Year." The regular services next Sabbath both morning and evening. The questions this week received eight or ten answers and there is a little more interest manifested. The questions for next week are: 1. What prominent N. T. character was lost, when, and where found? 2. What method did Jesus use in meeting the tempter? 3. What quotations of scripture did the devil misquote in Jesus' temptation? 4. On what important bible doctrine did the Pharisees and Sadducees differ? 5. What was the first sign given that Jesus was the Son of God during His public ministry? A copy of Matthews' gospel to all answers and one in leather binding to the best set of answers.

Elect Officers. The brethren's banquet was held on Tuesday night of last week at the Commercial hotel followed by a smoker and election of officers as follows: Fire chief—Paul Koplin. Assistant chief—Otto Graef. Secretary—Louis Hoeyer.

Early Resident Expires. Coleridge, Neb., Dec. 23.—C. F. Cyparkie; for many years one of the most prominent residents of Coleridge died at his home here after a short illness. He was 66 years old. Heart disease was given as the cause of his death. He lived in Wymot, Neb., before coming to Coleridge.

Woman's Club. The Woman's club met Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Fred Wylie. Twelve members were present. Other guests were: Mrs. Charles Misfick and Mrs. Julius Schmude. The following program was enjoyed: Roll call—Christmas verses. Solo—Mrs. I. O. Brown. Reading—Mrs. C. E. Needham. Piano solo—Mrs. H. E. Siman. Piano duet—Mrs. H. E. Siman and Miss Irene Weible. Around a beautifully decorated Christmas tree the members received presents, and blowing out the candles, wished each other a Merry Christmas. The hostess served a two-course luncheon.

Trustee for three years—Jesse White.
