Discourses on Need of Southern Trade

Speaker at Kiwanis Luncheon Points Way to Permanent Peace.

Prof. E. E. McIvin, head of the department of geography at the Wayne State Teachers College, was the speaker following the noonday luncheon of the Kiwanis club Monday. He spoke on "Foreign Trade." He stressed the need for development of world markets as the only way to insure permanent peace. Mr. McIvin called attention to the rich field for trade development in South America, and advised that the balance of trade between countries should be in the form of raw materials. Europe is using more and more in America to develop South American trade. Mr. McIvin said that the United States should rather than to Europe to trade growth. The United States can export finished products for needed raw materials, like coffee, grown in South America. The speaker said America now gets only about thirty per cent of the South American trade, and urged that the volume be increased by developing waterways and cheapening transportation. In that way European competition in the south could be met.

Some Bills Before State Legislature

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 14.—A bill which would prevent any public board or officials from interfering or discriminating with any person's choice relating to the prevention of disease is before the Nebraska senate.

Senator Cooper, republican, Omaha introduced the bill, which is virtually the same as one defeated last year. The former bill was jointly presented at the state university medical hospital in Omaha, where it was introduced by people who preferred Christian Science treatment, chiropractic and osteopathy, rather than the regular medical treatment or "hoax" at all.

Supporters of the bill declared that the state university is kept by the state, tax payers should be entitled to any form of treatment they choose.

Dr. G. C. Greater, highway safety, Scotts Bluff county, introduced a measure contemplating greater safety on public highways and a type of insurance against accidents.

The bill would require that before obtaining a license a car owner must furnish an affidavit showing himself to be worth at least $10,000, or furnish a $10,000 bond signed by an individual owner of real estate in his county. This bond would be in effect for one year, except the owner or his household.

In case the owner could not or did not care to furnish a personal surety, a resolution was passed that he give an indemnity insurance bond for not to exceed $5,000 for injury or death of any one person, and not to exceed $10,000 for injury or death of more than one. The proposed policy would insure the owner against damage of his property up to $1,000.

Wood proposed that it be unlawful to operate a car without the owner complied with the law. The bill would give courts power to seize any vehicle and store it at the owner's expense until he complied.

Market Report

(Published by Swanson, Gilmore & Walsh, Sioux City, Stock Yards.)

January 14.—With increasing frequency the supply of wheat is showing a decrease in the daily totals, as compared to the corresponding 1924 movement. In other words the winter wheat crop is being harvested and delivery diminished the crop so rapidly that right now, when the liquidations in this territory should be having a heavy effect, they are starting to show abatement. Then, too, the remaining hogs are in stronger hands.

provision of a change in the movement is less significant to be beneath their needs. The fact that packers have anticipated this change to come and are not going to jeopardize their position through a change. They must to get the material regardless of competition. In that connection it might be well to mention that they have actually absorbed live work on a scale heretofore unheard of.

Not even so, their desire for the material has not been satisfied. The higher prices go apparently, the more formidable the demand grows. Consequently the $11 ton live hog being approached on the river, is not expected to furnish a barrier for very long.

Current live markets seem to be practically unaltered, with the supply of hogs still being ample. When short beefs arrive in larger numbers than expected prices reflect immediate bearishness, and any shortage has an equally bullish influence. As a result of a season of fat market has been predicted for the late season in all government reports, it is there a possibility of a temporary reversal will interrupt the ascending tendency of the fat cattle trade from here on out.

The corn market has been somewhat more worked up to a $10.00 level and a larger percentage of the offerings range higher up on the price list, as the market has been somewhat short while back. Also fewer of the trade kinds are to be found in the present delivery, a reasonable condition due to the advance of the corn feeding period.

Packers have moved in mysterious ways their wenders to perform in the lamb trade. One day lamb prices are 50 cents and even as high as $1 higher. Next day they are worth that much less. The affair is on a strictly catch-as-catch-can basis, with opposing factions alternating as to who does the catching.

They are attractive and will be used on occasions when the men wish to be identified as a group. A resolution was passed on inviting the G. A. R. and Spanish American war veterans to use the Legion hall at any time they wish for recreation. The Legion also invited these men to attend its meetings.

A report on the membership drive being conducted showed that E. E. Galley's group is leading. Curtis Foster, L. C. Lamberson and Harold Sears are other leaders. The contest closes Feb. 16 and the two winning groups will be entertained.

A social hour closed the meeting Tuesday and the men served luncheon.

Your Income Tax. Your income tax for the year 1924 is less, in proportion to your income than was the tax for 1923. A rate reduction, however, is not the only benefit afforded by the revenue act of 1924. Increase in the exemption for married persons, a 25 per cent reduction on "earned income," and other changes in favor of the taxpayer are of immediate interest to every taxpayer.

The revenue act of 1924 requires that returns be filed by every single person whose net income for 1924 was $1,000 or more; or whose gross income was $5,000 or more, and by every married couple whose aggregate net income was $2,500 or more, or whose aggregate gross income was $5,000 or more. Last year returns were required for married couples whose aggregate net income was $2,000 or more. Husband and wife, living together, may include the income of each in a single joint return, or each may file a separate return showing the income of each. Net income is gross income less certain specified reductions for business expenses, losses, bad debts, contributions, etc.

The period for filing returns is from January 1 to March 15, 1925. The return, accompanied by at least one-fourth of the amount of tax due, must be filed with the collector of internal revenue for the district in which the taxpayer has his legal residence or has his principal place of business.

Does Advertising Pay? Advertising has made the Victor's Dog famous. It has put Castoria down your throat, let's bristles in your gums, and then came along with a Rubber-set and took them out.

It has put Sizzodent, Pebbeco and Pepsodent on your teeth.

It has put a Gillette against your hair.

It has put Marine in your eyes, sold you Cuticura for pimples, Pears for the bath, and Ivory for the tub.

It has put Arrow collars around your neck and Ingersolls around your wrist.

It has jammed your feet in Hole-proof sox, put Paris garters on your legs and Tiffany rings on your fingers.

It has worn out your jaws on Wrigley's and posted you up on what to buy to cure corns, warts and bunions and ingrowing toe nails.

Go anywhere you want to, do anything you wish, and advertising has had a hand in it—absolutely. And then some people ask—"Does advertising pay?"—Kansas City Club News.

J. G. W. Lewis Writes Of Eastern Cities

Prof. J. G. W. Lewis who spent the holiday vacation in Washington, D. C., and Richmond, Va., writes of the two cities for "The Goldenrod" as follows:

"Richmond and Washington are only one hundred or one hundred twenty miles apart. Both are highly endowed with the richness of history and tradition. The former became the capital of the Confederate States of America during the civil war; the latter at the same time was struggling to maintain its title as the capitol of the United States. Both places were the objects of great hostility and the main objectives for opposing armies throughout the years 1861 to 1865. But Richmond was struggling against the very stars in their courses and finally went down to defeat.

"There is an element of pathos that one seems to see in present evidence of a large defeat—backward economic conditions, something of a look of disappointment upon the faces of distinguished looking characters and lack of reward for the former defenders of the lost cause. The people of the South go farther than we go in reverence of heroes. They seem to elevate even second and third rate leaders into demigods and idealize them in statue and portrait. Indeed, defeat seems to have cast a glamour over the vanquished and to call forth more reverence than victory could possibly have done. At best, however, their efforts to care for their living heroes seem inadequate when compared with the efforts of a single state in the North. The Confederate Soldier's Home in Richmond seems poor, for instance, in comparison with the Soldiers' Home in Nebraska. L. 1.

"On the other hand, Washington is the capital triumphant and magnificent. Her cause has been vindicated. The whole world has laid tribute at her feet. Certainly no ancient art could have approached in massiveness the monuments to our national capital.

"The mind can be completely overawed by not only the beauty but the stupor of the monuments here.

"But Washington will always be a capital city. Her interests will always be political rather than industrial. The two elements of industrialism, labor and capital, are needed in any plan for progress. The success of business is depending upon the functioning of these two elements.

There is in the offing signs of localized conflicts between workers and their employers. A case in point is the strike by the rubber trades in Chicago, which are preparing to ask higher wages with February 1 set as the time limit for the filling of demands. Carpenters, structural iron workers and various labor unions have notified contractors that this year's agreements must carry substantial increases in pay. Carpenters and iron workers in Chicago are now being paid $1.25 an hour. It is said that they will demand $1.60 when the new contracts are made in June. Building laborers are receiving 87 cents an hour at present. They will demand $1.

The figures now obtaining in the Chicago district are those contained in the Landis award. Carpenters and iron workers make $10 in a day of eight hours. Overtime, which is a frequent thing in the day's work, brings the daily wage up to $12 to $15. Building laborers make from $7 to $9 a day according to the amount of overtime they put in. Plasterers, lathers and bricklayers are receiving wages exceeding the figure of the carpenter's pay.

Hundreds of millions of dollars went into building construction in Chicago since the acceptance of the Landis award. Thousands of carpenters and other workers have been employed daily since that time. At present the 1925 building program for Chicago will reach an expenditure of $500,000,000. The outlook is exceedingly favorable for the building trades as far as steady employment at good pay is concerned. The work is there if they desire it. There is, however, a condition on which the 1925 program has been based. That is that the plans will be put through if the building trades are reasonable. Industrial leaders declare that unreasonable demands for higher wages actually will affect the building program, reducing it scores of millions of dollars.

This dangerous trend toward conflicts between capital and labor which might interfere with industrial progress this year is a matter of importance for President Green and other officials of the federation. No doubt there would be cause if unreasonable demand of work be stopped altogether.

"They that wait upon the Lord shall renew their strength; they shall mount up with wings as eagles; they shall run, and not be weary; and they shall walk, and not faint." The mounting up with wings as eagles represents not only occasional flights, but also the continuous flight of a more frequent experience. But walking and not fainting is the common round, the trivial task of every day.

"Forget your doubts, forget your fears;
Forget your sorrows and your tears;
Forget your gloom, forget your nips;
But don't forget to pay your dues."

That's good advice, all right, but we are sure our treasurer is glad he is not obliged to write poetry like that.

Thursday afternoon Ladies' Union meets with Mrs. C. E. Sprague. Thursday evening choir practice. Friction has not broken down; it is a splendid success. It is enforced quite as well as laws against the adulteration of foods and drugs. The percentage of motor drivers who break speed and other automobile laws is much larger than that of our citizens who break liquor laws. Iowa convicts 98 percent of their probation violators who are caught, and other genuinely American states equal or better than New York. In New York 80 percent, deaths from its cause by 25 percent, assaults by 60 percent, arrests for intoxication by more than 50 percent and infant mortality by 80 percent. Meanwhile there has been the greatest increase in savings deposits ever enjoyed by any people on a like period of time.—Expositor.

The most damaging gossip is the idler who does not want to be sure of his facts nor want all the facts through either of weakening or spoiling his story.

When one comes up to you knocking his feet together, he is either a little embarrassed or he is going to say something that no one else would shade more nutty or overbold than he is accustomed to utter.

Secretary Hughes is one of the ablest men in official Washington, and his proposed retirement from public life is a source of universal regret. It is hoped his success will show an equality high standard of statesmanship.

Cold weather, like intensely hot weather, is hard on the nerves. Often one has to exercise unusual effort to avoid fractiousness. Proper rest is needed, and one must be cheerful by anticipation of an early spring.

The January issue of the National Business shows by a map that Nebraska is one of the few states that take the lead in prosperity. A year ago this map gave the state a red color, indicating a less favorable color. It is encouraging to look at this map, even if one can't yet feel the certain impress of better times.

Ever since the report of the resignation of Secretary Hughes became current, an effort has been made by sensational correspondents to find a slip for assumption of strained relations between him and the president as a basis for the action. Nothing has been uncovered to show remotest suspicion in that direction, and the reason for the secretary's proposed resignation has been made to the satisfaction of those who have been baffled.

A bill has been introduced in the legislature to make automobile owners responsible for the conduct of their cars. It is proposed to require each owner to furnish a bond. The bill has been made to the care of the carelessness of another, and reduce the number of wrecks and fatalities. The owner of a car would be made responsible whether the driver was drunk or not. Restrictions to make travel on the highways safer are deemed timely.

Every newspaper in the state whose editor is old enough to remember, will this week call attention to the 12th anniversary of the death of the great braggard which swept Nebraska and which caught many pupils and teachers in their houses, under their roofs and in their homes. The editors will tell how the weather during the forenoon was as mild as a little lamb, how after dinner it was as hot as the noonday sun, west, the sky became overcast and swiftly moving snow filled the air. One could not see a foot ahead of him, and the storm was a fearful storm, and oldest inhabitants have been trying ever since to recall one that would equal it, but have failed.

CHAPEL SPEECHES. If faculty members of the State Teachers College have been sitting together on warming over speeches for chapel exercises, as suggested by the current Goldenrod, school paper, probably they thought they would be less well get busy and prepare some new ones.

But modern students are comparatively content. When they were in high school, we had to listen to speeches by business men, invited to talk because they had made a financial success. We had to listen to Napoleon of business who had amassed considerable money by reason of shrewd practices and manly habits, and whose success was the result of honesty and benevolence. His death was physical, not mental. While talking, he buttoned up his coat, and before he showed the floor speaker's name. As he was agitating the air and massing rules of grammar, we tried to figure out the distance between his waist and the floor, and he would occupy if he were spread out and rolled down thin.

By contrast, students today are lucky. If the Goldenrod editor were super-intellectual, perhaps all the time, he is demanding something that most of us can't understand and therefore scorn to hear. He would nourish our hungry souls. What satisfies one, bores another. As most of us are still finite beings, the popular demand for a more intelligent editor of an author is about the only way we can determine the present value of his contribution to society. A few more years of the Goldenrod editor, one, at present struggling, may enjoy mouthing and imperishable fame, whereas the literary effusions of another, now comparatively forgotten, may be forgotten. Such is life. Criticism by the editor of the Goldenrod will doubtless have the effect of stimulating chapel exercises and get it out of your blood—way on up to the problem, we would suggest that students be permitted to select their chapel speakers by secret ballot. They could choose one for a month or two ahead, and then, if they are bored, they could kick themselves.

BIG PAPER IN BIG STATE.

The Herald has received a copy of the New Year's edition of the Portland Oregonian, sent by Elmer Lundberg, former of Wayne. The Oregonian is a wonderful newspaper, easily the greatest newspaper, greatest single force for development in the Pacific northwest. Oregon is a state of diversified resources, and the Oregonian points them out in words and pictures in a most effective manner. Each county in the state leads the world in something, and the Oregonian heralds the fact with utmost care. Oregon has orchards and cattle and sheep, mines and forests, mountains and fertile plains, dashing streams and rivers and lakes, and the article of note, the suggestion of mining back over the past we remember that twenty-five years ago horses were being scared into violent antics by the people were shaking their heads—over a new-fangled harness carriage that was snoring and bumping over the highways much to the alarm and anger of the people. Today the automobile is a thing of great utility and influence, a builder of roads, a disseminator of knowledge, a social vehicle of great value and pleasure, and a business producer that has made this nation great in the genius of her engineers and power of her financiers. The next matter in the world today is an automobile maker. The biggest industry in the United States is the automotive industry.

The next matter in the world today is an automobile maker. The biggest industry in the United States is the automotive industry.

One now doubtless obsolete industry, not mentioned by the Oregonian, is said to have thrived in Lake County, Nebraska, and with the new settlers had trained the coyotes to come in at regular intervals to be scalped for the bounty. Then they were sent to the mountains to grow new scalps. It made a profitable business.

EXCERPTS LEAD TO ERROR.

The Herald's editorial criticism of Gretchen Leck, editorialist towards Nebraska, was based on an excerpt from her contribution to "The American Mercury." It seems that the complete article which we had not seen, conveyed a entirely different impression, as we have been advised since last week's publication, and that the author was prompted by esteem rather than by a desire for the publicity she thus impressed by the injustice that may be done by piecing together snatches from a story and leaving out important parts of the link.

In justice to Gretchen Leck, we reproduce the following letter of explanation from Miss Louise Payne, University of Nebraska:

Dear Mr. Hulse: I have seen an editorial in the Herald for January 8, entitled "Assembly Land and Nature," which subjects to severe criticism Gretchen Leck, once of the University of Nebraska, for disloyalty to her home state.

I daresay that the January Mercury is not to be had by you, unless you send for it; and hence, to me, the theme of her article is the loyalty of Nebraskans to Nebraska and their homesickness for it when absent from it, and since the article is the most loyal of Nebraskans here, I should like to quote a little from the beginning and the end of the article in order to state you its real character. You must have seen the few excerpts in the Omaha World-Herald and the misleading paragraph printed by the Herald. I had not read the article, or it is unable to read accurately.

Here is the opening: "Every so often there comes over the exiled Nebraskan, if he's honest enough to admit it, a stinging and smothering longing for the home of his birth. Show of the most loyal of Nebraskans here, I should like to quote a little from the beginning and the end of the article in order to state you its real character. You must have seen the few excerpts in the Omaha World-Herald and the misleading paragraph printed by the Herald. I had not read the article, or it is unable to read accurately.

6:01 for Red Cloud, Ogallala, or Ben nett.

Here is the end: "Nebraska is still a place to dream of on a lazy afternoon." Which explains, perhaps, why you can never get it out of your blood—way on up to the problem, we would suggest that students be permitted to select their chapel speakers by secret ballot. They could choose one for a month or two ahead, and then, if they are bored, they could kick themselves.

From Other Editors

A Silver Anniversary. York Republican: The silver anniversary of the automotive industry was celebrated in New York a few days ago. It seems almost incredible that it is only twenty-five years since the automobile began to be a common article of note, the suggestion of mining back over the past we remember that twenty-five years ago horses were being scared into violent antics by the people were shaking their heads—over a new-fangled harness carriage that was snoring and bumping over the highways much to the alarm and anger of the people. Albion News: The Methodists down at Columbus have just concluded a Bible week, during which they read the entire book in seventy-five hours without stopping. Different members were assigned to the task, reading in sections, and the service was for the Old Testament and seven for the New Testament. It is a safe guess that they wasted no time trying to get the correct pronunciation of the proper names.

Fairbury Journal: Cold weather, like most other things, is relative. What is cold weather to some people in some places is warm weather to others. During the December cold wave which most of this country experienced, some places were put out of business by temperatures which others welcomed as a warm wave. The highest state in Oklahoma when the thermometer reached zero all business activities stopped, while in Canada, when the thermometer was at zero, the business activities which had been stopped by temperatures around 40 below, were resumed.

Here at home, when the first October cold wave comes, it is a physical change—like the change, but when the same temperature arrives in January, after the December cold wave of below zero, the change is welcomed as a delightful spell of weather. We soon get used to cold weather.

These changes in the winter and "hang on." It doesn't take long for normal activities to be resumed without much change from warm weather activities. Part of this is a physical change—as the saying is, our blood changes and becomes accustomed to the cold, which must be true, whether it is in blood or our skin or our feelings or just the way we look at it. Anyway, those who shiver with a temperature of 10 above zero when they first arrive in the north with a few days down below zero and when 10 above again comes around, think nothing of it. Which is the same as humans are very adaptable and do a lot of kicking and growling which they might just as well dispense with because what is a change in the weather is not so much accustomed to it, merely the ordinary, commonplace existence of which we do not complain.

Hastings College.

No effort is being spared to bring the Hastings College endowment campaign to a successful close. At a recent meeting of the workers in the drive at Hastings, it was found that by Feb. 1st, $100,000 had been secured in pledges. About seventy-five per cent of this amount has been raised, and if all pledges raise their pledges, the total amount will easily be secured. This endowment will mean a new day for our college at Hastings. It will mean a higher education for many a poor boy and girl. Pledges cover a five year period, making it possible for everyone to help.

Governor McMullen Names Officials

Lincoln, Neb., Jan. 8.—The coming governor, Adam McMullen, at noon today ended the long period of suspense over his appointments for state offices and announced the following official list:

- Secretary of finance—Dwight S. Dalbey, Beatrice; Secretary of public works—Roy Cochran, North Platte, reappointed; Secretary of agriculture—H. J. McLaughlin, Grand Island; Director of welfare—Frank Lincoln, Lincoln; Secretary of labor—Frank A. Kennedy, Omaha (secretary of labor under McKelvie); Secretary of trade and commerce—Kirk Griggs, Hastings; Chief law enforcement officer—W. G. Condit, Fremont; Game warden—C. Jenkins, Neigh; Chief of Bureau of Securities—Jen B. Craig, Lincoln; State Commissioner—L. P. Williams, Aurora; Fire warden—John C. Trouton, Omaha; Governor's private secretary—David F. Meeker, Imperial.

All the appointees are Republicans with the exception of Cochran, Democrat. "I have tried sincerely to pick men whom I thought would fill the places with ability, men who have had experience in the work they are called upon to perform. I had many able men to select from. Personalities were eliminated and selections were made on merit. Some were selected who had not applicants, and I know personally some have agreed to take the work at a financial sacrifice, saying they will feel repaid if they can be of service to the state.

"I am sorry that I did not have enough offices to go around. I hope my friends will bear with me as I have done my best."

"Provided the appropriations are made by the legislature, McMullen said the appointees will receive the salaries specified by law.

"The law fixes the salaries of secretaries of code departments at $5,000 a year, depending upon appropriations, however."

The governor fixes salaries of those below secretary and depends on the legislature for appropriations for these.

McMullen stated he expected his appointees to assume their duties immediately, or as soon as they can file bonds and take the necessary oath.

Dalby, relieving George Hall, Franklin, as secretary of finance, is rated as a multi-millionaire at Beatrice.

Griggs, succeeding K. C. Knudson as secretary of the department of trade and commerce, is a prominent banker at Hastings and a farmer. He is chairman of the newly created bank guaranty commission.

McLaughlin, following Grant Shuman as secretary of agriculture, is a farmer at Donipau, and a former member of the legislature.

Cochran of North Platte, reappointed secretary of the department of public works, was assistant state engineer under the McKelvie administration. His reappointment was asked by many commercial clubs throughout the state.

Kennedy, Omaha, succeeds L. B. Frye, Lincoln, as secretary of labor. He was secretary of labor under McKelvie.

Day dreaming is great stuff if you don't waken.

By this time most Christmas presents have been exchanged.

Too many people follow their noses into other people's business.

It's too easy to say just what you mean, but not mean what you say.

"I will" means something only when you can say "I did" later on.

When you get on the road to success be sure not to shift into reverse.

The NERVOUS WRECK

by E. J. Rath

Begin Here Today.
The "Nervous Wreck" and an eccentric young easterner drives Sally Morgan, daughter of a Montana ranch owner, over a rough, uncertain trail from the ranch to the railroad station. They run out of gasoline and the occupants of a passing car refuse to lend them any. The Wreck takes five gallons at the point of a gun and drives on.
Later they are held captive at a ranch along the way because the foreman, Charlie McBride, fears a "Nervous Wreck" and Sally fills that need. They discover that the owner of the ranch is the owner of the car which they held up. McBride announces that the owner is Mr. Underwood of New York, and that he and his boy and girl expect to stay at the ranch for several weeks.

Now Go On With the Story.
"His been" from New York is why I was so particular about the cooking," I had thinks here last year and they did real well. So I went and got another pair this summer, but, as I told you, the boys got kind of juvenile with 'em and they fit it out. It seems that a Chin' expects you to take him serious. It beats hell."
"The boss must have money," suggested Sally.
"Yes ma'am; he's lousy with it. He raises fancy cattle, only that ain't the way he made his money. He took it from somebody in Wall Street. But there ain't any finer cattle in Montana. They don't know how to make his money. They don't care. I can't say that I care anything myself. Just liberal in my views. If I were you, ma'am, I'd sort of give 'em plenty to eat, but I'd make it look as much like New York as I could."
"Oh, I'll give them lots," said Sally. "Don't you worry, ed."
It slipped half way from her lips "old timer." It was awfully hard to pick tenderfoot who Charley was around. But Charley gave no sign that he noticed anything.
"That's right, ma'am; feed 'em liberal and fancy. I don't care for things at once, but without the least trace of confusion."
"Poke that fire up, Henry, put a bit of wood on it and get it going. I want a hot oven. There's a pile of wood outside the door. Fill the kettle over at the sink pump and put it on. I've got fifty things to do and you've got to help with some of them. Better put your apron on, too; you'll get all mussed up if you don't."
The Wreck went about his task with a scowl.
"The big living hog," he said, "I never touched their watches and valuables."
"They're just excited," explained Sally, as she hunted for a rolling pin.

She Came Back Carrying a White Jacket
A long way from the Bar-M. We had an afternoon like that. There were footsteps on the staircase that came down into the living rooms, and Sally, with a final look at the table, fled back into the kitchen.
"They're coming down," she informed the Wreck. "We've got to have a hot oven, Charley, don't take long. You keep an eye on that coffee, and don't let it boil. Stop it just when it starts. I haven't time to cook any more; besides, I don't know where they keep it. They're going to have an omelette."
It was a very large omelette that she made, and thick as a shanty-sold in yellows and golden browns. The Wreck eyed it with jealous disapproval, but she did not give him time to express an opinion. She had him opening a can of soup and pouring it into a saucerpan for heating. There was time for that much anyway.

"I'll cook them a regular meal next time," she promised. "But this will have to do for short notice."
"The enthusiasm for the odious task depressed him."
"Don't work your head off," he advised. "You'll get no thanks for it."
"You'll get no thanks for it," said Sally, cheerfully. "For one thing, I've got to wait on the table."
The Wreck nearly upset the coffee pot in his eagerness to get on.
"You will not!" he exclaimed. "Of course I will."
"I'll not have you waiting on hogs, Sally Morgan. They can wait on themselves."
"Don't be ridiculous. They don't eat in the kitchen. Somebody's got to carry 'em to them."
"All right, then. I'll carry it to 'em."
She started, then shook her head dazedly.
"You can't. You got to dodge them as long as you can. There'll be a blow-up, as sure as a gun, the minute they see you."

"Well, I'm going to wait on them if anybody does," he said, doggedly. "What's the use of dodging around? We may just as well find out now as any other time."
"See here, Henry Williams! If you—"
She stopped, studied his face with a new interest. "Although there's that much gained. Don't fill the kettle too full; it'll boil over."
"I'm not. I'll be hanged if I'd breathe my neck cooking for them."
"That's nothing. I've cooked for lots of people. Besides, we're staying for time. We're going to give them the best meal we know how."
"Chinamen's work!"
"It would be a good thing for us if we were Chinamen," said Sally, blandly. "Then we'd have a complete alibi."
He rumbled his way through the chores, but she could not complain that he was inefficient. Although he seemed constantly at the point of disobedience, the Wreck followed his orders. He even kept a faithful eye on the stove, while she went into the dining-room to set the table. She took a swift peep into the living room while engaged in this task, but the Underwood family was evidently up stairs.

"Underwood" she mused. "Can't say that I remember hearing the name around here. Fancy cattle she! I've heard of somebody around here who raised prize Herefords. I'll bet it's the same one. But if it is, we're up stairs."
"You did then. But you mustn't just keep remembering that we're still hiding out. I think they're at the table now. You can take in the soup, and don't forget to serve things from the left."
He picked up a tray and began navigating cautiously in the direction of the dining room. Sally watched him anxiously. It was an awful risk, she thought, but if he passed the test she would feel a lot safer.

CHAPTER IX
The Four-in-One Band.
There were two persons in the dining room when the Wreck entered with the tray. He could make them out with reasonable clearness as he drew nearer to them. One was the girl, Underwood's daughter. If you like colorful blonds, she was just the right sort; slim, with a delicate prettiness that belonged to her. Opposite her sat a youth who appeared to be a year or so older. He was well set up and rather good looking, even if there was a surly set to his features. He was drawing things on the table-cloth with the time of a fork.

In the living room there was a table, close to the dining room door, and on the table was a telephone. Somebody with a heavy voice was ringing it. The Wreck went to the phone instantly. It belonged to the large man who would not share his gasoline. The girl and the youth were listening to her, but putting down his tray, listened also, pretending to be busy by wiping the soup plates with a napkin.
"Well, you've got a hot line," said the heavy voice, with a note of irascible authority. "I don't care if you have to try every place in the country. He ought to leave word where he goes. This is Underwood talking. What? Yes, certainly. Oh, you understand now, do you? Well, you get him. Leave word where he goes. Try that he's to call me. He knows who it is. And you tell him it's important, see? Tell him it's the most important job he ever had. Get busy. Get busy."
There was the snap of a receiver roughly replaced and the creaking of a chair.

"Haven't they located him yet, father?" called the girl.
"No; and I don't believe they're half trying," Underwood was entering the dining room. "First they thought he was over at Fisher. Now they think he's gone back to the country seat. I don't care where he is. I want him."
The owner of the ranch seated himself at the end of the table. The Wreck observed that he lowered himself into his chair with a slight stiffness of movement. It pleased him to think that he was back on the case. The mudguard of the flier showed a tall-tale warp, where it had nudged him, violently. There was no mistaking Underwood, even without the aid of spectacles. The Wreck had seen him in the white glare of road lights, toiling desperately at a crank, one day being suddenly arrested by one of the boys, and marked in his memory.
(To Be Continued.)

Mr. Anderson of Wausau, who was working at the Theo. Fredrick farm near Hamilton, was overcome by illness last week when he was working with an electric light plant at the farm. Son of Mr. Fredrick found Mr. Anderson unconscious at the plant.

A TALK WITH A WAYNE MAN. Mr. J. P. Gaertner tells his experience.

There is nothing like a talk with one of our own citizens for giving hope and encouragement to the anxious sufferer from the dread kidney disease. Mr. Gaertner gives here an interview with a "Wayne man."

"A cold settled in the small of my back and weakened my kidneys," says Mr. Gaertner. "My kidneys acted too frequently and my back was sore just over my kidneys. After reading the statements of others, who had been helped by Doan's Pills, I decided to try them. When I used Doan's a short time, I could see a wonderful change for the better. My kidneys became normal and my back became strong. I believe Doan's Pills are just the remedy to keep the kidneys strong and active for anyone who is getting along in years as I am."

Price 60c at all dealers. Don't simply ask for a kidney remedy—get Doan's Pills—the same that Mr. Gaertner had. Foster-Milburn Co., Mrs. Buffalo, N. Y.
