Greater Wayne Club Enters Third Year

The Greater Wayne club begins its third year of active work next Monday evening. The newly-elected officers will have charge and the work of several committees will be outlined.
The present plans of the club for the coming year are, in part, complete details of the detail that will give Wayne city mail delivery, boosting and securing better highways through Wayne, and putting Wayne "on the map." The members' committee will complete the drive for renewal of old memberships and add many new members to the list of Wayne boosters. During the past year there were one hundred seventeen members, and it is hoped to make the drive net almost two hundred for the coming year.
The records of the club show a considerable growth and expansion in objectives since the initial meeting on November 14, 1922, of eleven men whose idea was to perfect a loan and labor plan to help young men while here in school. Today, also, there are committees to be organized to the publicity of the town, the housing of meetings held in the city, the loan and labor help for students, and the regular problems that come before the business men of the city. This last named division under the competent leadership of J. C. Nuss for the past year, has not only completed the drive for the Wayne County Fair Association, and has assisted greatly in making Wayne the market place of this part of the state. Two new committees are to function this year. One committee attends to the matter of better roads, and the other takes up the need of better tourist accommodations at this place, the crossing of the Grainland and the Sunshine highways.
The club points with pride to several achievements: Securing the Sunshine Highway through Wayne, which promises to become one of the great international roads of the country; extensive marking of the roads leading to Wayne with a beautiful six colored view of the State Teachers College; taking care of the Northeast Nebraska Basketball tournament each year and furnishing the handsome trophies; going to the state fairs and classes; helping with their influence and finances every move for the betterment of the city's future. All these things speak for the fitness of fort that this group of men put forth.

At the organization of the club it was recognized that no one man, a paid secretary, could do the work that naturally comes to the attention of such a civic group. With this in mind the membership was divided into several committees, each having just one job to do. When the work of all the groups was added, each monthly meeting showed progress. Membership dues were the only means of income provided, so it has been necessary in accomplishing the large undertakings, to subsidize the amounts required, as in the case of placing the road signs and again when carrying out the plans for a community Christmas convention. The splendid co-operation in these matters is to be commended.
During the past two years the following officers have been in charge of the work: E. J. Hunter, president; J. J. Ahern, vice president; D. E. Brainard, secretary; J. H. Kemp, treasurer. These men were ably assisted by: O. R. Bowen, loan; S. N. Cross, secretary; J. C. Nuss, commercial; Frank Morgan, labor; Fred Blair, conventions; E. O. Gardner, publicity; A. R. Davis, conventions; J. H. Kemp, loan; V. A. Senter, membership and finance.
The officers elected for the coming year are: E. S. Edholm, president; Art Ahern, vice president; Leslie Rundell, secretary; Leroy Ehlers, treasurer. The members of the special committees will be built up by volunteers around the following: chairman: J. R. Rundell, commercial; Frank Morgan, labor; Art Ahern, publicity; P. M. Theobald, housing; A. R. Davis, conventions; J. H. Kemp, loan; V. A. Senter, membership and finance.
The meeting at the city hall next Monday evening at seven-thirty should bring together at least two hundred enthusiastic boosters for Wayne. "Let us get behind our one big organization."

JUSSERAND, AFTER LIFE OF SERVICE, RETIRES TO AN UNFRIENDLY FRANCE

After the longest career, and one of the most successful, of any diplomat who ever held in Washington, Ambassador Jules Jusserand, of France is retiring under something of a cloud.
Americans indeed, are as much attached to him as ever. He always has been extremely popular in official and unofficial circles alike. Coming to the United States in middle life, he has grown old here. Not many of the country's own public men have so many warm friends.
It is in France that a certain amount of dislike is found with him. The criticism, in brief, is that his 21 years residence among Americans has made him more American than French.
LAST TOUCH
That he understands America as probably no other living Frenchman does is conceded readily, but the point is made that he has lost touch with official and popular sentiment in his native land.
In fact, the complaint is that when Franco-American differences of opinion arise, he generally is on America's side.
This adverse criticism is not bitter. It is perfectly recognized that his services here, especially during the war, have been inestimably valuable to France. His family, a noble and his complete familiarity with America are given full credit for them.
But his conversations with Washington heads concerning France's war independence to the United States, and his representations on the same subject to the Quai d'Orsay have not given, to the latter, equal satisfaction.

JULES JUSSERAND

be paid for this, and that that's what the cancellation of America's claims against France would amount to.
FRANCE SHOULD PAY
Ambassador Jusserand has taken the American position that while France, hard hit by the war, was entitled to as easy terms as possible and plenty of time, she ought to pay as soon as she could, and ought to give a promise to do so immediately.
The conduct of negotiations throughout the diplomatic career of Jusserand has been marked by sentiments like this in Washington. He has embarrassed the French government not a little.
M. Jusserand is not being recalled.
AN OLD MAN
He is an old man, born at Lyons, France, just 70 years ago. Retirement at his age is natural. Nevertheless, it is generally believed here that he probably would have remained a few more years if his position had not become rather difficult. It is a fairly common opinion in Washington that the French government is glad to see him quit. Washington is correspondingly sorry.
It is quite among the possibilities that M. Jusserand, back in France, will be a very unhappy man.
Not many Americans know American public life as he knows it. He has had on-occasion terms with five presidents—Roosevelt, Taft, Wilson, Harding and Coolidge. He and seven secretaries of state—Hay, Root, Bacon, Knox, Bryan, Lansing and Hughes—have been close friends. For many years dean of the Washington diplomatic corps, greatly liked and in full accord with the people about him, his position here has been a pleasant one.

Prof. Lewis Speaks at Kiwanis Luncheon

Professor J. G. W. Lewis spoke to members of the Kiwanis club at their monthly luncheon, Monday.

The central theme of Professor Lewis' talk was that both college professors and business men are usually the victims of the narrowing influences of specialization and intellectual inbreeding.

This situation in each case, said he, is caused by the preoccupation of the speaker with the fact that in recent years there has been a remarkable development in the methods of study and investigation of political, social and economic problems.

Mr. Lewis closed with a plea that business men and others learn to look more to the experts in these lines for guidance, and encourage teachers that they would lose some of their distrust for professors in general, if they could but realize the highly scientific, painstaking work that is now being done by the leaders in the social sciences.

GORGAS INSTITUTE TO SPEND FORTUNE IN ATTEMPT TO PROLONG LIFE SPAN

America's sick list costs the country an estimated $3,000,000,000 annually. Something like 3,000,000 workers fall to show up at the job daily because of illness.

Thousands die before their time. The waste in human lives, cut off prematurely, is a colossal figure.

DEDICATION TO GORGAS. This organization has been created as a living monument to the memory of Gen. William Crawford Gorgas, the yankee physician who made possible the building of the Panama Canal by eradicating the taint of the dread yellow-fever-carrying mosquito.

Gorgas, by his accomplishment, secured an outstanding triumph for American ingenuity. Before he took command of Canal Zone operations in France had planned to bring one-third of its canal workers to this vicinity.

This vicious circle of unremitting death meant a complete change in personnel every three years and finally caused France to throw up her hands in despair.

FRANKLYN MARTIN the most gigantic health crusade ever witnessed in this country.

spent acquainting the public with the science of modern geriatrics and the message will be carried in the daily press, on the movie screen and delivered from the lecture platform.

The remaining $2,000,000 is intended for the endowment and maintenance of a huge laboratory in Panama for the study and research of tropical diseases.

PERIODIC EXAMINATION. The layman will be urged to make periodic visits to his doctor for a complete examination and treatment if necessary.

Physicians all over the country are being urged to give up their medical hobbies and public men, President Coolidge heads the Gorgas Institute as its honorary president.

Cattle Feeding in State Falls Short

Lincoln, Feb. 4.—Cattle feeding operations in Nebraska were 18 per cent below last winter, according to A. E. Anderson, who today issued his annual report on the subject.

"Corn belt states eighty-two per cent of last year and western mountain and Pacific, ninety per cent of the number of cattle on feed a year ago," he stated.

"Shipments of feeder cattle into Nebraska feeding sections last fall were 8 per cent below those of the preceding fall. However, a smaller per cent of the feeder cattle shipped into feeding sections were put on grain feed this winter.

"Corn belt states had 82 per cent as many calves as last year, especially in Iowa and Nebraska which ordinarily feed about one-fifth each of the total cattle fed, the estimated number of calves as a per cent of the numbers a year ago were 74 and 82 respectively.

"Cattle marketings and slaughter in December were the largest for this month since 1910. The increased shipments were from the states west of the Mississippi river, especially from Iowa and Nebraska."

PEAS TO ROCKEFELLER FOR AID SWAMPING LITTLE POSTOFFICE

MAIL, from all over the world is literally covering up Mrs. Maecon Thornton, postmistress at Ormond, Pa.

So many of these are received by the aged philanthropist that if he should make a favorable response to all the pleas the Rockefeller fortune would be depleted in just six months.

John D. Rockefeller now are of the world type.

John D. Rockefeller spends his winters at the little village of Ormond, Pa. The mail is for John D.

And the largest part of the letters coming to the Ormond postoffice for John D. Rockefeller now are of the world type.

Close friends of Rockefeller say that 70 per cent of these letters are pleas which he never opens.

Rockefeller is a "touchy" on sight. This is the tenth winter Rockefeller has spent in the little village of Ormond, Pa. where the Rockefeller folk have grown to love and respect their winter-time neighbor.

He seldom fails to attend services at the little Union church. He attends musicals and other affairs at the hotel. Many of these he has quickly become "one of the party."

Scores of small boys have proudly displayed shiny new dime stamps, gifts from Rockefeller.

Laura Lyons Writes
About California

Long Beach, Calif., Jan. 29, 1925.

Wayne Herald: Tuesday some friends of ours from Omaha, Neb., came for us at 10:20 and took us for a hundred-mile drive sight-seeing. We went every bit of the way, except a few feet, on pavement, so you can imagine how enjoyable it was, especially for the driver. We went via Wilmington, Redondo, Hermosa, Manhattan beaches and through El Segundo, a town noted for oil production and refineries. Next, entered Venice (which by the way has canals instead of streets—that is, imitations of them) where the houses jut right up to the main street—called speedway, where you couldn't stop if you wanted to for the street is only the width of two cars—plus a few feet and whenever one comes to the intersections of the main thoroughfares it says "Stop" in big letters. If you don't stop, a cop gets you.

Cannot tell when you leave this town and enter Ocean park, then Santa Monica. We kept below the palisades along the beach, so only got a glimpse of the real town. It is surely a lovely view of the ocean on the left and foothills on the right until we came to the entrance to the canyon (Topanga) which came to our attention a few winters ago when it was claimed Harry Nor (a senator's son) murdered a lady in the canyon. We ate our picnic dinner on the sand and then drove for ten miles gradually up grade on the winding road where so many beautiful sights were noticeable to the summit where one could get out and go into a lookout and view the wonderful vista of San Fernando Valley with its mountains in the distance and towns and subdivisions nestling among the orange groves.

We did not go in to look through that grand orange grove, but enjoyed the scenery while and started down on the other side. It is only two miles to the valley so you see it was quite a drop: drove along the Ventura Boulevard to "Laurel" canyon and it is only a short drive through there to enter Hollywood, then through Los Angeles and home.

Just now Riverside is having quite an advertisement and doubtless you will see some of the scenes in the movies there. For six weeks they will have Spanish costumed girls give to every passenger on the Los Angeles limited treats of oranges, but Saturday the girls in movie costumes were there and placed a large screen or curtain with oranges, etc., painted on one side and the Los Angeles limited engine burst through from the land of "snow" to the land of sunshine, roses and oranges.

Yesterday afternoon I went down town on grand orange telegraph, but people were lined up on Pine avenue, the main street. I wanted to see the excitement and there soon appeared a crowd of people. The girls were there and placed a large screen or curtain with oranges, etc., painted on one side and the Los Angeles limited engine burst through from the land of "snow" to the land of sunshine, roses and oranges.

John Massfeld has said:
"But trained men's minds are spread so thin,
They let all sorts of darkness in;
Whatever truth they find, they doubt it;
They love no light, but talk about it."
Is this true? We will discuss the question Sunday morning. The evening sermon will be the second in the series of prayer.
"But trained men's minds are spread There will be no mid-week prayer service until further notice.
Have you your tickets for the "Father and Son" banquet for Friday night? Plans are coming along fine for it.
The women are preparing to a "Colonial Tea" by the Queen Esther circle, at the church next Saturday afternoon from 2 to 5 o'clock.
Miss Clara DeWitt fell, compelled to resign her office as first vice president of the Epworth League. Miss Anna Johnson was elected to fill the vacancy.
"You will not feel like a stranger in church if you attend often enough so that the church is not a stranger to you." That good motto contains wisdom well worth putting into practice. Why not try it next Sunday if you are not a regular church goer?

Former Wayne Man Wins Radio Prize

W. D. Redmond, former registrar at the Wayne State Normal, won a prize recently, according to the following paragraph from the "Omaha Chief": "Several weeks ago the Omaha Grain Exchange offered a number of cash prizes for the best report on the radio reception of Station WAAW in central and western Nebraska. The purpose was to ascertain how satisfactorily market reports broadcast by radio stations were being received, with a view to better the service. The first prize was awarded to W. D. Redmond of Mason City, who received a draft for ten dollars from the committee selected to pass on the manuscripts. Mr. Redmond's letter included a recital of his experience of two weeks receiving sets in Mason City and vicinity, none of which have been getting WAAW satisfactorily since the government compelled it to broadcast on a low wave length, thus materially lessening the effectiveness of its service."

From Other Editors

York Republican: A bill to take the present Nebraska marriage law off the statute books has been reported favorably out of the county committee. We hope the York county members will go along in their assent to this measure. The cry that revenues are going to be sacrificed and justices that should be kept at home, is not a sufficient argument for taking the present law from the books. The fact is Nebraska is in a good strategic shade of the surrounding states in the matter of enacting a good marriage law. In the time, if a few states still to be gained, the marriage laws will be reformed. This is the thing to be desired and the thing that will ultimately come to pass. We do not argue that the Nebraska law is perfect but we are strong for holding to what is good in it, even in the face of the cry against department for county judges and magistrates and ministers, until the other states step up to the standard. Then something definite and definite will be gained for lasting good.

Genava Signal: The Shickley Herald has suspended publication again. Quite a long while ago, probably soon after it was started, some person who happened at the moment to be publishing the Shickley Herald borrowed money from the Shickley bank, the only one there at the time. The debt grew as fast as the banker would permit. Eventually, Skipper became the banker. In time Mr. Skipper took over the plant and used the paper for his own amusement, paying the weekly or monthly deficit out of his own pocket or out of the bank income.

At that time two Fillmore county newspapers were owned by bankers the Shickley Herald and the Exeter News. That has been the very common history of the very small newspapers. Not one is able to keep out from under crushing debt. At that particular time any Nebraska newspaper could get railroad transportation. Perhaps that was one reason why bankers were willing to own and direct the activities of so many little papers. Fortunately for the public the Nebraska law prevents the issuance of railroad transportation, either as a gift or on a trade basis, to any newspaper publisher. That doubtful honor is reserved for the preachers.

The better days have put deserving newspapers on a cash basis and that has meant the ending of many of the very small and useless papers. Newspaper publishers pay their railroad fares now exactly as does any farmer, businessman or laborer. It is a happy arrangement. The bankers have largely quit loaning money to impetuous persons who claim to be newspaper publishers but who are unable to finance a little newspaper for a few months is not likely to prove a useful citizen and it is certainly not good banking to accept a mortgage on a pile of junk as an inducement to increase the population of the town by one, or even by a whole family.

Albion News: The News publishes this week a communication which in a way criticizes the commissioners or highway commissioners for failure to open up the rural route roads following the snow storms. The law very clearly sets forth that the highway commissioner must open up any rural route road in case complaint is filed by the carrier or patron of the route. The law in a sense is mandatory and yet it attaches no penalty for failure to carry out the provision. A matter of fact the whole matter seems to hinge on a question of funds. The law says that the roads shall be opened at the expense of the district or township road fund, but it does not specify what shall be done in case there are no funds available. Fur-

Anna Pavlova.

The coming engagement of the famous Anna Pavlova and her Russian Ballet at the Sioux City Auditorium Monday evening February 9 will be one of the most brilliant social and musical events of the season.

Pavlova enjoys the distinction of being acknowledged the world's premier danseuse and is offering for her farewell engagement in this country an entirely different program than that in which she appeared in seasons past.

The entire organization numbering over 100 people will be brought to George City, direct from Chicago, where they are now appearing.

Some idea of the size of the company may be gained from the fact that a special train of 5 cars will be required to bring the company and equipment.

The scenic and electrical effects surpass all previous efforts while the costuming of the Ballet constitutes a veritable style revue.

The NERVOUS WRECK

by E. J. Rath
©1924 - by NEA Service Inc.

Begin Here Today. The "Nervous Wreck," an eccentric young ex-student, is driving Sally Morgan from her father's ranch to the railroad station when they run out of gasoline. The occupants of a passing car refuse to lend them any, and the Wreck takes five gallons at the point of a gun.

Later they are held captive at a ranch along the way because Charlie McGee, the foreman, wants Sally for a cook. They discover that Mr. Underwood, the wealthy New York owner of the ranch, was in the car which they held up, and that he and his boy and girl are to stay at the ranch for several weeks. At the risk of being recognized, the Wreck waits on the party in the dining room and hears them notify Sheriff Bob Wells, who is Sally's fiance, of the robbery.

Now Go On with the Story. "Don't let it worry you," said the Wreck. "It doesn't worry me; I'm perfect for calm," retorted Sally. "You're nervous, anyhow." "I'm not nervous."

"I'm an expert on nerves," he said. "You can't fool me. I've spent my money on specialists and I know. Right now you're more nervous than I am—and I'm a wreck!" There was a good deal of that kind of conversation all afternoon. The Wreck had an idea that if he could get her really angry she might forget about the sheriff for a while. But when she got angry, she was when she thought about Bob Wells, and then she was just as likely to be laughing again the next minute. As for getting angry at the Wreck, she refused. It was a form of comfort that she denied her, for some unaccountable reason.

"Bob Wells ought to have more sense than to let anybody fill him up with a fool story about four highwaymen," she said, as she sat down to peel potatoes for supper. "Why, then, isn't any such thing as even one road sign nowadays?"

"We even have them in Pittsburg, Missouri." "I'm tired of hearing about Pittsburg. You'd think the sun rose and set in Pittsburg."

"Not if you lived there," said the Wreck. "Well, don't be holding it up as a model, anyhow. It sounds provincial."

"He refused to be irritated, which did not help Sally at all. "But you'll see the sun rise and set there before I get through with it," he remarked, with a confident jerk of his head.

"Now what do you mean by that?" He explained, with a sudden enthusiasm that surprised her, that as soon as she had a practical business idea he was going to take the smoke out of Pittsburg and take a lot of money away from the corporations that made the smoke. It was the first time Sally ever heard him talk much about himself, except the nervous part. They knew he was a chemist, and that was about all. Dad Morgan; not being quite so keen in chemistry regarding it as something that existed only in text-books, had never pressed inquiries. He assumed that the Wreck was some kind of a professor and let it go at that.

But it seemed that the Wreck was a chemist who did things in steel pipes on about $100 a day, was at a good deal of smoke itself. He was going to make Pittsburg as smokeless as though it were run by electricity. It was only a question of time and patience and a little more research, he said. He explained the whole thing to Sally, with a lot of words that she did not understand and while he was talking about Pittsburg and what he was going to do to it, she also learned that he was born in Yonkers, New York, had three sisters, was a graduate of a college, had been to Europe twice, had lived in Australia, could play golf, hated the movies and was 32 years old.

"Hi," said Sally, who actually forgot about Bob Wells for a few minutes. "I thought you were older than that."

"That's because I'm all shut to pieces," he said, gloomily. "What rank nonsense?" "What rank nonsense?"

"Boah. You only think you're sick. Whatever made you nervous, anyhow?" "Women."

"Women?" she echoed. "Henry, are you joshing me?" "It's a fact," said the Wreck. "I can't stand women. There's a pair of them in the laboratory. And three of them in the office. And seven in the boarding house. And thousands in the streets to work, and coming home, and butting into you, no matter where you go. I haven't got anything against 'em, but I just can't stand 'em."

Sally continued to stare. "Did you ever take one of them to a movie?" she asked, curiously. "Once. But she got sore at it and cried."

"Did you ever learn to dance?" "No." "Did you ever sit on a front porch and talk to one of them?" "Not unless they nailed me."

"And you think you're a woman hater?" He looked at her in surprise. "I didn't say I hated them. I don't. I just can't stand them. They make me nervous. They act so—"

He stepped and started to discover that she was a woman. "—excuse me." "Certainly I'll excuse you," said Sally, "because you're a big dunc. Put on an apron and help me with these potatoes."

He was obeying her when Charley McGee came into the kitchen, burdened with two medium-sized grips and a ridiculous, little bag that belonged to the Wreck.

"Seems as you've got convictions against rascal's baggage," he said, "I fetched it up myself. Now, about accommodations." He scratched his ear. "When an honest Chink here, we sleep 'em off in a corner of the bunk house. But your wife ain't a Chink. We'd have plenty of room in the house, only the boss ain't here. There's one room left up the stairs, but she's awful small and I don't figure that she'll do for two people. Looks like like Williams here—what's your first name, anyhow?"

"Henry" supplied Sally. "Well, it looks to me like Henry'd have to take the Chink corner of the bunk house. How about it, Henry?"

The Wreck said it would suit him exactly. "The boys ain't like to bother you any, seen as you're white," added Charley.

"They won't bother me," said the Wreck, with a significant nod. Sally was not so confident; she knew how "the boys" sometimes behaved when they had a dude on their hands. But she hoped that Charley was right, because the Wreck was not a patient young man and there was no telling what might happen if they met and beat her up.

Four of the boys came in at supper time; there were three more who were out having a look at the fences and Charley said they might not be back for a couple of days. The quartet took one look into the kitchen and then made a quick start for the bunk house, where there was more spruce than there was in the space of half an hour than Underwood's ranch had known since Charley could remember. Then they drifted into the kitchen and hung around.

Sally was always good to look at, even when she wore a big apron. If she was not downright pretty, she did not miss the mark by any noticeable distance. There was a smooth fluff in her brown hair that even Harriet Underwood might have envied. There was a steady, friendly look in her brown eyes, which were as fine and long-lashed as any pair that might have been found in the face of a beauty queen.

The boys at Underwood's ranch even fell to cleaning their finger nails as they watched her. Something without even so much as suggesting it by word or look, Sally had a way of creating in others—men, usually—an impulse to be neat. She did not mind having the boys sitting around her, but she hated to see them do not belong there until they were told to come and get supper. There was, however, one feature that bothered her. She had chosen to be from the east, like the Wreck, and it was not easy to play the part. There were lots of things that a tenderfoot was not supposed to know, or say, and it kept her constantly on guard to remember the fact. She found it safer to confine herself to "Yes," "No," and "Really?"—for as it was possible. The boys laid it to shyness, although that was not one of her best-features.

Just as she feared, they found the Wreck amusing. A good deal of the conversation centered around his spectacles, which he wore, except for excursions into the dining room. But some rare policy of restraint seemed to have settled upon him; he calmly ignored most of what they said, and when he did answer it was with an apparent good nature that surprised Sally. She knew, however, that he was not hearing it as easily as he seemed to be; he was simply holding himself in. Evidently she had made him understand the need for caution, and for that she was thankful.

CHAPTER XI. —And Rides. Sally had a very little speech with the Wreck next morning, and such words as they exchanged dealt with routine trivialities. He was not in conversational mood, finishing his breakfast in almost complete silence, but with excellent appetite.

The Wreck disappeared after the morning dish-washing. He hated to wash dishes; his very soul rose in rebellion. The only reason he endured it was because Sally would have to wash them herself if he did not. Women were always imposing obligations on people even without making any demands, he reflected irritably. You had to do things for them, or you felt mean inside. The lesser evil was to do things.

Must Have Highest Quality—Reliability and Traction With Economy—so WE USE Firestone

McDavid Bros., of Excelsior Springs, Mo., proved the superiority of the Gum-Dipped Pneumatic on their bikes.

"Firestone Gum-Dipped Pneumatic has tires give us more dependable service, greater traction on slippery roads, longer mileage and lower per-mile costs than any other tire. Our judgment in selecting Firestones is amply justified by the careful cost records we have kept of our own."—McDavid Bros.

"We must have the highest quality in the tires we use—that's why we expect to keep on using the Gum-Dipped Pneumatic. Let us show you how the special Firestone Gum-Dipping process makes possible the most satisfactory pneumatic available in the truck and bus field."
