What Could Be Done To Improve Wayne

Asked by the local Acme club what the club is doing for the general good of Wayne and what more could it do for the social betterment of the town, Prof. J. H. Hertel of the State Teachers College made the following response:

"Your club, like all similar organizations, has a definite purpose. Yours, as I understand it, is the very worthy purpose of providing a social afternoon each week for its members. In its social life you seek to review the significant news items; to become familiar with the best current literature; to discuss the contents of well selected periodicals and to study the social problems of state and nation."

"This attitude of intelligent approach to the problems of the day broadens the comprehension of modern civilization and renders each of you, as voters, a safe defender of our democracy. In considering the community life of Wayne from the standpoint of possible helpfulness, it is necessary to review the various local organizations and their relation to community life in Wayne."

"Our churches with their aid societies, missionary societies, Sunday schools and young people's organizations are fully organized to meet the religious and moral problems of our city."

"Our school board has the legal duty of enforcing the compulsory school law as well as providing proper courses of study."

"The library board has legal supervision of the library, of its funds and of its activities."

"The park board is charged with the care of the beautiful public park and its playground equipment."

"The Women's club with its community building is very effectively meeting the community needs along the line of public meetings, indoor amusements and recreation."

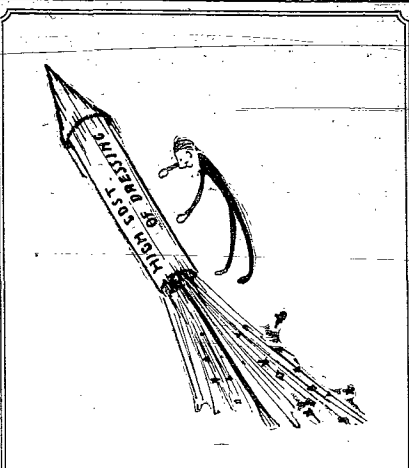

"The county board is charged with the duty of providing for deserving and needy poor."

ation of a loan fund for senior or graduate students. At the end of a school course an occasional student, through unforeseen reverses or other reasons, stands in need of a small loan to enable him to finish his course. I have in mind a small loan as a final aid rather than an attempt to finance a student during his school course. This, if carried out, might relieve a worthy student at a time when the financial burden becomes too heavy for him to carry if left to his own resources. Such cases are not numerous, but there are cases where a loan to a deserving student would be eminently worthwhile."

"Whether the Acme club should continue as it is or undertake some special line of work I know the club should be worthy the confidence of many Wayne friends. Your accomplishments in home making render you valuable factors in the progress of Wayne. Your experience and taste in refined decoration and home equipment are a worthy example to encourage the development of better and more beautiful homes. Your love of culture and refinement adds to the social betterment of the community. Your patriotism and good citizenship are factors to be steadily urged in its attitude toward law and order."

"Your membership represents the homes of merchants, bankers, doctors, railroad men, teachers and farmers. Evidently you are unfluenced in your selection by money or social pretense. This speaks of your spirit of democracy. That spirit is the foundation of our government."

"In closing I am pleased to express my appreciation of the very efficient service which you and various other similar groups of Wayne's splendid womanhood are daily rendering this community. The home is the fundamental unit of our social structure and on you who maintain such splendid homes we place our confident reliance and base our sense of security."

Great East Supports Gloria in "Her Love Story."
Gloria Swanson's latest picture, "Her Love Story" boasts a truly extraordinary cast and it is due to the fact that Allan Dwan, who directed it for the Paramount organization, takes the word 'realism' seriously.

"Her Love Story" is based upon Frank Tuttle's adaptation of "Her Love Story" by George Fawcett, Rinehart. It is a touching romance of love and mother-love in the atmosphere of royalty.

The Greater Wayne club, the Kiwanis club, and many other organizations and societies of local and national scope have been active in establishing enviable records of efficient service.

"Thus it seems that our community is pretty thoroughly organized for the betterment of the town. Modern civilization is built on the principle of cooperation and opposed to unjustifiable interference with fields covered by organized groups."

"There is little left which some worthy organization among us is not doing or planning to do for us. Wayne is an active modern town and numerous organizations have a merited pride in their fields of action."

"Your club is rendering a fine service in building a splendid social atmosphere of a refinement, culture, morality and rightness of living. Your high ideals, benevolent purposes, friendly solicitude and steadfast loyalty to all that is best and purest in our social life render you efficient in public service. Your splendid homes where sanitation, hygiene and health are first considerations; where the art of home decoration is practiced; where lawns are properly kept and where shrubs are intelligently selected stand as living proof of your high ideals for community living."

"In this way you, together with a large number of other citizens of Wayne, are nobly and unconsciously raising our general standards of living and social relationships. It is not necessary that you should undertake some special kind of public work in order that your club may render an efficient service to your city."

"However, should you desire to undertake some line of public work there is no reason why you should not receive proper encouragement and support. I have in mind two things which I believe you might undertake without transgressing on other occupied fields of labor."

"First, would be the securing of an adequate and modern tourist camp. There is a sort of group of fellowship among tourists by which towns are known as to their spirit of service to the passing tourists. Vacation by 'auto' is a growing modern development. Family groups out for recreation and pleasure are greatly pleased to find thoughtful and kindly provision for their accommodation. They hold a very pleasant memory of the pretty little city whose generous spirit of service has supplied their need for an adequate camp site at the end of a long dusty drive. The grounds need not be large or even well shaded. The tourist wants an accessible, well drained, clean, modern camp, supplied with water, light and fuel. The grounds should be provided with an outdoor kitchen as a shelter from rain, an heated tent through to the business district to provide shopping facilities and where the tourist feels the satisfaction of police protection. First class provisions are served on account of its advertising our community pride and neighborhood as probably would be supported by the people of Wayne."

"The second suggestion is the ere-

Your Income Tax. In making out his income tax for the year 1924 the business man, professional man, and farmer is required to use Form 1040, regardless of whether his net income was or was not in excess of $5,000. The smaller form 1040A is used for reporting income of $5,000 or less derived chiefly from salaries or wages.

Forms have been sent to persons who last year filed returns of income. RESULTS THAT REMAIN Are Accomplished by Wayne People.

Thousands who suffer from backache and kidney complaint have tried one remedy after another, finding no temporary benefit. This is discouraging, but there is one kidney medicine that has earned a reputation for lasting results and there is plenty in evidence of its merit right here in Wayne. Here is the testimony of one who used Don's Pills years ago, and now makes no mention of kidney trouble. Mrs. H. Kellogg, Wayne, says, "I had frequent attacks of kidney disorder. I suffered with a nagging ache in my back, and it was difficult to move around, because of the sharp twinges in my back. I was feeling depressed and nervous. Don's Pills always gave me the relief and I am glad to endorse them." Statement given July 17, 1916. On May 29, 1920, Mrs. Kellogg added a sentence using the Don's Pills. I haven't had kidney trouble, my cure being a lasting one." 60c. at all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Mrs., Buffalo, N. Y.

The BULL'S EYE

Editor and General Manager WILL ROGERS

Another Bull's Eye advertisement by Will Rogers, advertising a family and screen star, and leading American humorist. More coming. Watch for them.

I WANT it distinctly understood that this is an ad. What's more, it's one of my first attempts. Of course, the logical question is what does Will Rogers know about writing an ad? My answer is simple—everything!

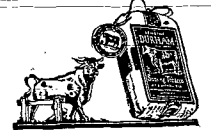

The first thing any ad writer has got to know is how to get paid. I found that out. The first letters of the alphabet I learned were P. I. A.—that means Pay in Advance.

The real truth about why I started writing ads for these people is that I got a family kicking the toes out of lots of shoes daily and I read where my employers sold enough of their stuff so that if the bags were laid end to end they would stretch further than from Oklahoma to Yokohama—and that's some stretch. So I think this looks good to me. That's why I signed up. I hope it turns into a steady job. At any rate, I'll have another piece here two weeks from now.

Will Rogers
P.S. I like to forget to tell you what I am advertising. It's "Bull" Durham. I don't smoke it myself. I don't smoke anything, but somebody does or else what happened to all those bags?

IT'S MORE ECONOMICAL of course, but the real reason thousands of he-men swear by good "Bull" Durham is because for sheer goodness of flavor, you just can't tie it.

Truth and the desire to serve the common good, allowed George Washington, not only the respect of his fellow soldiers and citizens, but acknowledged the value of true regard for the rights of others.

We declare ourselves in accord with the principles laid down by the hero of the cherry tree tale. For this special occasion we're offering a variety of things to demonstrate the practical application of Washington's code.

Once in a Century

(By Edmund Vance Cook)

Once in a century the times are ripe
For some man who shall serve and yet command,
Some man of such a clear and trenchant type
That brave men rally where his banners stand
And die together for their native land.
Even such a one
Was Washington,
The hero of our history well begun!

Once in a century there comes a man
Whose day of birth we dare not disallow.
Without whose presence we had scarce know how
To comprehend our country and its plan;
Whose finger writes in the Eternal Now.
Even such a one
Was Washington,
And such remains till history be done!

Abraham Lincoln's Birthday

February 12

One great creed plowed the way for the success of Abraham Lincoln in his attempt to retain the American commonwealth as one great nation. That creed was a "community of interests." He believed that if all people could be made to believe in something common to all, there could be no discontent. Lincoln spoke the language of a great nation—a language that will never die—it is the practical application of that principle, that is rapidly placing the American people today in a position where irritable feelings are being displaced by good will towards all men.

Fred L. Blair

Wayne's Leading Clothier

Immortal Abe

Four score and seven years ago our fathers brought forth on this continent, a new nation—conceived in liberty, and dedicated to the proposition that all men are created equal.

Now we are engaged in a great civil war, testing whether that nation, or any nation so conceived and so dedicated, can long endure. We are met on a great battlefield of that war.

We have come to dedicate a portion of that field as a final resting place for those who here gave their lives that the nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this.

But, in a larger sense, we cannot dedicate—we cannot consecrate—we cannot hallow this ground.

The brave men, living and dead, who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or detract. The world will little note nor long remember, what we say here, but it can never forget what they did here.

It is for us the living, rather, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work which they who fought here have thus far so nobly advanced.

It is rather for us to be here dedicated to the great task remaining before us—that from those honored dead we take increased devotion to that cause for which they gave the last full measure of devotion—that we here highly resolve that these dead shall not have died in vain—that this nation, under God, shall have a new birth of freedom—and that government of the people, by the people, for the people, shall not perish from this earth.

(Nov. 19, 1863)

Poor Stationery

Though secured at trifling cost, is no economy. It cheapens one's business and discredits one's good taste. It should be so printed, on such good paper, that no apology will be needed. Remember we have a completely equipped job plant, with experts in charge, and jobs done here will cause no feeling of regret.

Begin Here Today.

The "Nervous Wreck," an eccentric young veterinarian, is driving Sally Morgan from her father's ranch to the railroad station when they run out of gasoline. The occupants of a passing car refuse to lend them any, and the Wreck takes five gallons at the point of a gun.

at, and knew how to sit in a saddle. He did not know that they could laugh and talk and be unaffectedly interesting at the same time. But he discovered all these things, and he forgot that the ranch bored him. He had quite a gay time of it all the way home. People from the east always hid an interest for Sally; she liked to hear about things of which she knew very little, being possessed of a healthy and enthusiastic curiosity. She led him to talk as much as he would and found him willing to watch from the rear, the Wreck's brooding turned into a more cheerful. Why was it that he couldn't talk to a woman in that fashion? He knew that he had none of the graces; he scorned them. But why were they given to the striplings of rich men? How did it come that he was always clumsy and ill at ease whenever a woman was about?

New Car On With The Story. Sally's day did not brighten until afternoon, when Charley made a suggestion. The Underwoods had ridden back into the hills to see some of the prize cattle; they might not be back until late. If Sally and the Wreck wanted to take a couple of horses and look around a bit, they could have their pick of what was left in the corral. Charley thought he could find a riding skirt for Mrs. there were always some outfits for possible guests.

Even Sally Morgan bothered him. If she bothered him, why didn't she bother Chester Underwood? But she didn't. "No, no," did Chester Underwood bother her. But Henry Williams did; the Wreck knew it. She was on an easy footing of companionship with the newcomer in five minutes; it was always the same way with ranch hands, or anybody else.

The Wreck did not enjoy his ride. He never did, although it would have been useless to expect him to admit it. If only he knew where Charley had hidden the front wheel of the flyover he could laugh at every horse in Montana. But just now there was a certain method in his grim purpose to stay in the saddle. If things came to the worst, he and Sally could steal horses and she could claim to be a certain method in his grim purpose to stay in the saddle. If things came to the worst, he and Sally could steal horses and she could claim to be a certain method in his grim purpose to stay in the saddle.

The Underwoods did not pay much attention to the Wreck, but they were frankly interested in Sally. Even Jerome Underwood was disposed to be gracious, for he was not unimpressed by the man who had come to the table. It was his first experience with a woman cook at the ranch, and it suited him so well that he had forgotten all the admonitions of his New York specialist.

But with himself he felt that she was constantly under a constraint, even though she tried to mask it. She never understood him; sometimes she hated him; she was sure of that. He was certain that she had a sense of pity for him; a realization that fairly sickened him. "What the devil was the matter with him anyhow? And why bother?"

Hello Daddy don't forget my Wringle's!
Slip a package in the dishes that come to you home tonight.
Give the youngsters their wholesome long life pleasure and benefit.
Use it yourself after work or when you're out for a drive. It's a great little freshener.

When the ranch house came into sight, some idiot urged his horse to a gallop. The Wreck assumed that it was Chester, but he could not be sure. He was too busy. The Wreck's gray galloped also; he had a brainless way of imitating other horses. Everybody galloped. The Wreck survived the gallop by some astonishing trick of fortune, but he was still dizzy. He was at the gate of the corral. He went right on for a little distance, reaching the ground on all fours. As he slowly crawled toward the gate, the Wreck was grinning down at him. His hands rolled themselves into fists automatically, and he took a step forward. The Wreck was at his side, gripping him firmly by the arm. "Let go of me," he said savagely. "I'm all right." "And then, in a whisper: 'You come with me. You're not going to do any fighting today. I'm ashamed of you. Henry Williams, you're sure that a loaded steer. I don't know what I'll do with you.'"

WRINGLE'S
SEALD TIGHT RIGHT

CHAPTER XII
The Sheriff Arrives.
Wild, and yet wider, were the tales that came from the Underwood family concerning the short and simple incident of borrowed gasoline. Even Charley McSwain conceded that the worst must be reserved to the best times. Jerome Underwood stuck to his four bandits with a tenacity worthy of the best possible imagination. Harriet Underwood, at first disposed to be liberal and to report only those things which she saw, remembered that she was clever enough to slip her tongue down her throat, as have many spectators, but were otherwise safe. She had held her ringless fingers out for the inspection of the man with the gun, and he provided at last.

Chester confirmed the four bandits, because he had wisdom enough to see that his father might appreciate confirmation. There was a note of repressed heroism in Chester. Several times he had been about to leap; all that restrained him, it appeared, was a fear that when the shooting began others than himself might fall as sacrifices in the horrid fusillade. He told all this to Sally during the ride back to the house with a gay nonchalance that surprised her. She had an idea that resourceful lying rarely came before middle age, so that she never believed Chester's story. It was either precocious or prematurely advanced in years. Chester was a large, strongly built youth, doubtless capable of bandits as well as foot ball, but knowing him for a liar, she found herself filled with an ingrained incredulity of doubt concerning the precise status of his nerve.

The most surprising development involved Timothy, the Underwood chauffeur. Timothy had begun by being liberal. He had been heard to say that there was but one bandit. But he multiplied by six, perhaps inadvertently, perhaps because he drew inspiration from higher sources. Every rate he did not spot matters he magnified. Timothy ate his meals in the kitchen. He was a respectful creature, although he refused to be called "sir." He always said "sir" and "ma'am," until Sally was in fidgets over his deferential speech. He had a mild glance that followed her wherever she went, which the Wreck observed, and of course mistook. So he formed a dislike for Timothy, who did not exist in the kitchen, and was as obvious a pleasure, but who met it with a patient submission that was worse than defiance. There was no harm in Timothy, and he had a certain force of higher example.

But most annoying of all the people at the ranch, so far as the Wreck was concerned, was Chester Underwood. Chester, having discovered Sally on horseback, was rediscovering her in the kitchen. He kept drifting in and out, on pretenses, and sometimes he sat down and watched her as she worked with her sleeves rolled up on brown arms. To the Wreck, who was merely a person who washed dishes, waited on table, and fell off horses—quite uninteresting and not a claimant for notice. The washer of dishes found himself growing surly, without knowing why. The abbe-holed heir of Jerome Underwood was not worth both a criticism and a notice. He was not exactly recreation. She wanted to be moving again, although the time and the means had not presented themselves. But no matter how necessary it might be to remain in hiding, it was also irksome. Being young, she did not have the patience that comes with age.

Anything that broke the routine, however, was welcome, even an invitation from Chester for a ride over the hills. The next morning, she was invited to the party. Nobody had just two the Wreck, and as it was not Sally's party, he could not fairly be heard to go, anyhow, for he hated horses. As she and Chester rode off he stood leaning against the frame of the kitchen door, watching at them. It would not have been a good time for anybody to offer him pleasures.

He felt unaccountably lonesome as Sally's horse disappeared over a ridge. All the way from Pittsburgh to the Bar-M he never suffered from lonesomeness, although there were days when he secretly exchanged a word with anybody. But now it seemed that the world conspired to isolate him and he resented the conspiracy. He had an uncomfortable sense of being deserted as the ride away. He went back into the kitchen after a while, where Timothy sat in a corner resting a merriment. There were some dishes that belonged in the pantry, and the Wreck started thither with them. His foot tripped against a chair leg, and two of the dishes slid off the top of the pile and spilled on the floor. The Wreck stood looking at the mess until he heard a snicker from the corner. Timothy was grinning with good-natured amusement.

We have sometimes been criticized for so doing, but we have at least kept our feet on a firm ground and preserved our postal right.
