James E. Brittan Speaks About Code

James E. Brittan spoke Monday at the noon luncheon of the Kiwanis club, his subject being the reorganization of the Administrative Department of Nebraska. The government of the states have remained the same since the American constitution was made, until a reorganization took place in several of them within the past few years, and it has become another element in their administration. Under the old system the governor was on thirteen boards, attorney general on eleven, secretary of state on seven and treasurer on five boards. The old system was expensive and inefficient. With the code system duties were assigned to commissioners. The secretary receives a salary of $5,000 a year. This made definite assignment of duties and prevented overlapping. It centered responsibility on the heads of the departments. This system was adopted in Nebraska in 1919 and the government holds each secretary responsible for that is done in his department. A harmonious method of administering state government is thus a result. The budget system is, Mr. Brittan says, probably the most important result resulting from the reorganization. The Wayne high school basketball team and Coach E. C. Brown are guests of J. C. Nuss at the luncheon Monday. George McEachen was a guest of Ernest Michel at the program.

Fifty years ago, Feb. 14, 1875, Henry Hinrichs and Miss Caroline Oettinger were united in marriage at Union, Ill. and since that time their anniversary relatives and friends extend to the Hinrichs home northeast of Wayne Saturday. G. Grefe and talks of olden times were enjoyed in the evening. At midnight luncheon was served. Rev. E. G. Grefe gave a persuasive sermon on the past and future.

Mr. Hinrichs was born in Hanover, Germany, and his wife was born in Richmond, Ill. After their marriage in 1875, they lived for seven years at Pontonelle, Ill., coming to Wayne and locating northeast of here in 1882. They moved here with team and wagon when this country was a prairie and Mr. Hinrichs bought the farm on which he still lives. At the same time William Hinrichs, Henry Meyer and Carl Hrokov came here from Pontonelle and Henry Hinrichs and Mr. Meyer are still living. Mr. Hinrichs owned a wheelbarrow and among the first to have an automobile. To Pave Winside's Business District

E. M. Rohrbaugh, Civil Engineer of Omaha, Plans Organization of Paving District No. 1. E. M. Rohrbaugh, Omaha civil engineer, who it will be remembered, planned the Winside district in Wayne some years ago, met with the town board of Winside Monday evening and directed organization of paving district No. 1 of that place. The district will include Main street, and the cost will run between $50,000 and $65,000, depending on the kind of material used. The board has asked for bids which will be considered and decided on March 13. It is expected that active construction will commence in the work will be completed during the summer. Winside's Main street, like any unpaved street, has been a source of almost fruitless effort in trying to keep it free from ruts. The slope to Main street in Winside has made progress with futility, and the district there. People in Winside and travelers through there will welcome the proposed improvement.

Newspaper Critic Gives Herald Boost

Referring to the Herald's issue of December 4, the Island Printer, which is acknowledged as the world's leading newspaper critic, contains the following criticism together with reproduction of the two paragraphs announcing the opening of Wayne's Christmas festivities: "We have always considered your paper one of the best that comes to this desk. Printing on your December 4 issue is excellent. The news heads in Boston give the paper an appearance of distinction and attractiveness that is unusual, and impossible with any of the conventional head-letter type faces. Advertisements average better than those of the great majority of small-city papers in fact, they are among the best, if not the best, in the country. We receive. Carlson light medium, with some of the bolder face occasionally used, for the advertisements. The advertisements give an effect of homogeneity that is pleasing in comparison with papers where different type faces are used. The advertisements are interesting to be pyramided. It is indeed regrettable to find a large three-column advertisement in the paper with none or only small ones in the lower part, in a paper otherwise so fine. We are reproducing at the top of the page a page spread, filled with cards of various local business concerns." The Herald wishes to say that full use of the medium in arranging advertisements has been due to a desire to give advertisers the positions they want, and avoid making those who advertise unnecessarily inconspicuous. Agreeable to suggestion, however, the advertisements in today's Herald have been arranged in the most possible without conflicting with the pronounced wishes of advertisers.

He showed that the intelligence quotients of children in the Council Bluffs and Superior districts are themselves after the manner of the theoretical probability curve. He further showed that there is a high correlation between the intelligence distribution and that of scholastic achievement. Superintendent Saam is quite positive that bright children should not be shipped to school districts. He thinks there is danger of their becoming social misfits. He believes it would be far better to have them in the high grades at the average rate, after one year of acceleration, and enrich their work in all of the subjects. Mr. Waterhouse discussed the reclassification of children in the grades on the basis of the Stanford Achievement tests. He thinks that children in grades below those in which they belong by virtue of their grade level. He said that because they have not had the opportunity to do their grade poor study habits. Mr. Waterhouse (Continued on Page Four.)

Deny Request to Take Off Trains

Hearing Held at Wayne in December Results in Refusal to Grant Permission Asked. The hearing on application of the railway company to discontinue one passenger train on the Wayne-Wakefield branch and one on the Wakefield-Crofton line, held in Wayne December 29 and 30, resulted in refusal of the state railway commission to grant the request. It was understood that the application was warmly contested by representatives of the farmers in the county. The following is the Lincoln report of the decision: Lincoln, Neb., Feb. 16—The state railway commission today refused application of the Omaha Railroad company for permission to reduce service on its branches running from Wakefield to Crofton and from Wayne to Bloomfield. Although granting the train the company desires removed do not pay the cost of the train. The commission stated that the two mixed trains running each way each day and doing the work now handled by three trains each way, according to the commission's opinion that they could not give the type of mail and express services that towns along the lines are entitled to have.

May Curtail Later

Commission Says if Traffic Continues to Fall Off, Fewer Trains May Be Advisable. The commission stated the curtailment would seriously discommode a large number of people having business in Omaha and Sioux City who would not be able under the proposed schedule to go to either city and back in one day. The remaining trains would be from one to three hours delayed in reaching their terminals in the evening. The commission also stated that the company had not shown that the commission stated the deficit on the Crofton train which the company wished to take off. The commission stated that the deficit on the other was less than claimed. The commission stated, however, that if traffic continues to fall off because of wide use of automobiles the company may later be justified in reducing service to curtail expenses.

Books Accessioned At City Library

A number of new novels and reference books have been accessioned this week at the city library and are ready for readers. "Sideglints in American History," in two volumes, by Elson and "The Men Who Made the Nation," by Sparks, are valuable reference books. The latter tells of the twelve men who have been such a valuable force in shaping the history of the nation.

"The Old Ladies," by Hugh Walpole, is a novel in which the author sees life steadily and wholly. "Mr. and Mrs. Haddock Abroad," written by Fumal Ogden Stewart, tells of the adventures of the family who traveled over seas and have experiences of the typical traveler. Many funny stories are related.

"The Best Plays of 1923-1924 and the Year Book of the Drama in America," by Burgess Martin, is the fifth annual issue of this book. It is a favorite play of the players and stories of the best of the form. "The Invaluable Woman," by Herbert Quick, tells of women when they first emerged from their places in the home. It tells of one who did her work from behind the throne rather than from the throne but who the less she did it with courage and subtlety.

"Saint Martin's Summer," by Rafael Sabatini, tells of the brave Parisian gentleman who was sent by the queen to rescue a young girl from the clutches of the Marquis of Condé. The man completes the rescue for the sake of the fair, proud girl who faces danger and death as intrepidly as he does.

"The Charming People," written by Michael Arlen, is a series of short stories that are ingenious and wrought as though the threads were from the hand of some unharried medieval craftsman.

"Goldrover," by Margaret Cameron. Out of the lives of Goldrover, the old hermit whom all in Santa Barbara love but whose past no one inquires about, and of Judith, the dare-devil girl whose faith rests in him and of Fred Barclay who grows to love both, is wrought an interesting tale.

"Stories to Tell Children," by Sara Cone Bryant, is a book of fifty model stories with suggestions of how to tell them.
"Tess of the D'Urbervilles," is a novel of adventure by Thomas Hardy.
"The Circular Staircase," by Mary Roberts Rinehart, tells of the thrilling adventures of the summer occupants of "Sunbyside" who find themselves involved in mysteries.

"Mother Mason," by Bees Streeter Aldrich, tells of Mother Mason who is irresistible and her family. The story has a homesy, quaint quality that makes for joy. This is a true picture of a mid-west family of comfortable circumstances.

"Secret Gods," by Alice M. Williamson, is a story of the beautiful Santa Raines and her search for a hidden treasure in the deserts of the southwest.
In "Sard Harker," by John Masefield, Sard lay in the barque, "Venture," in a beautiful harbor. In the daytime he saw the white walls of the stately mansion between the forest and the sea and he thinks of a girl he met ten years before and whom he has not forgotten. He learns of a plot to kidnap the girl and a brother and hastens to warn them but is too late. Through hardships he wins his romance.

"The Lake," by Margaret Ashmun, shows real development in power and craftsmanship. This is a moving picture of the pitiful situation in which a boy is placed by selfishness and weakness of his parents into despair and a girl saves him by devotion and good sense.

"Will Rogers' 'Literate Digest' is full of humor and gives the author's meditations on many present day popular subjects.
"Twelve Tests of Character," by Rev. Harry Emerson Fosdick, D. D., gives with characteristic frankness and insight a comparison of existing standards with the teachings of the Master and urges attainment of truly Christian plane of living.

"The Beauty of the Purple," by William Stearns Davis, gives a moving and vivid narrative of the brilliant life of Christian Constantinople in the eighteenth century. The book is rich with romance and thrilling events.
A 1925 World Almanac has been received at the library.
"Deep in the Hearts of Men," by Mary E. Waller, is a story by a close student of human nature. The plot is skillfully constructed and there is a finesse of fibre and nobility of feeling in the work.

R. R. Smith Returns From Southern Trip
R. R. Smith arrived home Friday from his trip south, after an absence of two months. He spent most of the time at Sulphur Springs, Ark. He also visited points in Oklahoma and Missouri. He says times are dull in the south. He walked a mile through the business district of Kansas City and found one-fourth of the business houses vacant. He says vineyards in the Ozarks are being developed with promise of a successful and profitable industry.

At Sulphur Springs, Mr. Smith visited his brother who stopped there on his way to his home in Pennsylvania from a three months' tour of California. He quoted his brother as saying that southern California had been very much over-boomed, that many people who are there would leave if they could, and that 30,000 second-hand automobiles are for sale at Los Angeles alone. The brother thought, however, that a man who had plenty of money, could live away time more pleasantly in parts of California, in anticipation of dying than in the more rigorous climate of the east.

February is a Short Month

It is known to most merchants as a dull one. It is sort of betwixt and between: neither fish, flesh nor fowl. Everybody is looking for spring and tired of winter. We could just sit around and wait for business to pick up if we wanted to—but we don't want to. February has got to hold up the average.

We'll do it this way. We'll make prices and offerings so interesting in February they'll just have to sell.

These prices ought to make business in any dull month.

has strengthened appreciably since the Dawes reparations plan went into effect in Europe. Shipments to foreign countries have been much heavier with the result that some satisfactory trade balances are going to be shown in America's favor. The conclusion may be reached by some persons that prices are to be affected by the increased demand from abroad. Naturally, that will be the result because American buyers will be in competition with foreigners for American goods. An illustration is already provided by the increase in the prices of crude oil and gasoline. Crude oil went up because Europe was buying. That boosted the price of gasoline, according to the oil companies. There probably will be further improvement. Official recognition of the partial recovery has been made with advice offered as to plans for the coming season. The brokers in the wheat market have affected speculators, more than they have hurt the growers of the grain.

Business. Sioux City Journal: Recent reports on the country's economic condition advised that three developments had come which would be bound to help business generally. One was the increase in the foreign demand for American goods. Another was the general recovery of industries. The third was the improvement in the agricultural situation brought about by advancing prices for farm products. Manufacturing, it was shown, had gone farther with reconstruction than any other business. There is nothing strange or peculiar about that. Manufacturing was in the best position during those of millions of dollars, if not a start over other businesses when the situation began to improve. Manufacturing did not have so far to go. But for the most part the manufacturers were able when the demand for goods lessened to reduce overhead expense, cut down production and take small profits or break even. The gains made by American export business are impressive as the year advances with signs everywhere that the road to normalcy has been found and is being traveled. The American export trade has grown scores of millions of dollars in the last six months. The gain for the year would not show as high an average. Foreign demand for goods

We would not be in such a hurry for spring if it were not for our anxiety to get into the garden and cooperate with warm sunning and showers in awakening vegetation.

We are beginning to feel sensitive over the great disparity in market values for old roses and old hens. As we grow older, we are more inclined to recall under his manly personal appeal of the copy reader says: "Old roosters, 6 cents; old hens, 17 cents."

A Norfolk woman says many youths in that city are acquiring the cigaret habit contrary to the law which provides a fine of $20 to $50 or imprisonment for ten to thirty days for selling or giving cigaret, cigars or tobacco to any one under 18 years of age. It is likely other towns have youths who are also trespassing on the statute who seek to regulate the habits of minors.

Damages paid by the M. & O. railroad during 1924 amounted to a total of $281,452.28 as compared to $220,005.40 during 1923. As we understand, an increased number of wrecks and an increase last year over the previous year. The railroad company has adopted every conceivable means of precaution to prevent damages, and these losses must be considered in the fixing of freight rates, shippers are vitally interested in all possible reduction of the burden.

Mrs. Allis Pollard, principal of the Wayne high school, encourages the essential of close relationship between the home and school in her paper which she presented before the Wayne Woman's club this week. The paper which will be found in today's Herald, should be read by all parents and teachers. Mrs. Pollard stresses importance of cooperation between the two fundamental institutions of our civilization, and the value of respect and obedience to each as a means of developing fine, stalwart character. As she points out, responsibility in the training of youth rests first on the home and then on both the home and the school, and neither can shirk its best results to be secured. There should be clear understanding and mutual confidence, thus their mutual helpfulness.

To the extent of Woman's Magazine, Dr. Marion Leroy Burton, president of the University of Michigan, Ann Arbor, has contributed an interesting article treating of the mind. He shows the importance of so cultivating the mind that it can think clearly and discriminatingly, so that it can chouse advocates the extensive method of handling bright children while Mr. Saam is inclined to favor the enrichment plan.

E. M. Hoeman, secretary of the Nebraska State Teachers' association, was present and addressed the club on educational measures introduced in the state legislation.
At 6:40 the school men met in the cafeteria where dinner was served and the program of the day continued.
Music led by Professor Leon P. Berry, immediately followed the dinner. Mr. Greenslit, one of the visitors, favored the company with a few selections on the cornet and also rendered a whistling solo.
The first speaker was Superintendent Saam of Council Bluffs. He gave valuable suggestions on school management, emphasizing the fact that the superintendent must be alert on matters pertaining to finance.
Superintendent Wainwright of Fremont, speaking of his long experience in dealing with school boards, teachers and communities, said that the superintendent must be a citizen of the town, interested in the affairs of the town.
The school men present considered this meeting one of the best of the many which have been held in Wayne.
A new plan has been adopted at the high school in regard to the playing of the marches used at noon and afternoon dismissals. It is desired to give all piano students an opportunity to play the marches for a time during the semester. Since many students are diffident about volunteering, the musical will appreciate suggestions from parents and music teachers. The students who have played marches recently are Miriam Johnson, Anna Schmitt, Frank Phillips, Edna Martin and Bernice Anderson. Others who are scheduled to play are Dorothy Davis, Lavonia Stamm, Bernice Poljan, Bernice Murphy, Maxine Rhoades, Doris Janson, Esther Mae Ingham, Margaret Panko and Kathryn Kemp.

differentiate between fact and fiction, and that it is not to be swept into error and folly by hasty conclusions based on superficial knowledge. Dr. Burton makes a plea for the thinking, serious, constructive mind, not one that rests on recollection of the dead past nor one that yields to radicalism or hysteria on grounds of mere sentimentality.
He would have a mind capable of absorbing and analyzing evidence, capable of thinking accurately and justly, and making progress on a solid foundation. Instead of the mind that seeks popular favor at the moment, he would have one that seeks and establishes truth, and thus strengthens the American character and American leadership.

PASSING OF IMMORTALITY.
There is a mystery about death that makes one approach it with dread. People shrink from it because they cannot fully fathom and understand it. A few years ago, projection of organized sound through thousands of miles of ether would have been inconceivable.
With proof everywhere in nature, it is less incomprehensible that life, projected from somewhere, is manifest in the atoms of matter. But life is disintegrated into the elements.
It is when a flower is just beginning to open its petals, ready to unfold into the beauty of full bloom, that a touch of destruction causes sharper stings of disappointment and regret. Full of faith and understanding, it is just entering young womanhood, strikes deepest into the hearts of the many who knew her fine qualities and noble traits.
But it is a sustaining comfort to believe that this girl, like others stricken down before the heyday of life has been reborn, and will continue to be nurtured growth and heightened accomplishment.
These lines from some one are suggested:
Nude shadily wail a rose once grew,
Budded and blossomed in God's free light.
Water and fed by morning dew,
Shedding its sweetness day and night.
As it grew and blossomed fair and tall,
Slowly rising to loftier height,
It came to a crevice in the wall,
There, though hidden there, shone a beam of light.
Onward it crept with added strength,
We never a thought of fear or grief.
It followed the light through the crevice's length,
And unfolded itself on the other side.
The light, the dew, the broadening view,
Were found the same as they were before;
And back itself in beauties new,
Breathing its fragrance more and more.
Shall claim of death cause us to grieve,
And make our courage faint or fail?
Nay! Let us hope and forth receive,
The rose still grows beyond the wall.

The annual alumni register will be mailed to graduates of the school this week. It contains the names and addresses of nearly 1,000 alumni and other interesting information concerning many of them.
The summer school bulletin is being prepared and will be mailed within a short time. The first six-week term begins June 8 and extends to July 17 and the second term begins July 20 and closes August 28.
Dr. Frank Dixon, lecturer, will speak at the State Normal next Tuesday on "Lawlessness."
Mr. Ivan A. Kimmerling, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Kimmerling of Winstate, and Miss Edna P. Kahler, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas Kahler of Winstate, were married Wednesday afternoon at 2 o'clock at the Evangelical Lutheran parsonage in Wayne, Rev. H. A. Teckhauf presiding at the ceremony. Miss Kimmerling will live on a farm three miles south of Winstate.
Miss Anna Zastrow of Emerson and Arnold Kahler of Winstate, the bride, attended the young couple. The bride's trousseau were also present. Miss Kahler wore peach colored crepe de chine and a veil. She carried flowers. Her bridesmaid wore blue and carried a bouquet. A wedding reception was held at the Kahler home in Winstate Wednesday evening. Market Report

Furnished by Swanson, Gilmore & Walsh, Sioux City Stock Yards.
Feb. 18.—Sharply curtailed cattle receipts at the main 11 markets of the country at the opening of the week brought out conspicuously the farmers have a strong hold on their feed offerings and are not to be herded into an acceptance of a market that is so generally unprofitable as materialized last week. As the result of the firm stand made by farmers to liquidate conservatively the market was held up. The week's indifference previously worn and entered a rapid scramble for the material. Naturally with the shoe on the other foot and overland market, Monday's market witnessed an addition of 25 to 50 cents to the closing prices of last week on practically all classes of fat steers and yearlings, as well as butcher cows and heifers. Tuesday and Wednesday the initial gains were easily retained with the exception of the best of the market, exceeding 30,000 head the first half of the week, as compared to the corresponding period last week.
Stocks and feeders moved under the healthy and strong influence re-acted from the killer trade. Then, on the fact that spring is not far distant, further improved the situation. Many steers moved out of first hands at 87 and over, while green cows were sold at a top-level of $8.10 and fancy quality steers at $10.50 showing a fair start on grain, have moved to $8.25. The betterment is reflected in the feeding of feed-trade. Sales are completed almost daily out of first hands to $5 and over, for tily, even colored kinds.
Hogs at the 84 markets of the country throw considerable light on the hog situation. During the first month of 1925, the highest January receipts of liquidation amounted to 4,044,000 head, an increase of 944,500 porkers, as compared to the January average of 3,100,000 head in 1924 (average sive), but a decrease of 148,000, as compared to the 1924 January delivery. The February, 1925 and February, 1924 comparison shows that the falling off has materially increased, as compared to the decrease noted for January. In addition the average weight of hogs has advanced this year is far under that of previous years. With the peak of the season's national movement apparently passed and with the shorter weights augmenting the situation, there is every reason to expect that packers will not for much longer be able to successfully work their way into the market tops from breaking away over the $11 line.
Under normal conditions the lamb market is not so generally being made would be well within requirements. However, continued soft weather has seriously crippled the eastern dressed wool market, the result that packers are finding it hard to move even the short supplies coming. Nevertheless, wool is in such a strong position, here and abroad, that the probability of substantially lower prices exists. Lambs at $17.25 here on Tuesday mark about the low time for the present. The time was made by the firmness in the Wednesday trade. An added factor for sheep feeders to consider is that the public is being offered a hearty supply of fresh mutton and pork at comparatively low prices, a condition that may tend to drag the ovine deal somewhat, but not break it.

New Wallpapers

You can get good wallpapers in the latest style at the price you wish to pay.

The new 1925 wallpapers are here. They are the same patterns that will be used in thousands of homes in every part of the United States. The styles are the latest, the patterns are of faultless good taste, and the prices are very low.

Every buyer of wallpapers should know that the paper plays an important role in the appearance of the paper on the wall and the wear that it will give. Wallpapers made from old newspapers and other refuse show a dirty grey or brown color on the reverse side. Such papers are flimsy, hang poorly and do not wear well. Papers made of wood fibre are light on the reverse side, they are strong and durable, they hang easy and keep their bright new appearance for a long time. With the exception of the very cheapest grades our papers are all made of wood fibre. All papers are shaded before they leave the store and we accept no return for any papers which are returned. If you need more you can get it quickly. Delivery is prompt and you have no long distance charges to pay.

In our store you see the paper in the full roll just as it appears on the wall. You see what you are buying and when you select a pattern you will know that it will be just what you want. You can pick the paper at the price you wish to pay for. We have papers as low as the wall paper. Delivery will be made during the following week, not having time enough to trim this paper on that day.

Look over our stock. We can give you the maximum in real wall paper value for your money.

Sale will be held on the farm two and one-half miles east of Hubbard; four miles south of Jackson and fourteen miles southwest of Sioux City. On the above date I will offer 45 good, big, stretchy gilts that for size, type and breeding I do not think their equal will be sold in northeastern Nebraska this year. They are nearly all bred for April and May farrow to Radio Col. This boar was in the wonderful litter that Grant Linn showed at the Inter State Fair last fall in which he won first on spring boar and first on spring gilt. Kansas City Doctor

New Discovery Heals Rupture Without an Operation.

Kansas City, Mo., (Special)—A new-discovery which, experts agree, has no equal for curative effects in all rupture cases, is the latest accomplishment of the well-known Hernia Specialist, Dr. Andrews, 226H

Koch Bldg., Kansas City, Mo.—The extraordinary success of this new method proves that it holds and heals a rupture. It weighs only a few ounces. Has no hard gouging pads, no elastic belt, no leg straps, no steel bands, and it is as comfortable as a light garment. It has enabled hundreds of persons to throw away crutches and brace their rupture absolutely healed. Many of these had serious double ruptures, from which they had suffered for years. It is Dr. Andrews' ambition to have every ruptured person enjoy the quick relief, comfort and healing power of his discovery, and he will send it on free trial to any reader of the Herald who writes him. He wants one person in each neighborhood to whom he can refer. If you wish to be rid of a rupture for good, without an operation, take advantage of the doctor's free offer. Write him today.

Here, Madam, Is Truly

"The Range of Your Dreams"

But the big step forward—the most important improvement has just been accomplished. For we have a coal and wood burning range in the general shape and style of the most modern cabinet gas range. In short, it is a range with an "up-stairs oven."

No longer need you stoop over to open the oven door every time you want to put in or take out a baking pan. You can bake now without backaches. The oven has been placed where you want it—right in front of you, where you can get at it easily.

This one big feature in itself—this "up-stairs" oven—is important enough to make it worth your while to replace your old coal range, even though it may still be giving good service. But there are many other features to interest and delight you.

The entire range is beautifully enameled inside and out in a striking combination of spotless white and royal blue. Truly, this is "the range of your dreams" in every way.

Genevieve Wright Is Awarded Medal

Genevieve Wright, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. C. L. Wright of Wayne, won the Lincoln bronze medal awarded last Thursday to the pupil in the local high school writing the best essay on the life of Abraham Lincoln. About twelve took part in the contest and the Illinois Watch Company of Springfield, Ill., through Misses-as its representative, presented the medal. The essay written by Miss Wright is as follows:

"During Lincoln's early life as a frontier lad he endured many hardships and enjoyed few comforts. Although his home has been called by Mark Twain 'The model home that raised a man,' it was less like pioneer homes, void of all luxuries and many necessities. A home, barren of judged according to material possessions, but rich indeed if we consider the honor, perseverance, kindness, self-denial and purity which formed an important part in the life of the Lincoln home. The bible, although it cost the price of a spinning wheel at that time, was one of the fundamentals in his daily life. His future was shaped by the environment and influence he received in this home and his life at Knob Creek.

"Lincoln's sterling traits of character were gotten from both parents. His strong will power he received from his father who was not a shiftless druggard he is often pictured, but a trusted, respected man, holding prominent church and village offices. From his mother Lincoln inherited kindness, love of humanity and honor. Lincoln was a man of great character. He dared to go plodding on through difficulties and disappointments. With the eagerness and ambition of youth he struggled through the obstacles of his early life, by patience and persistence, learning although not attending school, absorbing the conversation of others, studying and reading, and thinking things out for himself, for Abe was a thoughtful boy and remembered his lessons well.

"During his young manhood he ran for the legislature of Illinois and was badly defeated. Then he entered business in a grocery store. He failed in several attempts to start a business, paying the debts of a dishonest partner. He was in love with a beautiful maiden, Anne Rutledge, to whom he became engaged, but she died. Defeat followed defeat as he became candidate for the House and then the Senate and for vice-president in 1852. Again he was defeated by Douglas in 1858. He presided on and was finally given the highest honor that America can bestow upon a man—based on his noble character and filtered not at praise and became a world-wide hero. Lloyd George has said, 'He is one of those great figures of whom there are very few in history, who lose their nationality in death. They are no longer Greek or Hebrew or English or American, they belong to mankind.'"

"A blend of mirth and sadness, smiles and tears; a quiet knight errant of pioneers; a homely hero, born of star and soil; a possessor of a masterpiece of God.' There is a beautiful antithesis in this first line of Walter Malone's tribute to Lincoln. He is said to be the banner among rulers of the earth, but there is a serious strain even in his humor because through his jokes he often gave truth to people which they did not wish to hear. He had a sublime faith in humanity and it was this faith, this sympathy, that endeared him to all Americans. He had seen above petty personal prejudices and prejudices. During the entire Civil war he said no hateful word. His big understanding made him to say things which white people who were said, to laugh when they were glad, and to help when they were in need.

"Lincoln reached the heights of success in accomplishment and character that would justify the phrase 'born of star,' but physically he was of the common people whom God made love because he made so many of them? Edwin Markham said that mother nature when she fits the earthen mold and came down to meet the mortal need took the tired clay of the common road, clay barn yet with the genial heat of sun."

"Upon Lincoln's soul God has portrayed the elements of a noble character. And to us of the present generation Lincoln's greatness does not lie wholly in the fact that he emancipated the slaves or saved the union, nor even in the great power of his personality, but in those qualities of soul, humility, refusal to accept defeat, patience in times of stress, friendliness to all mankind, and desire to do the right, tolerance and goodness toward his fellowmen, justice to friend and foe alike, to rich and poor and to great and small, steadfastness of purpose, deep reverence for his God, and his noble character.

Consent which made his memory an inspiration and encouragement to everyone through all the ages. The soul of Abraham Lincoln, a masterpiece of God.

Mrs. Pollard Speaks To Women of Wayne

Gives Valuable Talk on Cooperation of School and Home.

Mrs. Allis Pollard, principal of the Wayne high school, spoke Friday before the Wayne Women's club at the B. E. Addison home on "Cooperation of the Home and School." Following is her message:

"In the nature of things, it is obvious that there is a fixed and definite relation to the parents of the children it trains. There are three social institutions that take it upon themselves to train the children for their work in the world. They are the home, the church, and the school. Plainly, the closer the cooperation among the three agencies have the same end in view.

"In general the school recognizes that it cannot do its job unless it is to prepare children for living in the life of their time, and to prepare them for the task of being something to the sum of human welfare. The school, then, stands with the home and the church as a great unifying force, recognizing the fact that the child is to his environment, and then stimulating them to realize in that environment, their individual ideal.

"The relations of parents and child and teacher and pupil, have so much in common, that a meeting-ground of friendly cooperation is rarely hard to find. It is seen in the activities of the home are the care of the child's physical and moral development. Also it is an accepted fact that the school should attend to the instructional side of the child's development, and also develop him morally. Therefore the duties of the home and the school in the child's moral development. Parents may bring their children to school to train them in the proper group consciousness.

"Neither the home nor the school can function properly in the all-important feature of the child's education, without the employment of disciplinary measures. Statistics are given to show that the greater the cause of teacher mortality is weakness in discipline. It is said to be responsible for approximately 25 per cent of the teacher's death. Unfortunately, we have no way of learning what percentage of parents fail in the discipline of their children.

"The teaching which society gives to individuals, which helps them better to control their powers, may be called disciplinary. Recent developments in the American life have affected the question of school discipline. The most direct and obvious influence, as has often been pointed out, is the demoralization of the teaching force. Never before have the schools been given over to women teachers to such an extent as we obtain in America. Women are possessed of a natural sympathy with children that is not so generally characteristic of men. They are better acquainted with their ends by diplomacy rather than by force, responding more or less adequately to a constantly changing manner, and endless patience, are important ingredients. Women inevitably fall short of the sternness of Dickens, and early develop a teaching manner of their own. Frontier schools demanding a teacher capable of administering a drubbing to the overgrown backwoods boys who attended them, rejected the woman teacher. Probably, woman's innate and ineradicable reference for the methods of persuasion, has done more than anything else to discountenance harshness in American school management. Add to that the fact that the average man seems to have a natural dislike for attending to details, especially the trifling details incident to the discipline of children, an observer finds that the discipline of American youth is very largely in the hands of the women teachers. What mother, having reared a child's misdemeanor to his father, has not been told to administer the spanking herself? I believe that is the rule, but of course, there are notable exceptions. I remember hearing Chief Justice Taft remark by illustrating a point in his lecture on the League of Nations, that though he did not believe in corporal punishment to a great extent, he had always caused it to be well understood among his children, that the paternal hand was in the family government at the head in question, and judging from its size and firm appearance, I could well believe that it would be very effective.

"The prescription of disciplinary activities begins in babyhood and extends throughout the formative period. Surely it is true that the duties of parents and teachers overlap and coincide. Discipline is a universal law of social life and to deny it is essential agency. Moreover, experience shows that it is almost impossible for a pupil to succeed in his studies, unless his department is satisfactory. Of course, there are exceptions to this rule, and in other cases. Nevertheless, it is rarely that one finds a pupil's report card showing a high average in department and a high average in his studies. This could only be true in the case of an exceptionally bright pupil.

"In a majority of cases, the demands of authority find ready response from children, for they are eager to have new experiences, and full of curiosity, and are anxious to please where kindness is shown. But where response is reluctant, there the prescription is still imperative. A mother trying to teach her child to eat with a spoon, does not give up her requirement because the baby prefers to use his fingers; nor does the teacher yield to a boy's desire to go on playing ball when the bell rings for lessons, nor does the policeman permit a rascal to shoot his revolver into the air on the main street of a town, even when that main street is empty of traffic. No one does these acts but they must be prohibited, for children will never learn either table manners or their lessons if they are permitted to follow their own will, and the rowdy with a revolver is only "a boy grown tall" and must be taught to respect the desire of society to be safe from stray bullets.

"This discipline is a word of many applications. It applies to the management of the child's character and social life—the three most important social agencies. It is interesting to note the derivation of the word discipline. Coming from the Latin word discere, which means to learn, we see at once that discipline has always been considered a prerequisite of learning. The word discere also comes from the same Latin base, and so we have our attention called to the fact that the twelve disciples were the twelve "disciples" of Christ. In this connection, I am reminded of teaching lately, that there is agitation among public welfare workers, concerning the advisability of posting a prominent copy of the ten commandments in every school room. Is the idea worthy of consideration? To authorities in the field of education, there is not one of the ten commandments that is not broken by school pupils, and some of them are violated much more frequently than one who has not had an opportunity to observe the situation, would suppose.

"An eminent educator who has made a study of what he terms, The Breakdown of High School Morale, attributes the chief reason for the decline in moral standards at work outside the school, chief of which is the prevalent use of automobiles by students. He explains that the automobile makes it possible to cover great distances quickly. This means that in a very few minutes, boys and girls may be far removed from their home influences and jurisdiction. Furthermore, the very speed at which they travel, contributes to the excitement of the trip. How can the home and the school to meet this new freedom of youth? It is plain that they must be educated to think and act for themselves, and to want to do the right thing. Principally they must be taught obedience and respect for laws. Then as parents and teachers we are at times inclined to humor children in their desires, although we feel in our hearts that such a course is not the best. We remember that the inordinate child of today is the law-breaker of tomorrow.

"The ancient Chinese were wise in their day and age. One of the oldest Chinese adages deals with filial devotion, the following manner: "There are five punishments for three thousand offenses, none of which is greater than the lack of filial devotion. The devotion will exist only where children are taught to respect their parents and to obey them, and to have respect for the laws of the land. It is the following manner: "Obedience does not destroy independence. It lays the only true foundation for independence. To learn to command, one must first learn to obey. Certainly one of the rights of every child is to have the benefit of the will of his parents. There are things about which he has no will. There is no justification in psychology for the theory that children should be allowed to follow their own "I" impulses and instinctive tendencies, and that, if left alone, they will grow up into intelligent, civilized, moral beings. There can be no freedom in any institution except by obedience to those conditions or laws that are necessary for the perpetuity of that institution. The only natural rights anyone has are the ones he uses for collective welfare. Freedom in adulthood calls for the exercise of a certain amount of authority in childhood. The great work of civilization and of education has been that of overlaying certain primitive tendencies, so that all might more satisfactorily meet the conditions necessary for good citizenship, for neighborhood and family life.

"No part of school work is more important than that of discipline and no part is more difficult. The first requisite success is generally conceded to be a sympathetic attitude toward offenders. Then a retrospective recall of one's own past is needed. It should always be emphasized that one who falls, is not irrevocably disgraced. The teacher must try to lend a hand and help the pupil rise to a higher plane than the one he occupied before he fell. Every life has its setbacks. There is no one but can recall difficulties of his school days, and many of them not concerning his lessons.

"James Whitcomb Riley tells a story of another Hoosier poet, Leo Harris, who was once his classmate. It illustrates the possibilities of great good coming out of failures of childhood. The school was in a rural district where child prodigies of the kind and Leo Harris was sorely tried between his real humanity and his desire to fulfill the demands of the community which he served. Little Jim Riley had been bad, and was kept after school to be punished according to rule. When he and the master were left alone, however, Mr. Harris seemed to be in no haste to carry out the letter of the law. He closed the door and walked to the desk. Then he sent Jim to the window and asked if anyone were in sight. "No," said Jim. "Look again. Are you sure?" Jim looked again and reported the same quiet quiet. "Jim can you keep that secret?" Jim assured the master that he could. His curiosity was aroused by these mysterious proceedings. Then after another anxious inquiry and another reassurance, the master opened his great desk and cautiously drew forth a book. Opening it, he began to read. Little James Riley listened, fascinated. When it grew too dark to read, he begged the master to tell him what came next. But the master had another plan. "Jim, do you think you would take this book home without letting anyone know that you have it? And could you get it back here into my desk without letting anyone know that I loaned it to you?" James said he could and he did. The deadly sin of non-reading was held in such abhorrence in that community. He hid the precious book in the hay mow, and read it through eagerly within a few days. Then going early to school one morning, he slipped the forbidden book into Mr. Harris' desk. No one was the wiser save the master and James, but James had had a new vision of the romance of life and the riches that he hid in between the pages of books; for the book was Ivanhoe. He was the everlasting friend of Leo Harris, who had had the courage and wisdom to defy the conventions of his world, to reach the fundamental need of a boy. Who knows but that this incident may have been the turning point in the life of the boy, who was to become the great Hoosier poet, whose work is so well known and well loved. It is hard to see his friend, who again his post-school master, that decided his own career.

"However it may have been in the case of the Hoosier poet, it is certain that boys and girls begin to shape their careers in life while in the public schools. It follows then that respect for the school and cooperation with it may be expected from parents. When extended throughout the community, there is a sort of unity in the endeavoring school, which reacts upon all who work in or attend it. School spirit is present and school progress is bound to come. In every district or city that knows its schools and is proud of them. To know the children's teachers and to keep in close contact with the school work is to make chums of one's children.

"Parents and teachers may cooperate in combating evils outside the school. They recognize the fact that many of their problems have their origin in conditions outside the school room. Our laws regarding child labor, for example, as is also their enforcement. The routine of a teacher's day precludes the possibility of leadership in undertakings outside the school. Parent organizations, however, have the useful strength and influence to bring about wholesome surroundings for the schools; their children attend.

"The home and the school also cooperate in training children to employ their leisure time properly. Supervised play from the kindergarten age up through the high school, is the child's right both at home and at school.

"May teachers the world over, catch a clearer vision of their opportunity to serve as builders of character. Mothers have always modified the character of their children and fostered their ambition, like the mother of Abraham Lincoln who saw the possibilities in her boy when he said, "I will get ready and some day my chance will come." Many grateful children have fervently repeated with reference to their own mothers, the words of the same boy, become a man, "All that I am, all that I ever hope to be, I owe to my angel mother."

In conclusion Mrs. Pollard gave the following outline from the Colorado Congress Bulletin:

- What is Expected of Home and School. The Home. 1. That the child should come to school regularly. 2. That he arrive on time. 3. That he be allowed to remain until school is dismissed. 4. That he comes sensibly fed. 5. That he come reasonably clean in person and clothing. 6. That he come sensibly and comfortably clothed. 7. That he has spent a reasonable time upon his home work. 8. That he leave home in a reasonably happy frame of mind. 9. That he come with a mind not prejudiced against his teacher. 10. That in case of difficulties parents reserve judgment until the teacher's side is heard. 11. That parents get acquainted with teachers and thereby almost forestall trouble.

- 12. That parents visit the school and learn at first-hand what the school is trying to do for the child. 12. That the home have a good word for honest effort, both of the child and the school. The School. 1. A clean, comfortable, well-lighted, well-ventilated room. 2. A comfortable seat for each pupil. 3. Pictures on the walls representing ideas of beauty, of courage, of sacrifice, of reverence, of patriotism. 4. A few well-selected books (in addition to textbooks) to show the operation with it may be expected from parents. When extended throughout the community, there is a sort of unity in the endeavoring school, which reacts upon all who work in or attend it. School spirit is present and school progress is bound to come. In every district or city that knows its schools and is proud of them. To know the children's teachers and to keep in close contact with the school work is to make chums of one's children.

- 5. A musical instrument of some kind. 6. Sanitary outbuildings or toilets, clean and free from defacement of all kinds. 7. School ground adapted in size and character for play, and if possible, ornamented with trees and shrubbery. 8. A course of study that recognizes the child's present and future physical, mental, moral, and social needs. 9. A trained supervisor to direct and harmonize instruction so as to satisfy these needs. 10. A trained teacher in sympathy with child life, imbued with the ideas of her calling. 11. Teaching that will train the head to think, the heart to feel, the hands to be useful. 12. Teaching that will promote health and add efficiency to head, heart and hands, making life worth living.

"The home and the school also cooperate in training children to employ their leisure time properly. Supervised play from the kindergarten age up through the high school, is the child's right both at home and at school.

From Ponca Journal March 28, 1894:

On Tuesday morning county clerk Buebe received the following telegrams from A. J. Poppleton, which speaks for itself.

Omaha, March 25, 1893.—The case of Fields vs. Dixon county has been decided in the supreme court in favor of the county.

A. J. Poppleton.

We also notice a statement of the decision in the Omaha Republican and Sioux City Daily Journal of the 25th of March.

Washington, March 24.—In the supreme court a decision was rendered in the municipal bond case of the county of Dixon vs. Marshall Field. This was a suit upon past-due coupons of certain bonds issued by the county of Dixon. The case was argued by the county of Dixon, by Messrs. Poppleton and Black Hills railroad company. The court holds that the county is not liable by rentals in the bonds but that the bonds are valid and that, having been issued in contravention of the constitution, they are without warrant of law and void. The judgment of the district court is reversed and the cause remanded, without instructions, to enter judgment in favor of Dixon county.

Our readers will remember generally the facts in regard to the issuing of the $87,000 railroad bonds, which have so long hung like an incubus over our people and been a terror to persons of means desiring to invest in our country. This decision practically relieves us from this burden, and restores to our money capital and enterprise free of any future question of taxation for the payment of the bonds.

The history of this remarkable litigation will undoubtedly prove interesting. After the railroad bonds were issued and the weight of the great taxation occasioned thereby had been met by our people, and it being apparent that the old company had not built and did not intend to build the road as agreed upon, when the bonds were issued, it was decided that instead of having eighteen or twenty miles of road in our county to assist by the payment of the taxes, we were to enter the entire burden by reason of the bonds, the county was to get all paid about four miles of very inefficient rail, the money of our best citizens advanced the proposition of trying to defeat the bonds so wrongfully and fraudulently obtained it being known that Judge Barnes had been issued in Wayne county in the state supreme court, he was very naturally consulted about the matter and the prospect of success in such a case as a fight was made, and he gave it as his opinion that there was a chance of defeating the bonds, which was worth at least a trial.

Accordingly a public meeting was called, which was attended by prominent citizens from all parts of the county. The meeting was presided over by the commissioners of the county were instructed to employ Judge Barnes, and on his recommendation and suggestion to employ him to Omaha to procure the services of A. J. Poppleton and Judge John M. Thurston, to fight the bondholders to the end, that the county should be freed from the liability determined, Judge Barnes stating that Messrs. Poppleton and Thurston were eminent and able lawyers, and that he had had a great deal of much greater experience than himself. The result shows that the county was made a great success, commissioner Wright, county treasurer Hurly and Judge Barnes went to Omaha and arrangements were perfectly made for the counsel secured.

According to the plans agreed upon between the three counsel, as soon as Judge Barnes returned a suit was brought for the purpose of making a record of this paper assuming the risk of furnishing himself as plaintiff and the officers of the county enjoined from levying, collecting and disbursing any more funds for the payment of the bonds or the coupons thereof. This soon brought the bondholders to the front, and suits were commenced in the United States circuit court at Omaha for the collection of the interest coupons as they matured, there having been in all about twenty. Judge Barnes and the board of county commissioners gave the necessary information and assistance, and Messrs. Poppleton and Thurston took the weight of the fight, and promptly met the bondholders at every turn, until the main case which has now been decided in the supreme court of the United States in favor of the county, was decided squarely against us in the United States circuit court at Omaha. Bonds were arranged and an appeal promptly taken by the attorneys to the supreme court of the United States. And thus the litigation went on.

About a year ago the bondholders made a proposition to the county to reissue the bonds at a reduced rate of interest, which was being said without question. The proposition met with a good deal of favor from our citizens. At Dakota county the same proposition was accepted and a settlement of their bond question effected in that manner. This had its influence upon Dixon county, as the same proposition was made against the county, and the fact that many prominent attorneys of the state gave it as their opinion that the bonds should ultimately have to be paid. Finally it was decided to consult with the attorneys and see if their faith in the case was not well shown, and act upon their advice in the matter of settlement. They said that while it might be that time look unfavorable, they still felt that in the justice of their cause and that it would get pay-to-fights. Hence the proposition to reissue was rejected.

It is interesting to note how now been decided in the United States supreme court practically decides the whole bond question, as the issuing of the bonds is pronounced unconstitutional on the ground that they were issued to the amount of 15 per cent of the valuation of the county, whereas under the constitution of the state only 10 per cent is allowed. Hence while this suit was brought only for the recovery of the interest due, the decision strikes the vital of the bonds, and the county of Dixon, principal and interest, and in this county in Dixon county may feel a small degree of relief from the book of attorneys Poppleton, Thurston and Barnes, for pursuing it to so successful a termination.

The NERVOUS WRECK by E. J. Rath

BEGIN HERE TODAY

The "Nervous Wreck," an exciting young easterner, is driving Sally Morgan from her father's ranch to the station when they run out of gasoline. At the point of a gun The Wreck takes five gallons from a passing car. Later they are held captive at a ranch along the way because Charlie McSeen, the foreman, wants Sally for a bride. As he discovers that Underwood, the owner of the ranch, was in the car which they held up, Underwood—nominally Sheriff Bob Wash—who is Sally's fiancé, the robber. Sally meets young Chester Underwood and rides off with him. The Wreck accidentally drops some dishes on the kitchen and Timothy the Underwood chauffeur, snickers.

Now Go On With the Story.

"Tim!" demanded the Wreck. "Come out of this!" he guessed. "I bet you must just quit a lot." The Wreck placed the remainder of the dishes on the table and selected the top one. "I'm going to bust more," he said. "As Timothy dodged the dish he threw a yell of surprise. It hit the wall just behind his chair. A second one was not so well aimed, for it went through a window. But Timothy did not wait for any comment in the marquis' mansion. He bolted for the door, which he reached while the fourth dish was in the air. It crashed against the jamb and most of the pieces fell outside. The Wreck surveyed the marks of his achievement; shrugged his shoulders, lifted the pile of dishes from the table, and resumed his journey to the pantry. "Damn that Underwood pup," he said.

Timothy had not personally figured in the matter at all, so far as the Wreck was concerned. He was merely a symbol. Late in the afternoon the Wreck went for a walk. His impulse was to take the trail that led back into the hills, it was in the direction Sally and Chester had ridden. But he sternly compelled himself to follow the wheel tracks that went toward the main road. Let her see that he was as long as she liked; it was no affair of his. He did not pay much attention to the trail. His mind was concentrated on the problem of where Charlie McSeen had hidden the wheel of the fiver. In odd hours he had been searching furiously without the least satisfactory result. The fiver was locked in a shed, into which he could have easily broken; but he knew that it was useless to search there. Charlie would not have made things quite so simple as that. The wheel was somewhere else, and it would be time enough to treat the shed when he located it. Several times he considered the advisability of trying to thrash the truth out of Charlie, but Sally in respect for his project. She was by no means sure that she could whip everybody on the ranch. Even if she had been, she was not certain that Charlie would tell.

He was still walking slowly, his eyes staring at the ground, his drumming sound caught his ears. Instinctively he paused to listen. Hooves. They were coming nearer, too. Probably Sally and Chester had been circling around through the hills, he thought. Well, if that was the case he had no desire to meet them. He did not want Sally to get the notion in her head that he was eavesdropping or that he had the least interest in anything that she did. So he stepped off the trail and there were clumps of young spruce on every hand, and he moved around behind one of them, where he could not be readily seen. The hoof beats continued to grow louder, and the Wreck, crouching, peered through his screen for a view of the trail.

Only one horse, after all, it was a few seconds later, but it was knew the sheriff was unaccountably proud. Bob Wells was undoubtedly up at the house, talking to Underwood and heading over the about the hold-up. Sally was still some where out on the trail with Chester Underwood. There was nothing for the Wreck but to wait.

He sat on the grass and propped his back against the corral fence, keeping watch upon the trail that led back to the hills, and also upon the house. If he saw the sheriff coming for his horse he would disappear behind the nearest shed. If Sally came first he would be there to warn her. He found little comfort in this, but it was the only course for the present.

Half an hour later, still huddled against the fence, he thought he saw a dust cloud on the back trail. Polishing his spectacles, he restored them to his nose for another observation. Sure enough, there were two riders coming. They were coming at a gallop, too, and soon they were so near that he could identify Sally beyond any mistake. There was a fine grace and confidence in the way Sally handed herself in a saddle, and it was not lost even upon the Wreck, poor horseman that he was. She cycled rings around Chester Underwood.

He climbed to his feet as Sally swung herself out of the saddle, and she saw him for the first time. "She flashed her quirt in salute. "Hello, Henry. We've had a ball ride."

"Tim!" he answered with a nod. "The Wreck was trying to give her a warning before she might betray herself into an indiscretion. Not being adept at expressing his thoughts, save in words, the best he could do was to fashion his features into a queer, baleful grimace. Sally was puzzled, and she showed it by a wrinking of her forehead, which signified inquiry. Chester slid off his horse, so that for an instant his back was turned. The Wreck quickly laid a finger against his lips and jerked his head in the direction of the corral.

Sally looked, then started, her mouth opening slowly. She knew the black horse out of a million. Bob Wells! Swiftly her glance swung in the direction of the house. "Well," said Chester, "shall we go up to the house? I'll see you all the way home, you know."

Sally recovered herself and smiled. "You go ahead," she said. "Thanks ever so much for the ride. I want to talk to Henry for a minute."

CHAPTER XIV A Woman's Place. When Chester was beyond earshot she turned to the Wreck and almost smothered him in an avalanche of questions. He told it rapidly, and Sally kept an anxious eye on the house. When he finished she sent another glance in the direction of the black horse, who was unconscious of the Wreck.

having created a sensation profound and disturbing. "You don't suppose he's tracked me," said Sally. "How could he?" "I don't see how he could either. But I'm awfully smart when it comes to being smart. If he knows where he's at, he's got to be smart. Now and deftly she shut in the eyes of the Wreck. "It's a hundred to one he doesn't know where he's at," she said. "It's a thousand to one he hasn't any idea who he's after. He probably comes for some more information. And they're all lying so hard he'll never find out anything."

"Hope so," said Sally doubtfully. "How long do you suppose he's going to stay?" (To Be Continued.)

It is all right to take your time and do things well, but not so well to take other people's time.

Chilcott Brothers Bred Sow Sale West Point, Neb. Thursday, Feb. 26 At the Fair Grounds Pavilion 15 Tried Sows 35 Spring Gilts From our three entries at Nebraska State Fair in the junior pig class, we won 1st and 2nd, also junior champion. From our four entries at National Swine Show we won 1st, 2nd, 3rd and 5th in junior class, also junior champion and fourth place on a lot of size, a placing very seldom made on junior pigs. We think these records stand unequalled by any single exhibitor in the junior class. These pigs were pronounced the greatest ever shown. A number of sows and gilts are bred to Super Yankes, we think the greatest pig of today. A number are bred to Yankee Special, the boar that was the attraction in 1923. Clan of Hillview, is also being used, he is the boar that sires the high backed stretchy kind. This trio of boars is hard to equal. This is an offering of sows and gilts meriting the attention of every farmer and Hampshire breeder. For size and individuality they are at the very top. Many of the spring gilts will weigh 340 to 350 pounds sale day. They have been pronounced by several breeders to be the greatest bunch of really big type gilts ever sold in this country. Consider the boars they are mated to, their produce will no doubt improve any pure bred herd. They are the big type, but smooth, deep sided, high backed and heavy boned kind with plenty of stretch. The offering represents following blood lines: Gen. Wickware, DeKalb King, Victory Giant, Nebraska Lad, Clausman, Oakdale Laddie, Yankee King, Yankee Special, Prince Bob, Wickware Flyer, Big Bill, Jack Defender, Monarch Defender, Gen. Tipton Again and Royal Tipton. This strain of Hampshires has proven its real value both in the feed lot and in the show ring. If it's size and real Hampshires you want, by all means attend this sale. J. H. Chilcott will sell a limited amount of Choice Early Seed Corn at This Sale. WRITE FOR CATALOG Wisner, Nebraska Auctioneers: Col. M. H. Cruise and A. H.
