The abolition of the habitual criminal to keep him from propagating. 3. Juniors of the State Normal have chosen the play "Mr. Pin Faunt Boy" written by Milne. Market Report

Furnished by Swanson, Gilmore & Walsh, Stock and Bond Brokers. Feb. 25.—The long threatened contraction in the national hog liquidation gave further indication this week of assuming definite form. Receipts at the leading markets of the country fell away with decided abruptness and suddenness in prices was immediate response from packers. The $11.50 line on the river has been safe, if passed and the $12 porker is now afloat. Moreover, all conditions surrounding outlets are so rosy that no probability of other than highly temporary adventures exists. These big packers have been waiting the shippers for some time as a cat catches a mouse, they have by no means been playing the game. The eastern shipper is fully aware of this and is now getting out and as the result is giving the big packer far more than the ordinary amount of competition, which is only another way of saying that the expected price advance will not come slower than the dwindling rags warrant. A helpful factor to the trade at this time is that the average weights are gradually getting heavier. The average here has worked upwards to over 200 lbs. in the past and it is thought might be well to add that the excellent packer demand here for some weeks past, as compared to other local centers, is traceable to this attraction. Following sharp gains in the killing weight last week, the trade really lay around. The check received on a 25,000 head increase the first half of the week at the 11.50 level, while the market did not compare to the same period last week. However the ability of the trade to handle that increase without any real reaction, shows a strong tone to the market and indicates higher prices to come. On paper prices may look some better due to the fact that the market is holding steady and improving the quality of feed lot offerings. Additional numbers of short feeds to sell at $10 and over, are showing, while the market is holding steady and being included at this time. Stockers and feeders came in for rather dull treatment this week, except where the quality was excellent and very good. Some short fed steers were returned to the country as high as $8.35 and light green steers again sold at $5. But for the rank and file of the animals, they averaged only $6.25 and $7 going out of first hands; the deal dragged somewhat. However, the spring demands are opening up and the market is holding steady and being anticipated from here on out. As was suggested last week, conditions showing that they are hard to trade proved too strong to permit volume to continue down. From under $17 the top fat lambs rose to well into the $17 range and the front figure for killing ewes can again be written with $9.

Why the Big Cut in High Grade Pianos and Piano Players

Our line of Chickering Bros., Baldwin Pianos, Hamilton, Star, Gulbransen, Howard and other makes—well known instruments, high grade and new, only a few weeks from the factory, CHOICE in every way.

The Reason

We bought heavily a large stock for our Christmas trade. You know the conditions—extreme weather—impassable roads. We could not get to our customers; they could not get to us. We must reduce this stock—we do not have display room—we cannot carry this large stock—it must be sold and so

An Opportunity to Secure Pianos or Players Below Factory Prices

You have been thinking about a piano in the home; perhaps you want the children to have advantages in music; if so, it must be given them when children—start now and during the coming school vacation they can have extra time to advance in music—the next six months will mean much to them.

Buy for Cash or on Payments

If your piano is idle, children all away, if no one that plays—the proper idea is to exchange for a Player Piano or a Phonograph—it is not necessary that the home be deprived of music—anyone can play. PIANOS MARKED IN PLAIN FIGURES.

Foreign Advertisements THE AMERICAN PRESS ASSOCIATION

Our profound conviction that March would this year strip itself of accustomed savagery and usher in mild and leading spring was given a good deal of weight with the appearance of Old Boreas yesterday, but we still feel the month will be friendly and favorably disposed.

A fair proportion of nerve is necessary, but when it crowds out and nullifies all other qualities of mind and character, it is a liability to misadventure. One whose capital stock is made up wholly of nerve is like an automobile whose power tries to depend on just one cylinder.

Ceremonies incident to the presidential inauguration next Wednesday will be broadcasted and heard by everyone who listens in. Due to the radio, people everywhere will be brought in closer touch with the inauguration and the excitement of the day than another similar inauguration rolls around, people may be able to see as well as hear the ceremonies when they listen in.

The STATE OF CALIFORNIA. An interesting contribution to today's Herald, W. S. Goldie, former Wayne editor, now of Wilmington, Calif., refers to the grasshoppers and locusts which have so often suffered in the course of the early development of the middle west and expresses regret that his parents did not go to California in the early days and pass up Iowa for the golden southwest. He thinks if Columbus had discovered California, the middle west would be a different place. He suggests, however, that Californians are indolent and too lazy to take advantage of opportunities.

Since we have been drafted against national impulse to serve as one of the directors of the Nebraska Press association, and since we must move more actively than the circles of our organization, we are going to learn all we can from the wilderness of the profession in Nebraska and this becomes a duty to our constituents. If we do not return as much as we get from the experience of others, the disparity will not be due to lack of intention.

A two-cent gasoline tax is promulgated by the Nebraska legislature, and it will be generally endorsed by people of this state who are interested in transients who use the roads, help keep them up. As the bill stands, it will exempt farm tractors, stationary power machinery, city street-cleaning machines, vehicles used by mail carriers on regular routes, motor boats and airplanes. The gasoline tax should have been adopted in the interest of road construction when it was urged by ex-Governor McKelvie several years ago, but it is better to come now than later.

Suppression of news or the censoring of it for political or common ambition. One should bear in mind that a publisher is responsible, that he must use his own judgment in the value of the news of interest in facts, and that he will fail, as he should, if he does not have sense enough to exercise fairly sound judgment. The necessities to regulate avenues of publicity is not due so much to a desire to keep the public uninformed as a desire to simulate power. Authority is not so much based on presumption as it is on concealed and misdirected activity, tacked on as a side line, in the course of performing a great life service.

The Herald stands volume thirty-six today, and it feels as buoyant and amiable as a boy of 21. We hope it will grow in wisdom and usefulness as it grows in age. It has been running along nearly fourteen years under present ownership, and it has made considerable headway in that time without wearing out the publisher, making him offensively rich. Feeling so young and sprightly, with its stock of experience, it ought to be able to quicken its pace and do a great deal better in the future than it has in the past. Favorably situated and well established in the hearts of an army of loyal subscribers, its necessities to regulate avenues of publicity is not due so much to a desire to keep the public uninformed as a desire to simulate power. Authority is not so much based on presumption as it is on concealed and misdirected activity, tacked on as a side line, in the course of performing a great life service.

In regard to pyramiding ads, in which it will be noticed that our alert and aggressive foreman is yielding as far as possible to the suggestion of the famous Inland Printer, the thing that impresses us most is the fact that we are receiving the average for the respectable pyramids. And diverting a little constant advertising backed by proper service, as reflected in the success of the home and abroad merchant, is an assurance of success in any line of business. This Cozard merchant attributes his large volume of business mainly to advertising, though it is plain that carefully worked out details, quick and thoughtful attention to the wants of customers, and fair and square dealing in all respects all the time, also contribute to his phenomenal success in a small business. It is in pyramiding, the more ads we have, the more pyramiding will be done, and the more pyramiding the more done, the more it will accrue to those in the pyramids and those doing the pyramiding. For the financial interest of all concerned, therefore, bring on your ads.

Sometimes devoted parents become rather over-zealous in trying to get their children to make expected headway in school, and then straightway they blame the teachers. But it is a fact that the teachers are rarely to blame. Usually they do their utmost to lead and stir students to make due intellectual progress. Because a student lacks anchor and getting nowhere, he does not necessarily an irrefragable saphire, nor is his teacher a pewter dollar. From his temporary suspension of mental and physical energy, he will in due time burst into surprising activity, and then your pyramiding will tickle with pride and you will be able to direct and commend his teachers. Just be patient.

Bank clearings on the average show a healthy financial condition. In New York, money that is idle for years is being put to work. The bond market is active. Stocks are holding an advantageous position. Their values continue to ascend. Trading is unusually active for the reason that there is plenty of money for investment, now considered rather idle beyond the danger point. Confidence has been restored in the financial world. The evidences of actual progress toward complete recovery have not been overlooked by the money interests. With manufacturing holding steady or expanding its activity and with agriculture promising a greater improvement within the year, a solid foundation for financial operations has been established.

The foreign movement should continue steady and strong hereafter. Against the approach of warm weather, the momentum of business activity ought to be such as would carry the movement through summer in a satisfying way. By the time of another harvest a decided change is expected. A year from now an even greater contrast, no doubt, will be shown.

what they continue to demand. Shipments abroad have increased appreciably, and the movement of goods from moment to moment was speeded up, no doubt, by operation of the Dawes reparation plan in Europe. Various countries of the old world have given forth their own reconstruction and are winning their way back to economic independence. They are working, therefore, they are producing, they are getting their own wealth. So they are buying and selling. For a time they are expected to buy more than they sell. They have not yet regained the equilibrium they enjoyed before the economic collapse that came with, or followed the war. Consequently, American export business will flourish for some time because Europe's demand will exceed its own supply of merchandise.

At home the increased buying power is traceable directly to two things. These are the improved agricultural situation and increased industrial activity. The farmer is in a better financial position because of better prices for their products. Wage earners have been employed at gainful occupations as industry has expanded to meet heavier demand with greater production. Labor is in the market for re-employment. Unemployment at a minimum, the industrial buying power is greater than it has been at any time in the last five or six years. There is nothing mysterious attaching to the increase in business activity.

Bressler, City Clerk. Councilman Bichel introduced the following resolutions to be filed with the Mayor and council by the clerk. Said resolution was and is as follows:

RESOLUTION. Whereas, on the 10th day of July, 1920, the City of Wayne, Nebraska, did issue, or cause to be issued, the bonds of Paving District No. 1 of said city, in the amount of $75,000.00, dated July 10, 1920, due and payable July 10, 1940, optional on any interest payment date after date of said bonds, said bonds bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum; said bonds being duly and legally issued by said city, pursuant to the provisions of the laws of the State of Nebraska; and

Whereas, there is at this time still outstanding and unpaid of the principal amount of this issue of Paving bonds the sum of $55,000.00; and

Whereas, and the 15th day of May, 1920, the City of Wayne, Nebraska, did issue, or cause to be issued, the bonds of Paving District No. 2 of said city, in the amount of $75,000.00, dated May 15, 1920, due and payable May 15, 1940, optional on any interest paying date after date of said bonds, said bonds bearing interest at the rate of 6 per cent per annum; said bonds being duly and legally issued by said city, pursuant to the provisions of the laws of the State of Nebraska; and

Whereas, there is at this time still outstanding and unpaid of the principal amount of this issue of Paving bonds the sum of $37,000.00; and

Whereas, at this time there remains of the above mentioned two issues of Paving Bonds, $112,000.00 unpaid and a legal obligation of said city, with funds on hand, insufficient to pay the same, excepting the accrued interest, and it having been ascertained and determined that the rate of interest has so declined in the bond markets that by taking up and paying off, or exchanging said outstanding bonds by the issuance of Refunding Bonds at a lower rate of interest, a very substantial saving in the amount of yearly running interest may be made for said city; and

Whereas, it is deemed for the best interests of said city to take up and pay off, or exchange, said outstanding bonds heretofore referred to, in the total sum and amount of $112,000.00 by the issuance of Refunding Bonds of said city in a like amount, and upon like conditions, as to payment date, at an interest rate of 5 per cent per annum; therefore

BE IT RESOLVED BY THE MAYOR AND COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF WAYNE, NEBRASKA:

1. That it is for the best interests of said city to take up and pay off, or exchange, the aforesaid $112,000.00 of said city by the issuance of Refunding Bonds in the like amount; and upon like conditions as to payment date, to bear interest at the rate of 5 per cent per annum, payable annually.

2. That the City Clerk be and he is hereby directed and ordered to cause public notice of the intention of the Mayor and Council of said City of Wayne, Nebraska, to issue the said outstanding bonds by the issuance and exchange of a like amount of Refunding Bonds for them and in their place, as provided by law in such cases made and provided, said notice to the taxpayers of the City of Wayne, Nebraska, to be published for two consecutive days in the issue of the weekly issues in the Wayne Herald and Nebraska Democrat, two weekly and legal newspapers, published within and of general circulation in said city, prior to the date set for said meeting of the Mayor and Council, at which meeting, the time and place of which is hereby fixed for March 10, 1925, at 8 p. m., of said day, any objections that may be made by any taxpayer of said city, to the proposed action of said Mayor and Council of said City shall be received. Said Public Notice shall state the time and place for filing objections to such proposed action of the Mayor and Council of said city and shall be in substantially the following form, to-wit:

Reorganization Of Neb. Administration

(By Jas. E. Brittain)

American state government, with but few modifications, is conducted after the type of the British. The organization in Nebraska is based on the principles adopted in the latter part of the eighteenth century and the beginning of the nineteenth century.

The organization of the state government provided in nearly all states has been a governor and other officials—such as the secretary of state, treasurer, auditor, attorney general, and the chief of public instruction, and one or two other officials who obtain their office by election.

The remarkable developments during the last fifty years in political, economic and social conditions have altered the main features of state government, as devised in the past.

While a striking evolution has taken place in the federal government, and while the government of the United States is undergoing radical reconstruction, state governments have been until quite recently conducted along lines established by the British.

In order to adjust a form of government, planned for the more primitive conditions of many years ago, so as to conform to the modern conditions which have developed upon state government, it has been necessary to establish numerous boards, commissions and committees.

It is a well known fact that these boards and bureaus were created one at a time, as occasion arose, and were constituted as independent agencies, each with its own designated powers, state administration has lacked in the necessary unity and correlation to secure economical and efficient public service.

The conviction that state government is both costly and inefficient, there has been during the past ten years, a widespread movement in favor of the reformation of state governments. The move for administrative reform in Nebraska, which culminated in the provisions of law passed by the legislature of 1913 is but part of the tendency prevalent throughout the United States.

The general type of state administration which has developed in this country has been characterized by Markham in his "Near State Administration," p. 167, as follows:

"The administrative organization which has resulted from the practice of creating numerous state boards and commissions shows a confused and inconspicuous development and systematic planning—Endless ineffectualness and overlapping and overlapping functions are the natural result. The administration of the states' business has been divided into small and arbitrary departments, each with its own separate board, exercising its powers with little or no reference to the activities of other boards charged with the management of closely related matters. The slight regard paid in the creation of such boards to their proper interrelation with existing agencies has frequently produced conflicts of authority. . . . Moreover in the conduct of their affairs, such boards are frequently ignorant of the activities of other agencies; they are subject to but slight supervision or control by state executive authorities. . . .

"In the past ten years surveys and investigations have taken place in more than half of the states for the purpose of suggesting methods for the increase of economy and efficiency. Generally speaking, the various investigating bodies have reported that the existence of the numerous boards is wasteful and should be created as the need for them arose without any consideration for the grouping of related activities, had resulted in confusion and overlapping duplication of activities, positions, and salaries. Furthermore that there was no uniform system of reporting or accounting in use, no centralized authority on the part of the governor over the administrative offices. The result of these surveys and investigations has been the form of state administration. Nearly all of such investigating bodies have also called attention to the desirability of an efficient state system. In at least five states, Illinois, Nebraska, Idaho, Washington and Ohio such survey has been followed by the general reorganization of their state administrative machinery.

The Nebraska Reorganization.

The constitution of 1875 provided for an executive and legislative branch of the governor, lieutenant governor, secretary of state, state treasurer, attorney-general, superintendent of public instruction, and the commissioner of public lands and buildings. It further prohibited the creation of any new state executive officers. The governor in 1913 created chief executive officer to see that the laws were faithfully carried out. In 1875 Nebraska was a pioneer state with an small territory, and this mostly in the southeast portion. As the state grew and developed, it was found necessary for the state government to enter into a certain territory which had not existed in 1875. As it was impossible to create new executive officers, boards were formed to take care of the new territory, composed of several of the constitutional officers. Such boards were created separately as the need for them arose and in 1913 the following boards were created with certain of the state executive officers as ex-officio members: board of charities, corrections, banking, insurance, board, depository bonds, voting machine commission, board of canvassers, board of irrigation, highways, and the state department of health, board of veterinary medicine, board for the registration of nurses, board of pharmacy, board of vocational education, normal school board, board of equalization and assessment, and board of educational funds and trustees. The governor is assigned to thirteen boards, the attorney general to nine, the auditor and secretary of state each to seven, the treasurer to five, the superintendent of public instruction to five. There was no attempt to classify or group these various boards under one definite head. Furthermore, it was physically impossible for these officers to perform all of the duties assigned to them, so deputy officers were appointed to assist them.

In addition, the governor had been made the commissioner of numerous other activities, but these had been provided to do the work. Hence the following offices and commissions also existed: game and fish commission, fire commission, food, drug, dairy, oil, and hotel commission, sealer of weights and measures, state veterinarian and livestock sanitary board, state board of public health, education and investigation, minimum wage commission, bureau of labor, pension board and advisory board of labor, board of railroad commissioners, board of accountants, board of industry and labor, forestation commissioner, and health general. The examining board for the state included: chiropractic, embalmers, etc., medical advisory board.

The numerous boards and commissions have been set forth in detail at the risk of appearing encyclopedic and tedious; for in no other way can the reader grasp the number of these agencies and the wide variety of functions between them and their limited compartmental character.

In the selection of the deputies no uniform method was provided, nor did the governor always have the power of removal. (A very important consideration holding him responsible for administrative efficiency.) Some of the officers were appointed for four and six years, while the governor's term was two years. Consequently the governor had little authority to shift officials for negligence or incompetence. It was the duty to shift the responsibility for the performance of duties due to the fact that the boards were composed of several persons, each of whom could be held definitely responsible. Administrative control was further hampered by the lack of any uniform system for administrative efficiency. Reports were required, while in other cases no definite time was fixed for reporting nor a definite period for the activity. In several instances the same activity was carried on by more than one agency with a consequent duplication of effort and expense. Although the governor was the supreme executive officer in theory, he was not so in fact, as he had no effective means of control over the laws were faithfully carried out.

The defects of such a system were apparent to several former governors and the legislature. The legislature recommended that a committee of investigation be appointed to make an investigation and suggest methods of reorganization. Such a committee was appointed which reported in 1914. Governor Neff's report in 1916 and the report of the committee in 1919 said: Governor Neff in 1919 proposed to consolidate the various state boards and commissions, but in addition divides authority and responsibility. It is, at present, impossible to consolidate the various state boards and commissions in any manner that would be demanded by any business man in the conduct of his private transactions, and the thing most needed is a centralized responsibility for the discharge of the trust assumed by men who are elected by the people to serve as public officers. The present system is inefficient, conditions too often incident to the expenditure of the funds raised by the people for the benefit of the state.

In 1918 the republican party had declared itself for a reorganization of the administrative machinery employing the principle of efficiency in audit over expenditures and a consolidation of the various agencies of government for the purpose of eliminating overlapping functions and preventing overlapping functions and needless duplication.

Accordingly the bill which was known as the civil administrative code bill was passed by the legislature of 1919. In brief, this law abolished the existing boards and commissions and classified chief executive officer to see that the laws were faithfully carried out. In 1925 Nebraska was a pioneer state with an small territory, and this mostly in the southeast portion. As the state grew and developed, it was found necessary for the state government to enter into a certain territory which had not existed in 1875. As it was impossible to create new executive officers, boards were formed to take care of the new territory, composed of several of the constitutional officers. Such boards were created separately as the need for them arose and in 1913 the following boards were created with certain of the state executive officers as ex-officio members: board of charities, corrections, banking, insurance, board, depository bonds, voting machine commission, board of canvassers, board of irrigation, highways, and the state department of health, board of veterinary medicine, board and grouped their activities under six heads provided for a budget to be prepared by the governor. This was done by the legislature. This was the first time that the budget had been prepared by the legislature. No systematic method of preparing the budget was provided and the law was practically inoperative. Under the present system the budget of finance in the department of finance in the department of finance, calls for the estimates from all the state officers and institutions of the amount to be received and expended by them for the coming year period. All such estimates must be in his hands by September 1st. The amount must be the amount to be needed by each activity for the biennium. The secretary of finance compiles the estimates which he submits to the governor by November 15. The governor may prepare his own budget on particular items of the amount to be received and expended by them for the coming year period. He may have as low an estimate as he wishes, but his reasons for so doing to the legislature. The appropriations made by the legislature are in excess of the governor's recommendations unless three-fifths of each house concur in the increase. Any increase in the amount to be received and expended is placed in the hands of the governor, who thereby holding him accountable for the financial policy of the state.

Finally, the cabinet idea has been introduced similar to that feature of the national government. Whenever important matters arise affecting the general administrative policy, the governor may call a meeting of all the secretaries. This has proven to be an effective means of harmonizing the general administrative policy, which under the old system was impossible.

The first state budget law enacted in 1919 provided for a budget to be prepared by the governor. This was done by the legislature. This was the first time that the budget had been prepared by the legislature. No systematic method of preparing the budget was provided and the law was practically inoperative. Under the present system the budget of finance in the department of finance in the department of finance, calls for the estimates from all the state officers and institutions of the amount to be received and expended by them for the coming year period. All such estimates must be in his hands by September 1st. The amount must be the amount to be needed by each activity for the biennium. The secretary of finance compiles the estimates which he submits to the governor by November 15. The governor may prepare his own budget on particular items of the amount to be received and expended by them for the coming year period. He may have as low an estimate as he wishes, but his reasons for so doing to the legislature. The appropriations made by the legislature are in excess of the governor's recommendations unless three-fifths of each house concur in the increase. Any increase in the amount to be received and expended is placed in the hands of the governor, who thereby holding him accountable for the financial policy of the state.

Reorganization Of Neb. Administration

(By Jas. E. Brittain)

American state government, with but few modifications, is conducted at the present time on the basis of the organization and administrative principles adopted in the latter part of the eighteenth century and the beginning of the nineteenth century. The administrative machinery which existed in nearly all states has been a governor and other officials such as secretary of state, treasurer, auditor, attorney general, and one or two other officials who obtain their office by election.

The remarkable developments during the last fifty years in political, economic and social conditions have not altered the main features of state government, as devised a century ago. While a striking evolution has taken place in the federal government, and while cities and towns are undergoing radical reconstruction, state governments have been until quite recently "frozen" along lines established decades ago.

In order to adjust a form of government planned for the more primitive conditions of the past to the conditions which have developed upon state government, it has been necessary to establish a numerous boards and commissions, and officers. Due to the fact that these boards and bureaus were created one at a time, as occasion arose, and were not subject to independent agencies with specially designated powers, state administration has lacked in the necessary unity and correlation in the selection of the most efficient public service. Owing to the conviction that state government is becoming costly and inefficient, there has been during the past few years and now is a widespread movement for the reformation of state governments. This movement is a reform in Nebraska which culminated in the provisions of law passed by the legislature of 1919 in but a few days of the session throughout the United States.

The general type of state administration which has developed in this country has been that of the "Matthews in his 'American State Administration,' p. 167, as follows: "The administrative organization which has resulted from the creation of numerous state boards and commissions shows a lack of coordination, development, and systematic planning. Growth has been due to absurdities and lack of coordination are the natural result. The administration of the state has naturally been divided into small and arbitrary limited commissions, each under a separate board, exercising its powers with no reference to the activities of other boards charged with the supervision of closely related matters. The slight overlap in the jurisdiction of the boards to their proper inter-relationship with existing agencies has tended to produce conflicts of authority. Moreover in the conduct of their affairs, such boards are frequently practically irresponsible, inasmuch as they are subject to but slight supervision or control by state executive authorities."

During the past ten years surveys and investigations have taken place in more than half of the states for the purpose of suggesting methods for the increase of economy and efficiency. Generally speaking, the results of these investigations have reported that the existence of the numerous boards and commissions, without any consideration for the grouping of related activities, had resulted in confusion and unnecessary expenditure of money in salaries. Furthermore that there was no uniform system of reporting or accounting in use, and no central authority on the part of the governor over the administrative officials. The result was an irresponsible administration, and naturally all have called attention to the desirability of an "effective budget system. In at least five states—Illinois, Nebraska, Idaho, Washington and Ohio; such survey has been followed by a general reorganization of the state administrative machinery.

The Nebraska Reorganization. The constitution of 1875 provided for an executive department composed of the governor, secretary of state, auditor, secretary of state, state treasurer, attorney-general, superintendent of public instruction, auditor, and controller of public lands and buildings. It further prohibited the creation of any new state executive officers. The governor was made the chief executive officer, and the laws were faithfully carried out. In 1876 Nebraska was a pioneer state with a small population and this fact was reflected in the constitution. As the state grew and developed, it was found necessary for the state government to enter upon a course of expansion which had not existed in 1875. As it was impossible to create new executive officers, boards were formed to care for the new activities. In the course of several of the constitutional officers. Such boards were created separately as the need for them arose until in 1912 the legislature authorized the use of certain of the state executive officers as ex-officio members; board of charities and corrections, board of insurance, board of depository bonds board, voting machine commission, board of highways, board of irrigation, canals, and drainage, department of health, board of veterinary medicine, board for the registration of nurses, board of pharmacy, board of vocational education, normal school board, board of reorganization and assessment, and board of educational lands and funds. Government has been assigned to thirteen boards, the attorney-general to nine, the auditor and secretary of state each to seven, the treasurer to six, the secretary of state to five, and buildings and the superintendent of public instruction each to five. There was no attempt to classify or group related activities under one definite head. Furthermore, it was physically impossible for these officers to perform all of the duties assigned to them, and as a result officers were appointed to assist them.

In addition, the governor had been made the commissioner of numerous other activities, and as a result he was provided to do the work. Hence the following officers and commissions also existed: game and fish commission, fire commission, food, drug, dairy, and hotel commission, sealer of weights and measures, state veterinarian and board of sanitary boards, bureau of printing, bureau of pardons, board of examiners of public accountants, board of inspection of child labor, forestation commissioner, general land office, state geologist, board in osteopathy, optometry, chiropractic, embalmers, etc., medical advisory board.

The numerous boards and commissions have been set forth in detail at the risk of appearing encyclopedic, and tedious, for in no other way can the scope and extent of the various activities, the lack of co-ordination between them and their limited compartmental character.

The lack of correlation in the uniform method was provided, nor did the governor always have the power to change the number of these activities, the lack of co-ordination between them and their limited compartmental character. The uniform method was provided, nor did the governor always have the power to change the number of these activities, the lack of co-ordination between them and their limited compartmental character. The uniform method was provided, nor did the governor always have the power to change the number of these activities, the lack of co-ordination between them and their limited compartmental character.

The defects of such a system were so apparent that several governors called the attention of the legislature to them. In 1913 Governor H. B. Payne recommended that a committee of experts be appointed to make an investigation and suggest methods of reorganization. Such a committee was appointed which reported in 1914. Governor Morehead in 1915 and 1917 recommended to the legislature that the state be reorganized under the possible Governor Neville in 1920 said to legislators, "the board system is not only expensive and inefficient, but in addition it divides authority and responsibility. It is, at present, impossible to handle the state's affairs in the efficient manner that would be demanded by any business enterprise in the conduct of its private transactions, and the thing most needed is a centralized responsibility, the discharge of which is assumed by men who are elected by the people to serve as public officers. Divided authority and responsibility, which is the cause of inefficiency, conditions too often incident to the expenditure of the funds raised in taxes from the people of the state."

In 1918 the republican party had declared itself for a reorganization of the administrative machinery embodying the principles of an effective audit over expenditures and a consolidation of the various agencies of government for the purpose of eliminating useless departments and of reducing overlapping functions and needless duplication.

Accordingly the bill which was known as the civil administrative code bill was passed by the legislature of 1919. In brief, this law abolished twenty-four of the existing boards and commissions and classified and grouped their activities under six departments. These departments were styled the department of finance, agriculture, labor, trade and commerce, public health and public works. At the head of each department is a secretary appointed by the governor with the consent of the legislature, and responsible to the governor. Each department is organized into bureaus and divisions with a chief at the head of each. The secretary of each department is responsible for all the employees in his department. Each secretary makes his own departmental regulations subject to a free veto by the department, and is held directly responsible to the governor to obtain results. The principle of centralizing responsibility is well carried out. We should like to describe the activities of the various departments but since space is limited we will describe the question naturally arises as to how this system has functioned since its establishment. A thorough discussion of the subject is beyond the limits of this article. However there are a few considerations which may be noted.

The standardization of the records of the department is a decidedly new feature in the executive branch. Within each department all records are kept in the same office in a single book-keeping division. Previously, in the activities now included in the department of public works, each of the ten examining boards had its own records. When a change was made in the personnel of a board, there was a change in the number of keeping the records. Inaccuracies and ambiguities resulted. Now the bureau of examining board keeps the records of all the examining boards. This system has been made uniform and now we have one set of accounts kept for all the departments by the department of finance which before were twenty-five or more.

A uniform system of reporting has been adopted so that the governor receives at stated periods a report on the activities of all six departments, and from them may learn exactly what is being done. Besides such periodic reports, there is the regular biennial report. An improvement is observed in the matter of buying supplies. Formerly each board and commission bought its own supplies as did also the constitutional officers. Now all buying is done by the department of finance, who buys all supplies for all state offices, and insulations except the university and the state school. By buying in quantities and supervising requisitions carefully, it is said that a saving of 20 per cent through this method has resulted. A similar improvement in the handling of the state printing is also in use.

All departments furnish the department of finance an estimate every three months of the amount of money needed by them for the next quarter. Their estimate is checked with the amount of money on hand appropriated to each department and activity before the expenditure is allowed to be made. Through this audit, deficiencies at the close of the biennium which were formerly so common, are prevented.

No doubt the most important improvement which has been brought about is in the matter of the budget. For many years there was no connection between the revenue raising agency of the state and the revenue expending agencies. Appropriations for the biennium were made by the legislature without regard to the amount that would be raised by taxation for the period. Money was appropriated for the various agencies for the other thing without consideration as to whether funds were going to be available to pay them. Such a situation has been remedied by the appointment of one man to fill a barrel with water with a bucket while several others are busy engaged in emptying it through numerous openings. A similar system with co-ordination between the revenue raising and revenue expending agencies has been recently adopted by the federal government, and many states—and it is nowhere disputed that this is a valuable principle in any government.

The first state budget law enacted in 1919 provided for a budget to be prepared by the governor. This was not followed by the legislature, and did not have to be followed by the legislature. No systematic method of preparing the budget was provided and the law was practically inoperative. Under the present system the budget is of great significance before the regular session of the legislature, calls for the estimates from all the state officers and instructs the governor to prepare the budget. The amount to be needed by each activity for the biennium. The secretary of the various departments is responsible for public hearings on particular items, and may raise or lower any estimate but must state his reasons for so doing to the legislature. The appropriations made by the legislature cannot be in excess of the governor's recommendations unless a three-fifths majority vote is obtained. It is the present system that the governor is placed thereby holding him accountable for the financial policy of the state. It is felt that the idea has been introduced similar to that feature in the national government. Whenever important matters arise affecting the state, the governor may call a meeting of all the secretaries. This has proven to be an effective means of harmonizing the general administrative policy which under the old system, was impossible.

Former Wayne Editor Roasts California

Wayne, Calif., Feb. 26, 1925. Wayne Herald, Wayne, Neb., Dear Mr. Editor: I have just received your issue of May-1924, when I made a first visit to my friends in Wayne, after an absence of twelve years. My conscience troubled me all the time. And in heeding your request of some years ago to write you some impressions of life in California, take this opportunity to comply with it. I have a large system of long-deferred thanks to the good folk of Wayne who tendered me their unstinted hospitality and proved that the old center was still the best when it comes to real goodness of heart and warmth of hand-clasp. Kindly tell the folks that the reception given me at that time is one of the brightest spots in an oft-timed-dread and uninteresting life of over three score years.

That man's movements on this horizon man-made to heaven and God-given sunshine and showers often hang on matters or incidents as immaterial as a squeegee's eyelash, let us make haste to "get on" and head to Los Angeles, California. Old timers there will recollect that about November, 1914, a real estate professor appeared to "talk me up" maps, etc., of a wondrous land and lot scheme in state of Washington; a gigantic irrigation proposition that would unfold here and there in the west, etc. He had me intensely interested and about ready to buy his wares, but deferred further conference to be held in the next hotel in the evening. I kept the engagement and slumped down in an office chair to hear my Washington booster (who was called to "talk me up" the next day) traveling man about Los Angeles. He dispassionately depicted this city as the most wonderful place in civilization, only places to be seen, and for a white man to live in and where opportunity stalked day and night—millions for the men who were night enough to go to the moon, etc. I slipped away, without my presence being noted and made plans to move to California or bust. And as a result, might have been found only being bust—before I found the rainbow.

I have met many real estate men since that long-ago day, but never one who spoke more of the "rain" and—from the heart speak knowledge as well as truth.

The greatest pity one can feel for a middle-west farmer is that the ridiculous and malicious propaganda promulgated back here to keep people from coming to California, land the Golden State, is the cause of my life, since crossing the Rocky Mountains, is that my parents in 1859 did not keep up their trek from Canada, and come to California. Instead of making camp for some fifty years in western Iowa. When I look back those years of blizzards, grasshoppers, pest-plagues, and devastating locusts of summers, drought or floods or tornadoes—hard years that would paralyze the present day youth to encounter, and come to California, to the incident life led by Californians, too lazy to take advantage of their glorious opportunities—I want to go find my old teacher.

Of course we have embarrassments out here. Sometimes it doesn't rain enough. Occasionally orange groves freeze—where orange trees should have been planted. Some of the disease got into the country last year from some other state, which recalls to mind a time when about all the cane died in Iowa, and the cause was that it was soon eradicated. There has been one slight earthquake in the past fourteen years, in Los Angeles. The jar was not felt here, but severely in the far east. There have been lots of land grabbers, but they are well cleaned out at this date, and I had some hard contact with one of them. One of the first deals I made was swindled out of a thousand dollars. About all the business men whom I came in contact with, I can "keep still about it; catch the next sucker. That is the way we do it in California." There are a few old-timers in Wayne who will remember "By Dad" was not built that way. Through the courts and the little newspaper I was then publishing we got that notice in the center of the way. That was the beginning of the end of fraudulent transfers, although no lot salesman has yet been found who has been able to forget the size of a piglet in rear of him as it is going up. I have yet to find a gas salesman in oil or real estate who has not come out of the east, and been a Californian. I have come to crime, as are peoples elsewhere in the country, but graft is far from being their long-suit. This salubrious climate, wonderful beauty of nature, plain and sea, make it but ruin for the tourist-sucker to err in judgment.

However, people come to California to live; thousands of them who were penalized to die in the east. It is a story often told: "The doctors gave me a few months to live, but I have been enjoying California sunshine now for over twenty-five years." My wife says she never knew a well-dressed man come to this land of sunshine and flowers. She is more than my "better-half" now, although the scales have given me over thirty pounds more weight.

Sick children become strong and healthy, old people never know when to die. If you don't believe it, ask Judge Samuel Dimes.

Lute Carter, who came out of that busted country bank, back there, is enjoying life and employed as cashier in our biggest bank. Jack Liveringhouse, and wife are in the fruit business, and doing fine. Jack tells me, "O. H. Miller rides around in this section, surveying lots and reckoning up the profits. Dr. Cherry, who is located in Pasadena, recently sold some property in Los Angeles for $200,000.00 less than $100,000.00 less than three years ago. But Doc didn't get half the profit. The C. A. Chase family is at Long Beach, and Sunday morning they are discussing just where to invest in a home, so you may not see them again—residents of Nebraska. There are at least four ex-Nebraskans in Chicago, and one in the harbor district of Los Angeles, who have made fortunes from several hundreds of thousands to a million dollars in the wheat or twenty years. And this harbor is only an infant, as yet.

It is far from being a matter of tourists and climate in Southern California, to gain great riches as well as health and happiness. It is now hundreds of millions in big business—tourism, the packing, shipping, and agriculture.

Was it Walter Wellman or Carpenter who wrote up the cities of Los Angeles, Long Beach and San Diego, in the Chicago-Record Herald, about 1908? Wonder what these nationally-known and now dead writers would say should they see the city. It is almost unbelievable to the uninitiated. Let the young people of Wayne remember this prediction: Within fifty years Los Angeles is going to fit Little Old New York up in the air, and this harbor will be the leading mart of trade in the whole world. The largest groves, which it accumulates wealth and population. It contains all kinds of people of more than all the known races, and coming from jazz to grand opera. Had Christopher Columbus landed on this Pacific Coast instead of the Atlantic, there would be nothing but the largest groves, the prairies of the great middle west.

Out of the storms and stress of the East, Into the Land of Sunshine and Heat. Millions of people will crowd the trail. Over the Mountains, into this Yale.

Health and Happiness beckon to you. Who lingers there, believe not 'tis true? Come, pass through the first gate to Heaven; For there the way is strewn with leaven.

Yours for California against the world, W. S. Goldie.

Your Income Tax.

Net income, upon which the income tax is assessed, is gross income less certain specified deductions for business expenses, losses, contributions, and debts, etc. A stockbroker may deduct as a business expense amounts spent for rent of his place of business, advertising, premiums for insurance against fire or other losses, cost of water, light, and heat used in his place of business, drayage and freight bills, and the cost of maintenance and repair to delivery wagons and trucks, and a reasonable allowance for salaries.

A professional man, such as a lawyer, doctor, or dentist, may deduct the cost of supplies used in his profession, expenses paid in the operation and repair of automobiles used in making professional calls, dues to professional journals, and the cost of water, light, and heat used in his office, and the hire of office assistants.

The farmer may deduct as necessary expenses all amounts actually expended in carrying on the business of farming, such as amounts paid in the production and harvesting of his crops, cost of seed and fertilizer used, cost of minor repairs to farm buildings, and cost of small tools used up in the course of a year or two. The cost of farm machinery, equipment, and farm buildings is not deductible as expense.

Deductions for personal or living expenses, such as repairs to the taxpayer's dwelling, cost of food, clothing, education of children, etc., are not allowed.

A fire prevention day program was held at Madison Wednesday of this week. Following a program at the fire station, a party of fire wardens were to be inspected to find fire hazards and suggest improvements.

Kids figure it isn't a bit too early to start looking forward to vacation.

The only good reason for cleaning out the ashes is to make room for more.

In a few more weeks folks who are naturally lazy can blame it on spring-fever.

It's a good idea to mark each garden plot with the seed packet so you can tell what it is if it comes up.

What the person, sitting in the back seat, doesn't know about driving a car are just the things a driver should do.

Lots a men hate to get their golf clubs out of the cellar because it'll remind them that the cellar needs cleaning.

IT IS SERIOUS. Some Wayne People Fail to Realize "The Seriousness of a Bad Back."

The constant aching of a bad back. The weariness, the tired feeling. The pains and aches of kidney hills. May-sweats-remedy. It's neglected. Dangerous-urinary troubles often follow.

A Wayne citizen shows you what to do. Melvin Norton, painting contractor, Wayne, says: "I have been a painter for the last forty years and the continual inhaling of the turpentine fumes has given me a bad condition. The secretions were unnatural and burned in passage. At times, I could hardly move or get dressed and aching from joints, aches and pains in my back. I tried different remedies, but to no effect. At last I tried Doan's Pills and they brought good results. I kept on using Doan's and they benefited me. I use them at different times now when I feel my kidneys need attention and I feel my back aching. I have a 60c. at all dealers. Foster-Milburn Co., Mfrs., Buffalo, N. Y. 12611ad

The NERVOUS WRECK

by E. J. Rath
©1924-27 NEA Service Inc.

Begin Here Today.
The "Nervous Wreck," an eccentric young contractor, is driving Sally Morgan from her father's ranch to the station when they run out of gasoline. At the point of a gun the Wreck takes five gallons from a passing car.

Later they are held captive at a ranch along the way because Charlie McSwen, the foreman, wants Sally for a cook. They discover that Mr. McSwen and the owner of the ranch was in the car which they held up. Sheriff Bob Wells, who is Sally's fiancé, comes to the ranch to take charge of the case. The Wreck notifies Sally, "How long do you suppose he's going to stay?" asks Sally anxiously.

Now Go On With the Story.
"Haven't an idea. Not long, I guess, unless he's loading on his job." "Oh, Bob never loads. He's too active. He's a real sheriff."

The Wreck was tired of hearing the sheriff's virtues related, but he side-stepped an argument on the point.
"Well, what are you going to do?" he asked. "Go out in the hills and hide."
"No-o. We can't do that. But do we dare go up to the house?"
"Oh, I suppose we do," said wearily. "But if Bob should happen to walk into the kitchen—" She finished it with a gesture.

"He won't," he's busy with Underwood. Got to take a chance, any how."
"Yes, we've got to."

They walked briskly to the house, praying that the sheriff would stay somewhere around the front—until they reached the kitchen. Sally did not breathe comfortably as she made certain that the kitchen was empty. The Wreck moved over to the pantry door and butted it.
"Only one door to watch now," he said.

"Unbolt it, Henry. Suppose he comes in the other way? I'm going through that pantry and into the kitchen. And vice versa, if he comes in from the pantry. I'm not going to be bothered."

They walked briskly to the house, praying that the sheriff would stay somewhere around the front—until they reached the kitchen. Sally did not breathe comfortably as she made certain that the kitchen was empty. The Wreck moved over to the pantry door and butted it.

The old unreasoning resentment against Bob Wells was returning. It made no difference if he did not know who he was pursuing, from the standpoint of Sally it was no less unpleasant. Nor was she any too certain when she saw the sheriff's face as he knew, for he was conspicuous to the leaning-backward point—a regular bull-dog. He had a habit of talking about the law impartially against all evildoers; he even boasted about it. She remembered when it seemed to sound very nice, but that was before she had a posse on her trail. She wondered how far Bob Wells would really go, if he learned the truth. She knew none too much.

When Charley McSwen came in she jumped at the sound of his step and a fork clattered on the floor. "What's the matter?" he said. "And it happens we've got company, ma'am. The sheriff of this sovereign and God-fearing county has dropped in to take a little nice noon-recreation about these desperadoes that he's expectin' to exterminate. I just came in to tell you he's stayin' to supper. Set another plate in the dinin'-room, Henry. He's goin' to eat with the family."

"It does with the sheriff, ma'am. He's powerful estover. I've seen him often. He's a powerful talker, too. He's been workin' up a real good appetite, talkin' to Mr. Underwood. It seems he's aimin' to do great things in the line of makin' the country safe for democracy. He's been tellin' quite a lot about some of the things he's done already, and the samples he's impressed. He's got a posse down the road a piece, waitin' for developments. Tomorrow, as near as I can make out, he's goin' up to raise hell among the wicked."

Sally winced inwardly. Charley was putting things in his own words, but somehow, carrying things that she had heard, she was hearing strangely as if Bob Wells himself were talking.

"So you'll best get plenty, ma'am," so ordered Charley, for he sure has talked himself empty.

All of this brought a grin to the face of the Wreck, which Sally observed, but did not dare resent. But she pursued by him—obviously when Charley went out, her mind filled with another thought.
"He stays for supper, that means you can't wait on the table, Henry!"
"I'm not kicking."
"Maybe not. But who's going to take your place? I can't."

"I should say not. I guess we can get one of the boys."
Sally shook her head. She knew cowpunchers.
"Timothy?" said the Wreck suddenly.
"But I wonder if he will," she mused.
"He will; don't worry."
"Have you been fighting with Timothy?" said she, eyed him suspiciously.
"Lord no! Timothy won't fight anybody. But he'll wait on the table."

She knew that something had passed between the Wreck and Timothy. She might have guessed if she had caught the glances.
"There'll have to be a reason for it," she said. "You'll have to be back here. You'll have to go down to the bunk house and stay there."
"And suppose this sheriff comes in while you're up here alone?"
"Oh, I can take care of myself."

He did not like the idea of leaving her to face possible consequences, but he could see that it might be necessary. It would take a real reason to avert any possible speculations in the mind of Charley McSwen, who still had a way of reverting to the fact that Henry Williams was not "very strong," and who always grinned faintly when he mentioned it.

The Wreck found Timothy in the shed where they kept the big car. He was passing the time in grinding valves. There was a faint look of anxiety in his eyes as he beheld the throver of dishes.
"You're to wait on the table tonight," said the Wreck bluntly. "Better go up to the kitchen now."
"I'll wait on the table? I never did. I don't know how. What for?"
"Because I'm sick."

"You don't look sick," said Timothy.
"And you didn't act sick a while back."
"I'm sick," repeated the Wreck. "How I look has nothing to do with it. I've nerves. One of my spells is coming on. It was beginning this afternoon—just beginning, you understand."

The look that he gave Timothy bored him like an auger.

"I tried to walk it off, but I couldn't. It's coming on again. It gets worse—if I don't get to bed—there's no telling."
Timothy began wiping his hands on a ball of cotton waste.

"I'll wait on the table," he said. "Only if I don't do it right they haven't got any license to bawl me out. You better get into bed right away."
The Wreck went off to the bunk house, where he stretched himself on the blankets and tried to get interested in an old magazine. He felt like a man who had retreated under fire, but he knew there was nothing else to do. What worried him most was the possibility that Sally might face a crisis alone. If anything happened he wanted to be there.

Sally did not find Timothy particularly cheerful, although he seemed to be willing enough, once she had an apron on him. She instructed him in some of the rudiments, and had him practicing at the kitchen table, with imaginary guests to be served.
"It's only for this evening, I'm sure," she said. "Henry almost certainly to be better in the morning."

Timothy said he hoped so, because the boss was always fussy about how his meals were served, being lived in in New York most of his life.
Sally felt easier in mind when he reported that the family and the sheriff were at the table. It gave her a breathing spell. She knew that Bob was not likely to get-up from the table so long as there was anything more to be served. Eating, to him, was a measurable job of cooking, as she had learned from plenty of experience at the Bar-M. He was even slightly vain of his achievements as a trencherman. Charley had been an expert right about it. So she kept Timothy busy between kitchen and dining room, carrying things that made him so hungry to look at that he could scarcely wait for his own turn.

In fact, he did not wait, for on one of his trips back to the kitchen Sally observed that he was munching something. He brazenly admitted that he had been "snitching" a biscuit or two.

"They look so good, ma'am," he said with an apologetic smile. "And I'm pretty empty. Besides, that it gets on your nerves to hear 'em boosting the food when all you're supposed to do is carry it round."
Of course she could not be angry.

The BULL'S EYE

Editor and Author WILLIAMS

LOOKING at this Bull's picture here just reminds me of the Cattle Business, of which I am still in, in a small way.

Stock on the Exchange in Wall Street was never higher, Stock on a Ranch was never lower.

If a cattlemaster sold a Steer and they would let him weigh all the mortgages that was on the Steer with him, he would weigh 50 pounds heavier.

One Tenderloin Steak at a Hotel brings more than a Steer.

A quart of milk brings more than the Cow.

A Texas Long Horn brings $20 and one pair of Horn-rimmed glasses $25.

A Calf sells for $10 and its brains sell for $20.

The hide of a Cow brings $1 and one pair of shoes $18.

Two sacks of 'Bull' Durham is worth more than the Bull.

The only way to be in the Cattle Business is with a picture of one.

More of Everything for a lot less money. 'Bull' Durham proposition. More flavor, more enjoyment and a lot more money left in the bankroll at the end of a week's smoking.

TWO BAGS for 15 cents
100 Cigarettes for 15 cents

"Who is boosting it?" she asked.
"The boss and the sheriff are both doing it," said Timothy. "But you've got to admit they make good every-thing they say, by the way they lick into it."
It did not surprise her to hear that Bob Wells was enjoying himself. What a joke it was! If he only knew! It was some satisfaction to know that you were doing a good job, even if you were conscripted.
Timothy kept her informed of the progress of supper, and also made a report of the conversation.
"It turns out," he said, "that other parties here in the country gets awful wild when you're this far from New York."

Duroc Jersey Sow Sale
45 Head
Hubbard, Nebraska
45 Head
Saturday, February 28, 1925
At 1:30 o'clock. Free Lunch at Noon.
Sale will be held on the farm two and one-half miles east of Hubbard; four miles south of Jackson and fourteen miles southwest of Sioux City.
On the above date I will offer 45 good, big, stretchy gilts that for size, type and breeding I do not think their equal will be sold in northeastern Nebraska this year.
They are nearly all bred for April and May farrow to Radio Col. This boar was in the winter after that Grant Linn showed at the Inter State Fair last fall in which he won first on spring boar and first on spring gilt. I consider him the best pig I saw last fall. If you can use a few good gilts bred to one of the best boars of the breed be sure and see these.
