He is either coming in or going out. If he is staying in it's because they haven't got wise to him yet. I have always said Office-holders should be elected for life (subject, of course, to impeachment for neglect or dishonesty). Then they could give their work all of their time, instead of worrying about how to stay in, and that would do away entirely with the biggest social problem we have to face in this country. And that is the thousands of individuals who go through life just trying to get in office. If we could get their mind off of offices, and get 'em to working at something useful. But what's the use talking about a Heaven on earth. We got to die to get rid of the Office-seeker, and then I bet you we will find them, either wanting to have Saint Peter impeached, or to get a job as Superintendent of the Furnace. Oh Yes, I like to forget 'Bull' Durham. It will be on sale in both places, no advance in prices.' Will Rogers.

The NERVOUS WRECK

by E. J. Rath
©1924 - by NEA Service Inc.

Begin Here Today.
The "Nervous Wreck," an eccentric young easterner, is driving Sally from his father's ranch to the station when they run out of gasoline. At the point of a gun the Wreck takes five gallons from a passing car. Then Charlie McSween, foreman of a ranch along the way, hides the Wreck's car and forces Sally to act as cook. Then they discover that Mr. Underwood is the owner of the ranch, was in the car which they held up. Sheriff Bob Wells, who is Sally's fiancé, is unwittingly searching for the "bandit" who held up Underwood. Young Chester Underwood, son of the owner, chases upon the shed in which McSween hides the Wreck's car and tells his father.

Now Go On With the Story.
"Excellent advice," said Underwood himself had omitted to follow it, and he actually had his hands on the bandit-car.
"Get a lantern," he said. "Let's go down and have a look at it." Chester fetched a lantern from the kitchen and they went down to the tool shed. Jerome Underwood examined the mysterious flivver with some attention, and a private investigator to his own imported car. He studied the license plate with a searching eye, trying to make him believe that it was a smash-up which crumpled a wheel, there would almost certainly be other marks on the car. But all it showed were a few ordinary dents and a myriad scratches, common to hundreds of thousands of other flivvers all over the world. Standing there on its wheels with a lamp-visor, as if in a crutch in place of the fourth, the dumpy thing possessed an uncanny faculty of annoying him. He was sure of respect and resentment toward it. He had hated flivvers always; people who drove them, as he saw them, never had any road sense. It was useless to pass them in the highway and leave them spluttering in your wake, because there was always another one ahead. Now it seemed that his diffused hatred came to a focus on one solitary specimen out of all the millions.

He led the way back to the house, swinging the lantern and trying to make something out of Chester's recovery. "When they entered the living room he did the obvious thing. "Go get McSween," he said. "And let me see the talker's car." Chester found the foreman in the bank house, getting ready to pull off his boots. Charlie was a believer in going early to bed when there was nothing else to do. He went up to the ranch house wondering what the boss wanted.

Mr. Underwood always tried to make it a practice of getting immediately to the point particularly with subordinates.
"What was the car that stands in the tool shed?" he asked.
"What car?" asked Charlie.
Then and there he passed a Rubin, and realized it. Probably he had guessed it foolishly. But the question had taken him by surprise, and his own question in return had snapped itself off automatically.
"That was the worst of speaking without due reflection. Why hadn't he said that the car belonged to Mr. and Mrs. Henry Williams and let the truth have its way?"
"There's a car down there, a three-wheeled flivver," said Underwood. "Who does it belong to?"
"Who does it belong to?" repeated Charlie. "I reckon that's a new kind. It ain't any wonder they keep takin' chunks off the price."
"Mr. Underwood stared at his foreman."
"Mean to say you didn't know there was a flivver in the tool shed?" he demanded.
"That I ever heard of it," said Charlie promptly.
Having inadvertently set a course for himself he proposed to say it. He had an expectation about turning back. And what was all the fuss about anyhow?
"Well, we found one there. My son, I've been taking a look at it. Do you know what it think?"
"Um! No, I can't say as I do, Mr. Underwood."

Charlie was becoming cautious and curious. He scratched his chin and resolved to be deliberate.
"We think it's the same car that was used by the gang that held us up."
"Well, I'll be dog-goned! And standin' down there in the tool shed! Why, I'll just be damned, that's all!"
"And you mean to say you don't know anything about it?"

"But I'm a-goin' to," said Charlie. "I'm a-goin' to have a look."
He seized the lantern and hastened out of the room before Mr. Underwood could utter another question. Down near the shed he paused for thought. There was no need to go and look at the Wreck's flivver; he knew all about it. What he wanted was a little time.

Twice within the space of a minute he had been surprised, and he proposed to get himself in order before they did it again. It had never occurred to him that any member of the Underwood family would take the trouble to discover the flivver's whereabouts now. It's always been puzzling to him to figure him. According to his wife he's a kind of invalid. But according to Mort, and things which he's seen with his own eyes, he's a rampagin' rhinoceros. I wouldn't pick him to be in the stick-up business, and yet I wouldn't say he don't possess qualifications. The main thing is, he's got all the required nerve. The son of a gun!"

Charlie stood tweaking his ear and frowning at the tool shed.
"Admittin' the indictment—which I ain't necessarily, but admittin' it for the sake of argument—what am I wrong, then? Besides, if I know there was any flivver here—'I got back and say I did.' I'm a-hor. There ain't anything I hate to be accused of more than that. Besides, if I admit I know all about it, and it turns out that Henry lives up to what may be justly expected, then I'm makin' myself a sort of accessory to the fact. Which is true and is damagin' to my reputation. I may be rough and untutored, but I ain't any Henry Williams—the four-eyed son of a gun!"

He picked up the lantern, turned toward the ranch house and paused again.
Furthermore, here I've been telling the boss how I got him a prize cock from out east, along with her obligin' husband. He's liable to form a kind of poor opinion if I admit he came from the north coast at all. It's a reflection on foresight and management. And it's too late, anyhow. I can't tell him it's Henry Williams' flivver. He'll tell him it's mine, and can't admit havin' any guilty knowledge appertainin' to it. It looks like I had to keep right on bein' innocent, which is one of my best-points. "But—the son of a gun!"

Deciding that he had been away long enough, he went back to the house, where he found Mr. Underwood and Chester waiting for him in the living-room.
"Well," demanded the boss of the establishment, "is that a flivver all right," remarked Charlie as he set the lantern on the floor. "She's just what you said, a three-wheeled one, ain't it?"
"And you don't recognize it?"
"No, sir. It's a new sight to me. It's an amazin' visitation, so far as I'm concerned."
"You mean you didn't know there was a car locked up in that shed?"
Jerome Underwood's eyes were fixed in a glare of incredulity, but Charlie McSween gazed back with mild steadiness.

"Didn't know she was there. Didn't know the shed was locked. Hadn't been any call for anything that was kept in the shed."
"But—damnit!—how could it get there?"
"Charlie locked thoughtful.
"I've been tryin' to think," he said. "I see had four wheels I'd say she got there in the regular way. But she's only got two wheels and a soap box. That puts her in a class by herself. I can't figure her."
"Anybody around this ranch own a car?"
"No, sir. One of the boys had a motorcycle once, but he couldn't learn to stay on the seat. We ain't had even a bicycle around here since."

Underwood continued to regard him with unwinking amazement.
"You're supposed to know what's going on around here, aren't you?" he demanded.
"Yes, I reckon I am," said Charlie. "But it's a fair-sized ranch, and sometimes I'm travelin' around it. Do you want me to understand that a hold-up gang can use my place as a headquarters without my foreman even knowing it?"
"No, sir. I don't aim to be perfect, but I don't aim to be too careless, either. I take it you're feelin' pretty certain it belongs to the gang?"
"I am now, but I ain't thought of before, and so did my son. But when I'm told that you don't know anything about it, then I'm convinced."
"It looks reasonably convenient," admitted Charlie.
"What went on here the night before I arrived?"
"Nothing that I especially recall. I reckon we all turned in pretty early."
"Could they have run a car in here without your knowing it?"
"Looks like they did," Mr. Underwood. "It certainly makes me feel kind of foolish, being such a sound sleeper. But there she is, settin' there on three wheels and a box. There ain't any argument about that."

Charlie knew that he was looking sheepish, and felt it was the right way to begin.

You May Need Glasses
Glasses are no longer a hindrance to anyone. Today they are almost a necessity. With the great amount of reading we do, most of it very fine type, we are forced to strain our eyes constantly.
Gradually the eyesight becomes weaker and weaker and then fades. Correct it while you have a chance and have your eyes examined by an expert.

We have telegraphed our eastern dress and coat houses to ship by express new assortments of their very latest styles in spring coats and silk dresses.

Come Saturday or any day next week and choose from these newest styles. Hundreds of garments in the very latest eastern fashions will be here for your selection.

Popular Prices

Exclusive Styles

Most of the coats will be priced at $12.50 to $29.75. There will also be a few finer ones at $32.50 to $57.50. These prices will be much less than you could buy these garments for elsewhere. Our unusual method of handling a great quantity of ready-to-wear for out-of-town sales makes lower than regular prices possible.

You will find these dresses and coats in styles more exclusive than shown elsewhere. Several of the leading Eastern factories send us the pick of their latest models. Our stock is continually changing. Your coat or dress will be different and more up-to-date if you buy it here.

A lovely silk slip of triplette may be easily made at a cost of $2.00 to $2.50 by using one length of silk triplette tubing which you can buy here in the favored lighter colors of apricot, black and cocoa. No sewing required except hem and attaching shoulder straps.

Silk crepes suitable for dresses have just arrived. They are very specially priced at $1.85 and may be had in your choice of 5 new spring shades.

With nineteen spring shades in silk hosiery to choose from you can match almost every color in silk dresses and spring coats. They are shown in our splendid $1.50 Wayne Knit silk hose which gives such satisfactory wear. Full fashioned, of course.

A new embroidery needle which makes French knots and other fancy work stitches with almost incredible speed is being demonstrated at our store this week. Come and let Mrs. Bell show you what beautiful embroidery work anyone can do with this clever and helpful Parisian Art Needle.

Will they wash? We guarantee that they will. Peter Pan ginghams are color-proof to washing, sunlight and perspiration. If they fade we will replace the material and pay you for the making of the garments.
Renfrew Devonshire cloth will withstand boiling and hold its color. It is an unusually strong, firm cloth particularly suited for children's dresses, rompers, play-suits and for ladies' house dresses.

Indian Head can be washed as everyday colors. Comes in pretty spring colors for afternoon and porch dresses and children's dresses.

And what alluring lasts. For the younger sets broad toe, flat heel oxfords in the latest shades of tan or pretty cutout patent sandals with fancy stitching. For real dressy wear there are dainty satin, patent and kid slippers attractively fastened with neat ties, straps and buckles.

From Other Editors

For obvious reasons it is a little disturbing to note that golf players anywhere should ever have to hold joint meetings as indicated by the following to last week's Nebraska City Republican: "According to an item in the daily paper Nebraska City golfers have had another pep meeting and expect to rally around the golf club this year with renewed vigor."

Wahoo Wasp: To forestall any attempt that somebody may attempt to put across in the future in the way of a strong robin story, a member of the law enforcement committee, who is a part of the time is a mystery-gang neighbor, says he knows of a whole flock of these early messengers of spring that have made their home in one of the city parks all winter.

Fairbury News: To William Howard Taft goes the unique distinction of being the only man who ever was called upon to take the oath of office as president, and later to administer it to another. Mr. Taft was inaugurated president of the United States on March 4, 1919, and yesterday, as Chief Justice of the United States, he administered the same pledge to Calvin Coolidge.

York Republican: In North Dakota the two old parties have fused to destroy the remains of the non-partisan league. So long as our present system of government endures there will be two dominant parties and a third one will always find the two united whenever necessary to preserve the life of either. That is what makes it next to impossible for a new national party to get a firm toe hold.

Geneva Signal: Dr. J. T. House of the state teachers' college at Wayne made two addresses, one on John Jay Neffard, the Nebraska poet laureate, and the other a disquisition on the shortcomings of the metropolitan daily newspapers. The latter address should be reprinted before the American Society of Newspaper Editors, which is limited to the metropolitan. It might do them some good and it would certainly stir up controversy.

Geneva Signal: According to his own newspaper, the Collium Telegram, Congressman Howard screamed with pain and fear when he found out that congress had raised the salaries of all congressmen and senators by one-third, the new figure being $19,000 per year. The thing was slipped through without a record vote in either house and every congressman is in a position to wait and wash over this wretched big addition to his salary and lay the dark deed to the other 424 members of the house and the wicked senators.

Aurora Republican: Los Angeles and other west coast cities have for some time come in for ridicule of the more or less effete east on account of the occasional earthquake jolts that rock buildings in the state where the sun sets. Now it is New York that gets the merry he he. On the southern coast, they have typhoons and such. In the north they think it a mild winter when the thermometer does not hit 40 degrees below zero. In Nebraska, we have nothing worse than droughts, and they are occasional. Take your choice!

Kansas City Star: From the standpoint of congress the last session was the most successful in years. It raised the congressman's salaries.

Edwin Chavers celebrated his cash in their hands which at last meant profits instead of losses. This was because business executives had anticipated the first signs of agricultural recovery that the market for industrial goods would be strengthened as time went on.

That is exactly what happened. The domestic market became stronger for general merchandise. The farm population was buying again. Also the export market picked up because of several well understood reasons.

Wheat production had been short throughout the world, and Europe had become stronger financially due to the operations of the Dawes plan, which stimulated various peoples into greater effort in the creation of new wealth.

Today the railroads of the United States are working records in loading and hauling cars. That means something. The railroads would not be surpassing their past business except for the fact that economic recovery has been carried farther and farther as the months have passed.

An enormous volume of goods is moving in all directions. Past months have shown a steady progress. From the day the first price changes upward were reported from the southern farming sections last year the advance has continued.

As the harvesters swung north from Texas, Oklahoma, Kansas and Nebraska into the upper wheat fields the groundswell of agricultural recovery grew more impressive. Later, when a somewhat short corn crop was gathered, prices of that product went up and, in sympathy, other agricultural goods were similarly affected.

The prices are still up. May they stay that high? Not in the long run. There has been a single development so simple as this wrought such a change in a nation's industrial life: Prices of grains and other farm products merely went up after being down for years and the effect produced was one of magic.

Not only the 40,000,000 of population on the farms were affected. The other 80,000,000 experienced a favorable reaction. Industry was speeded up even before the bulk of the farmers got the actual revision downward is possible. The whole government is committed to that policy. It will mean when it comes further relief for capital and the opportunity to expand its services. The American people are on the threshold of a new and better era of prosperity that they have known in perhaps a generation or more.

Much misunderstanding, the pig. Folks thought he could just "wallow" around anywhere and thrive. Now we know he does best in a neat, clean house that is cool in summer and warm in winter. So money-making farmers are wallowing and ceiling their hog houses with Sheetrock—the different wallboard, that's plaster cast in sheets. Costs little, goes up easily, stays put permanently.
