A. T. Chapin, Civil War Veteran and Wayne County Pioneer, Dies At Home Near Winside.

Funeral Held Today

Final Rites Conducted by Masonic Order to Which Deceased Belonged Sixty-two Years.

Arthur T. Chapin who had been a resident of Wayne county since 1880, died at home on Monday, April 15, aged 81 years, 10 months and 17 days.

Funeral services will be held at his residence this afternoon at 2 o'clock conducted by Rev. J. Bruce Wylie and Rev. L. E. Recker, and burial will follow in the Winside cemetery.

Mr. Chapin was born at Concord, Maine, May 28, 1843. He served the Union over three years during the civil war.

Mr. Chapin was in Ford's theatre in Washington City on the night of April 15, 1865, when President Lincoln was assassinated, and he saw the murderer as he made his escape.

Mr. Chapin came to Wayne county in 1880. For his first dwelling, he hauled his lumber from Norfolk.

The deceased joined the Masonic lodge in Winside in 1885, and transferred his membership to Wayne and later to Winside. He was a charter member of the K. of P. lodge organized at Winside.

Mr. Chapin was one of the sturdy and influential pioneers of the county. He was a landowner and planted on his claim in this county.

for a razor that you couldn't sharpen or put in new blades. So why don't you figure the same way when you buy a lawn mower?
It's necessary that a lawn mower be sharp to run easy or do a good clean job.
You can sharpen an Eclipse Lawn Mower so easily that you will always have a nice working machine and besides save a big lot of expense. Let us show you. It's different.

Exide BATTERIES
The longer it lasts the less it costs
WHAT you actually pay for when you buy a battery is power to start and light your car and ignite the gas in your cylinders.
The cost of your battery depends upon how long that power lasts. A short-lived battery is expensive at any price. But a battery that stays on the job and out of the repair shop costs less and less as the months roll by.
Exide Batteries are known the world over for long-lasting service. You will get more months of use, fewer repair bills, and less worry from an Exide than you expect.

HERRICK
The Aristocrat of Refrigerators

An aristocrat is one entitled to leadership by reason of being the best.
The Herrick is the aristocrat of refrigerators not because it is made in greater quantity nor because it is any higher in price than others. Its right to its term lies solely in its demonstrated ability to do that for which a refrigerator is intended—keep food pure, and fresh.
Just as the grand piano is far more than merely a keyboard and sounding board, so the Herrick is more than merely an ice box. The design of a grand piano is of greatest importance. Its construction is in accordance with certain recognized principles.
So the arrangement of the Herrick is a vital factor in its efficiency and economy. Its design is in accord with the correct principles of refrigeration. Other refrigerators may produce cold air, but the Herrick—the aristocrat of refrigerators—introduced into refrigerator construction the cold, dry air circulation—the effective insulation, and many other features now recognized as essential to perfect refrigeration.
That is why exclusive homes, clubs, and apartment buildings are being equipped with Herrick refrigerators.
Refrigerator building has been the sole function of the Herrick factory for more than a quarter of a century. Originally built to achieve a reputation as the world's best refrigerator, the Herrick is built today, as then, with the utmost care so as to insure maintenance of that reputation.
The Herrick has consistently won highest awards wherever shown at exhibitions or exhibitions. It has been paid the further compliment of imitation.
But some Herrick features are too costly to invite imitation. Still others are patented to prevent imitation.
Despite all these facts; despite its standing as the aristocrat of refrigerators, the Herrick is available to all.
The reasonable cost of the Herrick refrigerator reflects its efficiency, its economy, its cleanliness, its satisfaction available for the most home as well as for the finest mansion or apartment building. There is a right size for every need and there is a need for a Herrick wherever food-keeping is regarded in its true importance.

NERVOUS WRECK by E. J. Rath Copyright, 1924, by G. Howard Watt

Begin Here Today. The morning of an eccentric young easterner, is driving Sally Morgan from her father's ranch to the station when they run out of gasoline at the point of a gun the Wreck takes five gallons from a passing car.

Later Charlie McSwen, foreman of a ranch along the route, kills the Wreck's car, takes off a wheel, and forces Sally to act as ranch cook. Then they discover that Mr. Underwood, the owner of the ranch, was in the car which they held up. Sheriff Bob Wells, Sally's fiancè, is unwittingly searching the countryside for the "nerve" who held up Underwood. After several failures, Sally and the Wreck finally succeed in making an escape in their own car. Now they come to a rutty trail which turns to the left.

It seemed that the matter of the morning had been left wholly in his hands.

"We'll take the pedigre," said the man with the rifle. "Any relation to the sheriff?"

"Plenty of relation," said Sally promptly. "We want to see him."

There was a cluckie by way of answer.

"Sure you're lookin' for the sheriff?" he inquired. "I kind of figure he's asleep and don't want to be disturbed."

"You lead me to Bob Wells," said Sally. "I'm going to step right out of this car, and if you start anything with that gun you'll wish you'd never been born."

The Wreck followed her, and they stood beside the flivver, with a rifle muzzle not more than a yard distant from them.

"I'll talk to Bob Wells and nobody else," declared Sally, firmly.

"Are you speakin' serious?" "I certainly am. And I'll advise you not to argue about it."

He muttered something that she could not hear, yet it conveyed the dramatic effect of a face-to-face meeting. The Wreck remained passive during the colloquy. He did not need Sally's caution. Whatever might be required of him, he felt that the time was not yet. Besides, he was sure that Sally had the right idea. There was no need for dealing with subordinates.

When the Wreck was in doubt. The He was quite willing to face the sheriff.

"Lead me to the sheriff," said Sally.

There was a suppressed laugh from the figure that held the rifle.

"I'll lead you," he said. "Come to think of it, I figure you'd better lead yourselves. You just lead for that camp-fire and I'll keep walking behind you. And don't forget I'm carrying that gun. Not that it makes any difference to me, but it might make a heap of difference to you."

Sally set off in the lead, stumbling through the brush in the direction of the camp. She was angry enough to shout what she wanted to say to Bob Wells, but she would not spoil the dramatic effect of a face-to-face meeting. The Wreck followed in her wake, grim, yet somewhat out of countenance.

It was a very small, disorderly and informal sort of camp, Sally discovered as soon as she put foot within the glow of dying embers. There was a tent; there was a sign of an establishment that contained ordinary comforts. But there were two men with rifles in their hands, sitting up in their blankets and studying the strangers with hard eyes.

"Well, who you got there, Lefty?" inquired one of the men on the ground.

"Parties lookin' for the sheriff," observed Lefty, with a somewhat exaggerated wince.

"Just the two of 'em?" "Just them."

The asker of questions arose to his feet for a better survey of the visitors. He was a large man and his most conspicuous feature was a broken nose. Sally and the Wreck came to learn that his companions called him Nosey.

"Where is the sheriff?" demanded Sally, but this time she did not receive any confidence. A sudden misgiving had assailed her.

"We ain't figurin' to meet up with the sheriff today," remarked Nosey. "This is not his camp, here?"

"No, you might say it isn't," Sally glanced at the Wreck.

"Well, Henry, I suppose we'd better be gone," she said.

He nodded and was turning to lead the way, when he found the muzzle of Sally's rifle—steering into his ribs.

"You are looking at them awfully," said Nosey, who seemed to be a person of authority. "Lefty, you just keep your eye on the lady and gent. I never I wanta talk to you."

The third man climbed out of his blankets and followed Nosey. They went beyond earshot. The guard motioned Sally and the Wreck to seats on the ground and placed himself opposite them at a little distance, his back against a tree. The rifle lay ready in his hand.

"It's afraid we've blundered," whispered Sally.

"What do you make of this bunch?" asked the Wreck. "Pretty tough, I'm afraid. Might have been worse."

"How?" "Might have been the sheriff."

"That's so," nodded Sally. "But I was all ready for him. Now I don't know just what we're up against."

"Tonight was coming rapidly in the windy camp, and the more they saw of the place the less she liked it. There was only one inference, of course; they had stumbled into some kind of a gang, very likely the same gang for which Bob Wells was searching. Fine luck! Nosey and Denver rejoined the group.

"What's the idea?" demanded the Wreck. "Prisoner."

"Maybe," said Nosey, who looked thoughtful.

"Well, if it's robbery, you don't stand to win very much."

"What's the game, comin' in here lookin' for the sheriff?" asked Nosey. "You friends of his?"

"We know him," said Sally, cautiously.

"That's plain enough. You were callin' him by name awhile back. You workin' for him?"

"Sally and the Wreck said 'No' together.

"I ain't so sure," mused Nosey. "He might think it was a smart trick, gettin' a woman to help play the game. I reckon you know the sheriff's out around here somewehers with a posse."

"He heard so," admitted Sally. "Do you know who he's lookin' for?"

"I suppose he's looking for you, isn't he?" "Well, you might say so."

"You won't find us the least bit of use to you," said Sally. "You might as well turn us loose. And if we run into the sheriff we won't say anything."

Nosey shook his head incredulously.

"How come you're off the main road, up in here?" he inquired.

"What fetched you? No; I figure we ain't gone to turn you loose right yet." (To be continued.)
