The Eclipse

We do not claim that it is made of better materials than many other high grade lawn mowers but we do claim it has features that no other mower possesses that enable the user to take care of it himself and at almost no expense so that he can have a machine that is always in good cutting condition.

A mower that is properly adjusted and sharp will run easy and cut smoothly and the Eclipse is so simple that anyone can adjust and sharpen it and besides with no danger of breaking it if he doesn't do it right, which is not so with other makes.

It has direct drive from both sides which saves power and besides brings the cutting reel close up to the tie rod in the front of the mower which guards it from injury and enables the user to cut close up to trees, walks, and foundations.

The six inch cut reel has four blades which will cut in higher grass and run easier than a mower with five or more blades in the reel.

The drive wheels are ten inches in diameter in which the gears are guarded from dirt and cut grass by Bangers on the side plates.

The Eclipse is made with our patented bearing bearings.

There are many other features exclusive with the Eclipse that might be mentioned but it should be sufficient to satisfy anyone to state that it has a reputation of seventeen years of success and is sold with satisfaction by thousands of hardware dealers.

Methodist Church Notes.

Sunday was a perfectly wonderful day, the weather was fine and the roads were good and the congregations were very good both morning and evening. Somehow we are hoping that we may use all the chairs and fill the side room as well as the main part of the building. It begins to look very much as though we would do that very thing in a very short time.

It is fitting that we should express our appreciation to Miss Rose Rew, Mrs. Robert Johnson, Mrs. W. C. Lowry, Mrs. Etta Perrin, Mr. and Mrs. Carl Wolf for the beauty and fragrance of the lilies, tulips and the lily at church on Sunday.

The pageant was given a fine crowd on Sunday evening and several have expressed their commendation of the way the young people presented the scene at the tomb, in the upper room and the ten virgins. A number besides those who actually took part have given time and effort as well as material to make it a success.

The books will be here this week for the young folks' devotional meeting. We will take up the study of the book of Ruth on Sunday evening and we hope to see a goodly number of young folks present at 7 p. m. The special feature will be a cross word puzzle.

The study class on Saturday evening at 7:15 is doing nicely and we will meet every week until children's day with 45 minutes of bible and church doctrine. The books are here and we still would like to have others enroll in the class.

Have Gas Cooking In Your Home, Too!

HERE is the cooker that puts an end to cook stove drudgery! It's the Coleman, the modern stove that makes and burns its own gas—gives housewives on farms and in small towns all the conveniences of a city gas range. It's a gas range and gas plant all in one. Easy and safe to operate. Tank can't spill fuel, can't be filled while in use, no crawling flame. A cleaner, hotter flame than natural gas or kerosene. A clean kitchen—always, and clean pots and pans—no smoke, no soot.

The Coleman cooks an average meal on $\frac{1}{2}$ worth of fuel. Made in various styles and sizes from small Engleberg Cookers to big, high-over ranges. Come in for a demonstration.

Gives Review Of District Meeting

Mrs. G. W. Crossland, who was one of the delegates from the Wayne Women's club to the twenty-second annual convention of the federated clubs of the Third district April 27 at South Sioux City, gave a report of the meeting last Friday at the club meeting with Mrs. Grace Keyser. Thirty-five of the sixty-two clubs in the district were represented. The convention motto was: "Better America, Better Home, Better Service." Main speakers were: Attorney Gen. O. S. Spillman of Lincoln, Mrs. O. A. Peterson of Omaha, Mrs. Paul Perryman of Broken Bow, Mrs. Minnie of Oakland, and Mrs. Penny of Ord.

Attorney Spillman, in his address, stated that law is the framework of government and it is not valuable to the country unless it is enforced. Law is organized labor. For civilization to develop it must be protected by organized order and that order is law. What we want in this country is adequate punishment for breakers of the law, he stated. Mr. Spillman gave the reasons for reducing crime, the enlistment of support of the people when bills are considered by the legislature, expression from the voters and amendments to standing laws.

The speaker closed by stating that the rich as well as the poor, the high as well as the low people must be protected. Mr. Spillman gave a call to the great class of Americans who labored with bodies and brains for this country, the "plain" people and they must be protected.

Mrs. Perryman, state club president, spoke and declared that club women must do everything with efficiency in their departments to live up to their estate.

Mrs. Anna Penny told of literature and the home and stated that books that should start each home are the bible, the Boston cook book, "Instructions for Feeding Infants" and "The Conquest of the Frontier."

Mrs. Francis Whitley of Webster City, Iowa, was the chief speaker at the banquet held in Sioux City. She said that "the world and the people are being turned into drainage ditches. Conservation of trees and water ways must be given priority."

Mrs. Smith of Omaha, area supervisor of the Nebraska Children's Home society, gave an address to the women of "The Children of the Broken Home." She stated that over 6,000 children have been saved from unbroken homes in this state alone.

Mrs. E. Kirkman of Lincoln, urged women to cooperate in the homes and adopt the budget system.

Mrs. O. A. Peterson of Omaha, called attention to the practical application of art in the home.

In a talk by Miss Eaton of North Bend the appalling statement was made that here foreign born children came to the homes for delinquent children. Nearly all delinquents are home born. One of the reasons stated was that 1,000 boys brought before him only three were Sunday school boys and most of them were American born. Miss Eaton expressed the great need for religious training and duty to this country.

The concert will be carried to entertain music lovers, concerts being given each afternoon and evening. The Salliford Troupe, world's greatest comedy entertainers will give free exhibitions every afternoon at 4 and every evening at 6:30. Wayne may well feel proud of the Savidge South Sioux City, gave a report of the meeting last Friday at the club meeting with Mrs. Grace Keyser. Thirty-five of the sixty-two clubs in the district were represented. The convention motto was: "Better America, Better Home, Better Service."

Man speakers were: Attorney Gen. O. S. Spillman of Lincoln, Mrs. O. A. Peterson of Omaha, Mrs. Paul Perryman of Broken Bow, Mrs. Minnie of Oakland, and Mrs. Penny of Ord.

Attorney Spillman, in his address, stated that law is the framework of government and it is not valuable to the country unless it is enforced. Law is organized labor. For civilization to develop it must be protected by organized order and that order is law. What we want in this country is adequate punishment for breakers of the law, he stated. Mr. Spillman gave the reasons for reducing crime, the enlistment of support of the people when bills are considered by the legislature, expression from the voters and amendments to standing laws.

The speaker closed by stating that the rich as well as the poor, the high as well as the low people must be protected. Mr. Spillman gave a call to the great class of Americans who labored with bodies and brains for this country, the "plain" people and they must be protected.

Mrs. Perryman, state club president, spoke and declared that club women must do everything with efficiency in their departments to live up to their estate.

Mrs. Anna Penny told of literature and the home and stated that books that should start each home are the bible, the Boston cook book, "Instructions for Feeding Infants" and "The Conquest of the Frontier."

Mrs. Francis Whitley of Webster City, Iowa, was the chief speaker at the banquet held in Sioux City. She said that "the world and the people are being turned into drainage ditches. Conservation of trees and water ways must be given priority."

Mrs. Smith of Omaha, area supervisor of the Nebraska Children's Home society, gave an address to the women of "The Children of the Broken Home." She stated that over 6,000 children have been saved from unbroken homes in this state alone.

Mrs. E. Kirkman of Lincoln, urged women to cooperate in the homes and adopt the budget system.

Mrs. O. A. Peterson of Omaha, called attention to the practical application of art in the home.

In a talk by Miss Eaton of North Bend the appalling statement was made that here foreign born children came to the homes for delinquent children. Nearly all delinquents are home born. One of the reasons stated was that 1,000 boys brought before him only three were Sunday school boys and most of them were American born. Miss Eaton expressed the great need for religious training and duty to this country.

Nineteenth Season For Savidge Company

Saturday, May 8, will witness the inauguration of the nineteenth annual season of the Savidge Amusement Company. Starting in a small way, this attraction has grown in size and public favor until at the present time it is recognized as one of the leading outdoor amusement enterprises now traveling. Never at any time during his career as a showman has Manager Savidge presented anything in connection with his show that was not absolutely moral, and the slogan "Pure Entertainment and Clean Amusement" which was adopted at the conception of the Savidge Amusement Co., has ever been rigidly enforced, and commands not only the respect of the amusement-loving public, but the people of the show world as well.

During the past eight weeks painters and mechanics have been busy putting the different rides and other equipment in spic and span order for the season's road tour, and all new features have been installed for use in the different plays. The acting cast for the big dramatic show has been carefully selected and the personnel comprises some of the best talent in that line, the vaudeville acts being worthy of special mention. The plays to be produced under the direction of Truman DeRoome, recognized as one of the best technical directors in this line of work.

The concert will be carried to entertain music lovers, concerts being given each afternoon and evening. The Salliford Troupe, world's greatest comedy entertainers will give free exhibitions every afternoon at 4 and every evening at 6:30. Wayne may well feel proud of the Savidge South Sioux City, gave a report of the meeting last Friday at the club meeting with Mrs. Grace Keyser. This Man Pulls His Own Stumps

Necessity was the mother of invention with Thomas Martin, Richmond (W. Va.) farmer. His 1600 acres of land were ill-chattered up with stumps, so he started thinking, and as a result invented this man-power stump puller. The weight of a 150-pound man on the six-foot lever lifts 40 tons, and yanks stumps out like a dental pulling tooth.

The longer it lasts the less it costs

WHAT you actually pay for when you buy a battery is power to start and light your car and ignite the gas in your cylinders.

The cost of your battery depends upon how long that power lasts. A short-lived battery is expensive at any price. But a battery that stays on the job and out of the repair shop costs less and less as the months roll by.

Exide Batteries are known the world over for long-lasting service. You will get more months of use, fewer repair bills, and less worry from an Exide than you expect.

Early Days In Two Counties

From Ponca Journal May 7, 1883. Yesterday there was a cold storm wind, and last night the wind went down and the sky was clear, and the mercury fell considerably lower than the normal point. The ice this morning was an inch thick. Fruit and vegetables were badly hurt. As we go to press this afternoon, a snow storm is in the air.

Mr. Sayre of Hawkeye, showed us a remarkable curiosity on Tuesday. It was a hen's egg, but it was shaped like a crooked necked square. By reason of its long neck, if a chicken was to be hatched therefrom it would look like an infant giraffe or a double necked sand hill crane. This remarkable egg was found by a little girl, Cora E. Tuttle, and was lent by her to Mr. Sayre to show the wonderful kind of hen fruit that can be raised in Hawkeye.

It was about 12 o'clock one night towards the latter part of last week that a tremendous noise in the vicinity of the school house awoke and alarmed the citizens who dwell in that neighborhood. From the sound it appeared as though a great number of people had collected together and were engaged in the pastime of testing on a plank placed across the school house fence. In the dim light the moon mysterious figures were seen, hooded and garbed like the monks of the middle ages, sitting on the two ends of an immense pine slab which was laid across the fence. Alternately the opposing medieval squadrons thus sitting on the slab and behind fence, in the fence rose and said that they shouted as they rose in the air or came down kerching upon the ground, their shouts mingling with the squeaking of the slab and the groans of the fence. All on a sudden, down came the slab and the slab pieces, the propped shouts died away, and silence and solemnity brooded over all. When the man in the moon (who was our reporter on the occasion) looked down he saw them not; all the actors in the midnight scene had disappeared. That these weird figures were phantoms from the land of shadows or freaks of the imagination, might have been believed, had not the broken fence and big pine slab next morning shown indications of physical reality. Who were they? No one knows except our reporter and he will not tell.

"Americinitis." There is a medical disorder, coming to be known as "Americinitis," that has this nation in the toils. It results from the high tension and nerve drive of our daily life. No other people go the gait the Americans do in work or in play, and that is why specialists tell us, the asylums and jails and infirmaries are so full. One physician of national renown thinks the people should be scared into a slow-down by telling them they are headed straight for heart disease, high blood pressure and apoplexy. He says that two things are absolutely essential to people. First, they must have an annual health audit, and, second, they must calm their nerves. The good doctor has the things backwards, we think. If they will learn to play more and relax often they will be calmer; and if they are calm they will not need a health audit at all. If the homes, the schools, the churches and the press would continually insist upon a daily ration of play in the life of every person, either mental or physical, tranquil dispositions and calm nerves would be the inevitable result and there would be far less worry, sickness and sin. No person is so busy he cannot play a little every day, and none is so important to himself or his business that he cannot afford an hour of relaxation and the cultivation of his equilibrium.

However you travel

whether by rail, steamship, or automobile, you will find American Bankers Association Cheques the safest, handiest way to carry your money. "A. B. A." Cheques are safe, because if not countersigned they are useless to anyone but the owner. They are convenient, because hotels, railroads, steamship companies and merchants everywhere accept them as readily as cash in payment of bills, and because the only identification needed is the countersignature of the owner in the presence of the person accepting the Cheques.

NERVOUS WRECK

by E.J. Rath
Copyright, 1924, by G. Howard Watt

Begin Here Today.

The "Nervous Wreck," an eccentric young easterner, is driving Sally Morgan from her father's ranch to the station, when she is run out of gasoline. At the point of a gun the Wreck takes five gallons from a passing car.

Charlie McEwen, foreman of a ranch along the route, makes them captives because he wants Sally for a cook. It develops that Mr. Underwood, the owner of the ranch, was in the car which they held up. Sheriff Bob Wells, Sally's fiance, is unwittingly searching the countryside for the "bandit" who held up Underwood. Sally and the Wreck finally escape from the ranch. They run into a camp of real bandits and are again held captive. They are left in the guard of one member of the gang—"Denver," by name.

Now Go On with the Story.

Denver was watchful. Sitting across the campfire from the two prisoners, he did not permit their least movement to go unnoticed. An idle wisp of smoke drifted from the Wreck's pipe. The Wreck hoped that he might become drowsy; even an instant's nod would be fatal. But Denver was always alert, a person who could dispense with sleep when he chose, and this was obviously one of the occasions.

Black hair, close shaven, eyes smart enough to devote himself single-mindedly to the vigil that had been ordered for the night.

Sally and the Wreck made an effort to pass time in conversation, but they felt no freedom of speech in the presence of the Denver. He never interfered to talk no part. His presence discouraged talk, particularly, as the one subject they wished to discuss—escape—was prohibited because of the inevitable eavesdropping. But they talked for an hour, half-heartedly, because there was nothing else to do. A dead silence, a faint light, noise interrupted Sally in the middle of a sentence.

"Thunder," she remarked, casually. "We didn't wonder if we caught a storm."

"Uh-uh," said the Wreck, gloomily.

He could imagine nothing more uncomfortable than sitting there in a downpour. The camp did not even have a tent.

There was more rumbling from back in the hills, and twice there were flashes in the black skies. Denver said a couple of words, the fire and huddled back again, still with the rifle between his knees.

"I suppose we'll get wet," remarked Sally, in a resigned tone.

"Well, there's nothing on me that will get hurt."

"Let it rain," said the Wreck. "There's nothing stirring of leaves on the topmost branches of the trees, followed by an atmospheric sluggishness that became oppressive. The rain—now—comes more frequent and frequent, while the noise from the skies was multiplying itself. Just one more discomfiter to be endured, the Wreck reflected, as he seemed to have encountered nothing but bad luck since they left the Bar-M.

A fresh roll of thunder, and a second flash, and the Wreck started. He glanced toward her, and found that her eyes were watching Denver across the camp.

"What?" he asked.

"I didn't say anything," answered Sally.

There was a faint frown on her forehead which she interpreted as an order not to ask questions. Yet he knew there was something she wanted to say to him. She was still looking at Denver, and the Wreck also looked. The study brought him no enlightenment. Denver sat stolidly and watched them, although he tried to do it in an unobtrusive manner. Apparently it had something to do with Denver.

An instant later he had a glimmer of understanding. There was a brilliant flash, then an interval of three seconds, and, after that, a peal of thunder that echoed heavily through the woods. Denver's head twitched, his glance lifted itself for an instant toward the tree-tops, then he huddled back and glanced again at his prisoners. The Wreck settled himself to watch.

He had not long to wait. A vivid play of light in the skies, a series of rolling crashes—Denver's head twitched again in involuntary accompaniment in involuntary accompaniment, his shoulders stirred and there was a real moment of one hand. Once more his eyes sought the blackness overhead, only to wince when it was washed with a white, irregular stripe to humus contact, with a jar.

Sally and the Wreck exchanged glances, the latter making a faint movement of his head, to signify that he understood. Denver was afraid of a thunderstorm. It seemed so absurd that for an instant the Wreck wanted to laugh. Stolid, insensate to human contact, with a jaw fashioned perfectly for a heavy-weight champion and a physique that matched it, Denver was ideal bully and bad man. He understood Denver was just faintest. Get your feet loose before you do anything else.

Sally looked at the cords that hobbled her. The Wreck cast a contemptuous glance at the flabby infant form of Denver, the bully.

"That big storm?" he said, as he shook his foot free.

"No hurry," said the Wreck. "He's out cold. I don't know whether it was the stroke of wood, or whether he just fainted. Get your feet loose before you do anything else."

Sally looked at the cords that hobbled her. The Wreck cast a contemptuous glance at the flabby infant form of Denver, the bully.

"That big storm?" he said, as he shook his foot free.

The heavens crashed again, flaring in two different directions. Denver responded automatically, with a twitch that affected his whole body. The pair of watchers saw him tighten on a quivering lip. He favored them with a look of defiant suspicion, warning that they would better keep out of his private affairs. Sally turned her eyes upward.

"He's getting nearer every minute," she told the Wreck.

"Yes; we're going to catch it," said Sally. "The dry storm's 'n the worst."

"You bet they're," agreed the Wreck. "I don't know why, but it's awful."

"And it's always worse in the woods, on account of the trees. Why, I remember."

The sound of her voice was swallowed up in a roar. Something had been struck, and not very far distant, it may be, behind the tent, or behind Denver's head seemed to shrivel behind his shoulders and for a second his eyes closed tightly. Then they opened with a jerk of terror, as he remembered his prisoners.

"That was close," said Sally, in an awed tone and with a meaning glance at the Wreck. "I'm afraid we're going to be right in the center of it, if it would only rain."

"Well, we've got to take our chances," declared the Wreck, solemnly. "What can we do."

"Nothing," she sighed. "Only—"

Denver was biting savagely at his under lip and his fingers on his hand were drumming nervously on the ground.

"Does it hit much in the woods?" he asked, suddenly. There was a sort of emptiness in his voice.

"More than anywhere else," answered the Wreck. "But it doesn't do any good to run if it's going to get you it'll get you, as sure as a gun."

"I'm afraid I'm getting nervous," whimpered Sally.

The skies flared and detonated again and, with a little shriek, she threw her arms around the Wreck's neck.

"Henry!" she cried.

His eyes were stealthily watching Denver, his hand was creeping cautiously toward a stick of split wood that lay near the fire.

"Not yet—wait!" Sally was whispering with her lips close to his ear.

"Give me a minute—er—two—more. He's slipping fast."

The Wreck waited. He found it difficult to believe what he saw with his eyes. Denver's big body had sagged loosely and his shoulders were slouching. He was a man on the verge of a faint, his eyes were twinkling grotesquely, his eyes seemed to be staring at nothing. He wanted to shut them, but he did not dare.

"I don't like it," he mumbled, in a peevish voice. "I—"

"It's awful!" cried Sally. "God help us!"

There was a lull, a sudden blast of wind in the trees, then a fresh onset of fury from the skies. Flash on flash were blended in a terrifying ensemble. Sally, still clutching the Wreck, kept her eyes on the man beyond the camp-fire.

His body convulsed, his hands clasped themselves in a sudden paroxysm and there was a dull agony in his eyes.

"I can't stand it!" he whined, in a high falsetto.

Suddenly he crossed his arms on his knees and buried his head. He was sobbing.

"Now!" whispered Sally.

The Wreck's fingers had closed on the split stick. He arose swiftly to his hobbling feet, balanced himself, took aim and flung it furiously at Denver's head. Instantly he fell back, it leaping clumsily across the fire and burning himself on the huddled figure.

Denver went over on his back and the Wreck clutched for his throat.

"Grab his gun!" he cried to Sally. She was scrambling toward it when she saw him roll off the recumbent figure, hitch himself into a sitting posture and begin the task of untying his feet.

"No hurry," said the Wreck. "He's out cold. I don't know whether it was the stroke of wood, or whether he just fainted. Get your feet loose before you do anything else."

Sally looked at the cords that hobbled her. The Wreck cast a contemptuous glance at the flabby infant form of Denver, the bully.

"That big storm?" he said, as he shook his foot free.

"Oh, I don't know," said Sally, working feverishly. "It's horrible when you're afraid like this. You can't help it. I've seen a man when she was just as bad. And we had a copperunner once who was even worse, although he was a terrible fighter. And—"

The following storm obliterated the remainder of the sentence. As she stood up, free for her two hands, she shook her head, as though to throw off an unpleasant sensation.

"You can say what you like," she declared. "But it's a pretty mean storm, just the same. I'm not claiming to enjoy it myself."

McCormick-Deering Hill Drop Wire Drive Planter

It is none too early to buy your corn planter, and we wish to call your attention to the McCormick-Deering Hill Drop Wire Drive Planter. Any one of the many improved features in this machine makes it worth the price.

No Complicated Parts The simplicity of the driving arrangement is due to the fact that it is composed of only three parts—a ratchet, a driving pawl and a stop. It cannot get out of order. The pawl and stop are mounted on a square shaft connected directly to the fork. When the button trips the fork, it gives the seed plate shaft one-sixth of a turn, pulling the pawl down and revolving the ratchet to the extent of one tooth.

Automatic Check Head Something new in the way of a check head is provided on the International No. 8. At the end of the field the driver pushes a small foot-lever which releases the check wire and permits the check head to drop down. The team is then turned and placed in position for the next time across. As the driver strikes the wire, it is an easy matter to pull it right into the check fork and by striking it against the lip, automatically lock the head shut—This is a little thing but it shows how nearly automatic the International No. 8 planter has been made.

Automatic Marker The marker supplied regularly on the McCormick-Deering hill drop planter is entirely automatic in operation. It consists of two arms—one of which rides on its side of the planter, while the other is making the mark on the opposite side. The two markers are connected by a rope. Upon turning at the end, the idle marker automatically drops to the ground. As this marker proceeds to work, the one on the other side is pulled up into an idle position. These operations require no attention whatever on the part of the driver.

No Stringing of Corn The valves in the boot, like all other International planters, are of the duckbill type. There is always a full of corn waiting at the extreme bottom of the boot while another is being deposited at the extreme top. When a valve is tripped, the duck bill forces out any dirt that may have collected in the boot and the lower hill drops only an inch or two to the ground, so there is no possibility of stringing. The closing of the valve automatically allows the upper hill to drop to the bottom of the boot, ready to be dropped to the ground when the valve is tripped again.

The extraordinary success of this new method proves that it holds and holds a future. It weighs only a few ounces. It has no hard gaging pads, no elastic belts, no straps, no bands, and is as comfortable as a light garment. It has enabled hundreds of persons to throw away trusses and declare their rupture absolutely healed. Many of these had serious double ruptures, from which they had suffered for years, and which had threatened to have every rupture operation enjoy the quick relief, comfort and healing power of his discovery, and he will send it on free trial to any reader of the Herald who writes him. He wants one person in each neighborhood to whom he can refer. If you wish to be rid of rupture for good, without an operation, take advantage of the doctor's free offer. Write him today. a30-m14
