Why?

500 Per Cent Increase on Victor Flour Sales Since January 1. Housewives have told their neighbors and it's from this fact an abnormal demand has been created for Victor flour. Housewives prefer to use a flour made from washed wheat. The fact it will produce more loaves, always uniform and quick in performance are a few reasons sales have increased in excess of our expectations. Victor flour is sold in fifteen states and although it comes in direct competition with the leading flours, yet in communities where Victor becomes known it maintains scores of friends with the housewives.

Victor Hog Builder

Scores a big hit. Over one hundred 100-pound sacks sold last week. Contains tankage, middlings, linseed meal, oatmeal, alfalfa meal and dried buttermilk, all mixed and ready to feed either in a dry or a slop form to nursing sows and small pigs. The Crete Mills advise us to "broadcast" their policy that no sale of Victor products is complete until the patron is absolutely satisfied. Carload Hog Builder to arrive next week.

From Ponca Journal, June 4, 1885: Wakefield has no open operation a bottled beer and pop.

The fruit trees hang full, especially the cherry trees and plum trees. Currants and gooseberries will also have a large crop, and as to strawberries the yield will be immense. The late frosts do not appear to have done much if any harm.

There is a new library of 100 volumes. The Republican does not seem to be pleased with the library and calls it "a bulk of printed paper worth a large crop of strawberries." and advises that the books be donated to some Indian tribe, or sent to Van Nuys, Calif., where they are needed, and if they cannot be disposed of any other way, recommends that they be cremated.

The orchard on the L. T. Hill farm is loaded down with apples, pears, plums and cherries in great quantities. It is estimated that the orchard will have not less than ten bushels of cherries and about 75 bushels of apples this season. The old doctrine that Dixon county was not a good county for fruit is thus being exploded. It is really as good a country for fruit as any in Iowa.

Board of Equalization: Notice is hereby given that the board of county commissioners, the county assessor, and the county clerk will sit as a board of equalization, commencing on Tuesday, the 24th day of June, 1925, for the purpose of equalizing the valuation of personal property of the county as returned by the precinct assessors for the year 1925.

Be in mind that your land has improved and is not reassessed this year, but in case of gross error, if our attention is called to the fact, such gross error may be remedied.

All complaints on the assessment of personal property will be heard at this time.

All that are assessed are especially urged to call and inspect the books relative to your assessment, as this will materially aid us in avoiding errors.

The board will continue in session for one-tenth than three (3) days, and all complaints or protests must be made at this time.

Witness my hand and seal this 9th day of May A. D. 1925.

Chas. W. Reynolds, County Clerk (Seal) m1443

These who are in a "run down" condition will notice that Catarrh bothers them more than when they are in good health. This fact proves that while they are in fact they are greatly influenced by constitutional conditions.

A Wet Day Causes One-Third More Calls

Rainy days often cause one-third more telephone calls. On such days, more people remain indoors and use the telephone.

Likewise, hot days and very cold days mean that many more telephone calls will be made.

Snow storms, also, add to the problem of providing service. At such times it is difficult for the operators to get to work, while at the same time many more telephone calls are made.

And frequently bad storms tear down poles and wires, shutting off telephone service.

Uniformly satisfactory telephone service is our constant aim, but occasionally conditions arise which are temporarily beyond all human control. At such a time we especially appreciate the patience of our patrons until the situation can be met.

The Nervous Wreck

by E. J. Rath
Copyright, 1924, by G. Howard Watt

Begin Here Today.

The "Nervous Wreck," an eccentric young easterner, is driving Sally Morgan from her father's ranch to the station when they run out of gasoline. At the point of a gun the Wreck takes five gallons from a passing car.

Later Charlie McQueen, foreman of a ranch along the route, makes them captives because he wants Sally for a cook. It develops that M. Underwood, the owner of the ranch, was in the car which they held up. Sheriff Bob Wells, Sally's fiancé, is scouting the countryside for the "bandits" who held up Underwood. Sally and the Wreck finally escape from the ranch on foot to a camp of real bandits, are captured a second time, and then escape again. Fleeing on foot from the bandit camp, they discover a "prize," a bridled horse in the woods.

Now Go on With the Story.

"Here's another one reading around here somewhere," she said. "Listen again."

After a short interval both heard the faint whirring from off among the trees.

"Don't move," said Sally. "This one will answer in a minute. They'll get together, or else I don't know."

Presently her prediction was realized, but it took another call from the distance before the bridled horse answered.

"Stay right here, Henry. The other one will come to us. You might get away if you rise right now. There may be some more riding in you know. Looking for this one."

The second horse was advancing more rapidly now. There was another interchange of calls and Sally clung more tightly to the bridle of her captive. The Wreck stood tense, ready to shoot at anything that looked like a man. Sally cautioned him not to be too quick; she did not want any kind of letting unless it was a final alternative.

"Out of the brush and into the dim light came a second riderless horse. Sally shot this one," said Sally, giving the bridle to the Wreck.

An instant later she had a second captive.

"Bridled and saddled like the first one," she exclaimed. "Did you ever hear of such luck?"

"That do you make out of it?"

"They must belong to Keesey and Lefty. I suppose they left them standing somewhere, maybe, while they got out of the storm themselves. They must be nervous. You can't see any way. I don't blame them."

"Well, what are we going to do with 'em?"

"Sally peered at him through the gloom as if trying to see whether he was serious.

"Do with them?" she echoed, in amazement. "What do you usually do with a horse? Kiss 'em? You big sissy, were you going to ride them?"

The Wreck made a gesture.

"How about my car," he demanded.

"Aren't we going to look for that?"

"No, we're not. Are you crazy? So long as we've got these horses let them keep the car. We don't want to get messing around that camp again tonight. We're liable to get ourselves into trouble again. Let's try to push your luck too far, Henry Williams. We're in big luck now—we've got their horse, two of them, anyhow. And we've got one rifle. What more could we ask?"

marily responsible for getting Sally Morgan either aboard a train or back to the Bur-M. The fiver would have to take his chances.

"Oh, all right," he growled.

"Why, of course," said Sally.

"Then which way do we go?"

"We ought to try to hit for the main road, I suppose. That seems the most sensible thing to do. We'll probably be able to get our bearings then. I'd wait till daylight, only I don't think we ought to. I'm afraid we're too near the camp. They'll be out looking for these horses. They can't afford to lose them."

"They've got my car," he reminded her.

"But maybe they can't run it," Henry. It's one thing to ride a horse around this country; but when it comes to exploring it in a fiver, well, you've got to be an expert."

He merely granted her the comment, for he suspected that she was only joking.

"You'd better ride the one that you caught," she added. "He's all quieted down now. Can you mount him?"

"Certainly I can," snapped the Wreck. "But what are you going to do? You haven't any riding skirt."

Sally laughed in the darkness.

The Wreck had scaled the side of the first captive and was trying to find a comfortable place in the saddle, when Sally made a flying mount of her second.

"You'd better let me go ahead," she said. "We'll just wait while we're in the woods. And don't get your neck hooked off by a branch. Come on."

"They set off at a slow pace, Sally giving her animal its head, save for the bit. She thought they ought to follow. The Wreck's horse followed, determined not to be isolated again, so that all that his rider had to do was to balance himself in the saddle and fend off branches with the rifle.

"Sally's mount without urging or a word of advice, was trying to do as he pleased. The Wreck, having no idea of his own as to his mind, was content merely to follow.

"One consideration in Sally's mind was to avoid the camp at all costs, and apparently she was succeeding in that, for after half an hour of riding in the direction that was generally straight they saw no trace of it. With the first faint coming of dawn she was pleased to discover that the trees were becoming more sparse. A few minutes later, as they rode out into an open space, the light about them was visibly increased.

The Wreck's horse ranged along Sally's mount without urging and nipped gently at the shoulder of his companion.

"Glong there," said Sally, good naturedly. "Mind your horse."

She broke off into a little cry and reined her horse sharply.

"Henry Williams!" she cried.

"What now?"

"She was staring at the Wreck's horse.

"Look—look what you're riding!"

"Hub?" He squinted down through his spectacles at the top of the animal's head, as though expecting to discover, perhaps, that it was an elephant or a camel, rather than a regulation Montana horse."

"It's Bob Wells's horse!" said Sally, in a voice of awe.

And indeed it was, as the Wreck could now see, with a fair amount of early morning light coming over the hills. It was the big black animal that even he, to whom most horses looked alike, had come to associate with the sheriff.

"I'll be doggone!" he muttered.

"Sally sat tight in her saddle, as though the slight hint pleased her. It was Bob's horse. Bob's saddle, Bob's bridle—the whole outfit was there. No wonder she had been able to soothe the nervous animal back in the darkness. He knew her."

"We've stolen the sheriff's horses!" she gasped.

"Foolish man," corrected the Wreck. "Oh, Henry?"

"Well, what of it?"

"But—What in the world does it mean? I'm all mixed up."

The Wreck did not have any very clear idea of what it meant, but the discovery was rather pleasing to him. Unconsciously, he assumed a more jaunty pose in the saddle.

"One horse is the same as another to me," he remarked. "You thought they were good enough when we found 'em in the woods. What's the matter with 'em now?"

"But Bob—his horse—and—Why he must have been right close to us!"

"Well, he didn't find us, did he?" remarked the Wreck, triumphantly. He even risked his seat by leaning forward and stroking the neck of the black horse.

Sally gazed at her own mount. She could not remember ever having seen the animal before. It was a medium-sized bay, rather easily gaited, but evidently not built for speed.

"We must have all been pretty close together in the woods," mused Sally. "Think of that. Of course, Bob didn't know about us; he couldn't have. But he must have been pretty hot on the trail of that gang. I suppose that's what Keesey was worried about last night, when he and Lefty went down to watch the main road. What I don't understand is Bob losing his horse. He must have been doing some scouting on foot and missed his figure on any storm missing things up. This one I'm riding, of course, must belong to somebody in the posse."

The Wreck grinned down at his mount. In some measure the black horse compensated for the loss of the fiver.

"I'll bet Bob's just crazy," said Sally.

"Why, if anything happened to that horse—where! He'd sooner let the whole gang get away than lose his horse."

"Well, he can have it back when I'm through with it," said the Wreck with a sly tone. "I'll exchange it for a fiver any time."

"And the humiliation of it," continued Sally, talking half to herself. "Think of a sheriff going out to catch somebody and having someone else run off with his horse. Can't you see it, Henry?"

"I can see it fine."

"And there he is, back in the woods there somewhere, with nothing to ride, and probably the gang laughing at him."

"Well, it's a good laugh," agreed the Wreck.

"Why, it's awful!"

"Is it?" He looked at her sharply. "What's the idea? Do you want to go back and hand him his plug-and-ivy? Here we are. Take us to the hogsgang!"

Sally shook her head impatiently.
