Come to Our Demonstration of Coleman Cookers

NEXT WEEK

June 10 11 12 13

See the Gas Range that Makes its Own Gas

We cordially invite every housewife in this locality (and the men folks, too) to come to our store any time next week and see our big demonstration of Coleman Cookers.

We want to show you a stove that is different—a stove years ahead of them all. In the Coleman you have a modern gas cooking stove and a dependable gas-making plant all in one! It brings all the conveniences of city gas to farm and suburban homes. This great stove makes its own gas—any time you need it. So you are independent—you don't have to depend on outside gas service—you have your own gas plant. Come in and see it in action at the store.

See the steady intensely hot blue flame that does not blacken your pots and pans.

See a half-gallon kettle of water boil in four minutes.

See light, fluffy biscuits baked in six minutes.

See what a clean, convenient stove the Coleman is—no wicks, no chimneys, no glass fuel jars.

See how easy to operate and how safe this wonderful stove is. Fuel is gas from common motor gasoline under pressure. Tank can't spill fuel; can't be filled while lighted. No "crawling" flame.

See all the different sizes and models—from the small bungalow cooker to the big, white-enameled range.

See how reasonably these stoves are priced.

Be sure to come, whether you are figuring on a new cook stove or not.

Straws Show which Way the Wind is Blowing

The "straws" are Victor Flour sales. These are increasing weekly and the "breath of public opinion" is fast showing results.

Come in and see our "straw field." It's a map showing where Victor Flour is used in Wayne County. You'll be surprised at the number of blue tack straws we have in the country and red tack straws in town. Every day adds one or more blades of straw and we intend to keep it increasing until our "stand" will yield a car of Victor Flour every three weeks.

Why is our field growing? Because so many women have turned to appreciate cleanliness. The days of clean what are here to make our friends. Just as the old cracker barrel disappeared from the grocery, our ordinary wheat flour will be replaced by clean wheat flour. You, too, will appreciate Victor Flour and a trial will convince you. See our samples of clean wheat and just milling wheat. They're convincing others, too.

Will you! That's Great!

Whoever men folk says that about the drinks you serve during hayin'? It's a truly refreshing drink in all flavors. One bottle makes half-gallon and it really quenches thirst. Try one - beats plain water.

Egg-O-Shell

Give your friends our egg shell cement. It's made of pure Portland cement and 10 per cent of fine grit. More grinding surface, greater assimilation. Costs same as old-fashioned oyster shell but goes fully 50 per cent farther. See it for yourself.

$1.50 per 100 lbs.

The Start Counts, But What About the Finish?

What big chicken raiser ever "whipped his flock into shape" in record time without a balanced ration? Not any. They know that rapid growth, uniform development means extra dollars by better markets. It's an investment, not an expense when you buy Victor Chick rations.

Victor Growing Mash is a protein food that builds muscle and quick, strong bone development. It pushes chickens into the "fry" stage with less cost per chick than any other mash ration. You can't lose. You can't lose. You can't lose.

Victor Husky Scratch is the team-mate of Victor Growing Mash. Worked together they will crowd any other "food team" to the finish. It lays the fat on thick and your chickens are ready for broiling in time for the best prices ahead of the rush.

100 pound sack $3.95.

Back for More

Yesterday morning three users of Victor Hog Builder came back for five bags each. They'd tried one sack, watched their pigs develop and they knew it was money invested, not spent. A tested, proven mixed feed that actually does get results. Costs less than 90 per cent of similar brands because it's made to repeat. See our sample. The mixture is fine but it's use is convincing.

the individual,
affect a better business industry in the district, comprising some of the richest sections of the middle west. That Iowa should lead in the increase in savings deposits is proof of a greatly improved economic situation and one that is expected to be better within the next six months.

Crop conditions in the state at this time are not as discouraging as was suspected immediately after the last killing frost, later by several days than for years. It was believed at first that corn had been greatly injured, with the loss running, perhaps, into millions of dollars. This now seems to have been an error, with the Iowa weather bureau at Des Moines advising that the corn loss is not at all great. As a matter of fact, it would be charged to say that the loss could be considered almost entirely to the labor and the cost of seed. If Iowa has a good corn season, grain planted now will mature in plenty of time to escape early frosts in the fall.

It is observed that the weather bureau reported that first planting of corn is practically finished with the bulk of the crop out of the ground and cultivation under way. In Iowa, as in all corn states, it is an unusual season when replanting is not imperative. Last year, it will be remembered, the stand was poor. Replanted corn had almost no chance as the season advanced wet and cool. Much of the replanted crop last year was far later than this. Corn planted now ought to mature if even an average growing season is to be had.

Badly frosted areas are not large, comparatively speaking. In these sections from one-fourth to one-half the crop will have to be replanted.
Iowa's corn crop this season ought to be one of the best in years and with farm prices higher, perhaps, than last fall the state's financial position will be stronger than now. Savings deposits next summer ought to show an increase greater than 8.5 per cent.

Pen Pointers

She isn't necessarily using "horse sense" when a wife constantly nags her husband.

Seems that every shoe-string is so tight that it will break when you are in a hurry.

Why run for a street car when there is another one along in a minute—packed to the doors?

What some people don't know about good judgment is what keeps them in trouble most of the time.

A secret is what you tell somebody, after it has been told to you by someone you were not supposed to tell.

If we'd all do just as we are told we'd all be so busy we wouldn't have time to tell anybody else what to do.

It would be interesting to know where all the stocking holes come from and where all the waist buttons go.

What Should Society Do With Gossipers?

(Canandaigua Messenger)

"I am holier than thou," observes the corrected moral snob.

"Have you heard the latest story about—?" whispers the gossip snob to the one of the poisoned-tongue variety.

"Those who live in glass houses should not throw stones," observes the town philosopher.

"Let him who is without sin among you cast the first stone," are the words of the greatest character of all history.

Every single small city and town is damed with a certain number and variety of people whose time hangs so heavily upon their backs they turn it to no other purpose than to try to ruin characters and reputations of men.

Slanderous, poisoned-tongue whisper upon our city streets. They make statements by innuendo, and seize upon the wildest rumors that may arise, their tongues the wire saws, with which to wag.

These are the scandal-mongers—the petty conspirators, the poisonous tongues which are among the most destructive forces of present-day civilization.

There should be a penalty for loose tongues. These people who go about with petty and malicious gossip, tearing down character and reputation with untruth, should be treated as any other common criminal.

The people they would criticize are far ahead of them morally, educationally, culturally and otherwise that they need no defense. But society does need protection from filthy innuendo and destructive pests. Why not jail them?

Economy Nonsense.

Lincoln Journal: A British king may not be able to give prizes for his subjects. That is about as far as royal example goes in these irrelevant days. It is nonsense to ascribe to President Coolidge and his economy example any slowness which may appear in American retail store trade.

If there are no real followers of a president were to happen to mold their private lives in imitation of him, their course would be cancelled in the main by the constant tendency of the president's political opponents. We doubt whether there is an appreciable amount of either tendency. The country is not so much given to sneering when their president looks snuff.

If there is a disposition to buy with care nowadays, the fact springs from other causes. A quiet economic readjustment is going on throughout the country. The agricultural running in the past, large farm sections have been perforce making their old clothes do for several years past. Such money as the farmers take in they must use largely for the payment of debts. Some reflection of the agricultural situation is now felt in the industrial centers. If the farmers cannot buy the manufactures they cannot sell. A Burlington official was reminding us the other day that their shops are now on a five hour day. The bituminous coal industry is on short hours or none. The textile industry has been reducing wages and there is some unemployment.

All this makes for caution in the spending of money. The public generally, not alone the farmer, has been getting into the habit of saving. The large numbers are spent before they are earned. This has reached its limit. Payment must some time begin, of the land, is going through a quiet, orderly liquidation with business sound but more or less slow. The president has nothing to do with it. If we over-spend or under-spend because of others it will be because of the example of our near neighbor, not the precept of a distant president.

What Good Does It Do You to Know Something?

Advertisements in all Papers and Magazines are all trying to appeal to the intelligent. Now this one is for the great majority. Reliable authority, in fact it was the Draft Boards during the War, figured out that the intelligence of the average Adult of this Country was that of a 13 year old Child. (Now that is giving us the best of it because a 13 year old Child is about the smartest thing we have in this Country.) But the 13 year old Child they referred to was one who had been raised on the milk of human Kindness (which is mostly Water) and weaned on a Hard Boiled Egg. You know the smarter the Man the more dissatisfied he is so cheer up, let us be happy in our ignorance. What do we care how little we know if we get what we want? THE WRECK by E. J. Rath Copyright, 1924, by G. Howard Watt Begin Here Today. The "Newest" Wreck on account of young easterner, is driving Sally Morgan from her father's ranch to the station when they run out of gasoline. At the point of a run the Wreck takes five gallons from a passing car. They are held captive at a ranch owned by Mr. Underwood, who was in a car which they held up. They finally escape from the ranch, run a trap of real bandits and are captured a second time, and then escape again. Fleeing from the bandit camp they are confronted by Sheriff Bob Wells and a companion. Wells, who is Sally's fiance, had been leading a search for the "bandits" who hold up over-landed. Angered at the sheriff, Sally breaks off the engagement and says she is going to marry the Wreck. The sheriff promptly takes the Wreck under arrest, and they move away.

Now Go on With the Story. The prospect of going jail did not disturb the Wreck. He did not take it very seriously. The main point was getting Sally back to peace and happiness. He never saw a through with him he might forget about things or might not. But before that everything must be made straight and smooth for Sally Morgan. Engaged to her? He laughed at himself. Not that there was any harm in that, but he knew that he wasn't any use trying to follow it on foot. If we're quick we'll nail 'em before sundown. "I've mailed one of them already," said the sheriff, with a glance at the Wreck. "Who, him?" The newcomers started barking. "Well, maybe they don't belong with this bunch we've got located. We better get started, Bob."

The cavalcade was in the woods, when Sally found it easier to follow the trail than she expected. Presently they came to a splitting of the trail and Sally could not be certain of her course. Then she came to a second spot where there was a confusion of footprints and hoofprints and she knew to be the place where she and the Wreck had discovered their mounts. She retraced a wandering trail brought them to a place that Sally and the Wreck instantly recognized. It was the camp of the three men and boys. There were things left behind, but there was no sign of any of the men. The sheriff dismounted and examined the place attentively. He listened closely while Sally explained everything, including the affair of Denver and the bandits. Sally seemed to stress the part the Wreck had played.

The sheriff left the telling all to her. When the sheriff began walking to and fro, studying the deserted camp, the Wreck found himself side by side with Sally. He was in the proximity since that had mounted the horses at the foot of the hill, miles back. He moved uneasily in his saddle. "It's a nice day," he said. "She glanced up at the sky, though the clouds were tops. It was blue and laughing. "Beautiful," she answered. "Not so warm as yesterday."

He made a nervous gesture that meant nothing in particular. "But it's likely to be warmer to-morrow than this," he said. "Yes," said Sally. "And it probably won't rain."

"Probably not." The conversation had exhausted everything he dared to say. But she would not let him alone. "What," he said, "the rest of the summer won't be mine so hot. It gets cooler at night, you know." "Oh-huh." "Of course, we can't tell. We might have a hot wave." He looked at her suspiciously. "Silly, we might not have it," she said. "Yes; luck," he nodded. Now she laughed outright. "Henry, please don't be absurd. Stop for something; jump all over me." "You're all right," said the Wreck lamely. "It's not much, but it's better than the weather," said Sally. He shook his head irritably. He was miserable at heart and he knew he was ridiculous. The merriment faded from Sally's face; the look in her eyes softened. "Pardon?" "Just forgot it," she said. "I didn't mean anything."

"It's very much damaged, Henry," asked Sally. "No," he answered, shortly. "Of course." They were still examining the five-year-old man's car. The Wreck climbed down from his horse and walked around his beloved car, furious but saying nothing. Yet so far as he could see, there was nothing radically wrong with the five-year-old.

"What do you want me to do?" he asked, looking at the Wreck. "I want you and your men to get busy and put that fellow on his feet and his legs under him so that Miss Morgan and myself can go about our business." "Yes," affirmed Sally. Bob Wells turned to his men, and caught one of them grinning. "We'll have to hustle," he said. "It won't take long." (To be continued.)

A Burlington official was reminding us on the other day that their country is not buying anything. The bituminous coal industry is on short hours or none. The textile industry has been reducing wages and there is some unemployment.

All this makes for caution in the spending of money. The public generally, not alone the farmer, has been running into debt. The wages of large numbers are spent before they are earned. This has reached its limit. Payment must some time begin. The country, in time, is going to a quiet, orderly liquidation with business sound-but more or less slow. 1925.

president has nothing to do with it. If we overpaid or underpaid because of others it will be because of the example of our near neighbors, not the precept of a distant president.

THE WRECK

by E. J. Rath
Copyright, 1924, by G. Howard Ward

Begin Here Today.

The "Nervous Wreck" an eccentric young easterner, is driving Sally Morgan from her father's ranch to the station when they run out of gasoline. At the point of a gun the Wreck takes five gallons from a passing car.

They are held captive at a ranch owned by Mr. Underwood, who is in a car which they held up. They finally escape from the ranch, run into a camp of real bandits, are captured a second time, and then escape again. Fleeing from the bandit camp they are confronted by Sheriff Bob Wells and a companion, Wells, who is Sally's fiancé, had been leading a search for the "bandits" who had kidnapped Underwood. Angered at the sight, Sally breaks off the engagement and says she is going to marry the Wreck. The sheriff promptly places the Wreck under arrest, and they move away.

Now Go on With the Story.

The prospect of going to jail did not disturb the Wreck. He did not take it very seriously. The main point was getting Sally back to peace and happiness. Whenever they got through with him he would go back to Pittsburgh, where he might fight a few things—or might not. But before that everything must be made straight and smooth for Sally Morgan. Engaged to her? He laughed at that. Not in the least. He had a smirch in it, but it was a form of self-mockery for which he was in the mood.

The cavalcade was in the woods, where Sally found it easier to follow the trail than she expected.

They were in the middle of a splitting of the trail and Sally could not be certain of her course.

Then she came to a second sign, which was the same as the first, footprints and hoofprints, and this she knew to be the place where she and the Wreck had discovered their way.

In the end, retracing of a wandering trail brought them to a place that Sally and the Wreck instantly recognized. It was the camp of the "bandit" gang. There was little left but soaked enemies, but there was no opportunity for mistakes.

The sheriff dismounted and examined the place attentively. He listened closely while Sally explained everything, including the affair of Denver and the thunderstorm. She seemed to stress the part the Wreck had played.

The Wreck left the telling all to her. When the sheriff began walking to and fro, studying the deserted camp, the Wreck came in behind him with Sally. It was their first proximity since they had mounted the horses at the foot of the hill, and she glared. He moved uneasily in his saddle.

He glanced at her, because it seemed difficult not to do so. Sally smiled and said, "That's the same old man who was with Sally. It was their first proximity since they had mounted the horses at the foot of the hill, and she glared. He moved uneasily in his saddle.

"You're all right," said the Wreck. "That's not much, but it's better than the weather," said Sally.

He shook his head irritably. He was a horse and he knew he was ridiculous.

The merriment faded from Sally's face; she took her eyes softened. "You're all right," said the Wreck. "That's not much, but it's better than the weather," said Sally.

He shook his head irritably. He was a horse and he knew he was ridiculous.

What Good Does It Do You to Know Something?

Advertisements in all Papers and Magazines are all tried to appeal to the intelligent. Now this one is for the great majority. Reliable advertising, in fact it was the Draft-Boards during the War, figured out that the intelligence of the average Adult of this Country was that of a 13-year-old Child. (Why? Because giving us the best of it because a 13-year old Child is about the smartest thing we have in this Country), but the 13 year old Child they referred to was one who had been raised on the milk of human Kindness (which is mostly Water) and weaned on a Hard Boiled Egg. You know the smarter the Man the more dissatisfied he is, so cheer up, let us be happy in our ignorance. What do we care how little we know? If we get what we want "Bull" Durham needs no Literacy Test, it is with minority in quality, and with the majority in usage.

was a pretty good sheriff, at Sally always said, and when there was a gang loose in his county he knew his duty.

"And of course," said Sally, speaking up in a clear voice, "I'll back up every word that Henry Williams says."

The sheriff swallowed his pride. "What do you want me to do?" he asked, looking at the Wreck.

"I want you and your men to get busy and put that flivver on her feet and help get her out of here, so that Miss Morgan and myself can go about our business."

"Yes," affirmed Sally.

Bob Wells turned to his men, and caught one of them grinning.

"We'll have to make," he said. "It won't take long."
