Legion To Consider Band Organization

Representatives of the Greater Wayne club, Kiwanis club and American Legion met Thursday afternoon to consider the formation of a band organization of a brass band by the Legion. It was found that the main cost would be the employment of a leader. It was the opinion of the representatives that money for the purpose could be largely if not wholly raised through a levy made by the county, the city and the school districts equally among all taxpayers. If the Legion undertakes the enterprise, as many hope it will, it is understood it will make the start next fall.

A Chiropractic Discovery

The Neurocalometer

Chiropractic again leads in the greatest step forward in the science of health today! Invented and perfected at the Palmer Schools of Chiropractic, Davenport, Iowa, the Neurocalometer is what to Chiropractors only.

—What It Can Do—

1—Picks the nerve causing your ailment when applied to the spinal nerves.
 2—Records the points of nerve pressure on a dial which is visible.
 3—Registers zero when normal. If abnormal, registers nerve pressure in points of 1-100th-of a degree.

You

1—Can very frequently feel the changes in the affected part immediately after an adjustment is given.
 2—Get results briefly and owing to constant re-check with this instrument, in a short time are well.

Dial registering is believing. Bring your friends and see this instrument. Watch this dial register exact nerve pressure. You do not have to take adjustments. Come in and see for yourself.

Miss John Lebeck and daughter, Minnie, returned Saturday from Hastings and Grand Island where they visited relatives the past week.

Mrs. Martha Williams and Miss Renner are caring for the telephone exchange work this week during the absence of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Hanson.

Grandma Hanson and son, Fred, Mrs. Hans Neilson and daughter, Dorothy, left Monday for Wadesboro, S. D., to visit Mr. and Mrs. Otto Hanson.

The Royal Neighbor lodge which will have met Friday night, was too soon after the pavement dance to have a quorum and the meeting was postponed.

Mrs. Gurney Beneshof spent three days in Hoskins and Norfolk, returning home Thursday. She attended the Hoskins Sunday school picnic which was held Friday night.

Ethel Selders, little daughter of Mr. and Mrs. O. Selders, was badly poisoned by sweet wife playing with the crock. She is under the doctor's care.

Perry Beneshof purchased a car this week and Sunday, was accompanied by Hugo Splitterger and two children of Brenna, drove to his home in Van Tassel, Wyo.

The business men who have their stores open Friday evening, July 3, for the accommodation of the public, will be closed Saturday and Saturday night.

Mr. and Mrs. L. S. Needham who are driving through from Long Beach, Calif., are expected to arrive today, Thursday, in Stone City where they will visit before coming here.

Mr. and Mrs. Clyde Oman and daughter, Miss Fern Oman, Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Rice and daughter, Mrs. James Miller were among the Wayne visitors here Thursday night.

Miss Emma Adams had been a guest of Mrs. Martha Merriman, Wadesboro, returned home Thursday. She was in the country also at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Jerry Logmecker.

Misses Beatrice Motson, Bernice Kieffer and Ruby Reed went to Wayne Friday and are home coming at the Wayne Normal. Miss Reed was the only one who remained for the banquet.

Mr. and Mrs. Hans Neilson and family game Friday from Ames. Mr. and Mrs. Neilson and family returned home the same day. Mrs. Neilson and Dorothy went with Grace Hanson to Wadesboro, S. D., and Goldie is a guest of Mrs. Chris Hanson until her mother returns.

The Star Cookers met Friday at the home of Miss Elsie Fleer with Agatha Hilpert as assistant hostess. Miss Louise Price was a guest. The members present were: Marian Anderson, Marjorie Miesfeld, Irene Weib, Opal Schneider, Edna Wagner and Esther Bojarski. The session was the proper setting of the table. The next lesson will be bread making and each member is expected to bake bread before the two meetings. The report results. Desserts will also be studied at the next meeting when Wilma Lewis and Marie Hanson will act as hostesses. Luncheon was served.

Born, Sunday, June 21, to Dr. and Mrs. C. O. Ring, a son.

Thursday the knicker club had an all-day outing, going to the P. C. Anderson grove to prepare breakfast and after a forenoon of explorations made a campfire dinner in the Frank Gray grove, arriving back to town at 5 o'clock.

Mr. and Mrs. John Dehne entertained Sunday at the home of Mrs. Eblers-of-Wayne, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mouding, Mr. and Mrs. Ludwig Eilers, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Buehler, Mr. and Mrs. Herman Buehler and family and Mr. and Mrs. Rolf Tidrick.

Mr. and Mrs. Gabelier went to Norfolk Saturday and returned with the body of Mrs. Ole Oleson who died that morning in the Norfolk hospital.

Mrs. Oleson's home was about seven home two and one-half miles north and four miles north of Winside. Funeral services were held Monday in Stone City.

The east end of Main street was opened Saturday for traffic and Mrs. Harry Tidrick claims the distinction of being the first to drive on the Winside's pavement. The remainder of the street will be opened this week.

Winside is justly proud of the wonderful improvement both in appearance and convenience.

The pavement dance given by the American Legion Thursday and the library board whose members served the luncheon, divided the proceeds. Each organization received $66.75.

Mrs. Gurney Beneshof gave a large and orderly. The Wayne orchestra furnished good music and everyone seemed to have a good time.

The pavement dance netted the library board $56.75. This was added to the building fund making a total of $81.63. The next source of income has been the market for the married men from the country and the married men from town.

The game is being sponsored by Will Miesfeld and will take place next Sunday.

Mrs. Julia Overman, cradle-roller superintendent of the M. E. Sunday school, entertained the market for the cradle roll and their members the Thursday afternoon at her home.

ter the work was finished luncheon was served.

Wheat and the Speculators.
 Lincoln Journal: Perhaps on the theory that crop prospects cannot grow worse, the grain market speculators let the price of wheat drag along, unexcited by crop damage reports. Let the yield shrink another 50,000,000 bushels and it will be another story. A little more, and the domestic wheat supply was short.

AMOTORS

All do better with BALANCED gasoline

WHATEVER kind of automobile you drive, take gasoline seriously. On its quality depend the responsiveness of your motor, the mileage per gallon, freedom from carbon and from harmful oxidation of motor oil with unburned gasoline.

Red Crown—the balanced gasoline—is built to meet exactly the requirements of modern motors. It has the right proportion of low boiling point fractions for instant ignition and quick starting. It also has the heavier fractions that burn more slowly and keep up pressure to the end of the piston stroke.

Red Crown is uniform and dependable wherever you buy it and can be relied on to get the most power out of your engine and take you the longest distance per gallon. You can't buy a cleaner-burning, more economical and satisfactory gasoline for year-around use.

Next time you need gasoline, do as motor-wise Nebraskans have done for many years. Pull into the nearest Red Crown Service Station. You will receive prompt attention and obliging service, together with full measure of uniform, high efficiency gasoline and motor oil that provides protective lubrication.

As Bixby Notes in Southern California

Dr. A. L. Bixby in Lincoln Journal: Porterville, Cal., June 15.—Dear Journal: To be Castor had a summer home on his farm south of Wilber, where Kollie and I were the guests of him and his good wife in the merry month of June many years ago. I call to mind the cottage among the trees, the beauty and serenity of the night away from the noises of the city. At peep of dawn we were awakened by a concert of birds of many varieties. It made me feel like turning out and joining in the chorus, but was persuaded to listen and not lip in, since the concert in the wild was best not interfered with by human contacts. Wren, robin, thrush, mockingbird, cardinal, pewee, bobolink, bluejay, cardinal, goldfinch, quail and meadowlark, all had a part in that entertainment do lux, free as the grace of God and a part of it. If that sort of communion with nature doesn't make one more decent, better and happier, his case is hopeless and oblivion has spotted him auro as presching.

so alive with them. Perhaps the drier atmosphere militates against bird life. In this great valley are no fewer dens in which the birds can bathe their wings or drain the crystal drops to wash down the bloated bugs.—compensation for the lack of this wild life comes in the noise of pumps, tractors, and the machinery of packing houses. One who misses the wild bird life of the east by living in the west may find comfort in raising chickens, one of the profitable industries of this part of the state.

The citrus belt of central California extends for a hundred miles along the foothills of the Sierra mountains, with an average width of five miles, the perennial green of these groves contrasting pleasantly with the brown of the mountain sides to the east and the yellow of the grain fields toward where the sun goes down.

But the hazard of orange culture would make a Nebraska farmer think twice before swapping jobs with the orchardist out here. In Nebraska corn is king, though not always a dependable sovereign, so that the sure winner in the game is he who depends on diversified crops, not forgetting the value of pigs and chickens and the unfolding profits from the spotted cow called Speck.

elsewhere, the first consideration is water, or what's your going to do? Streams that may be utilized for irrigation purposes are not numerous, so the deep well and the power pump must be brought into requisition, and the cost bulks big to the man whose bank balance has never soared above four figures. There are two twenty acre tracts. The boy takes care of the one where the folks live. The well and pump cost $4,000; power and repairs for the year about $700. The caretaker for the other place is paid $1,000 a year. Irrigation is from a ditch project much less expensive than the well. Expense of fertilizing both tracts, $2,000 a year; spraying, $700. Then comes the further expense of picking, hauling, grading, packing and marketing, with prices always uncertain and profits a matter of conjecture. If the "pood" you come in on are favorable, glory be. If the market dumps instead of holding steady or taking an upgrade, you lose. But win or lose, the prudential expense of operation must be repaid or the next crop will be inferior in quality if not in price. The game is one of fascinating interest, and not without occasional rewards, not less comforting than being able to open a jackpot with four kings. And to be parked in an orange grove "when winter comes" is pleasant to contemplate, always provided winter doesn't come too far.

One day last week we drove to the home of Paul A. Dobson, son-in-law of Ned Brown, but the folks had gone to Los Angeles. Secretary Bry returned the call, but we were on a long trip to Tulare and other interesting places west of here where son was trying to impress on the pilgrims the wealth of diversified industries in this county. We passed several fields of wheat, the largest two thousand acres in extent, several sheep ranches, more dairy farms, and not a few hundred acres given over to cotton and cantaloupe.

In the evening we all went to church to hear the Rev. Mr. Zoak give it to Thelie Charley Harwin with both barrels. He says if we deny the Mosaic story of creation we deny everything the Bible contains from "In the beginning" to the final "Amen." Both science and the Bible, he declared, are opposed to the doctrine of evolution, and to these may be added the common sense of sensible people. I suppose that settles the controversy until we hear from the court in Tennessee.

Sometimes the way a popular song comes in over the radio is enough to make it unpopular.

The Nervous Wreck

by E. J. Rath
Copyright, 1923, by G. Howard Watt

Begin Here Today.

The "Nervous Wreck," an eccentric young easterner, is driving Sally Morgan from her father's ranch to the station where the train out goes to the city. At the point of a gun the Wreck takes five gallons from a passing car.

They are held captive at a ranch owned by Mr. Underwood, who drives in the car which they held up. They finally escape from the ranch, run into the hands of a group of bandits, and escape again. Fleeing from the bandit camp, they suddenly are confronted by Sheriff Bob Wells, Sally's fiancé, who is at the head of a posse watching for the bandits. Angry, Sally, breaks off her engagement with the sheriff and is married to the Wreck by a justice of the peace who is in the sheriff's posse. The marriage license is written on the back of an old road map.

Now Go On With the Story.

"See, Here's where we are," he explained, putting a forefinger on the map. "You just follow the main road from here, going left, until you come to this road. Wait! I'll mark it for you. Then you follow the other road. It's a little twisty, but you can't miss it. Keep right on the way I'm showing you until you come to this turn. You keep hearing to my right. That's a fork in the road. You take the fork to the left. And there's the Bar-M, right?"

The Wreck nodded and the judge folded the document again.

"It ain't over seventy miles at the outside," he added. "And most of the road is a main highway. You see, and you're all right. If you want to know whether you're married read one side of it. If you want to know whether you're going to get a divorce, read the other side."

"That's what I call a modern and improved public document, useful in more ways than one. Ain't so, Bob?"

But the sheriff was striding down the trail in the direction of the judge.

"All good luck, folks," said the judge, as he shook hands. "The posse's got official business on their hands. I reckon it ought to be easier than riding a river."

Sally and the Wreck were left alone. They stood silently until the last member of the posse disappeared. Then the Wreck looked at his watch and worriedly coughed, reddened and kicked at a stone that lay in the trail. Suddenly he walked over to the river and cranked it.

"Get it," he said.

She got in, settled herself in the seat and started ahead of her. They followed the pipe for nearly an hour, until they came to a ford that crossed it. Not a word was spoken. He fumbled with the dog-eared document, unfolded it and found the license uppermost. Hastily reversing it, he studied the map.

"This is where you turn over," he said.

Sally merely shrugged.

He turned the river into the new road and drove on for awhile.

The Wreck shut off the engine and jammed the brakes. He began to gesticulate. He became abruptly voluble, without any clear idea of what he was saying.

"Now, don't you worry a particle. It's my fault, every bit of it. Of course, I hadn't a notion. If you're sure, I just couldn't help it, that's all. I was dreaming, I guess. I got crazy notions. I thought myself well, anyhow. If you're sorry, if you're not— But what's the use of talking about it? I'll do my best, you just see. I'll just shut it off for you. You'll—"

"You wouldn't?"

"You give me a chance, that's all. I'll go back to Pittsburgh and I'll make a million dollars for you. I'll give you anything in the world you want. All I want is a chance, I tell you. You just watch me, after awhile. I'll try me, that's all. I'll make good, as sure as your name's Sally Morgan."

She turned to him with a faint smile on her lips.

"But my name isn't Sally Morgan," she said.

"Huh? Why—that's right. I forgot. His speech became lame again.

"Well that's how I feel, anyway."

She studied him for several seconds, then laid a firm, warm hand over one of his, where it rested on the wheel.

"Old timer," she said gently, "you don't need all those words to say it in."

"But I wanted you to understand—"

"Perhaps I do."

"But you don't. What I wanted you to understand was—was— It's foolish, but— He rose suddenly, rose to a shout. "Well, anyway, I love you!"

Sally's fingers closed around his.

"Now you're talking, Henry Williams," she said, contentedly.

The Wreck swooped on her.

It was minutes afterward when Sally cried herself, half laughing, half crying. There was a strange, wonderful look in her eyes as she surveyed him—a look of proud, assured, happy possession. There he was, with his hair-raised spectacles, his squint, his old challenging air of defiance—Henry Williams, of Pittsburgh, Pa., Nervous Wreck—but all others.

"And I do love you," he was saying, bellicosely.

"Of course," said Sally. "But it took you so long to get out of the river, or we'll never make the Bar-M tonight."

"But I want you to understand—"

"You don't idiot, I understood long ago."

The Bar-M lay before them, almost at their feet. The ranch buildings were huddled close to the eastern side of the wide coulee, and the river was poised at the top of the ridge. Into the hills beyond the sun was dipping. To the north lay the summit of Black Top. Nearly home.

"I'm afraid we ought to have stuck to the road," said Sally.

The Wreck had insisted on cutting across the range, when they reached a point opposite the Bar-M coulee. "Miles around the other way," he said. "And here we are, almost here."

"But it's pretty steep, Henry."

"She looked down the long green slope with a calculating eye.

"It's nothing," said the Wreck. "Just watch."

The river dipped into the grade, slowly at first, then with a growing speed. It was traveling like a wild thing.

The Wreck had the service brake jammed down as far as it would go. He huddled back on the emergency brake. The river plunged onward, her brake bands screaming and smoking.

"We're going to hit something!" cried the Wreck.

Sally opened her eyes.

"Don't hit the kitchen," she cried. "Just watch."

He could at least steer, and he did. They hit the corral. A section of fence flew into kindlings and the river charged onward. The sorrel horse, directly in its path, lifted his head, snorted, wheeled, lashed out with his hoofs and missed it by inches. The fence on the farther side loomed. There was a second crash, a lurch, a splintering of various things. The river stopped.

Dad Morgan, who was leaning against the fence a few yards distant, removed his pipe from his mouth.

and examined the situation with interest.

"You made good time, getting back," he remarked.

"Dad!" cried Sally.

"Hoody, Sally? Hoody, Wreck? He snorted and snatched a hat from the river. One of the wheels was crumpled, both mudguards were curled up, the wind-shield was gone and there was a rivulet of steaming brown water dripping from the radiator.

"I reckon," said Dad, "that her nervous system is kind of shot up."

"Oh, Dad?"

Sally leaped clear of the wreckage and had her arms around his neck.

"Oh, the trossous!" he asked, when she let go of him.

"Trossous!" cried Sally. "Why, I—I'm married!"

"Well, I'll be darned!"

"Where's Ma? I want to tell her."

"Well, I'll be darned," repeated Dad. "Your Ma's over to the house, I reckon. Where's Hob?"

Sally began to laugh.

"I'm not married to Bob. I'm married to Henry Williams."

Dad Morgan's glance wandered to the Wreck, who was still sitting at the river, gloomily surveying his work.

"Now it will be darned," he said, thoughtfully. "Come to think of it, I reckon I'll be darned."

"You'd better be nice to him," warned Sally, "or a scandal'll hit the dearest thing in the world."

She raced away in the direction of the house, where the slight figure of Ma Morgan stood framed in the kitchen doorway.

Dad watched her go. Well, women were queer folk. But if Sally said it was all right, that settled it. Married, eh? The Wreck was his son-in-law! Fair enough, he mused. Sally always insisted the Wreck was game. His own course of conduct was clear.

"Wreck," he said, "providin' it ain't necessary for you to sit there watchin' the remains, there's a bottle up at the bummer."

"Sure," said the Wreck, as he climbed down. "Only don't grin at me. Hear me? Don't grin! It makes me nervous."

Some of the automobile cranks are under the back seat, and some of them are on it.

The pavement base in Stanton has been laid on Main street and last week the asphalt was laid on the streets instead of in the center.

After his changed packing notes 10 cars are now parked at the sides of the streets instead of in the center.

Good Morning. A good morning, one that is good in every sense of the word, follows a summer night spent in refreshing sleep.

Before long you will need a pleasant sleeping porch which will get you out of the stuffy interior rooms. Such a porch pays dividends in better health and the "pep" that comes from sound sleep.

Add a room to your home by building a screened, mosquito-proof sleeping porch this spring. We can help with the plans and furnish the lumber, screens and other things you will need.
